A

PRACTICAL TREATISE

OF THE

LAW OF EVIDENCE,

AND

DIGEST OF PROOFS

IN CIVIL AND CRIMINAL PROCEEDINGS.

By THOMAS STARKIE, Esq.

OF THE INNER TEMPLE, ONE OF HER MAJESTY'S COUNSEL.

THE SEVENTH AMERICAN, FROM THE THIRD LONDON EDITION,

WITH

REFERENCES TO AMERICAN DECISIONS, AND TO THE ENGLISH COMMON LAW AND ECCLESIASTICAL REPORTS,

BY

BENJAMIN GERHARD:

TOGETHER WITH THE NOTES TO FORMER EDITIONS OF

THERON METCALF.

VOL. II.—PART I.

PHILADELPHIA:
T. & J. W. JOHNSON, LAW BOOKSELLERS,
SUCCESSORS TO NICKLIN AND JOHNSON,
NO. 5 MINOR STREET.

.....

1842.

T. K. & P. G. Collins, Printers.

LAW OF EVIDENCE.

VOL. II.

PROOFS ON PARTICULAR ISSUES.

ABATEMENT.

THE proof of the affirmative of the issue on a plea in abatement is, from the very nature of the plea, usually incumbent on the defendant (a). This natural order is subject to inversion, either it seems in respect of the form of the issue, according to which the plaintiff takes the burthen of proof upon himself; as where the replication to a plea in abatement for non-joinder in assumpsit, alleges that the defendant undertook solely to pay (b); or, which more frequently happens, in consideration of the plaintiff having to prove the amount of his damages. In strictness the question as to damages does not arise until the issues have been disposed of, and it might seem to be more convenient to try the issues first, for if the defendant succeed, the inquiry as to damages is unnecessary. The course of practice is otherwise, and so far as any precise rule can be collected it seems to be this, that if the amount of damages be in dispute, the plaintiff is entitled to begin, although the proof of the issue joined may be incumbent on the defendant (c); but that if the damages be merely nominal, or can be ascer-

(a) See tit. ORDER OF PROOF, supra, Vol. I. In Fowler v. Costar, M. & M. 241, in an action on a bill of exchange, and the non-joinder of a joint contractor pleaded; Lord Tenterden permitted the defendant to begin, observing that where it appeared by the record or statement of counsel, that there was no dispute about the sum to be recovered, the damages being either nominal or mere matter of computation, then if the affirmative was on the defendant, he ought to begin.

(b) See Young v. Bairner, 1 Esp. C. 103.

(c) Indebitatus assumpsit for goods sold, plea non-joinder of others as defendants, Lord Denman held that the plaintiff was entitled to begin, but that the defendant might do so if he would admit the amount claimed; Morris v. Lotan, 1 M. & R. 233. In Laeon v. Higgins,[1] 3 Starkie's C. 178, the defendant having pleaded her coverture to an action for goods sold, her counsel were permitted by Abbot, L. C. J. to begin, on condition of admitting the amount. In Roby v. Howard,[2] 2 Starkie's C. 555, non-joinder having been pleaded to a declaration for laying out the plaintiff's money on an insufficient security, the same learned Judge was of opinion that the plaintiff's counsel ought to begin, since it was incumbent on the plaintiff to prove his damages. See also Stansfield v. Levy,[3] 3 Starkie's C. 8; Fowler v. Costar, M. & M. 241. In some instances, the question as to beginning appears to have been regarded as one for the discretion of the court, Burrell v. Nicholson, 1 M. & R. 304. Bayley, J. at the York Summer Assizes 1821, directed that the defendant should begin, and that the question of damages should, if necessary, be tried afterwards. See Young v. Bairner, 1 Esp. C. 103; Jackson v. Hesketh,[4] 2 Starkie's C. 518. In the case of Hutchinson v. Fernie, 3 M. & W. 305, the court intimated that a clear case of erroneous direction in this respect, would be a ground of new trial. In the case of Stansfield v. Levy above cited, Abbott, L. C. J. held that where the plaintiff is allowed to begin, he may confine himself to proof of damages, and reserve his case in reply to the plea. The plaintiff may, on motion, compel the defendant to give him a particular of the places of residence of the alleged co-partners. Taylor v. Harris,[5] 4 B. & A. 93. The plaintiff will fail, if it appear that any other than those named in the plea jointly promised. Godson v. Good,[6] 6 Taunt. 587.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xiv. 176.[d] [2]Id. iii. 472. [3]Id. xiv. 146. [4]Id. iii. 456. [5]Id. vi. 357. [6]Id. i. 492.

tained *by mere computation, or are admitted by the defendant on whom the proof of the issue lies, he is entitled to begin (d).

Plea of nonjoinder.

A plea in abatement, that the defendant made the promise jointly with another, is supported by evidence that the defendant made the promise jointly with an infant; for the plaintiff ought to plead and prove that the infant has avoided his promise (e) (A). Upon a plea that A. and B., assignees of C., a bankrupt, ought to have been joined, it is not sufficient for the defendant to prove that they have acted as assignees; he must prove that they were so, either by the production of the assignment, or by proving an admission by the plaintiff to that effect (f). A bill delivered by the plaintiff for business done for the insured, the defendant being one, in which he debits the defendant with three-sevenths only of the whole amount, is primâ facie evidence (the defendant having pleaded in abatement) that the action was brought to recover his share only (g).

If the plaintiff contract with the defendant alone, without knowing that he has other partners, proof by the defendant, upon a plea in abatement for non-joinder, that he had secret partners, would not be a sufficient defence in support of the plea (h) (B).

(d) Lacon v. Higgins,[1] 3 Starkie's C. 178.

(e) But a contract by an infant, for goods sold to trade with, is absolutely void. Thornton v. Illingworth,[2] 2 B. & C. 826. Gibbs v. Merrill, 3 Taunt. 307. Where one churchwarden sued another for money paid for the affairs of the church, it was held, on a plea in abatement, that it was unnecessary to join the vestrymen who had signed a resolution for the repairs, without any intention of becoming responsible, the two churchwardens having jointly given the orders. Lanchester v. Tricker,[3] 1 Bing, 201. And where one of two chapelwardens alone orders goods, it is sufficient to sue him alone; for the plaintiff knows no one but the person who gives him the order. Shaw v. Hislop,[4] 4 D. & R. 241. See also Eaton v. Bell,[5] 5 B. & A. 34. Horseley v. Bell, 1 Brown's C. C. 101. Amb. 770. Sprott v. Powell,[6] 3 Bing. 478. Brooke v. Guest, 3 Bing. 481. As to the non-joinder of defendants in actions against carriers, see tit. CARRIERS; and Bretherton v. Wood,[7] 3 B. & B. 54. Ansell v. Waterhouse,[8] 2 Chitty, 1.

(f) Pasmore v. Bousfield,[9] 1 Starkie's C. 296. Robinson v. Henshaw, 4 M. & S. 475.

(g) 1 Starkie's C. 296.[10]

(h) Doo v. Chippenden, cor. Ld. Kenyon, Ch. J. at Westmr. sittings after Hil. T. 1790, upon a plea in abatement cited in Mr. Abbott's treatise, 92. Baldney v. Ritchie, 1 Starkie's C.[11] 338. See tit. PARTNERSHIP, infra. If a party contract with two, he may sue them only: if after the contract is made he discovers that they had a secret partner who had an interest in the contract, he is at liberty to sue the latter jointly with them, but he is not bound to do so.[12] De Mautort v. Saunders, 1 B. & A. 398, overruling Dubois v. Ludert, 5 Taunt. 609. And see Mullett v. Hook,[13] 1 M. & M. C. 88. And see tit. PARTNERSHIP. On a plea in abatement in an action for work and labour, of the non-joinder of eighteen others, members of a joint company, Abbott, L. C. J. held that declarations by one of the eighteen, before action brought, that he was a shareholder, was evidence of the fact for the defendant, Clay v. Langslow,[14] 1 M. & M. 45; tamen quære.

(A) (Infancy of a plaintiff must be pleaded in abatement. Schermerhorn v. Jenkins, 7 John. 373; Scott. e. p. 1 Cow. 33, note (h).) [See Burgess v. Merrill, 4 Taunt. 468. Hartness & al. v. Thompson & al. 5 Johns. 160. Woodward v. Newhall & al. 1 Pick. 500.]

(B) (Where one of the partners, resident abroad is sued here, he is not allowed to plead in abatement, that his co-partner is not sued with him. Guion v. M'Culloch, et al. N. Carol. Cases, 78. Where there is an ostensible partnership, a member of the firm who purchased and actually supplied articles for the use of the partnership, may, if sued alone for the price of the goods, plead in abatement that the contract, if made at all, was made with him jointly with the other partners. It is not material whether or not, the plaintiff had knowledge of the partnership at the time of the contract; but if the partner making it, intended it as a partnership transaction, and it came within the scope of his authority as a partner, the contract was with the partnership. Alexander v. M'Ginn, 3 Watts, 220. Where parties are joined as defendants in assumpsit, who did not join in the promise, advantage may be taken of it under the general issue. Tom v. Goodrich, 2 John. R. 213. And where the action is general indebitatus assumpsit, unless the plaintiff before plea pleaded furnishes the defendant with a bill of particulars, the defendant may avail himself of the non-joinder of a co-contractor under the general issue. Per Washington, J., Peters, J. contra Jordan v. Wilkins, 3 Wash. C. C. R. 110. In an action for a tort, the non-joinder of persons interested with the plaintiff must be pleaded in abatement, and cannot be taken advantage of under the general issue otherwise than in mitigation of damages. Wheelwright v. Depeyster, 1 John. R. 471; Brotherton v. Hodges, 6 John. 108; Bradish v. Schenck, 8 John. R. 151; Gilbert v. Dickinson, 7 Wend. 449. But in general the non-joinder of a party as a co-plaintiff in any suit growing out of a contract, can be shown under the general issue. Dob v. Halsey, 16 John. R. 34. See also Wilson v. Wallace, 8 Serg. & R. 53; Thompson v. Hoskins, 11 Mass. R. 419; Hart v. Fitzgerald, 2 Id. 511. The Portland Bank v. Stubbs, 6 Id. 422.)

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xiv. 176. [2]Id. ix. 256. [3]Id. viii. 295. [4]Id. xvi. 148. [5]Id. vii. 13. [6]Id. xiii. 61. [7]Id. vii. 345. [8]Id. xviii. 227. [9]Id. ii. 397. [10]Id. ii. 416. [11]Id. xx. 410. [12]Id. xxii. 259. [13]Id. xxii. 244. [14]Id. viii. 112.

Any acts by the defendant, tending to show that he treated the contract as several, not joint, are evidence for the plaintiff. Where the defendant had written letters to the plaintiff, promising to pay the money in question, and without making mention of any partners, Lord Ellenborough, upon issue to bar on a plea of non-joinder, held that the evidence was conclusive as to separate liability (i). One signing an instrument in his own name for others may frequently be sued alone, although the others may also be liable (k).

*By the statute 3 & 4 Wm. 4, c. 42, s. 9, to any plea in abatement in any court of law, of the non-joinder of another person, the plaintiff may reply that such person has been discharged by bankruptcy and certificate, or under an act for the relief of insolvent debtors. *3

And by section 10, in all cases where after such plea in abatement, the plaintiff shall, without proceeding to trial upon an issue thereon, commence another action against the defendant or defendants in the action in which such plea in abatement shall have been pleaded, and the person or persons named in such plea in abatement as joint contractors, if it shall appear by the pleadings in such subsequent action, or on the evidence at the trial thereof, that all the original defendants were liable, but that one or more of the persons named in such plea in abatement, or any subsequent plea in abatement, are not liable as a contracting party or parties, the plaintiff shall nevertheless be entitled to judgment, or to a verdict and judgment, as the case may be, against the other defendant or defendants who shall appear to be liable; and every defendant who is not so liable shall have judgment, and shall be entitled to his costs against the defendant or defendants who shall have so pleaded in abatement the non-joinder of such person; provided that any defendant who shall have so pleaded in abatement, shall be at liberty on the trial to adduce evidence of the liability of the defendants named by him in such plea in abatement (l).

Damages. The plaintiff must be prepared to prove his damages (m) (A).

Misnomer. Where a peer is named as a commoner, he may plead his misnomer in abatement, since the title is part of his name, and he ought to be tried by his peers only (n); but he ought to set forth the writ, &c. upon the plea, because it is but a dilatory plea, and must be tried not by the country but by the record. But a plea that the defendant is a peeress by marriage must be tried by the country, since it involves a question of fact extrinsic of the record (o).

Upon a plea of peerage under letters patent, they must be produced under the great seal (p). In Knowles's Case, upon an indictment for murder, the defendant pleaded that his grandfather was created Earl of (i) Murray v. Somerville, 3 Camp. 99. n.

(k) See tit. AGENT.—BILL OF EXCHANGE. A promissory note, beginning "I promise to pay," was signed by a member of a firm for himself and his partners, and it was held that he was liable to be sued severally. Hall v. Smith,[1] 1 B. & C. 407; March v. Ward, Peake's C. 130; Clarke v. Blackestock,[2] Holt's C. 474; Sayer v. Chaytor, 1 Lutw. 696.

(l) See Clay v. Langslow, 1 M. & M. C. 45, supra.

(m) Weleker v. Le Pelletier, otherwise the plaintiff will be entitled to nominal damages only.

(n) i. e. In case of Treason or Felony, 2 Hale, 240. 6 Co. 53. Countess of Rutland's Case, 35 H. 6, 46.

(o) 6 Co. 53. 2 Hale, 240. See Starkie's Crim. Pl. 295. [4 Hallam's Mid. Ages, (1st Am. ed.) 25, n.]

(p) 2 Salk. 209.

(A) (On a plea in abatement, if the jury find against the plea, they ought to assess the damages on the plaintiff's declaration; if this is omitted a venire de novo must be awarded. Hollingsworth v. Duane, Wallace, 58; S. P. Mehaffy v. Share, 2 Penns. Reps. 361; Dodge v. Morse, 3 N. Hamp. R. 232; Jewett v. Davis, 6 Id. 518; contra where the plea in abatement is triable by record, certificate or inspection. Marston v. Lawrence, 1 John. C. 398.)

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. iii. 159. [2]Id. xxii. 45.

Banbury by letters patent under the great seal of England, which he produced in court; the Attorney-general replied, that on, &c. the defendant petitioned the lords in Parliament to be tried by his peers, and that the lords disallowed his claim; the defendant demurred, and the demurrer was allowed, on the ground that the refusal of the lords could not operate as a judgment (q).

If the defendant in a criminal proceeding plead a misnomer, the king may reply that he is known by the one name as well as the other (r); but in an appeal such a replication was not allowed (s) (B).

Upon a plea of misnomer, where the defendant avers that he was baptized *by the name of A. B., he must give proof of such baptism, although he was not bound so to allege it; and it is not sufficient to show that he has always been called and known by that name (t). A defendant in either a criminal or civil proceeding will in general be concluded in a new action, or upon a fresh indictment, as to the name or addition which he has set forth in his former plea (u) (A).

*4

Competency.

If in assumpsit the defendant plead in abatement that the promise was made jointly with E. F., the latter will be a competent witness for the plaintiff; for if the plaintiff were to succeed, although the record would prevent the plaintiff from recovering the second time in a joint action, the witness would still be liable to an action at the suit of the defendant for contribution (x); for the record would not be evidence against the latter; and if the plaintiff were to fail, the witness, if a partner, would still be liable to be sued by the plaintiff in an action against himself and the former defendant, and would be ultimately liable to pay his own share. The witness, if he be a partner, is at all events liable to pay his own proportion of the debt (y). It seems, however, that E. F. would not have been a competent witness for the defendant, in order to prove that he was a joint contractor, without a release (z), where he would be liable to contribute towards the costs of the action in case the defendant failed. But a release from the defendant would at all events make him competent, for then he would not be liable to contribution; and it would be his interest that the plaintiff should recover against the defendant alone, rather than that he should fail, in which case he might still bring a joint action.

The defendant, upon an indictment for perjury, may prove in bar that the action in which the evidence was given, on which the perjury is (q) R. v. Graham, 4 St. Tr. 410. See the Earl of Strathmore v. the Countess of Strathmore, 2 J. & W. 543.

(r) 2 Hale, 238. By the statute 7 G. 4, c. 64, s. 19, no indictment or information shall be abated by reason of any plea of misnomer, or want of addition, or of wrong addition, if the court shall be satisfied by affidavit or otherwise of the truth of the plea; and it shall order the indictment or information to be amended, &c.

(s) 1 H. 7, 22. 21 Ed. 3, 47. 2 Hale, 238.

(t) Weleker v. Le Pelletier, 1 Camp. 479. See Com. Dig. ABATEMENT, [F.] 17. Walden v. Holman, 6 Mod. 155; 1 Salk. 6.

(u) 2 Hale, 248. See Crim. Pleadings, 2 Ed. 313. A plea of misnomer is no longer allowed in a personal action. 3 & 4 W. 4, c. 42, s. 11; and see the provision, s. 12, as to the use of initials.

(x) Lord Ellenborough seems to have been of opinion that in this event the witness would have been in a worse situation than he would have been in had the plaintiff failed, on account of his liability to contribute towards the costs of the former suit.

(y) Hudson v. Robinson. 4 M. & S. 475; and see Cossham v. Goldney, 2 Starkie's C. 424.

(z) Young v. Bairner, 1 Esp. C. 103; and see the observations of Lord Ellenborough, 4 M & S. 480, and of Bayley, J. Ib. 484; and see Goodacre v. Breame, Peake's C. 174; and Birt v. Hood, 1 Esp. C. 20; and see also tit. INTEREST OF WITNESS, and PARTNER.

(B) (Misnomer of parties in a writ or indictment must always be pleaded in abatement or the right to the exception is lost. Smith v. Bowker, 1 Mass. R. 76. Scull v. Briddle, 2 Wash. C. C. R. 200. Porter v. Cresson, 10 Serg. & R. 257.)

(A) (The record of a plea in abatement is evidence against those who pleaded it, that all who are therein alleged to be partners, are so in fact; but it will not admit any contract. Witmer v. Schlatter, 2 Rawle, 359.)

assigned, had abated before the trial of such action, by the death of a co-plaintiff after issue joined, no suggestion having been entered on the record pursuant to the statute 8 & 9 W. 3, c. 11, s. 6 (a).

ABUTTALS. See TRESPASS.

ACCEPTANCE. See BILL OF EXCHANGE.

ACCESS. See BASTARDY.

ACCESSORY.

Principal in the first degree.

It will be convenient here to consider the evidence applicable to both principals and accessories (B). Principals, in cases of felony, are of two degrees. A principal in the first degree is the absolute perpetrator of the crime, and is either actually present when it is perpetrated, or commits it whilst absent by an innocent agent or instrument (b). A principal in the second degree is *one who is present, aiding and abetting the fact to be done (c). An accessory before the fact is he, that being absent at the time of the felony committed, doth yet procure, counsel, or abet another to commit a felony (d). A man may therefore be convicted as a principal in the first degree, upon evidence that he committed the fact when absent, without the more immediate intervention of any guilty agent. As where A. persuades B. to drink poison, by recommending it as a medicine (e); or where he sends the poison by a third person, ignorant of its quality (f); or incites a madman to destroy another; or a child to set fire to a house (g) (A). To prove one to be principal in the second degree, it must be shown first, that he was present when the offence was committed. But it is not necessary to show that he was actually standing by, within sight or hearing of the fact; it is sufficient if he was near enough to lend his assistance in any manner to the commission of the offence. As where one commits a robery or murder, and another keeps watch or guard at some convenient distance (h). So if several set out together or in small parties, upon one common design, whether of murder or felony, or for any other unlawful

*5

Principal in the second degree.

Proof that he was present.

(a) R. v. Cohen, 1 Starkie's C. 511.

(b) Hale, 615, 616. 2 Haw. c. 29, s. 11.

(c) Hale, P. C. 615. Formerly he who struck alone was principal, and those who were present, aiding and assisting, were accessories, who could not be convicted before the attainder of the principal; 1 Hale, P. C. 437. 40 Ass. 25. 40 E. 3. But it has been long settled, that all present, aiding and abetting, are principals; 1 Hale, P. C. 438. Plow. 97. Whether a person is guilty as a principal in the first or second degree, is a question of law, R. v Royce, 2 Burr. 2076. If several persons combine to forge an instrument, and each separately executes a part, all are principals, though they are not together when the work is completed. R. v. Bingley and others, 1 Russ. & R. 446.

(d) 1 Hale, P. C. 615. Lord Coke, in his reading on the Statute West. 1, c. 14, says, the word aid comprehends all persons counselling, abetting, plotting, assenting, consenting and encouraging to do the act, and who are not present when the act is done; for if present, they are principals; 2 Inst. 182.

(e) 4 Co. 44. 2 Inst. 183.

(f) 9 Co. 81. Kelynge, 52, 53.

(g) Ann Course's Case, Foster, 349.

(h) Foster, 350. 1 Hale, 537. If two steal in a shop whilst a third remains on the outside to watch and co-operate, he is guilty as a principal. R. v. Gogerly and others, 1 Russ. & R. 343. In the case of R. v. Davis and Hall, cited below, though the jury found that the prisoner Hall was near and ready to lend assistance, yet the evidence seems to have been insufficient to warrant the finding.

(B) (There can be no accessories in high treason, all concerned in it are principals. Foster, 341. See also Burr's Trial. Nor in offences below felonies. State v. Westfield, 1 Bailey, 132; 4 J. J. Marsh. 182. Curtain v. The State, 4 Yerger, 143.)

(A) (All persons present at the commission of a crime, consenting thereto, aiding, assisting and abetting therein, or in doing any act which is a constituent of the offence, are principals. U. S. v. Wilson, 1 Baldw. 102. See also U. S. v. Sharp, 1 Peters, C. C. R. 118. U. S. v. Jones, 3 Wash. C. C. R. 209.

If one throw a bludgeon to another with intent to furnish that other with a deadly weapon to make an assault, and the assault is made and murder committed, he who threw the bludgeon with such intent is equally guilty with him who struck the blow. Commonwealth v. Drew, 4 Mass. R. 391.

So if one counsel another to commit suicide, and the other by reason of the advice kills himself, the adviser is guilty of murder as principal, though the felo de se be under sentence of death at the time he commits suicide. Commonwealth v. Bowen, 13 Mass. R. 356.)

purpose, and each takes the part assigned to him, some to commit the fact, they are all, in contemplation of law, present when the fact is committed (i). So, if several come to commit a burglary, and some enter, and the rest watch, all are principals (k). So, where a constable's assistant attempted to apprehend a number of persons in a house, under a warrant for a riot and battery, and fourteen of the rioters issued from the house and killed the constable's assistant, it was held that those within the house, if they abetted and counselled the riot, were, in law, present, aiding and assisting, as well as those who issued out and actually committed the assault five roods from the house (l). And, in general, if a party be sufficiently near to encourage the principal in the first degree with the expectation of immediate help or assistance in the execution of felony, he is in point of law present. Lord Dacre and others (m) came to steal deer in the park of Mr. Pelham; Rayden, one of the company, killed the keeper in the park, the Lord Dacre and the rest of the company being in other parts of the park; and it was held that it was murder in them all, and they died for it. So if A. and B. be present, and consenting to a robbery or burglary, though A. only actually commits the robbery, or actually breaks and enters the house,
*6 and B. be watching at another place near, or be about a robbery *hard by, which he effects not, both are robbers and burglars (n). Where Hyde and A., B., C. and D. rode out to rob, but at Hounslow D. parted from the company, and rode away to Colbrook, and A., B. and C. rode towards Egham, and about three miles from Hounslow, Hyde, A. and B. assaulted a man; but before he was robbed, C. seeing another man coming at a distance, before the assault, rode up to him about a bow-shot, or more, from the rest, intending either to rob him, or to prevent his coming to assist; and in his absence, Hyde, A. and B. robbed the first man of divers silk stockings, and then rode back to C., and they all went to London, and there divided the spoil; it was ruled (according to Lord Hale) upon good advice, first, that D. was not guilty of the robbery, though he rode out with them upon the same design, because he left them at Hounslow, and fell not in with them; it may be he repented of the design, at least he pursued it not. Secondly, that C., though he was not actually present at the robbery, nor at the assault, but rode back to secure his company, was guilty as well as Hyde and the two others (o). It is otherwise where the party is not sufficiently near to render assistance to the principal felons. Where three prisoners were charged with feloniously uttering a forged note, &c., and it appeared that one of the prisoners offered the note in payment at Gosport, the other prisoners being then waiting at Portsmouth for his return: the whole being in consequence of a previously concerted plan, the Judges (after conviction) held, that the two latter prisoners were entitled to their acquittal, since they were not present when the felony was committed (p).

In the case of the King v. Stewart and Dickons (q), it appeared that (i) Foster, 350, 353. 1 Haw. c. 38. 1 Hale, P. C. 439. Kel. 111.

(k) Foster, 350. 1 Hale, P. C. 439.
(l) 1 Hale, P. C. 462.
(m) 1 Hale, 439, 443, 245. Fost. 354.
(n) 1 Hale, P. C. 537. 1 And. 116, &c.; differently reported, Fost. 354. See tit. BURGLARY.—RAPE.
(o) 1 Hale, 637.
(p) R. v. Soares, and two others, 2 East, P. C. 974; and see R. v. Badcock and others, 1 Russ. & R. 249; R. v. Kelly, Ib. 421; R. v. Morris, Ib. 270. In the case of R. v. Davis & Hall, 1 Russ. & R. 115, the two prisoners came to town with intent to utter a forged note; they left the inn where they had put up together; Davis went into a shop and uttered the note, and Hall joined him near the place, about fifteen or twenty minutes afterwards. The jury found that Hall was at the time of the uttering sufficiently near and ready to render assistance, and found both guilty; but the Judges afterwards held the conviction of Hall to be improper.
(q) Coram Garrow, B., Warwick Lent Assiz. 1818, and afterwards before the Judges, MSS. C.

two prisoners had previously agreed to sell forged notes to James Platt, a witness upon the trial, and that the price had been paid. That after the witness had been at the house of the prisoners for the purpose of receiving the notes, Stewart and the witness went to a public house, and that afterwards Dickons came and beckoned them out; Stewart then said to the witness, "You see Ann there, whom you have seen at our house; she will deliver the goods to you; I wish you good luck." Dickons, the woman pointed out by the prisoner Stewart, within three minutes afterwards delivered the forged notes to the witness, and the witness did not know whether the prisoners were or were not in sight when the notes were so delivered, nor which way they went. The jury found the prisoners guilty, and stated (the question being left to them by the learned Judge), that the delivery of the notes by Dickons was in completion of the agreement made by the prisoners, and on their account, and not her own. Execution was respited, in order that the opinion of the Judges might be taken upon the question; and all the Judges recommended that a pardon should be applied for in respect of the particular offence (r)

*7 That he was aiding and abetting.

* It must be shown, secondly, that he was aiding and abetting (s); which words seem to include every species of assistance which one present can give, either in act, or by his assent, and by his encouragement or readiness to further the general purpose (t). For if any one comes for an unlawful purpose, although he does not act, he is a principal (u). It is not necessary to show that one, indicted as a principal, was present during the whole of the transaction; it seems to be sufficient to show him to be present aiding and abetting when the offence was consummated, although he was not present at the inception. Where the servants of A. feloniously removed goods in A.'s warehouse, and B. several hours afterwards assisted them in removing the goods from the warehouse, it was held that B. was the principal, since it was a continuing transaction (x). So, where the servants of Dyer, who was the owner of a boat (and had been employed to convey on shore a quantity of barilla), without the privity of Dyer, separated part of the barilla from the rest, and conveyed it to another part of the boat, and concealed it under some rope, and Dyer afterwards assisted the others in conveying the part so separated from the boat; it was held, upon the same ground, that Dyer was a principal (y).

Principals, whether in the first or second degree, are usually charged as being feloniously present, aiding and abetting (z); since where a statute creates a new felony, or takes away the benefit of clergy from those guilty of an existing felony, under particular circumstances, the offence partakes of all the incidents to a felony at common law, and all present aiding and abetting are principals, and may be charged as such (a). But where the statute by its description includes that party only who does the very act, one who is principal in the second degree only ought to be acquitted either (r) See also R. v. Else, 1 R. & R. 142.

(s) See Lord Coke's exposition of the word aid, 2 Inst. 218, and supra, 5; see also Foster, 354; and Minshew, Cowel, Skinner, Spelman, and Dufresne, on the meaning of the word abet; from which it appears that instigation alone, without force, is the sense of the word.

(t) Fost. 350. 2 Haw. c. 47. (u) 1 Hale, C. P. 374, 443.

(x) R. v. Atwell and others, East, C. P. 768. But where several broke open a warehouse and stole a quantity of butter, and carried it along the street thirty yards, and then the prisoner joined them, and being apprised of the felony, assisted in vending the goods; it was held that he was but an accessory. R. v. King, Russ. & R. 332. R. v. M'Makim & Smith, Ib.

(y) R. v. Dyer and Disting, East, P. C. 767, per Graham, B. and Le Blanc, J.

(z) Where aiders and abettors are mentioned expressly in the statute, the general allegation appears to be sufficient; see Crim. Pleadings, second edition, 82, 83, 86.

(a) See the Coalheaver's case, Leach, 76. Staundf. 44. 3 Inst. 45. 1 Hale, P. C. 613. Fost. 354. R. v. Midwinter & Sims, Leach, C. C. L. 3d edit. 78. Burr. 2075.

of the offence generally, or of so much as the particular statute is applicable to.

The allegation, that the prisoner was aiding and abetting, implies an assent to the principal act. This assent must be proved either by some act directly done in furtherance of the commission of the crime, which manifests the assent of the prisoner, as by his keeping watch whilst others in his presence break open a house, or by evidence that he was associated with the rest in the prosecution of one common illegal object, in the execution and furtherance of which the principal crime was committed. If A. be present when a murder is committed, and takes no part in it, nor endeavours to prevent it, and neither apprehends the murderer, nor levies hue and cry after him, and the matter be done in private, the circumstances would, it seems, be evidence to a jury, of consent and concurrence on his part (b).
*8 But here the privacy * and secrecy with which the fact was accompanied would be a strong circumstance; for if the homicide had been openly committed before witnesses, as it frequently is, where it amounts in construction of law to murder, although A.'s conduct might be criminal, it would not render him either principal or accessory (c). But in case the murder had been committed in prosecution of an unlawful design, proof that A. came to assist and carry that design into execution, would be evidence to convict him as a principal in the second degree (d); for in such case the person giving the blow is no more than the instrument by which all strike. In such case, however, it would be essential to prove that the murder was committed in the prosecution of some specific unlawful design in which the prisoner had engaged (e); for if the death resulted from the particular malice of the individual who inflicted the blow and who took the opportunity to revenge himself, the others, who were assembled for a different purpose, would not be involved in his guilt. Three soldiers went to rob an orchard, two got up a pear-tree, the third watched with a drawn sword, and killed the son of the owner, who had collared him; and it was held, that the latter was guilty of murder, but that the two others were innocent, because they came to commit a small inconsiderable trespass, and the man was killed upon a sudden affray without their knowledge. But Holt, C. J. said that it would have been otherwise, "if they had all come thither with a general resolution against all opposers," which would have proved that the murder was committed in prosecution of their original purpose (f). So where A. beat a constable in execution of his office, and being parted from him desisted, and B., a friend of A., rushed in and killed the constable, A. not having been engaged after they were parted, it was held to be murder in B., but that A. was innocent, since there was no previous agreement to obstruct the constable in the execution of his office (g). A general resolution against all opposers, which can be proved either to have been expressly entered into, or which can be inferred from circumstances, as from the number, arms, or behaviour of the parties at or before the scene of action, is strong evidence in cases of this nature (h), and shows, when substantiated, that every one present, in the eye of the law, when the offence is committed, is guilty as a principal (i). Where, however, A., B. and C. set

(b) Foster, Disc. 3, s. 5.
(c) Dalt. 395. Staundf. 40. Fost. Disc. 3, s. 5.
(d) Fost. Disc. 3, s. 6. Kel. 116.
(e) Fost. Disc. 3, s. 7.
(f) Ibid.
(g) Per Holt and Rokeby, Js. Hertford Ass. Fost. Disc. 3, s. 7; see also Plummer's Case, Ib.
(h) Fost. Disc 3, s. 8.
(i) The cases of Lord Dacre and Pudsey, cited above, were decided on the same principle; the offences of which they stood charged were committed far out of their sight and hearing, yet both were holden to be present. It was sufficient that at the instant the offences were committed by some of the same party, and upon the same pursuit, and under the same engagement and expectation of mutual defence with those who did the fact. Fost. 354.

out with intent to rob on the highway, and A. and B. upon the same day commit a robbery, C. may show in defence that he had previously abandoned the design, and separated himself from the party, and that there was not, when the offence was committed, any engagement or reasonable expectation of mutual support and defence to affect him (k). So if several set out to commit a felony, but being alarmed, run different ways, and one to avoid capture, maims his pursuer, the rest are not principals (l).

Evidence against an accessory before the fact.

An accessory before the fact may be tried either after the conviction of the principal felon or at the same time with him, or may be indicted and convicted of a substantive felony, whether the principal felon has or has not *been previously convicted (m) (A). If the principal has been previously convicted, the conviction may be proved by the record properly authenticated (n) (B), which will be primâ facie evidence to prove the guilt of the principal (o), whether the indictment allege the guilt of the principal expressly (p), or, as is the more usual course, recites the record of conviction (q). In either case the prisoner may insist on every matter both of fact and of law to controvert the guilt of the principal (r), for the accessory is considered as particeps in lite (s). As against an accessory before the fact, the general allegation must next be proved, that he did feloniously and maliciously incite, move, procure aid, abet, counsel, hire, and command the principal to commit the felony (t). Proof sufficient to satisfy this allegation imports evidence of the knowledge and assent of the prisoner to the commission of the felony, that he at least instigated and incited the principal to commit the crime. With respect to the measure of the incitement and force of persuasion used, no rule is laid down; that it was sufficient to effectuate the evil purpose is proved by the result. In principal, it seems that any degree of direct incitement with the actual intent to procure the consummation of the illegal object, is sufficient to constitute the guilt of the accessory; and therefore that it is unnecessary to show that the crime was effected in consequence of such incitement, and that it would be no defence to show that the offence would have been committed although the incitement had never taken place (u). *9

In cases where there is a variance between the crime which the accessory has advised and that which the principal has perpetrated, those criteria must be resorted to which are clearly stated by Sir M. Foster; viz. "Did the principal commit the felony he standeth charged with under the influence of the flagitious advice, and was the event in the ordinary course of things a probable consequence of that felony? Or did he, following the suggestions of his own wicked heart, wilfully and knowingly commit a felony of another kind, or on a different subject (x)?"

(k) Fost. Disc. 3, s. 8.
(l) R. v. White and another, Russell & Ry. 9.
(m) By the st. 7 & 8 G. 4, c. 29, s. 54.
(n) See tit. RECORD.
(o) See tit. JUDGMENTS, for the reason.
(p) As in Lord Sanchar's Case, 9 Co. 114. See Starkie's Cr. Pl. 2d edit. 140.
(q) See Fost. Disc. 3, c. 2, s. 3.
(r) See the reason, tit. JUDGMENTS.
(s) Fost. 365.
(t) See Crim. Pleadings, 130.
(u) According to Lord Coke, to cause, is to procure or counsel one to forge; to assent, is to agree afterwards to the procurement or counsel of another; to consent, is to agree at the time of the procurement, or counsel, and he in law is a procurer; 3 Inst. 169. But an assent after the fact committed makes not the party assenting a principal, 1 Hale, 684.
(x) Foster, Disc. 371. Thus if A. counsel B. to burn the house of C., and B. knowing the house of C. spares it, and burns the house of D., A. is not an accessory to this felony.

(A) (An accessory in a capital felony cannot be put on his trial without his consent, if the principal be dead without conviction. See Commonwealth v. Phillips, 16 Mass. 423. State v. Chittem, 2 Dev. 49.)
(B) (S. P. State v. Crank, 2 Bailey, 66. Where the principal and accessory are tried separately, and joined in an indictment, the record of the principal's conviction is primâ facie evidence of his guilt upon the trial of the accessory; and, as the burden of proof is on the accessory, he must show clearly that the principal ought not to have been convicted. Commonwealth v. Knapp, 10 Pick. 484.)

Wife. A wife may be convicted as a principal felon in uttering a forged certificate for receiving prize money, although she acted in pursuance of her husband's direction; and the husband may be convicted as an accessory before the fact (y).

Accessory after the fact. Against an accessory after the fact, after proof of the principal felony, either by the record of the conviction of the principal felon or by evidence (z), it must be proved, that he, knowing the felony to have been committed, received, relieved, comforted or assisted the felon (a), or received the stolen goods (b). It seems once to have been held, that the *10 knowledge of the *accessory was to be inferred from the attainder of the principal in the same county (c), because every one is bound to take notice of an attainder in the same county; but this notion appears to have exploded (d).

Variance. If A. be charged as principal in the first degree, and B. as aiding and abetting, the indictment will be supported by evidence that B. struck the blow, and that A. was present aiding and abetting (e); and in such case, B. may be convicted although A. is acquitted (f). If A. be indicted as accessory to B. and C., he may be convicted on evidence that he was accessory to C. only (g). It has been said, that it was otherwise in case of an appeal (h): yet there seems to have been no difference in the two cases as to the rules of evidence. One indicted as a principal cannot be found guilty on evidence showing that he was an accessory before the fact (i). Wherever a variance is material as to the principal, it is material and available to the accessory (k); and vice versâ, where a variance is immaterial to the principal, it is immaterial to the accessory (l).

ACCOMPLICE.

Competency. It seems to be an universal rule, that a particeps criminis may be examined as a witness in both civil and criminal cases, notwithstanding the immorality or illegality of his conduct, provided he has not been convicted of any crime that incapacitates him (m).

In civil actions it was formerly held that a witness could not be admitted to allege his own turpitude, or to disprove an instrument to which he was a party or witness (n); but the rule is now exploded (o), for it is calculated to conceal the truth. The subscribing witnesses to a will have, in several instances, been allowed to give evidence to impeach the will (p); and the same rule applies where the instrument is of a negotiable nature (q).

(y) R. v. Morris, 2 Leach, 696; Russ. & R. 270; and see R. v. Hughes, cor. Thompson, B. Lancr. Lent. Ass. 1813. Russell, 1478. See tit. Husband and Wife.

(z) The receiver of stolen property may be tried either as an accessory after the fact, or as a substantive felon, 7 & 8 G. 4, c. 29, s. 54.

(a) 1 Hale, C. P. 618.

(b) Under the stat. 7 & 8 G. 4, c. 29, s. 54. See Larceny.

(c) Staundf. 96. 8 E. 4, f. 3. (d) 3 P. Wms. 494.

(e) 9 Co. 67. Ibid. 112, b. 4 Co. 42. 3 Inst. 148. 2 Hale, P. C. 292. 1 Plow. 28. R. v. Wallis, 1 Salk. 334. R. v. Benson, 3 Mod. 121. 1 Lord Raymond, 21. Doug. 20.

(f) R. v. Wallis, 1 Salk. 334.

(g) 9 Co. 119. 2 Hale, P. C. 292. 2 Haw. c. 46, sec. 196.

(h) 2 Inst. 183. (i) 1 Haw. c. 26, s. 178, 9.

(k) 2 Haw. c. 46, s. 194. Summ. 265. 2 Hale, P. C. 292.

(l) 2 Haw. c. 46. R. v. Macally, 9 Co. 65. Cro. J. 279. 2 Hale, P. C. 292.

(m) See tit. Infamous Witness.

(n) 4 Inst. 279. Str. 1148. Salk. 461, 680. 3 St. Tr. 427. Burr. 1255. 1 T. R. 296. 3 T. R. 21, 27. This was in conformity with the maxim of civil law, "Nemo allegans turpitudinem suam est audiendus." In the case of Jordaine v. Lashbrooke, 7 T. R. 601, Lawrence, J. observed, "persons are continually allowed to allege their own turpitude, as in cases of simony, compounding felony, sale of offices, &c.; and possibly that maxim may in our law be confined to the cases of plaintiffs making demands ex turpi causâ, and to cases of defence in which innocent persons may be prejudiced."

(o) 5 T. R. 579. 7 T. R. 601. (p) Lowe v. Jolliffe, 1 Bl. R. 365. 7 T. R. 604.

(q) 7 T. R. 64.

A clerk having embezzled his master's property laid it out in illegal insurances, and he was held to be a competent witness for the master against the insurer (r). So a man who has pretended to convey lands to another is a competent witness to prove that he had no title (s). A co-assignor of a ship may prove that he had no interest in the vessel (t). Parents may give evidence to bastardize their issue (u).

* In the case of Walton v. Shelley (x), it was held that the indorsee of a promissory note was not competent to prove that it was tainted with usury in its creation; but in the latter case of Jordaine v. Lashbrooke, (y) it was denied that the former decision was warranted by the previous cases; and it was held, that a party to a bill of exchange was competent to prove it to have been void in its creation (z). So in an action for bribery the person bribed is a competent witness, although by the statute (a) the party who discovers the bribery of another is exempted from an action, and the witness intends to avail himself of this exemption by way of defence to an action pending against himself for bribery committed at the same election (b). No one, however, can be a witness for another whilst he is a party to the record. But a co-defendant may be rendered competent by entering a nolle prosequi (c); and if there be no evidence to charge one co-defendant in trespass, he may be acquitted under the direction of the court, and give evidence in the cause. *11

In criminal cases it is perfectly clear that an accomplice is a competent witness, previous to his conviction of a crime which takes away competency, in all cases, whether of treason (d), felony (e), or mere misdemeanour (f); the doctrine is founded on obvious grounds of policy (g), and, perhaps, of necessity (A). It is also perfectly settled that no promise of pardon, whether it be absolute or conditional, will render an accomplice incompetent (h). In some instances accomplices are strictly entitled to pardon. Such was formerly the case with approvers, upon conviction of their associates (i). The practice of admitting an approver to appeal (a matter purely within the discretion of the court) had become obsolete in the time of Sir Matthew Hale (k), who observed that more mischief had arisen to good men from these approvements, upon false accusations by desperate villains, than benefit to the public by the discovery and conviction of real offenders. Since their discontinuance, and before their final abolition (l), (r) Clarke v. Shee, Cowp. 197. (s) Title v. Grevel, Lord Raym. 1008.

(t) Anon. cited 1 T. R. 301. So a witness may be called to prove that the defendant had been registered as the part-owner of a ship, on the oath of the witness, without his privity or consent, Rands v. Thomas, 5 M. & S. 224. And where a woman had deposed on oath, at the instance of the defendant, that the prosecutor was the father of her bastard child, it was held that she was a competent witness to prove that the defendant was the father. P. v. Teal, 11 East, 309.

(u) See the cases tit. BASTARDY; but see also R. v. Rock, 1 Wils. 340.

(x) 1 T. R. 296. (y) 7 T. R. 601.

(z) See Rich v. Topping, Peake's Cas. 224. Esp. 117. (a) 2 G. 2, c. 24.

(b) Bush v. Rawlings, Say. 209. Howard v. Shipley, 4 East, 180. Edwards v. Evans, 3 East, 431. Phillips v. Fowler, Say. 289, 290.

(c) Man v. Ward, 2 Atk. 229. (d) R. v. Tonge, Keb. 17. 1 Hale, P. C. 303. 7 T. R. 709.

(e) Leach, C. C. L. 133. R. v. Dr. Dodd, Leach, C. C. L. 141. R. v. Westbeer, Ibid. 12.

(f) 2 Haw. c. 46. R. v. Cross, 12 Mod. 520, where the thief was a witness against the receiver. See R. v. Teal, 11 East, 309, supra note (p).

(g) 1 Hale, 303.

(h) Tonge's Case, 1 Hale, 304. Layer's Case, 10 St. Tr. 259. Lord Hale seems to have been of a different opinion in case of a pardon promised for witnesses against others, 1 Hale, 304; 2 Hale, 280; and in the case of an approver, 1 Hale, 303.

(i) Cowp. 339. Leach, C. C. L. 140. But now by the stat. 59 G. 3, c. 46, appeals by approvers, as well as others, are abolished.

(k) 2 Hale, 226. (l) By the stat. 59 G. 3, c. 46.

(A) (S. P. Byrd v. Commonwealth, 2 Virg. Cas. 490. People v. Whipple, 9 Cow. 707. U. States v. Henry, 4 Wash. C. C. 428.)

the doctrine of approvements had become more a matter of curiosity than use (m). Although an approver was sworn to the truth of his appeal (n), yet it seems that he was not a competent witness upon the trial. For this proceeding have been substituted the enactments of general statutes, and the reasonable and equitable practice of admitting an accomplice to give evidence under a conditional promise of pardon, in case he make a fair and impartial disclosure (B).

Competency.

*12 * These statutes, in cases of coining, robbery, burglary, housebreaking and horse-stealing (o), enact, that if an offender being out of prison shall discover two or more persons who have committed the like offences, he shall be entitled to a pardon of the offences respectively specified in those statutes (p).

These statutes, and also others which protect an offending party who discovers another offender, seem to make the latter a competent witness by legislative declaration; for if he were not to be a competent witness, the provisions of the statutes would be almost nugatory and useless; it would be holding out an inducement to offenders to make a discovery, and when made, they would be precluded from the benefit of it (q).

In present practice, where accomplices make a full and fair confession of the whole truth, and are in consequence admitted to give evidence for the crown, if they afterwards give their testimony fairly and openly, although they are not of right entitled to pardon, the usage, lenity, and practice of the court is to stay the prosecution against them; and they have an equitable title to a recommendation to the king's mercy (r).

Under such circumstances, there can be no doubt, as to the competency of the accomplice, upon any principle: the condition is not that he shall convict, nor even that he shall give evidence unfavourable to any prisoner, but that he shall make a fair disclosure of what he knows. The credit to be given to such a witness is for the consideration of the jury: the acknowledged turpitude of the witness must necessarily stamp his testimony with suspicion; and it is to be the more carefully watched, since such a witness lies under a strong temptation to substantiate the account which he has already given, in the hopes of pardon, and is likely to suppose that his object will be gained by a conviction, and may be frustrated by an acquittal.

No accomplice can be examined against his consent, for he is not bound to criminate himself. Where he is willing to give evidence, it seems to be

(m) If there were a dozen appellees, the approver was bound to fight them all if they waged battle; Haw. b. 2, c. 24, s. 24. 2 Hale, 233, 234. 3 Inst. 130. But as he had the power to make his own selection, there was room for the exercise of much discretion.

(n) Staundf. lib. 2, c. 56, p. 145. 1 Hale, 303; but see Layer's Case, 10 St. Tr. 259.

(o) Robbery, 4 W. & M. c. 8, s. 7. Coining, 6 & 7 W. 3, c. 17, s. 12. Burglary, housebreaking, and private stealing, 10 W. 3, c. 23, s. 5; repealed by the 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 27. 5 Ann. c. 31, s. 4. Uttering counterfeit money, 15 Geo. 2, c. 28, s. 28, which extends to such offences only. Illegally buying or receiving stolen lead, iron, or other metals, 29 Geo. 2, c. 30; repealed by the st. 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 27.

(p) See 4 Comm. 330, 331.

(q) See Lord Ellenborough's observations in Heward v. Shipley, 4 East, 180; Bush v. Rawling, Say. 289; R. v. Rockwood, 4 St. Tr. 684-6; R. v. Teasdale, 3 Esp. 68; Mead v. Robinson, Willes, 422; where it was held, that the legislature, by holding out inducements, and offering an indemnity, intended to make the discoverers legal witnesses. And Philips v. Fowler, 8 Geo. 2, cited Willes, 425; R. v. Luckup, 9 Geo. 2, B. R. MSS. cited Willes, 425, in the note; where, in a prosecution for penalties under the stat. 9 Ann. c. 14, s. 9, the loser of money at cards was held to be a good witness to prove the loss. So in R. v. Johnson, cited ibid. See INTERESTED WITNESS.

(r) R. v. Rudd, Leach, C. C. L. 140, per Lord Mansfield, Cowp. 339. And see R. v. Lee, 1 Russ, & R. 261.

(B) (An accomplice having made a full disclosure, is entitled, in New York, to a recommendation for pardon. Otherwise in Virginia.)

the more proper course not to include him in the indictment (s). The practice is (where the accomplice is in custody), for the counsel for the prosecution to move that the accomplice be allowed to go before the grand jury, pledging his own opinion, after a perusal of the facts of the case, that his testimony is essential (t). The admission of the party as a witness, amounts to a promise * of recommendation to mercy, upon condition of his making a full and fair disclosure of all the circumstances of the crime. *13

An accomplice, as it seems, is a competent witness, and may be examined, if he be willing, although he is indicted alone with others, provided he be not put upon his trial at the same time with the others (u); for an indictment against several, is several as to each; so he is if he has pleaded guilty, or been separately convicted, provided judgment has not been pronounced upon him for an offence which disqualifies him (x). So an accomplice is a competent witness for his associates, as well as against them, although they be severally indicted for the same offence (y), whether he is convicted or not, provided he be not disqualified by a judgment. When indicted with others.

By a breach of the condition the accomplice forfeits his claim to favour, and is liable to be tried and convicted (z) upon his confession.

Where there is no evidence, or but slight evidence, against one of the parties upon his trial, the court will sometimes direct the jury to give their verdict as to him, and upon their acquittal of him to admit his testimony (a).

With respect to the force and effect of such testimony, it must, from its very nature, be regarded with great jealousy and suspicion. It is hard (Lord Hale observed) (b) to take away the life of any person upon the evidence of a particeps criminis, unless there be very considerable circumstances which may give the greater credit to what he swears. In strictness of law, indeed, a prisoner may be convicted on the testimony of a single accomplice (c); since, where competent evidence is adduced, it is for the jury to determine on the effect of that evidence. In practice it is usual to direct the jury to acquit the prisoner, where the evidence of an accomplice stands uncorroborated in material circumstances; but this it is said is a matter resting entirely in the discretion of the court (d) (A). Force of such testimony.

(s) 1 Hale, 305. Lord Hale there says, the witness is never indicted, because that weakens and disparages his testimony, but possibly does not wholly take away his testimony. See 2 Hale, 234. It is said that if a defendant accuse himself, he may be a witness against his companion. See Sir Percy Cresby's Case, 19 J. 1. Noy's Rep. 154.

(t) If, however, an accomplice be taken before the grand jury by means of a surreptitious order, the indictment will still be valid. R. v. Dodd, Leach, C. C. L. 184. And it seems to be a general rule, that the means by which evidence was obtained will be no objection to the evidence itself. A justice of the peace has no authority to pardon an offender, and to tell him he shall be a witness at all events against others. R. v. Rudd, Leach, C. C. L. 140; Cowp. 331.

(u) Qu. and see 1 Hale, 305, supra note (s). See also R. v. Ellis, Macnall. 53.

(x) Lee v. Gansel, Cowp. 1.

(y) 1 Hale, 280, cites the case of Billmore, Gray and Harbin, and Gunston v. Downs, 2 R. A. 685, pl. 3. That is, as it seems, where they are severally tried for an offence several in its nature; for in such case it seems to make no difference whether they are severally or jointly indicted.

(z) In a late instance, a prisoner who had made a confession, after a representation made to him by a constable in the gaol, that his accomplices had been taken into custody, which was not the fact, and who, after having been admitted as a witness against his associates on a charge of maliciously killing sheep, upon the trial denied all knowledge of the subject, was afterwards tried and convicted upon his confession. R. v. Burley, cor. Garrow, B. Leicester Lent Assizes 1818. And the conviction was afterwards approved by all the Judges. MSS. C.

(a) 1 Sid. 237; Trials per Pais, 148. Style, 401. 12 Ass. 12, 34. 2 Haw. c. 46, s. 98; Sav. 34.

(b) 1 Hale, P. C. 305.

(c) R. v. Atwood, Leach, C. C. L. 521. R. v. Durham & Crowder, Leach, C. C. L. 538. Lord Kenyon's observations in Jordaine v. Lashbrooke, 7 T. R. 601; 1 Hale, P. C. 303, 304, 305.

(d) It seems to be clearly settled, that a prisoner may be convicted on the unconfirmed testimony of an accomplice. But as a rule of discretion and in practice, it is said, that he ought not to be convicted unless the testimony of the accomplice receive material confirmation. Regarding the rule as one of discretion and not of strict law, it can scarcely be understood that it is a rule which the Judge may enforce or disregard at his option, but rather that it belongs to the court to decide, under the circumstances of each particular case, whether they supply a material confirmation of the accomplice's testimony. Now, though circumstances may be infinitely varied, the principle on which the rule is founded, and by which it is to be applied, remains the same. The rule is devised for the protection of the accused. Independently of the rule, a jury would not be warranted in convicting upon the testimony of an accomplice, without being satisfied that his testimony was true. But even assuming them to be so satisfied, the rule intervenes to the protection of the accused, and requires that they shall not convict him unless their belief is at least in part founded on considerable circumstances (according to Lord Hale) proved aliunde, which coincide with his testimony, and add credit to it. For coincidences in testimony and circumstances, when they consist in particulars which were beyond the reach of premeditation, may not only sanction but compel belief in the particular statement made by the worst of men. But then the question arises, is any distinction to be made as to the nature of the circumstances in respect of which confirmation is required—is it sufficient that the accomplice be confirmed simply as to the corpus delicti, or are some confirmatory circumstances essential as to the identity of the offender? The object of requiring confirmatory evidence must either be to create such a degree of confidence in the sincerity of the accomplice as to render him generally credible even as to statements in respect of which he is not confirmed, or to exclude the probability of his attempting to deceive in the particular transaction which he details. If the latter be the true principle, some confirmation as to the agency of the accused should seem to be essential; for where there are no circumstances independently of the testimony of the accomplice to implicate the accused, the conviction must necessarily rest on the credibility of the witness. From the language of the Judges on the subject, and particularly that of Thomson, L. C. B. (in the case of R. v. Swallow, cited below), it should seem that confirmation as to the circumstances of the offence without any as to the identity of the offender is sufficient, provided of course the jury be induced to give credit to such a witness. The same inference may it seems be drawn from those cases where it has been held, that where several are jointly tried, and there is confirmation only as to some, others may be convicted as to whom there is no confirmation. See R. v. Jones, 2 Camp. 133, cited below, and R. v. Dawber,[1] 3 Starkie's C. 34, and the point is stated to have been expressly decided by the Judges in Birkett's Case, Russ. & Ry. C. C. L. 252. It must be admitted, that even assuming that it is sufficient to confirm by circumstances the general credibility of the accomplice, yet that mere confirmation as to the circumstances of the offence, although it may show the accuracy of the accomplice's recollection, usually affords a very imperfect test of his sincerity. The ordinary motive to deceive, by which an accomplice would be influenced, is the hope of saving himself, and, it may be, a friend who participated in the offence, by the conviction of an innocent person; and the temptation is to misrepresent not as to the circumstances of the offence, but merely as to the agents who committed it. As it is his obvious interest to acquire the confidence of the jury, it is plain that the mere accuracy of his details of the corpus delicti can seldom generate any reasonable degree of confidence in his general sincerity. On the other hand, whatever be the rule of law on the subject, it seems that such circumstances as tend to implicate the accused, independently of the testimony of the accomplice, are of far greater weight than those which merely confirm him as to the details of the offence, whether the object be to confer general credibility or to exclude the apprehension of deceit in the particular case. If distinct proof were to be given aliunde, that the offence had been committed by two persons at the least, even this would effectually exclude a suspicion which might otherwise obtain, viz: that the witness sought to secure impunity to himself by imputing guilt exclusively his own to another; still a doubt might remain whether to save a guilty friend he did not in his statement substitute an innocent party; and it would be difficult to extract such a degree of confidence from his mere detail of the res gestæ, however accurate, as would warrant belief in his mere unconfirmed statement, though such an apprehension might to a great extent, or even entirely, be removed by circumstances which affected the prisoner personally. It would be easy for an accomplice to convict an innocent substitute for a guilty party, were no evidence requisite to connect the latter personally with the offence, but exceedingly difficult to do so were his powers of effecting mischief to be limited to those against whom circumstantial evidence existed, independently of his testimony and beyond the reach of his artifices. It may be said that if personal confirmation were essential, and several prisoners were tried at the same time, as to some of whom there was personal confirmation, but not as to the rest, the jury would be bound to acquit the latter, though they convicted the rest, and that it would be inconsistent that on the testimony of the same witness they should believe him as to part and not as to the rest of his story. The answer, however, is obvious, that if the rule be regarded, as it must be, a technical and artificial one, to be applied in protection of a prisoner even though the jury should think the witness faith-worthy, there would be no inconsistency in convicting A. as to whom there was personal confirmation, and acquitting B. as to whom there was none; the inconsistency would not be greater than if both A. and B. were to be acquitted, though the jury believed the witness, because there was no confirmation as to either. Indeed a greater degree of inconsistency might result from the opposite doctrine. For personal confirmation being unnecessary, if A. and B. were to be tried together, and there were confirmation as to A. but none of any kind as to B., the latter might nevertheless be convicted if the witness were confirmed as to A. and derived credit from such confirmation: and yet if they were to be tried separately, then, notwithstanding the faith-worthiness of the witness, yet, if there were no confirmation the jury ought to acquit B.; so that B. might be liable to be convicted or acquitted accordingly as he was tried jointly with A. or separately. It is also observable, that if mere confirmation as to the facts immediately connected with the commission of the crime were sufficient, the rule would be of little importance, for it rarely happens that there is not some confirmation as to the corpus delicti.

(A) (S. P. United States v. Kessler, 1 Bald. 22.)

The following are the principal authorities on the subject:—In the case of Atwood v. Robins, cor. Buller, Leach, C. C. L. 521, 3d edit., the accomplice was confirmed as to the circumstances of a highway robbery,

[1]Eng Com. Law Reps. xiv. 153.

*ACCORD.

AN Accord and Satisfaction, before the late alterations in the rules of pleading, was evidence in an action upon the case, under the general issue Must be pleaded.

as to the conversation which took place at the time, and as to the number of robbers, but there was no evidence as to the identity of the other two. The jury having found the prisoners guilty, the learned Judge referred the question to the consideration of the twelve Judges, on the doubt whether the evidence of an accomplice, unconfirmed by any other evidence that could materially affect the case, was sufficient to warrant a conviction, and the Judges unanimously held, that the conviction was legal, and sentence of death was passed. It is remarkable, that in this case the Judges, at least the learned Judge who tried the prisoners, did not conceive the confirmation as to the corpus delicti to be that which could materially affect the case. In the subsequent case of Durham & Crowder, Leach's C. C. L. 538. 3d. ed. which occurred very soon afterwards, it was held that the prisoners were properly convicted of a burglary on the sole testimony (as far as regarded the prisoners personally) of a pawnbroker, who had for years been a common receiver of stolen goods. The court seem in this case, as well as the former, to have decided on the ground that no confirmation as to the prisoners was necessary, and that the evidence of an accomplice might be left to a jury, though it was entirely unsubstantiated by any other evidence. It was, however, observed, that Fleming the witness, was to be considered as an accessory after the fact, rather than as an accomplice. If the opinion of the Judges in this case is to be considered as founded on the assumption that Fleming was to be regarded as an accomplice, the decision seems to go the full length of wholly dispensing with the necessity for confirmation, even as a discretionary rule, for there was no confirmation whatsoever of the witness as far as appears, not even as to the corpus delicti: and though it is reported to have been said in that case, that the practice of rejecting an unsupported accomplice was rather a matter of discretion with the court than a rule of law, yet it is difficult to understand how it can be looked upon as any rule at all, if it may be utterly dispensed with and disregarded. In other instances, some confirmation of the testimony of an accomplice has been admitted to be necessary. In the case of The King v. Despard, Howell's St. Tr. vol. 28, p. 346, the Attorney-general (Mr. Perceval) says, "It shall not be contended by us that an accomplice does not require to be confirmed by collateral testimony, before a jury should implicitly give him credit." And he adds, "The confirmation that is required for an accomplice, is to show that the story as related by him coincides with other circumstances which are by unexceptionable testimony proved to have existed, and where such circumstances falling in with the testimony of the accomplice cannot so easily be accounted for by any other supposition than that of the truth of the story." In the case of The King v. Jones, 2 Camp. 132, Lord Ellenborough says, "No one can seriously doubt that a conviction is legal, though it proceed on the evidence of an approver only. Judges in their discretion will advise a jury not to believe an accomplice unless he is confirmed, or only in as far as he is confirmed; but if he is believed, his testimony is unquestionably sufficient to establish the fact which he deposed." In the case of The King v. Swallow and others, York Trials, 1813, p. 16, Mr. Baron Thomson stated to the jury as follows:—"If an accomplice is materially confirmed in his evidence by such testimony as the jury think is unimpeachable, then, notwithstanding the character in which he stands before them, he is to be heard and to be credited by them. And you were rightly also informed, that it was not necessary an accomplice should be confirmed in every circumstance he details in evidence—that would be almost a matter of impossibility; and if every circumstance to which he has spoken could be confirmed by other evidence, there would hardly be occasion to take the accomplice from the bar as a prisoner to make him a witness here: that is certainly too much to be expected, and never is required. It is quite sufficient to see that in some material facts the witness who shall have been an accomplice, is confirmed to the satisfaction of a jury; and that confirmation need not be of circumstances which go to prove that he speaks truth with respect to all the prisoners, and with respect to the share they have each taken in the transaction; for if the jury are satisfied that he speaks truth in those parts in which they see unimpeachable evidence brought to confirm him, that is a ground for them to believe that he speaks also truly with regard to the other prisoners as to whom there may be no confirmation."

In the case of Birkett and Brady, Russ. & Ry. 251, it is stated that the Judges were of opinion, that an accomplice did not require confirmation as to the person he charged, if he was confirmed as to the particulars of his story.

So it has been held, that if an accomplice be confirmed as to one or more of several prisoners, another as to whom there is no confirmation may legally be convicted on his testimony. Thus in R. v. Jones, 2 Camp. 133, Lord Ellenborough observes, "Within a few years a case was referred to the twelve Judges, where four men were convicted of burglary on the evidence of an accomplice who received no confirmation concerning any of the facts which proved the criminality of one of the prisoners; but the Judges were unanimously of opinion that the conviction was legal, and upon that opinion they all suffered the sentence of the law." The same was ruled by Bayley, J. in the case of The King v. Dauber,[1] 3 Starkie's C. 34.[2] In the late case of R. v. Wells and others, 1 Mood & M. C. 326, on an indictment against a principal and accessories, the testimony of an accomplice was confirmed as to the accessories, but not as to the principal, and it was held that both principal and accessories ought to be acquitted.

For further observations on this important subject, the reader is referred to a very able essay, written by a gentleman of the Irish bar, intituled, "Observations on the Confirmation of the Testimony of Accomplices;" the object of which is to show, that in principle some confirmation as to the personal identity of the prisoner is necessary to warrant a conviction.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xiv. 153. [2]Id. xxii. 326.

(p); but in an action of trespass a special plea was necessary, as it now is generally. An accord must be shown to have been received in full satisfaction of the thing demanded (q); and although the plaintiff has agreed to take it in satisfaction, it will not be a bar to the action, unless it operate in satisfaction (r). A less sum cannot operate in satisfaction of a greater (s); but it is otherwise where an additional security is given for the payment of a less sum by a third person (t) (A). So if a debtor assign over all his effects to a trustee, to raise a fund for the payment of a composition to his creditors (u), the general rule is, that the court will see that there has been a reasonable satisfaction (v).

As accord and satisfaction must be specially pleaded, the evidence must of course depend upon the nature of the plea, and the issue taken.

When the accord has been proved by means of a witness, or by the admission of the other party, the performance of the terms accordingly must also be proved where it is executory in its nature. After evidence of an agreement between the plaintiff and defendant, with other creditors of the defendant, to accept a composition in satisfaction of their respective debts, to be paid within a reasonable time, it would not be sufficient to prove a tender, and a refusal on the part of the plaintiff to accept the composition
*17 (x). If *a plaintiff in an action against several for a tort accept a sum

(p) Huxham v. Smith, 2 Camp. 19. Lane v. Applegate,[1] 1 Starkie's C. 97. Paramore v. Johnson, 1 Lord Raym. 566; 12 Mod. 376. It is always a good plea where the action is founded on a covenant, with subsequent damages, secus where debt arises tempore confectionis scripti. Blake's Case, 6 Co. 44. Accord and satisfaction by one, is a bar for all; Com. Dig. Accord, [A.] 1.

(q) See Com. Dig. Accord, [B.] 1.

(r) See Edgcombe v. Rodd, 5 East, 294, as to what amounts to a legal satisfaction; and Com. Dig. Accord, [B.] 1. A judgment without satisfaction is no payment, Tarleton v. Allhusen,[2] 2 Ad. & Ell. 32. An executory agreement may after breach, be discharged by accord and satisfaction, B. N. P. 152; or by a valid agreement, substituting a new cause of action for the old, Case v. Barker; T. Ray. 450.

(s) Fitch v. Sutton, 5 East, 230. Lynn v. Bruce, 2 H. B. 317. Heathcote v. Cruickshanks, 2 T. R. 24. Vid. infra, note (x).

(t) Steinman v. Magnus, 11 East, 390.

(u) Heathcote v. Cruickshanks, 2 T. R. 24.

(v) Cumber v. Wane, Str. 426. Pinnel's Case, 5 Rep. 117. Co. Lit. 112. b. Vid. infra, note (x).

(x) Heathcote v. Cruickshanks, 2 T. R. 24. This was on demurrer to a plea. Where there is an agreement to pay money in satisfaction, it is not enough to show that he has always been ready to pay it, or a tender and refusal. Com. Dig. Accord, [B.] 4. Peyton's Case, 9 Rep. 79. b. But in Bradley v. Gregory, 2 Camp. 383, it was held that a creditor who had agreed with other creditors to execute a composition deed, with a release, on receiving a composition, secured partly by the acceptances of a third person, and partly by those of the debtor, could not, after a tender and refusal of the acceptances, sue for the original debt, on the ground that the agreement operated as satisfaction.

See further on this head, Cumber v. Wane, Str. 426, where it was held that a payment of a promissory note for 5*l.* could be no satisfaction of a debt of 15*l.*; Fitch v. Sutton, 5 East, 230, above cited; Kearslake v. Morgan, 5 T. R. 513, where it was held that the defendant might plead that he indorsed a promissory note, of which he was payee, to the plaintiff, in satisfaction of the demand. The giving the security of a third person for part of a debt only, as for part of a stipulated composition, will be no bar. (Walker v. Seaborne, 1 Taunt. 526.) But if, upon the faith of an agreement amongst creditors to take less than their whole demand, a third person becomes surety for the amount, a creditor, after receiving the amount, cannot sue the debtor, because it would be a fraud upon the surety. Steinman v. Magnus, 2 Camp. 124; 11 East, 390. If creditors agree to give time to their debtor for payment of their respective debts, and to take his promissory notes for their amount, they cannot, unless the agreement has been broken by the debtor, sue him for the amount. Boothbey v. Sowden, 3 Camp. 175. See Cranley v. Hillary, 2 M. & S. 122. Bradley v. Gregory,

(A) (It seems to be perfectly well settled, that an agreement to deliver goods, or a less sum of money in discharge of a greater, must be fully executed, otherwise it is no extinguishment. Spruneberger v. Dentler, 4 Watts, 126. Rice v. Morris, 4 Whart. 249. Levering v. Rittenhouse, 4 Id. 138. Agnew v. Dorr, 5 Id. 131. Coit v. Houston, 3 Johns. Ch. 243. See also Thomas v. M'Daniel, 14 John. R. 185. The plea should show what was given in satisfaction, allege delivery, and expressly aver an acceptance in satisfaction and discharge. Bank v. Littlejohn, 1 Dev. & Bat. 565. Accord and satisfaction is a good bar to an action of covenant, where the breach of covenant has accrued, but not where the breach has not accrued. Harpe v. Hampton, 1 Har. & J. 673. Smith v. Brown, 3 Hawks, 580.)

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. ii. 312. [2] Id. xxix. 20.

from one to forego the action, he cannot, it seems, proceed against the rest (y).

* An accord in respect of which a party may have remedy for a breach, is binding (z). *18

An agreement after action brought for an unliquidated demand, by which the plaintiff agrees to take a sum in discharge of the demand, is a good consideration for a promise by the plaintiff to stay the proceedings and pay his own costs (a).

ACCOUNT (A).

For the evidence to support a count upon an account stated, see Assumpsit.—With respect to the evidence in an action of account little 2 Camp. 383. The defendant agreed to accept a sum to be paid on a day fixed, and a cognovit for the residue; after the day passed, the money not being paid, he issued execution against the plaintiff for the whole amount; the plaintiff obtained a Judge's order for his discharge from the arrest on certain terms, but which he did not act upon, but brought his action for the taking in execution beyond the amount mentioned in the cognovit, and recovered large damages; the Court, on the ground of the damages being excessive, granted a new trial. Parke, J. held that the action was not maintainable, the Judge's order upon being drawn up being in the nature of an agreement, and one of the terms being that the plaintiff should not bring any action for the imprisonment. Wentworth v. Bullen,[1] 9 B. & C. 840. In an action against several, the defendants pleaded a former action brought by the plaintiffs for the same cause against one of the defendants, and that he paid a small sum into court, upon which the plaintiffs taxed and received their costs up to that time, and afterwards discontinued the action, and the defendant received his taxed costs; it was held that the issue in the second action, that the plaintiff accepted the said sum and taxed costs in full satisfaction, was not proved by the fact of the plaintiff having received the costs only, and that the defendant by accepting the taxed costs had assented to the discontinuance of the action. Power v. Butcher,[2] 10 B. & C. 329. It is not sufficient to show that the plaintiff agreed to receive a composition, and on the defendant's assigning particular debts to creditors to execute a general release, and that all the other creditors accepted the composition and executed the release, without proving a tender of the notes to the plaintiff. Cranley v. Hillary, 2 M. & S. 120, and see Walker v. Seaborne, 1 Taunt. 526. Oughton v. Trotter, 2 N. & M. 71. But it would it seems be sufficient to show that the notes were tendered. Oughton v. Trotter[3], 2 N. & M. 71, and see Bradley v. Gregory, 2 Camp. 383. Butler v. Rhodes, 1 Esp. C. 226. Creditors agreed to accept payment by the debtor's covenanting to pay to a trustee of their nomination one-third of his annual income; the creditors nominated no trustee, and the agreement was not acted on, but it was held that the agreement though not properly an accord and satisfaction was a good defence under the general issue, it being a new agreement with the defendant, the consideration of which to the creditor was forbearance by all the other creditors. Good v. Cheesman,[4] 2 B. & A. 329. And where an agreement with creditors has been partly executed, and terms afterwards dispensed with by a part only of the creditors, it was held that a creditor party to the agreement but not to the dispensation could not sue for his original debt. Cock v. Saunders, 1 B. & A. 46. The plaintiff and other creditors of the plaintiff agreed to take a composition of 5*s*. in the pound, payable by notes at four and eight months, but there being a dispute between the plaintiffs and defendants as to the balance due, the plaintiffs promised to adjust their account with one of the defendants, and the defendants said they would do as the other creditors did; after some dispute as to the amount, the plaintiffs' attorney offered to pay the composition on the sum claimed by the defendants, which was the sum really due; the plaintiffs' attorney refused and claimed the whole balance, and it was held that the plaintiffs, although no tender had been made, were entitled to no more than the composition upon the balance. Reay v. White, 1 Cr. & M. 748. But if the debtor wilfully prevent the creditor from receiving the benefit of the composition, the latter is remitted to his right. Garrard v. Woolner,[5] 8 Bing. 258. So such an agreement may be defeated by evidence of fraud, as if the debtor wilfully withhold from the creditor information respecting his estate. Vine v. Mitchell, 1 M. & R. 337.

(y) Dufresne v. Hutchinson, 3 Taunt. 117.

(z) Cartwright v. Cooke,[6] 3 B. & Ad. 701. An accord is good with mutual promises to perform, although the thing be not performed at the time of the action. Com. Dig. Accord, [B.] 4.

(a) Wilkinson v. Byers,[7] 1 Ad. & Ell. 106; and semble, per Littledale, J., so it would in case of liquidated demand. A treaty is proved between two for the renunciation by the one of a right of action against the other; it is also proved that the latter has repudiated all knowledge of such an agreement; the presumption is that none was concluded, and the former may sue on his original right. Smith v. Dickinson, 3 B. & P. 630.

(A) (As the action of account render has become nearly obsolete in England, there is no title for it in the text; the subject has, however, been, and even now is, too important in the United States to be overlooked; though in Massachusetts the action has been abolished by the revised statutes and in Pennsylvania it will probably lose its importance from the full grant of chancery powers to the courts in matters of account.

An action of account render will lie in all cases where one man has received money as the agent of ano-need be said, since the proceeding seems to be obsolete. The evidence depends upon the nature of the plea in bar, which alleges that the de-ther, and where relief may be had in chancery, per Rogers, J., Bredin v. Kingland, 4 Watts, 422; Mumford v. Avery, Kirby, 163. See also Hawley v. Cramer, 4 Cow. 717; Irvine v. Hanlin, 10 Serg. & R. 219. But every bailment is not a trust involving an account in equity; per Baldwin, J. Baker v. Biddle, 1 Baldw. 423; and, to support this action, a contract express or implied must be shown. King of France v. Morris, cited 3 Yeates, 251. Thus it will not lie to recover mesne profits, Harker v. Whitaker 5 Watts, 474. Tenants in common of a tract of land cannot maintain a joint action of account render to recover the proceeds of the land from one who is liable upon an implied contract to account for them. M'Creary v. Ross, 7 Watts, 483.

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. xvii. 503. [2] Id. xxi. 89. [3] Id. xxviii. 353. [4] Id. xxii. 89. [5] Id. xxi. 296. [6] Id. xxiii. 165. [7] Id. xxviii. 48.

In general, the evidence for the plaintiff must conform to the declaration in respect to the material averments, which will be briefly noticed. If the defendant is charged as bailiff or receiver, the allegation must be proved as laid; and if he is tenant in common, he must be so charged. Griffith v. Willing, et al. 3 Binn. 317. Jordan v. Wilkins, 2 Wash. C. C. R. 482. Sargent v. Parsons, 12 Mass. R. 157. Wheler v. Horne, Willes, 208. For the action of account did not lie against tenants in common and joint tenants, before it was given by statute 4 & 5 Ann. c. 16, s. 27, and they are only answerable for what they have actually received, and are not allowed costs and expenses; guardians and bailiffs are answerable for what they might have received, reasonable charges and expenses being deducted; receivers at common law were only obliged to account for what they had actually received, but no allowance was made to them except in some special cases in favour of trade and merchandise. 1 Selw. 2, n. 1, 2, 3. 1 Co. Litt. 166, n. 17, 18. 1 Co. Litt. 173. 3 Co. Litt. 343, 347.

But the rule, that no one shall recover more damages than he has declared for, is not applicable to account render. Gratz v. Philips, 5 Binn. 564.

If the defendant is charged as receiver, the declaration must state by the hands of whom the money was received; Bull. N. P. 125; Jordan v. Wilkins, supra; Bishop v. Eagle, 11 Mod. 186; Walker v. Holyday. 1 Com. R. 272; 3 Co. Litt. 344; 1 Vin. Ab. 146, 175-6; since when the money is alleged to have been received from the plaintiff himself, the defendant may wage his law. Hodsden v. Harridge, 2 Saund. 65. Mood v. the Mayor of London, 5 Salk. 683. But if the defendant is charged as receiver by the hands of A., although the burthen of proof lies on the plaintiff, and such a receipt ought to be proved, yet it is sufficient to show, that A. directed the defendant to borrow of another to pay the plaintiff; that the defendant borrowed the money accordingly, and that A. gave bond to the lender. Harrington v. Deane, Hob. 36; Bull. N. P. 125. See also Spalding v. Dunlap, 1 Root. 319; Thouron v. Paul, 6 Whart. 615.

It has been held, that, as between partners, it is sufficient to charge the defendant, generally, with the receipt of money to their joint benefit, and if the plaintiff prove that a partnership existed, that the defendant was the acting partner, and that he received any part of the sum charged, from any of the persons mentioned in the declaration, he is entitled to a general verdict on the issue of ne unques receiver. James v. Browne, 1 Dall. 339; but see Jordan v. Wilkins, supra. The property of the goods bailed or the money received, must be correctly stated and proved as stated. Jordan v. Wilkins, James v. Browne, supra. If there are more than one defendant, there must be a joint liability on their part to render an account to the plaintiff. Whelen v. Watmough, et al., 15 Serg. & R. 158. It has been held, that unless a settlement has been made, and a balance struck, between partners, where there are two, the remedy is by action of account render; but where there are more than two, the only proper mode of proceeding is by a bill in equity. Beach v. Hotchkiss, 2 Conn. R. 425; but see the remarks of Duncan, J. on this case, in Whelen v. Watmough, et. al., supra.

On a reference to auditors, under a judgment quod computet, all articles of account between the parties incurred since the commencement of the suit, are to be included by the auditors; and the whole transaction between them are to be brought down to the time when they made an end of the account. Couscher v. Toulam, 4 Wash. C. C. R. 442. On the trial of issues certified by the auditors, however, the plaintiff cannot give evidence of moneys received before the time laid in the declaration. Sweigart v. Cowmarter, 14 Serg. & R. 200.

The evidence for the defendant may readily be ascertained by what has been said in respect to the evidence for the plaintiff. A few principles in relation to the proper pleas in this action may render the subject more plain. There is no general issue. 1 Chit. Pl. 127. The defendant may plead in bar his infancy, or that he has fully accounted, or the statute of limitations. 1 Chit. Pl. 429, 430. 1 Selw. 3. 1 Co. Lit. 172-3. 3 Co. Lit. 343. In general, matter pleadable in bar cannot be pleaded before the auditors. Bredin v. Divin, 2 Watts, 15. If a party is once chargeable and accountable, he cannot plead in bar, but must plead before the auditors, except in the case of the pleas of release plene computavit or statute of limitations, and even in these cases, he must plead specially and cannot give them in evidence in the plea of ne unques receiver. Godfrey v. Saunders, 3 Wils. 94. 1 Chit. Pl. 430.

Where goods are consigned to the defendant for sale, under his agreement, to return those unsold, the plea of plene computavit cannot be maintained by proof of the rendering an account sales of such of the goods as have been sold, the remainder not having been returned. Read v. Bertrand, 4 Wash. C. C. R. 556. The plea of plene computavit, when added to that of ne unques, bailiff, &c., does not admit the liability of the defendant to account. Whelen v. Watmough, supra. Where the defendant is bound to account for a part only of the goods mentioned in the declaration, a general verdict is good. Sturges v. Bush, 5 Day, 452; for a general verdict for the plaintiff, and a judgment quod computet, do not conclude the defendant as to the dates and sums mentioned in the declaration; but the auditors may make the proper charges and allow the proper credits without regard to the verdict. Newbold v. Sims, 2 Serg. & R. 317. The legislature of Pennsylvania, by the act of the 13th of Oct. 1840, have changed the mode of proceeding in this action.)

fendant never was bailiff or receiver to the plaintiff, or that he has accounted, or that the plaintiff has released him (b), &c.

Upon a plea that he was never receiver, the defendant cannot show that he received the money from the plaintiff by way of bailment, to deliver to another person, and that he did deliver it accordingly; for he did receive the money although he was to be accountable only conditionally, and therefore the evidence does not support the plea (c). Neither under such a plea can he give a release in evidence (d). The burthen of proof on such a plea lies upon the plaintiff (e). Where he charges the defendant as receiver by the hands of A., it is sufficient for him to prove that A. directed the defendant to borrow of another to pay the plaintiff, and that the defendant borrowed accordingly, and that A. gave his bond to the lender (f).

ACKNOWLEDGMENT. See ADMISSION.—FRAUDS, STATUTE OF.

ACQUITTAL. See VOL. I. P. II. tit. JUDICIAL INSTRUMENTS.

ACTION, COMMENCEMENT OF, HOW PROVED. See WRIT.—LIMITATIONS.—TIME.

ACTS OF PARLIAMENT. See tit. STATUTE.

ADMINISTRATOR. See tit. EXECUTOR.

ADMISSIONS.

Nature of admissions.

IT is a matter of obvious and daily remark, how much of the materials of evidence in ordinary practice is derived from the admissions, direct and indirect, of the parties themselves, and how difficult it would frequently be, if not impossible, to establish the truth by means of any other evidence. Evidence of this kind admits of great variety both in its nature and application. In many instances the admission is directly and expressly made with a view to establish the fact, and in order to supersede the necessity of any other proof; as where it arises upon the face of the pleadings, or is made by matter of record; or by specialty, by which the party is estopped *from afterwards denying the admitted fact. In other instances, although *19 there be no direct and express admission for such a purpose, yet if a representation be made of any fact, with a view to influence the conduct of another, or to derive an advantage to the party, and which cannot afterwards be denied without a breach of good faith, such an admission will not only be evidence of the fact, but will usually preclude the party who has made it from insisting upon the contrary. In such cases the admission does not operate merely as presumptive evidence of the actual truth of the fact, which must give way to positive proof of the contrary, but precludes, and as it were estops the party, on grounds of policy, from repudiating his own representation, and renders the actual truth of the fact immaterial. In other instances again, such evidence rests simply on the presumption that the party would not have admitted a fact contrary to his own interest, unless it had been true: such admissions are frequently of the most forcible nature, as in the case of a confession of guilt by a prisoner (g). It is a most general and extensive rule, that all a man's acts and declarations shall be admitted in evidence whenever they afford any presumption against him: for it is to be presumed that he acted or spoke consistently with his knowledge of the truth. All presumptions founded upon a man's conduct may be referred to this head, for a man's acts and conduct are indications which frequently afford presumptions as strong as express declarations; the very silence of a party will frequently supply a strong inference; as,

(b) 1 Roll. Ab. 121.
(c) 2 Roll. Ab. 683. Selw. N. P. 5.
(d) Willoughby v. Smalt, 2 Brownl. 24.
(e) Hob. 36.
(f) Harrington v. Deane, Hob. 36.
(g) Vide infra, ADMISSIONS IN CRIMINAL CASES.

for instance, where one makes a claim upon another, before witnesses, the justice of which the latter does not deny (h) (A).

Admissions made with a view to evidence.

The admissibility and effect of evidence of this description will be considered generally, with respect to the nature and manner of the admission itself; and secondly, with respect to the parties to be affected by it. In the first place, as to the nature and manner of the admission, it is either made, first, expressly with a view to evidence; or, secondly, with a view to induce others to act upon the representation; or, thirdly, it is an unconnected or casual representation. In general, a party cannot contradict that by evidence which he has admitted on the pleadings; nor can the jury find any fact contrary to such admissions, for they are sworn to try the matter in issue between the parties, so that nothing else is properly before them (i).

It is a general rule that what is admitted on record must be taken to be proved, and cannot be disproved (k). And also that whatever is pleaded and not denied is to be taken as admitted (l). But it seems that where a *20 party *in pleading admits, because he does not deny, a part alleged by the adversary, it is not to be taken as if proved in evidence, so as to warrant such inferences as might have been made had the fact been proved in evidence (m). A plea of the general issue usually admits the title of the plaintiff to sue in the special character of executor or administrator (n); in respect of a cause of action arising in the lifetime of the testator or testatrix. In an action by a husband and wife, the plea of the general issue admits the marriage (o). In an action on the case for negligent driving of a carriage by the defendant's servant to the injury of the plaintiff's person, the ownership of the carriage and the fact of its having been driven by the defendant's servant is admitted by the plea of not guilty (p).

An admission upon a plea does not operate as an admission with respect

(h) See as to an admission by a defendant that his trade is a nuisance, R. v. Neville, Peake's C. 91. Admissions implied from the acquiescence of a party, Neale v. Parkin, 1 Esp. C. 229. Doe v. Pye, 1 Esp. C. 364. An admission that a debt was not due to an insolvent who had omitted to insert it in his schedule, Nicholls v. Downes, 1 M. & R. 13.

(i) B. N. P. 298. So the payment of money into court admits the character in which the plaintiff sues, and his right to recover at least to the amount of the money so paid. 4 T. R. 579. 2 T. R. 275. See tit. PAYMENT INTO COURT.

(k) B. N. P. 298. And see Evans v. Ogilvie, 2 Y. & J. 79.

(l) Wimbush v. Tailbois, Plowd. 48. 2 Lutw. 1215. B. N. P. 298. In such case the jury cannot find to the contrary. 2 Lutw. 1215. But no more is admitted than is stated. Williams v. Sills, 2 Camp. 509. Watson v. King, 4 Camp. 272. Infra. tit. COVENANT. Dunston v. Tresider, 5 T. R. 2. Infra, tit. TRESPASS. The plea of non-assumpsit does not admit any immaterial allegation in the inducement. Bennion v. Davison, 3 M. & W. 642. Nor any title but such as is stated in the declaration. Where the declaration states letters of administration which on the face of them are void, the plea of the general issue does not admit a title sufficient to enable the plaintiff to recover. Adams v. Savage, 6 Mod. 134. A new assignment of unnecessary violence to a plea by the defendant of an entry to abate a nuisance, admits the nuisance. Pickering v. Rudd,[1] 1 Starkie's C. 56.

(m) Per Alderson, B. in Edmonds v. Groves, 2 M. and W. 642, supra. But note, that it was unnecessary in that case to decide the point. The defendant pleaded, by way of set-off, that the plaintiff made his promissory note payable to A. C., and that the administrator of A. C. indorsed it to the defendant. Replication that the supposed cause of action did not accrue to the defendant within six years. The making of the note and the indorsement were held to be admitted by the replication, and also that the defendant might avail himself of a memorandum of the payment of interest written on the note by A. C. to bar the Statute of Limitations. Gall v. Apern,[2] 1 Ad. & Ell. 102.

(n) See tit. EXECUTOR.

(o) See tit. HUSBAND AND WIFE.

(p) Emery v. Clarke, 2 Mo. & Ry. 260. Taverner v. Little,[3] 5 Bing. N. C. 678. Wolfe v. Beard, Q. B. cited 2 Mo. & R. 261.

(A) (A man's own allegations in the record of a suit are the highest evidence against him; their effect cannot be destroyed or weakened by any contradicting evidence. Delacroix v. Prevost's heirs, 6 Martin, 280. Latapie v. Gravier, 8 Id. 317.)

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. ii. 293. [2]Id. xxviii. 46. [3]Id. xxxv. 269.

to the proof of an issue upon any other plea (q); and although the form of protestations is still adhered to in pleading, for the purpose of precluding the inference (r) that the party pleading one matter meant to admit another, they seem to be but of little use at the present day.

By letting judgment go by default the defendant admits a cause of action, and therefore he cannot afterwards insist on fraud on the part of the plaintiff (s). Where a plea to a count in indebitatus assumpsit is pleaded as to a precise sum, that sum, although laid under a videlicet, is admitted to be due, and must be covered in order to warrant a verdict for the defendant (t). So where a party has solemnly admitted a fact under his hand and seal, he is estopped not only from disputing the deed itself, but every fact which it recites (u). Thus, if one deed be recited in another, which latter *is proved to be executed by the party, the recital will be *21 evidence of the execution of the recital deed (x). In the case of Shelley v. Wright (y) it was held that the obligor of a bond was estopped from averring against the obligee, that he had not received certain sums of money for the obligee, recited in the condition of the bond to have been so received by him. So a recital of a lease in a deed of release is evidence of the execution of such a lease (z). So the date of a lease is evidence that it was executed the same day (a). But the whole of a recital is to be taken; and therefore if a patent be recited to be surrendered, and one relies upon the recital as proof of the existence of the patent, it will also be proof of a surrender (b). Where a covenant to lay out a sum in an annuity recited that the covenantor had given a bond for the payment of the money, the recital was held to be evidence of the bond (c). The subscription of a paper by one as a witness is not of itself proof of acquiescence in the contents (d).

So in an action against a master for not inserting the true consideration

(q) Vol. I. p. 337. Nor can a notice of set-off or particular of it be used as evidence on the other side. Ib. And see Miller v. Johnson, 2 Esp. C. 602. Stracy v. Blake, 1 M. & W. 168. The statements in a plea held bad on demurrer are not evidence for the plaintiff on the general issue. Montgomery v. Richardson,[1] 5 C. & P. 247. Neither a plea nor demurrer to a bill in equity is evidence by way of admission against the defendant in another transaction. After a demurrer to a bill in equity overruled, the party may still go on and answer; and consequently the demurrer is not to be taken as an absolute admission of the facts charged. And on the same principle a plea in equity cannot be so, for it amounts merely to a statement of circumstances to prove that, supposing the facts charged to be true, the defendant is not bound to answer. Tomkins v. Ashby,[2] 1 M. & M. 32. A plea in a discontinued action is not evidence against the defendant in another action. Allen v. Hartley, Doug. 20. A demurrer admits those facts only which are well pleaded.

(r) See Co. Litt. 124, b. Doct. Pl. 295. 2 Will. Saund. 103, n. 1. Montgomery v. Richardson,[1] 5 C. & P. 247. Firmin v. Crucifix,[1] Ib. 98.

(s) East India Company v. Glover, 1 Stra. 612.

(t) Cousins v. Paddon, 2 C. M. & R. 547. But the plea is for this purpose divisible. Ib. And see Green v. Marsh, 4 Dow, P. C. 669.

(u) B. N. P. 298. See Vol. I. Ind. tit. Estoppel. In other cases, although the parties may be estopped, the jury are not. Goddard's Case, 2 Co. 4, b.; B. N. P. 298.

(x) See tit. Recital.—Deed; and 1 Salk. 186. The recital of an ancient charter in a modern one is evidence. Per Abbott, J. Gervis v. Great Western Canal Company, 5 M. & S. 78.

(y) Willes, 9. See also Cossens v. Cossens, Willes' R. 25. And see Bowman v. Taylor, 4 N. & M. 264. Rees v. Loyd, Wight. 123.

(z) Per Holt, J. Ford v. Gregy, 1 Salk. 186. Com. Dig. Estoppel, [B.] 5. Crease v. Barrett, 1 C. M. & R. 919.

(a) 1 Salk. 485. In trespass against a sheriff, a bill of sale, reciting the writ, the taking, and the sale of the goods, is evidence against him of these facts. Woodward v. Larking, 3 Esp. C. 286.

(b) 2 Vent. 171. 1 Com. Dig. Evidence, [B.] 5. A recital in a bond that the parties had agreed to execute a bond in the sum of 500*l.*, does not confine the bond to that sum if actually executed in the penal sum of 1,000*l.* Ingleby v. Swift,[3] 3 M. & S. 488. 10 Bing. 84.

(c) 2 P. Wms. 432. Marchioness of Annandale v. Harris.

(d) 1 Esp. C. 57. Where a party executed a deed (for raising money on an annuity) reciting a will, and that the trustees had not sold, and that he was in possession by their permission; held that such admission was evidence to show that he was not the legal owner of the estate. Doe v. Coulthred, 2 Nev. & P. 165.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxiv. 302. [2]Id. xxii. 239. [3]Id. xxv. 36.

in an indenture of apprenticeship, the recital in that part of the indenture executed by the defendant, that A. B. put himself apprentice, &c., is evidence of the fact against the defendant (e). So a grant to a corporation by a particular name is evidence as against the grantor, that the corporation was at that time known by that name (f). But a recital will not operate as an estoppel, or as evidence against one who was neither a party to the deed, nor claims under a party (g). Although he may claim title under a deed containing such recital (h). Where a counsel in a cause admits a fact, even by inference, it is to be taken as proved (i).

Admissions which have been acted upon.

Secondly, there is a strong line of distinction between admissions or conduct upon which a party has induced others to act, or by means of which he has acquired some advantage to himself, and those admissions which have been made without any reference to the matter litigated, and which are not immediately connected with it: in the former case the party is usually concluded absolutely by such an admission; as where he makes an

*22 *admission for the purpose of trial (k). Where a man has cohabited with a woman, and treated her in the face of the world as his wife, he cannot afterwards object to a creditor who supplied her with goods, that she is not his wife (l). So where a man has held himself out to the world in a particular character, he cannot afterwards divest himself of it, in order to claim that to which under the assumed character he is not entitled (m). A man who acquiesces several years in a commission of bankrupt, and solicits the votes of creditors in the choice of assignees, cannot afterwards dispute the commission (n). So a petitioning creditor cannot dispute the debt in an action at the suit of the assignees (o). So a defendant is estopped, by the recognizance of bail entered into for him by the name by which he is sued, from pleading a misnomer, although he is no party to the recognizance (p); for in these and other such cases the party, by taking the benefit of the act, has conclusively adopted it. So a tenant cannot dispute his landlord's title, nor can a copyhold tenant dispute the title of the lord of the manor (q). A tenant is concluded by the statement which he makes to his landlord, as to the time of entry (r). Respondents obtaining a respite of an appeal cannot afterwards object the want of notice of appeal (s). Where one being asked his name previous to the suing out of process, represents it to be John, he cannot in an action of trespass against the sheriff, insist that his name is William (t). So where a man has made a deliberate administration in rem., by giving his promissory note, or by entering into a bond, or other obligation, for the amount of goods sold, he

(e) Burleigh v. Stibbs, 1 T. R. 465. (f) Mayor of Carlisle v. Blamire, 8 East, 493.

(g) 1 Salk. 186. Com. Dig. Evidence, [B.] 5. Ibid. Estoppel, [A.] 2. But it may be secondary evidence where the original is lost. 1 Salk. 286. Com. Dig. Evidence, [B.] 5. But it operates against those who claim under the party. Fitzgerald v. Eustace, Bac. Ab. Ev. 647. 2 P. Wms. 432.

(h) A deed conveying an estate to B., but to which B. is no party, recites the bankruptcy of A.; B. conveys the estate by a deed which contains no such recital; the former deed is not evidence against B. of the bankruptcy of A. in a suit as to other lands. Doe v. Shelton,[1] 3 Ad. & Ell. 265.

(i) Stracy v. Blake, 1 M. & W. 168. As to admissions by an attorney, see tit. Attorney.

(k) Such an admission must either be proved to have been signed by the attorney on the record, or by the authority of the party himself. See Vol. I. and Ind. tit. Admissions.

(l) Watson v. Threlkeld, 2 Esp. 637. Robinson v. Nahon, 1 Camp. 245. Munro v. De Chemant, 4 Camp. 215.

(m) Watson v. Threlkeld, 2 Esp. 637. Robinson v. Nahon, 1 Camp. 245.

(n) Like v. Howe and Rogers, 6 Esp. C. 20. Flower v. Heebee, 2 Ves. 236. (See also Clarke v. Clarke, 6 Esp. C. 61.)

(o) Harmer v. Davis, 1 Moore, 300. (p) Meredith v. Hodges, 2 N. R. 453.

(q) Doe d. Nepean v. Budden,[2] 5 B. & A. 626. See tit. Use and Occupation, and tit. Ejectment.

(r) Doe d. Eyre v. Lambley, 2 Esp. C. 635.

(s) R. v. Justices of Carmarthenshire,[3] 4 B. & Ad. 563.

(t) Price v. Harwood, 3 Camp. 108; and see Bass v. Clive, 4 M. & S. 13.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxx. 90. [2]Id. vii. 214. [3]Id. xxiv. 118.

is conclusively bound by it in the absence of fraud, or perhaps, of mistake; for the very intent and purpose of the acknowledgment is, that it shall operate as conclusive evidence against the party (u). Where, however, a receipt has been given for money, it is not so conclusive but that the party may show that it was given under a mistake (x), and that he did not receive the sum or thing in question (A). So a parish certificate is evidence, for all the rest of the world, against the parish which granted it, and conclusive as to the parish to which it was directed (y). Where a plaintiff signed himself M. D. it was held that he was to be taken for a physician, and that he could not maintain an action for fees (z). So it has been said that proof of the bankrupt's submission to a commission is evidence against him of his being such (a), as, if he obtain his discharge as a bankrupt under a Judge's order (b). But the *mere surrender of the bankrupt is not sufficient, because it is compulsory (c). The fact that a party has proved a debt under a commission of bankrupt is not even primâ facie evidence, in an action by the assignees of the bankrupt against that party, of the requisites to support the commission (d); for a creditor has not the means of knowing what was the evidence upon which the party was declared a bankrupt; and by proving the debt he at most gives credit to the petitioning creditor, and the commissioners, that the former has not sued out a commission, nor the latter declared the party bankrupt, without proper grounds (e); and it is not reasonable that he should be put to the dilemma of being barred by a certificate, or of being taken to have admitted that every act necessary to support the commission really existed. Such admissions (f), though they be conclusive, are not estoppels in the *23

(u) See Nash v. Turner, 1 Esp. C. 117. Solomonson v. Turner,[1] 1 Starkie's C. 51. Vid. infra, Assumpsit.
(x) Stratton v. Rastall, 2 T. R. 366. Benson v. Bennett, 1 Camp. 394. Bristow v. Eastman, 1 Esp. C. 172.
(y) 4 T. R. 256. R. v. Headcorn, Burr. S. C. 253.
(z) Lipscomb v. Holmes, 2 Camp. 441. See Chorley v. Bolcott, 4 T. R. 317.
(a) Haviland v. Cook, 5 T. R. 655.
(b) Goldie v. Gunstone, 4 Camp. 381. Mercer v. Wise, 3 Esp. 219. Watson v. Wace,[2] 5 B. & C. 153. Secus, if he make the admission merely in a transaction with third persons. Heane v. Rogers,[3] 9 B. & C. 577. See 11 Ves. 409.
(c) Per Ld. Ellenborough, 4 Camp. 382. Neither is he precluded by a petition to the Chancellor to enlarge the time of surrendering. Mercer v. Wise, 3 Esp. C. 219. Nor by an application to a commissioner to appoint an official assignee. Munk v. Clarke,[4] 2 Bing. N. C. 299.
(d) Rankin v. Horner, 16 East, 191. Stewart v. Richman, 1 Esp. C. 108. It had before been held, that the proving a debt under a commission of a bankrupt estopped the party from afterwards disputing it. Per Lord Mansfield, Walker v. Newell, cited 3 T. R. 322.
(e) Rankin v. Horner and another, 16 East, 191. But see Maltby v. Christie, 1 Esp. C. 340. Walker v. Burnell, Dougl. 303; 3 T. R. 321.
(f) See further Vol. II. tit. Presumption. An executrix who uses the testator's goods as her own, and afterwards as her husband's, cannot object to their being taken in execution for the husband's debt. Quick v. Staines, 1 B. & P. 293. See tit. Sheriff. A petitioning creditor cannot dispute the debt in an action by the assignees. Harmer v. Davis, 1 Moore, 300. A distress on one as tenant is evidence of the tenancy. Lord Falmouth v. Swann,[5] 8 B. & C. 459. Where A. B. executed a warrant of attorney in the name of C. B., held that judgment was properly entered up, and fi. fa. issued and executed against him, by that name. Reeves v. Slater,[6] 7 B. & C. 873. The obligor of a bond represented to a purchaser that it was a valid instrument, and would be paid when due; he cannot afterwards set up as a defence that it was void, as having been given for a gaming debt. Davison v. Franklin,[7] 1 B. & Ad. 142. One of a committee of a strict and technical sense, which, to be conclusive, must be pleaded; but are conclusive upon the evidence, on the principles of good sense and sound policy (g).

(A) (A receipt for money by a stranger to a suit, cannot be given in evidence on the trial of the cause. Craig v. Craig, 5 Rawle, 91. Townsend v. Kerns, 2 Watts, 180. But to this rule there is the exception of a payment to a public officer Per Gibson, Ch. J. in M'Call v. Neely, 3 Watts, 73. See also Cluggage v. Swan, 4 Binn. 150. Payment may be proved by parol, though there be a receipt for it in writing, without producing or accounting for it. Southwick v. Hayden, 7 Cow. 334. Though a receipt in writing and even under seal be absolute in its terms, it is not conclusive, and it may be rebutted by parol evidence. Johnson v. Weed, 9 John. R. 310. Thompson v. Fausset, 1 Peters, C. C. R. 182. Watson v. Blaine, 12 Serg. & R. 131. Tucker v. Maxwell, 11 Mass. R. 143.)

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. ii. 291. [2]Id. xii. 77. [3]Id. xvii. 449. [4]Id. xxix. 345. [5]Id. xv. 264. [6]Id. xiv. 91. [7]Id. xx. 363.

Collateral admissions.

Thirdly. Where the admission or declaration is quite foreign to the question pending, although admissible, yet it is not in general conclusive evidence (A), and though a party may, by falsifying his former declaration or oath, show that he has acted illegally and immorally, yet as he is not guilty of any breach of good faith in the existing transaction, and has not induced others to act upon his admission or declaration, nor derived any benefit from it against his adversary, he is not bound by it; the evidence in such cases is merely presumptive, and liable to be rebutted. Where the admission consists in a loose and careless declaration, if it be evidence at all, it is of little weight (h). Proof that B. has dealt with A. as the *24 farmer *of the post-horse duties is evidence in an action by A. against B., to prove that he is so (i). Upon an indictment under the 27th of Eliz. for remaining in this kingdom forty days after taking orders from the See of Rome, proof that the defendant had officiated here as a Romish priest was held to be evidence of his having taken orders (k).

In an action for non-residence, proof that the defendant has acted as the parson, is evidence against him that he is such (l). In an action for not setting out tithes, proof that the defendant has paid tithes to the plaintiff is evidence of his title to receive them (m). An acknowledgment by the defendant that his trade is a nuisance, is admissible, although not conclusive evidence against him, upon an indictment for setting up his trade at another place (n). Proof that A. B., as the proprietor of a newspaper, had given security for the payment of the duties on advertisements, and had from time to time applied to the Stamp-office concerning duties on the paper, was held to be evidence that he was the publisher (o). A description by the party as to his situation is evidence against himself that he holds that situation (p). And therefore, on an information against a military officer for false musters, the returns themselves in which he described himself to be such officer were held to be evidence of the fact (q).

An advertisement by an auctioneer of the sale of the property of A. B. a bankrupt, is evidence in an action by him against the assignees that A. B. was a bankrupt (r). In an action for slandering the plaintiff in his pro-company empowered by Act of Parliament to carry on certain works, is not estopped by having joined in making calls on subscribers, or by payment of calls, from disputing their validity, if illegal; for such calls being against law, no person could be misled. Stratford and Moreton Railway Company v. Stratton,[1] 2 B. & Ad. 518. A relator who did not concur in the election of the defendant, although he appeared afterwards to have acted and attended corporate meetings with him, may still sustain the application for a quo warranto. R. v. Benney,[2] 1 B. & Ad. 684; and see R. v. Clarke, 1 East, 38. Secus where he had concurred in the election of others at the time when the same objection to the title of the elected, and of which he sought to avail himself on the motion, was made and overruled. R. v. Parkyn,[2] 1 B. & Ad. 690; and see R. v. Symonds, 4 T. R. 233. R. v. Mortlock, 3 T. R. 300.

(g) See the observations of Abbott, L. C. J., 5 B. & C. 155.

(h) Burr. 2057; 2 Wils. 399; and Lord Ellenborough's observations, 1 M. & S. 636.

(i) Radford v. M'Intosh, 3 T. R. 682. And see Peacock v. Harris, 10 East, 104. Lister v. Priestley, Wightw. 67.

(k) R. v. Kerne, 2 St. Tri. 694. R. v. Brommich, 2 St. Tr. 966.

(l) Bevan v. Williams, 3 T. R. 635.

(m) Per Lord Kenyon, 3 T. R. 635; 4 T. R. 367, per Buller, J.

(n) R. v. Neville, Peake's C. 91.

(o) R. v. Topham, 4 T. R. 126.

(p) R. v. Gardner, 2 Camp. 513.

(q) Ibid.

(r) Maltby v. Christie, 1 Esp. C. 340. Booth v. Coward, 1 B. & A. 677. Inglis v. Spence, 1 Cr. M. & R. 432. So where the defendant, with a view to a commission, made affidavit that the party had become bankrupt. Ledbetter v. Salt,[3] 4 Bing. 623.

(A) (Proof of declarations made by a witness out of court, in corroboration of testimony given by him on the trial of a cause, is, as a general and almost universal rule, inadmissible. Robb v. Hackley, 23 Wend. 50.)

[1]Eng. Com Law Reps. xxii. 130. [2]Id. xx. 472. [3]Id. xv. 91.

fession as an attorney, the words importing that the plaintiff was an attorney are evidence of the fact (s).

Where a lessee covenanted that the lease should be avoided by his bankruptcy, proof of his submission to a commission was held to be evidence of bankruptcy without proof of any act of bankruptcy (t).

The oath of a party taken before the commissioners of the income-tax is evidence upon an information under the game-laws (u), but not conclusive. So the omission of a debt by an insolvent in his schedule is evidence against him, although it does not stop him from suing (x). So in a suit between the lord of a manor and the devisee of a copyhold, the recital of the devise in *the admittance is evidence of the devise against the lord, *25 although it would not have been so against the heir (y).

In an action for bribing of one who had a vote at an election, the very offer to bribe is evidence against the defendant that the party solicited had a right to vote (z) (A).

In the case of Morris v. Miller (a) it was held, that, in an action for criminal conversation, an admission by the defendant that he had committed adultery with the wife of the plaintiff was not sufficient, without proof of a marriage in fact. But when this doctrine was urged in a subsequent case (b) the Court observed, as to the case of criminal conversation, "To be sure, a defendant's saying in jest, or in loose rambling talk, that he had lain with the plaintiff's wife, would not be sufficient alone to convict him in that action; but if it were proved that the defendant had seriously and solemnly recognized that he knew the woman he had lain with was the plaintiff's wife, we think it would be evidence proper to be left to a jury, without proving a marriage."

Answers in Chancery, as has been seen, operate as admissions upon oath (c). It seems, however, that an admission by the defendant, even to an answer in Chancery, is merely secondary evidence as to the execution of a (s) Berryman v. Wise, 4 T. R. 366. Pearce v. Whale,[1] 5 B. & C. 39; and see Vol. II. tit. LIBEL. In a qui tam action against a collector of taxes, it is not necessary to give in evidence his warrant. Proof that he has acted as collector is sufficient. Lister v. Priestley, Wightw. 67. Accounting with one as farmer of the tolls of a turnpike, who has assumed that character by consent of those concerned, estops the party from disputing the validity of his title, when suing by account stated for those tolls. Peacock v. Harris, 10 East, 104. In an action against overseers, acts done by them in that capacity are evidence of their being overseers. Merrill's Lessee v. Whitechurch, Salisbury assiz. 1817. But they were not concluded by the acts of former overseers, without regular proof of their appointment. Or by the act of a co-defendant previous to the commencement of his overseership.

(t) Doe v. Hodgson, cor. Abbot, L. C. J. Sitting after Easter T. 1823.

(u) R. v. Clarke, 8 T. R. 120. So a return under the stat. 1 & 2 G. 4, c. 87, of corn in the possession of a party, as sold and delivered to B., does not preclude him from showing that it was delivered to D. on account of B., but that B. was not to have possession before payment. Woodley v. Brown,[2] 2 Bing. 528.

(x) 3 Camp. 13.

(y) Lord Raym. 735.

(z) Coombe v. Pitt, Burr. 1586; and Rigg v. Curgenven, 2 Wils. 395. In both those cases the bribee was admitted to vote, which was held to be the strongest evidence of his right to vote; but Lord Mansfield and the rest of the Court (Burr. 1590), held expressly, that a man who had given money to another for his vote should not be admitted to say that he had no vote.

(a) Burr. 2057. Qu. whether this is the same with the case cited 2 Wils. 399, under the names of Dr. Smith v. Miller?

(b) 2 Wils. 399.

(c) Supra, Vol. I. tit. JUDICIAL INSTRUMENTS.

(A) (A promissory note void in law may be used as evidence of an acknowledgment of a debt to take the case out of the statute of limitations. Utica Ins. Co. v. Kip, 3 Wend. 369. But see Law v. Merrills, 6 Wend. 277. In prosecutions for bigamy, the mere confession of the defendant is not sufficient evidence of the first marriage. The People v. Humphrey, 7 John. R. 314. Aliter except in prosecutions for bigamy, and crim. con. actions. Fenton v. Reed, 4 John. R. 52.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xi. 138. [2]Id. ix. 509.

deed, and therefore does not supersede the necessity of proving it by the subscribing witness, because a fact may be known to the subscribing witness which is not known to the obliger, and he is entitled to avail himself of all the knowledge of the subscribing witness relating to the transaction (d). But this objection does not apply where the party enters into an admission with a view to the trial of the cause. And it has been held that a declaration by the lessee of a plaintiff in ejectment, that he has assigned a lease, is evidence of the fact (e).

So in some other cases, where the subject of admission is usually authenticated and proved in a formal and solemn manner, and the existence of the fact includes legal considerations not likely to be understood by the party, better evidence than his simple oral admission is frequently required; as, where a prisoner upon an indictment for bigamy has admitted the former marriage (f); for this, it has been held (g), does not supersede the necessity of formal proof of the first marriage.

A mere voluntary affidavit is evidence against the party who makes it as a confession (h). So, as has been seen in some cases, a bill in equity is *26 evidence * against the complainant (i). So a paper written by a defendant, though signed by a third person, is evidence against him (k.)

Indirect admissions.

In general an admission may be presumed, not only from the declaration of a party, but even from his acquiescence or silence. As, for instance, where the existence of the debt, or of the particular right, has been inserted in his presence and he has not contradicted it. So an acquiescence and endurance, when acts are done by another, which, if wrongfully done, are encroachments, and call for resistance and opposition, are evidence, as a tacit admission that such acts could not legally be resisted (l).

(d) Per Le Blanc, J., Call v. Dunning, 4 East, 53; Abbott v. Plumb, Dougl. 205. But it has been held, that a declaration by the lessor of the plaintiff in ejectment that he has assigned a lease is evidence of the fact. Doe v. Watson,[1] 2 Starkie's C. 230.

(e) Doe v. Watson, 2 Starkie's C. 230. But a party's admission of having executed a bond does not supersede the ordinary proof. Abbott v. Plumbe, Doug. 205.

(f) See tit. Polygamy. So where the plaintiff in assumpsit had admitted his discharge under an insolvent act, which was set up as a defence. See 3 Camp. 136. So an admission by the plaintiff at a tavern that he had been discharged as an insolvent was held to be inconclusive, as comprising matter of law as well as of fact. Summerset v. Adamson,[2] 1 Bing. 73.

(g) By Le Blanc, J, York Assizes.

(h) Style, 446. Sacheverel v. Sacheverel, Bac. Ab. Ev. 628. An answer to a bill in Chancery filed against the defendant by a stranger, may be read to show the admission of a particular fact, though it is not evidence of a judicial proceeding. Grant v. Jackson, bart. and others, Peake's C. 203. An answer in Chancery, stating that the defendant "believes that H. M. was possessed of the leasehold premises mentioned in the bill," is evidence against him in an action of ejectment brought by the executor of H. M. to show that the testator had a chattel interest in the property. Doe d. Digby v. Steele, 3 Camp. 115. The holder of a bill overdue gives in a blank schedule under an insolvent act. This is not such an acknowledgment that the bill has been satisfied as will discharge the defendant, the acceptor. Hart v. Newman, 3 Camp. C. 13. See R. v. Feversham, 8 T. R. 352. A letter by a party, in which he speaks of a ship as his own ship, does not conclude him from showing that he used these expressions as agent to a third person. Culloch v. Boyd,[3] Holt's C. 487. In assumpsit for a copyhold fine, the defendant is not estopped by the rent reserved by him on the premises from showing the real value. Lord Verulam v. Howard,[4] 7 Bing. 327, and 6 M. & P. 148, and see Halton v. Hussell, 2 Str. 1042.

(i) Vide ante, Vol. I. Ind. tit. Judicial Instruments.

(k) Alexander v. Brown,[5] 1 Carr. 288.

(l) See the observations of Abbott, Ld. Ch. J. in Steel v. Prickett,[6] 2 Starkie's C. 471. If A. having title to premises in the possession of B., suffer B. to make alterations inconsistent with such title, it is evidence to go to a jury of recognition of A. of the right of B. Doe d. Winckley v. Pye, esq. Principal of Barnard's Inn, 1 Esp. C. 364. And see Doe v. Allen, 3 Taunt. 78. Covenant by a lessee that the lease shall become void if he became bankrupt, proof of his submission to the commission is evidence, without proving an act of bankruptcy. Doe v. Hodgson, West. Sitt. after Easter Term, 1823, cor. Abbott, L. C. J. The drawer of a dishonoured bill objects to pay the amount, on the ground of his having received no consideration, but says nothing concerning the indorsement; his silence in this respect is not an admission of the handwriting of the first indorser. Duncan v. Scott, 1 Camp. C. 100. Although what has been said in the presence of a party, is admissible in evidence for the purpose of introducing or explaining anything said by him, or even of [1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. iii. 328. [2]Id. viii. 255. [3]Id. iii. 165. [4]Id. xx. 149. [5]Id. xi. 288. [6]Id. iii. 433.

Where notice to quit is served personally upon a tenant, and he makes no objection to the time specified in the notice, it is primâ facie evidence of admission and acquiescence (m); but if the party cannot, or does not, read the notice when served, no such inference can be made (n).

Evidence of this class declines by gradual shades, from the most express and solemn admissions down to expressions and acts which afford but remote and weak presumptions as to the particular fact in question; for it has already been seen, that the conduct of the party himself who knows the truth of the fact, or who may be presumed to know it, is always evidence against himself (A).

An admission made for the purpose, as it is usually termed, of buying peace, is not allowed to be taken advantage of for the purposes of evidence, * since the offer may have resulted, not from a consciousness of the truth of the claim, but a desire to avoid litigation (o). And, therefore, where it appears to be probable that such was the motive, the evidence is not admissible (p) (B). But the offer of a sum of money by way of compensation is admissible, unless it be accompanied with a notification that it is made without prejudice, or is confidential (q). *27

So an admission made conditionally, where the condition has not been raising an inference from his silence, the rule does not apply to assertions or declarations made by a third person in the presence and hearing of a party on an inquiry before a magistrate on a penal charge, even although the party might if he had chosen cross examined that third person or commented on his statement; for in such proceedings a regularity and order of proceeding is adopted which prevent a party from interposing when and how he pleases; and, consequently, the same inferences cannot be drawn from his conduct or his silence as in ordinary cases. Melen v. Andrews,[1] 1 Mood. & M. 336.

(m) See EJECTMENT BY LANDLORD.

(n) Thomas d. Jones v. Thomas, 2 Camp. 559. Doe v. Forster, 13 East, 405. Doe v. Briggs, 2 Taunt. 109.

(o) 3 Esp. C. 113. B. N. B. 236. 1 Esp. C. 143.

(p) And therefore it is said, that if A. sue B. for 100*l.*, and B. offer to pay 20*l.*, it shall not be received as evidence, for that neither admits nor ascertains any debt, and is no more than saying he would give 20*l.* to get rid of the action; but that if an account consist of ten articles, and B. admit that such a one is due, it will be good evidence for so much. Peake's Ev. 19, citing Bull. N. P. 236. In the case of Waldridge v. Kennison, 1 Esp. C. 143, Lord Kenyon is stated to have held, that an admission or confession made pending and under the faith of a treaty, and into which the party might have been led by the confidence of an expected compromise, could not be given in evidence to his prejudice; but that, under such circumstances, the admission of a fact, such as the handwriting of the party, which was not connected with the merits, might be received in evidence. The rule does not extend to an offer to refer, for that is not a concession for the purpose of peace, Thomas v. Austen,[2] 2 D. & R. 359; nor to a treaty which is concluded. Frogwell v. Llewellyn, 8 Price, 122.

(q) Wallace v. Small,[3] M. & M. 446. Hill v. Elliott,[4] 5 C. & P. 436. Watts v. Lawson, Ib. 447. The rule is applicable only to treaties for the purpose of ending suits which are not eventually brought to a conclusion; but does not apply to agreements perfected and executed, although the subject-matter and objects of such agreements may be a compromise of previously existing differences between the parties. Froysell v. Lewelyn, 9 Pri. 122. The defendant was sued for work done on premises in the occupation of his tenant; and upon an interview between the plaintiff and his attorney, the defendant and his tenant, it was agreed that the tenant out of the rent should pay the debt (which he accordingly did), and that the defendant should pay two-thirds of the costs; this not being done, the plaintiff proceeded in the action. At the trial he failed in proving the defendant's liability for the work, but relied on the arrangement so made as an admission of the debt. Held (per Littledale and Holroyd, JJ., diss. Bayley, J.) that, if even it were admissible in evidence, as being upon a negotiation for a compromise, it did not show an original right of action, although it might have been evidence to support a new ground of action in that agreement. Lofts v. Hudson,[5] 2 M. & Ry. 481.

(A) (If, after the dishonour of a note, the indorser promise to pay it, such promise is presumptive evidence of the demand and notice. Breed v. Hillhouse, 7 Conn. R. 523.)

(B) (Peck v. Botsford, 7 Conn. R. 172. Williams v. Thorp, 8 Cow. 201. Spence v. Spence, 4 Watts, 165. Baird v. Rice, 1 Call, 18. Williams v. Price, 5 Munf. 507. Miller v. Halsey, 2 Green. An offer to pay money by way of compromise is inadmissible in evidence, but the confession of particular facts, independent of an offer to pay, may be given in evidence against the party making it, although then treating for a compromise. Marsh v. Gold, 2 Pick. 285. Gerrish v. Sweetser, 4 Id. 374. Delogny v. Rentoul, 2 Martin, 175. See also Hartford B. Co. v. Granger, 4 Conn. R. 148. Fuller v. Hampton, 5 Id. 417.)

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxii. 329. [2]Id. xvi. 94. [3]Id. xxii. 355. [4]Id. xxiv. 399. [5]Id. xvii. 318.

Conditional admissions.

performed, or with reference to particular circumstances, or to the particular state of the pleadings, &c., is not admissible in evidence under different circumstances. It was once held, that admissions made upon a reference which turned out to be ineffectual, were not afterwards admissible; but Lord Kenyon said, in a subsequent case, that this was going too far, and that he should receive all such admissions as the party would be compelled to make by a bill of discovery (r), and the arbitrator may be called as a witness to prove them.

An agreement to admit a fact on the trial applies to every trial which the Court may direct (s).

Compulsory admissions.

Admissions by a bankrupt upon an examination before commissioners are evidence against him, although he might have demurred to the questions (t), because they might subject him to penalties. And so it seems are *28 *all answers made by a witness in examination in a court of justice, although he might have objected to answering the questions (u). So is evidence given by the party in court, although he had no opportunity of entering into an explanation of the circumstances under which the fact took place (x). So is evidence given under compulsory authority before a committee of the House of Commons (y). But a compelled admission is not evidence of an account stated (z). But it will be seen that admissions or confessions extorted by any kind of duress or threats are not evidence in criminal cases.

By a party to the record.

The admission of a party on the record is evidence, although he be but a trustee for another, and although it appear from the admission itself that he is such (a) (A). And, therefore, an admission by the obligee of an (r) Slack v. Buchanan, Peake's C. 5. Gregory v. Howard, 3 Esp. C. 113. Doe v. Evans,[1] 3 C.& P. 219. Turton v. Benton, 1 P. Wms. 496. Harman v. Vanhatton, 2 Vern. 717. Westlake v. Collard, B. N. P. 236.

(s) Elton v. Larkins, 1 Mo. & R. 196. Although the attorney of the party retract it before the new trial. Doe v. Bird,[2] 7 P. & C. 6. So a special case settled on one trial, has been admitted as evidence on a second. Van Wart v. Wolley,[3] R. & M. 5.

(t) Smith v. Beadnall, 1 Camp. 30. Stochfleth v. De Tastet, 4 Camp. 10. Gilling v. Summerset, cor. Abbott, Ld. C. J. West. Sitt. after Mich. 1823. Robson v. Alexander, 1 B. & P. 448. Although part only of what he swore was taken down. Milward v. Forbes, 4 Esp. C. 172. It has been held that a bankrupt is compellable to answer questions by commissioners, on examination, which may subject him to penalties for gaming or trading as a smuggler, or being a clergyman. Ex parte Meynolt, Atk. 200. Ex parte Barr, Cooke, 200. And that one who has money of the bankrupt's in his hands, must account for it, though he may subject himself to penalties. Ex parte Symes, 11 Ves. 521. Where the examination of the defendant is primâ facie admissible for the plaintiff, the opposite party cannot interpose evidence to qualify or show that it was inadmissible, but it ought afterwards to be given as part of the defendant's case.

(u) Infra, 28.

(x) Collett v. Lord Keith, 4 Esp. C. 212.

(y) R. v. Merceron,[4] 2 Starkie's C. 366.

(z) Tucker v. Barrow, 7 B. & C. 62.

(a) Bauerman v. Radenius, 7 T. R. 663. This was an action by the plaintiffs, who were the shippers of goods on behalf of Van Dycke & Co., against the defendants, for the damaging of goods in the course of the carriage; and the question was, whether a letter from the nominal plaintiffs, from which it appeared that Van Dycke & Co. were the real plaintiffs, and had indemnified them, could be read, in order to prove an admission that the defendants were wholly free from blame. The evidence was rejected upon the trial, but the Court of K. B. were afterwards of opinion that the evidence ought to have been admitted, on the ground that the plaintiff in a cause must be considered as having an interest in the action; and Lawrence, J. observed, that he had looked into the books, and could not find one case in which it had been held that an admission by the plaintiff on record was not evidence. See Gibson v. Winter,[5] 5 B. & Ad. 96; Salk. 260. Payne v. Rogers, Dougl. 407, where the tenant, a nominal plaintiff, having given a release to the defendant, the Court ordered it to be given up on an application by the landlord. See Craib v. D'Aeth,[6] 7 T. R. 670, in note. In Buller's N. P. 237, it is laid down, that the answers of a trustee can in no case be admitted as evidence against a cestui que trust.

(A) (Smith v. Sims, 1 Esp. C. 330. Insolvent received a bill of exchange for £500, as agent of the trustees of his estate; the defendant without knowledge of the insolvency advanced £50 on it, which was admitted by the plaintiffs to be due to him; defendant, then offered insolvent's letters to prove further advances, but they were not received in evidence, because the insolvent was not a party to the action, and might have been produced as a witness. Though as a general rule, the declarations and acts of the party on record, whether he had or had not, an interest in the subject at the time of making and performing them, are ad-assigned bond, in whose name the action must necessarily be brought, is evidence to bar the action (b.) And in an action by the consignor of goods, on behalf of the consignee against the captain, it was held that a letter written by the plaintiff was evidence against him (c).

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xiv. 278. [2]Id. xxxii. 415. [3]Id. xxi. 366. [4]Id. iii. 385. [5]Id. xxvii. 47. [6]Id. xxii. 246.

And an admission by one who sues as the assignee of a bankrupt, made before his appointment of assignee, is inadmissible against him in that character (d).

But the admission by a guardian, although he be the plaintiff on record, is not evidence against the infant (e); nor can the answer of the guardian in Chancery be read against the infant (f)

In settlement cases, all declarations by rated parishioners are evidence *against the parish, for they are parties to the cause (g). And it is not ne- *29 cessary to show previously that the party has refused to be examined (h). But an admission by a corporator is not evidence in actions against the corporation (i), unless it be made in an official capacity.

So the admissions of the party really interested, although he be no party to the suit, are evidence against him; for the law, with a view to evidence, regards the real parties. Thus, in an action upon a bond conditioned for the payment of money to L. D., it was held, that the declaration of L. D. that the defendant owed nothing, was evidence for the latter (k) (A). So in an action on a bill of exchange, for the benefit of another (l). So the declaration by the under-sheriff, in matters relating to the execution of the office, is evidence against the sheriff, since he is the responsible person (m). So it is where the party interested indemnifies a party to the record (n). So in actions upon policies (o), the declarations of the parties really inte- By party in interest.

(b) Craib v. D'Aeth, 7 T. R. 670, in the note. (c) 7 T. R. 668. See note (a).

(d) Fenwick v. Thornton, M. & M. 51.

(e) Eggleston v. Speke, 3 Mod. 258. Cowling v. Ely,[1] 2 Starkie's C. 366. See James v. Hatfield, 1 Str. 548. So an admission by a prochein ami is not evidence against an infant. Webb v. Smith,[2] 1 Ry. & M. 106. It was held by Lord Eldon, in Davies v. Ridge, 3 Esp. C. 101, that in an action against two trustees, an admission by one that he had trust property in his hands was not evidence of the fact against the other.

(f) Eggleston v. Speke, 3 Mod. 258. For by the opinion of the Court of K. B., on being consulted by the Judges of C. P., upon a trial at bar, the answer of the guardian is but to bring the infant into court. See Carth. 79; 2 Vent. 72; Lord Raym. 312; Prec. Ch. 229; 1 P. Wms. 344; 3 Bac. Ab. 148; 3 Bro. P. C. 1.

(g) R. v. Whitley Lower, 1 M. & S. 636; 11 East, 578. R. v. Woburn, 10 East, 395, 402. And therefore a rated inhabitant could not be examined by the adverse party. But now see the stat. 54 Geo. 3, c. 170.

(h) 1 M. & S. 636.

(i) Mayor of London v. Long, 1 Camp. 22. Mayor of London v. Jolliffe, 2 Keb. 295. Lord Dorset v. Carter, 2 Keb. 300. R. v. City of London, 1 Vent. 351; 2 Lev. 231; 1 Vent. 254; 2 Vern. 351. Vide etiam Duke Aldridge, 11 East, 584, n.; 7 T. R. 665. Infra tit. PARTIES.

(k) Hanson v. Parker, 1 Wils. 257.

(l) Welstead v. Levy, 1 Mo. & R. 138. So as to the declaration of a party from whom the plaintiff received a bill or note where evidence, Beauchamp v. Parry,[3] 1 B. & Ad. 89.

(m) Yabsley v. Doble, Lord Raym. 190.

(n) Dowden v. Fowle, 4 Camp. 38. The action was brought against the sheriff for a false return, and was defended by the assignees of the execution debtor; and it was held that the declaration of one of them (being petition creditor), that the debt did not amount to 100*l*., was admissible in evidence. See also Young v. Smith, 6 Esp. C. 121.

(o) In Bell v. Ansley, 16 East, 143, Lord Ellenborough observed, though an action on a policy may be missible in evidence against him; and though this rule may have no exception, where such declarations and acts affect the party personally, or others who derive their property through him, or who have committed their interest to his care; yet where a suit was brought against an executor on his probate bond, it was held that his declarations and acts, made and performed before he was executor, were inadmissible against him, as the judgment would affect the interests of the creditors and heirs of the testator, in relation to whom the executor was a stranger. Plant v. M'Ewen, 4 Conn. R. 544. So an infant's answer by his guardian shall never be admitted as evidence against him on a trial at law, as he is protected by the law, from tenderness for his inability to defend his rights. And the answer of a trustee can in no case be received in evidence against the cestui que trust, Bull. N. P. 233.)

(A) (But one having assigned his interest in a chose in action cannot impair that interest by any confessions made by him to the prejudice of the assignee. Frear v. Evertson, 20 John. R. 142. Sprague v. Kneeland, 12 Wend. 161. Kimball v. Huntington, 10 Wend. 675. See, also, Pocock v. Billing, 2 Bingh. 269.)

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. iii. 385. [2]Id. xxi. 392. [3]Id. xx. 351.

rested are admissible. So, in an action by the master for freight, is the declaration of the ship-owner (p), where the action is brought for his benefit. So where the party in the action is indemnified by another; as when the sheriff is indemnified by a third person, the declarations of that person are evidence against the sheriff (q). Where a defendant in trover for a deed admitted that he detained it on the request of another, it was held that the declarations of the latter were properly received (r).

By third persons.

An admission or declaration by a third person is, upon principles already adverted to, in general inadmissible. It ceases to be so, where the party making such admission or declaration can be considered as identical in interest and authority with the other, or to be his mere instrument or agent; since, if a man authorize another to make a declaration, it is the same thing in reason and in law as if he had made it himself.

By an agent.

Where a party refers to another for an answer on a particular subject, the answer is, in general, evidence against him, since he makes the referee his accredited agent for the purpose of giving the answer. The defendant in an action for goods sold and delivered, said, "If Coomes will say that he *did deliver the goods, I will pay for them." Upon the trial it was proved that Coomes, on application to him, did say that he had delivered the goods, and the evidence was held to be admissible (s). So where an executor referred a creditor of the testator to J. S. for information concerning the effects of the testator, it was held that an admission of assets by J. S. was conclusive upon the subject (t). So, in general, what an agent says, who is employed by another to make a proposal for him, is also evidence against the latter (u). So an admission by an agent, in the course of transacting the business which he is appointed to perform by the principal, is, in general, evidence against the principal (x). But in such case it is necessary to prove the authority, either expressly or impliedly, as by showing what the usual mode of dealing has been (y); for an agent brought in the name of the person who effected it, though he be not the person actually interested, yet the persons interested are so far looked upon as parties to the suit, that the declarations of any of them are received as admissible evidence against the plaintiff, and what would be a defence against them would, in many instances, be a defence against the plaintiff.

*30

(p) Smith v. Lyon, 3 Camp. 465.

(q) Duke v. Aldridge, cor. Lord Mansfield, cited in Bauerman v. Radenius, 7 T. R. 665. Supra, notes (m) and (n).

(r) Harrison v. Vallance,[1] 1 Bing. 45, and see Robson v. Andrade,[2] 1 Starkie's C. 372. But yet the mere fact that a party has acted as the agent of another, is not in general sufficient to let in evidence of the declarations of the principal, unless he has indemnified the agent. Thus a declaration by a party under whom a defendant in replevin makes cognizance, is not evidence for the plaintiff. Hart v. Horne, 2 Camp. 92.

(s) Daniel v. Pitt, 2 Camp. 366, 6 Esp. 74, S. C. in note, cor. Ld. Ellenborough. And see Stevens v. Thacker, Peake's C. 187. Garnett v. Ball,[3] 3 Starkie's C. 160, 1 M. & W. 438. 441. The plaintiff's horse having been injured through alleged negligence on the part of the defendant, in not fencing a shaft, the defendant agreed to pay if a miner jury would say that the shaft was his; held that their so finding was admissible but not conclusive evidence for the plaintiff. Sybray v. White, 1 M. & M. 435.

(t) Williams v. Innes, 1 Camp. 364. If a party declare that he will be bound by the oath of a third person, and that person makes the oath accordingly, it is binding. Per Bayley, J., Trin. T. 1825; and see Lloyd v. Willan, 1 Esp. C. 178; Godbolt, 291; 21 Hen. 6, fo. 31, pl. 17. A. takes a forged note from B.; on its being returned, B. says he received the note from C., to whom he refers A. for information. C.'s statement is evidence against B.; Brock v. Kent, 1 Camp. C. 366, n. The holder of a bill agrees not to sue the drawee, provided the latter will make an affidavit that the acceptance is a forgery. If the affidavit be made, though false, the holder is concluded, Stevens and another v. Thacher, Peake's C. 187. See Brayne v. Beal, 3 Lev. 240, 241. The defendant, in reply to inquiries respecting the account, referred to a party who he said was possessed of his sentiments, and referred the inquirer to him thereon; held to be a sufficient acknowledgment of him as an agent to make his declaration as to the account binding. Hood v. Reeve,[4] 3 C. and P. 532. And see tit. AGENT.

(u) Gainsford v. Grammar, 1 Camp. 9; and where the agent was the attorney employed by the party, an authority for making the proposal was presumed. Ibid.

(x) For the cases relating to this point, and the various distinctions upon the subject, see tit. AGENT.

(y) Ibid. And see 7 T. R. 688.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. viii. 239. [2]Id. ii. 432. [3]Id. xiv. 174. [4]Id. xiv. 432.

cannot bind his principal, either by act or declaration, beyond the scope of his authority (z) (A).

But it seems to be a general rule, that what an agent does or says within the scope of his authority, is binding upon the principal whose instrument he is; so that not only an agreement made by an agent is binding upon the principal, but so are all the declarations of the agent at the time, which in any manner affect or qualify the nature of the agreement (a); but what the agent says at another time, and of his own authority, is not evidence against the principal.

The act or admission of an under-sheriff accompanying official acts, is, in general, obligatory upon his principal, the sheriff, because he is notoriously the agent of the sheriff for transacting all that appertains to the office, and he indemnifies the sheriff, and consequently by his admission charges himself (b) (B); but the authority of a bailiff, who is not the general officer of the *sheriff, must be proved in every particular case, and then his *31 declarations in the course of his agency are evidence (c). In Biggs v. Lawrence (d), it was held at Nisi Prius (e), that where A. had ordered goods of B., to be delivered to C., an acknowledgment in the hand-writing of C., of the delivery, was evidence against A. (f). But the same point was frequently ruled differently by Lord Kenyon (g); and the case was afterwards decided upon another ground, viz. the illegality of the contract. And the admission of the under-sheriff is not admissible unless it accompany an official act, or unless he charge himself, being in fact the real party in the cause (h).

A community of interest or design will frequently make the declaration of one the declaration of all. Thus in the case where partners, or others, possess a community of interest in a particular subject, not only the act and agreement, but the declaration of one in respect of that subject-matter, is evidence against the rest (i). The admission of one of several makers of Community of interest.

(z) Fenn v. Harrison, 3 T. R. 757. A. being the agent of two companies, B. & C., makes an admission as the agent of B.: this is not evidence against C.; Guthrie v. Fisher,[1] 3 Starkie's C. 151; and see tit. LIMITATIONS; and Atkins v. Tredgold,[2] 2 B. & C. 23.

(a) See AGENT. And see Palethorpe v. Furnish, 3 Esp. C. 511; Helyar v. Hawke, 5 Esp. C. 74; Peto v. Hague, 1 Esp. C. 135; Alexander v. Gibson, 2 Camp. 555. Action against A. and B. as owners of a ship; an undertaking to appear for them, given before the commencement of the action, by the person who subsequently acted as their attorney in defending it, in which he describes them as owners, is evidence of ownership. Marshall v. Cliff, 4 Camp. 133.

(b) Yabsley v. Doble, Lord Raym. 190.

(c) North v. Miles, 1 Camp. 389. Bowsher v. Cally, 1 Camp. 391. See tit. SHERIFF.

(d) 3 T. R. 454. (e) By Buller, J.

(f) The case is wrongly abstracted in the marginal note, 3 T. R. 454; the agent was not employed to buy goods. Qu. whether the receipt was given at the time of the delivery? In the case of Fairlie v. Hastings, 10 Ves. jun. 123, this point was treated by the Master of the Rolls as a very material one. It is difficult to conceive how any authority to a person to receive goods for another can make the mere admission of the latter evidence against the owner. No such authority is necessarily to be implied, nor will the fact that it was made against the interest of the party receiving, make his receipt or declaration evidence, where his testimony may be had; neither, as it seems, will the circumstance that the receipt was given at the time of delivery, make any material difference in principle, for such evidence would be admitted not to explain the nature of a particular fact known to have occurred, but to prove the existence of the act itself.

(g) See 7 T. R. 668: Dougl. 751. (h) Snowball v. Goodrick,[3] 4 B. & Ad. 541.

(i) 11 East, 589, per Le Blanc, J. Where a suit is pending against a great number of persons who have a joint and several promissory note, that it has not been paid, is evidence against all (k). Such an admission, however, ought to be clear and unequivocal.

(A) (The mere declarations of an agent or his acts as such, are not admissible to prove his agency, White v. Turner, 10 John. R. 225. "The general rule is this: when it is proved that one is the agent of another, whatever the agent does or says, or writes, at the making of a contract, as agent, is admissible in evidence against the principal, but what the agent says or writes afterwards, is not admissible." Per Rogers, J. Hough v. Doyle, 4 Rawle, 294. See, also, Thallhimer v. Brinckerhoff, 4 Wend. 394. Hurd v. West, 7 Cow. 752. Peytain v. Maurin, 2 Lou. R. 482. Fairfield County Turnpike Company v. Thorp, 13 Conn. R. 173. Baring v. Clark, 19 Pick. 220.)

(B) (Tyler v. Ulmer, 12 Mass. R. 163.)

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xiv. 173. [2]Id. ix. 12. [3]Id. xxiv. 112.

Partner. A declaration by one partner, concerning a subject of joint interest, is evidence against another, although the former be no party to the suit (A). Thus in an action against some of the members of a firm, the answer of another person, proved to be a partner, was admitted in evidence as an admission against all (l).

An admission by one partner, after the dissolution of the co-partnership, is evidence to charge the other partner (m); but a declaration made by one of two partners during an existing co-partnership is not evidence to bind his partner as to a transaction which occurred previous to the partnership (n), unless a joint responsibility be proved as a foundation for such evidence (o). So a declaration made by one partner that he contracted on his own sole account, is evidence against all the partners, to the exclusion of their joint action (p). Entries in a book kept by the clerk of an incor-

*32 porated *company were held to be inadmissible against a member of the corporation in an action on a contract with him, although the act of incorporation directs the clerk to keep such a book; for the ground on which partnership books are admissible in evidence against partners is, that they are books kept by themselves, or by their authority; but the clerk of the company, once appointed, was not subject to the control of any individual member (q).

In an action of covenant against two, it was held that the voluntary affidavit of one, upon a subject in which he was jointly interested with the other, was evidence against the other (r).

But an admission by one of several trustees, who are not personally liable, will not bind the rest (s).

a common interest in the decision, a declaration made by one of those persons concerning a material fact within his knowledge, is evidence against him and all the other parties to the suit. See tit. ABATEMENT; Lucas and others v. De la Cour, 1 M. & S. 249.

(k) Whitcomb v. Whiting, Doug. 652

(l) Wood v. Braddick, 1 Taunt. 104. Grant v. Jackson, Peake's C. 203. Nicholas v. Dowding,[1] Starkie's C. 81; and see Kemble v. Farren,[2] 3 C. & P. 523. See tit. LIMITATIONS.—PARTNERS.

(m) Wood v. Braddick, 1 Taunt. 104.

(n) Catt v. Howard, Guildhall Sittings after Hil. T. 1820, cor. Abbott, L. C. J.[3] 3 Starkie's C. 3. Pritchard v. Draper, 1 Russ. & M. 191.

(o) Ibid.

(p) Lucas v. De la Cour, 1 M. & S. 249.

(q) Hill v. The Manchester and Salford Waterworks Comp.[4] 5 B. & A. 866.

(r) Vicary's Case, Bac. Ab. Ev. 623. But an admission by one part-owner of a ship does not bind another part-owner. Jaggers v. Binnings, 1 Starkie's C. 64. And it has been held, in an action against two partners on a deed purporting to have been executed by one for self and partner, that an admission by the other that he had given authority to his partner to execute on his behalf, is not sufficient without producing the authority. Steglitz v. Eggington,[5] Holt's C. 141.

(s) Davis v. Kioge, 3 Esp. C. by Lord Eldon. But in an action against a corporation, a declaration by a mere member not relating to any official situation is not admissible. Mayor of London, &c. v. Long, 1 Camp. 22.

(A) (The declarations of one of several partners, cannot be given in evidence to prove a partnership; they are only admissible against him who made them. M'Pherson v. Rathbone, 7 Wend. 216. Whitle v. Ferris, 10 John. R. 66. Sweeting v. Ferner, 10 Id. 216. Corps v. Robinson, 2 Wash. C. C. R. 388. Robbins v. Willard, 6 Pick. 464—contra Taylor v. Henderson, 17 Serg. & R. 453. Woods v. Courten, 1 Dall. 141. So in an action against partners, on a promissory note made by one of them, in the name of the firm, the confessions of that partner are not admissible to prove the note a partnership transaction. Tuttle v. Cooper, 5 Pick. 414. And the confessions of a partner, after the dissolution of the co-partnership cannot be shown, to charge his co-partner. Gleason v. Clark, 9 Cow. 57. Walden v. Sherburne, 15 John. R. 409. Walker v. Dubery, 1 Marsh. 189. Simonton v. Boucher, 2 Wash. C. C. R. 473—contra Simpson v. Geddes, 2 Bay. 533. But it is different when such an acknowledgment is offered, merely to take a partnership debt, out of the statute of limitations. Smith v. Ludlow, 6 John. R. 267. Willis v. Hile, 2 Dev. & Bat. 231.)

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. ii. 305. [2]Id. xiv. 490. [3]Id. xiv. 143. [4]Id. xxvii. 219. [5]Id. iii. 54.

But, notwithstanding a community of interest, the declaration of the wife will not, in general, bind the husband. Even in an action by the husband and wife, in the right of the wife as executrix, her declaration will not be evidence (t). So where wages had been earned by the wife, it was held that her admission of the receipt of 20*l.* was not evidence against the husband (u). So an admission by the wife, of a trespass, cannot bind the husband (x). So the answer of the wife in equity cannot be read against the husband (y); for the wife is not, in general, considered to be invested with power to act for her husband, and consequently to bind him by her declarations. But where the authority of the wife to act as agent to her husband can be presumed (z), her declarations are like those of any other agent; accordingly, the admission of the wife as to an agreement for suckling a child, was held to be evidence (a) against him (A). So where an action was brought by the direction of the wife, in the name of her husband, to recover a sum of money which had been taken from her on suspicion that it was the produce of stolen property, it was held that what she had said (in the absence of the husband) respecting the money, when examined on a *charge of being concerned in the robbery, was evidence for the defendant (b). So in an action against the husband for goods sold to his wife (c) during the time when he occasionally visited her, it was held, that a letter subsequently written by the wife, acknowledging the debt, was evidence. *33 By a wife.

The rule, that where there is a community of interest and design, the declaration of one of the parties is evidence against the rest, is not confined to cases of civil contract. It is indeed true, that in general the declaration or admission of one trepasser, or other wrong-doer, is not evidence to affect any other person, for it is merely res inter alios acta; but where it has once been established, that several persons have entered into the same criminal design, with a view to its accomplishment, the acts or declarations of any one of them in furtherance of the general object are no longer to be considered as res inter alios with respect to the rest, they are identified with By a conspirator.

(t) Alban and others v. Pritchett, 6 T. R. 680. In an action by the husband and wife for assaulting the wife, the defendant justified the turning the wife out to obtain possession of the plaintiff's house; it was held by Parke, B. that a declaration by the wife as to the terms of the agreement under which the husband held as tenant were inadmissible. Newton v. Harland, York Summer Ass. 1837. The joint answer of a husband and wife cannot be read in evidence against the wife. Hodson v. Merest, 9 Price, 556. In an action by the husband and wife to recover a loan by the wife, dum sola, a declaration by her during coverture was held to be inadmissible. Kelly v. Small, 2 Esp. C. 716. But in an action against the defendant as administrator of his wife, for money lent to her before marriage, her admission of the debt during coverture was held to be admissible. Humphreys v. Boyce, 1 Mo. & M. 240.

(u) Hall v. Hill, Str. 35: P. Will. 175. Bac. Ab. Ev. 622. (x) 7 T. R. 112.

(y) 3 P. Wms. 238; Salk. 350; Vern. 60, 109, 110.

(z) Held that the jury might infer authority from two instances of her appearing to conduct his business relative to the transaction in question at his country house. Palmer v. Sells,[1] 3 N. & M. 422.

(a) Str. 527. See also Emerson v. Blonden, 1 Esp. C. 141, and infra tit. AGENT; and Anderson v. Sanderson,[2] 2 Starkie's C. 204, where the admission of the wife as to a sum due for articles supplied to the shop, of which she had the sole management, was received. S. P. Clifford v. Barton,[3] 1 Bing. 199.

(b) Carey v. Adkins, 4 Camp. 92.

(c) Palethorp v. Furnish, 2 Esp. C. 211; 5 Esp. C. 145. Gregory v. Parker, 1 Camp. 594.

(A) (The declarations made by a wife within the scope of her customary authority, will bind her husband, more especially where they are in the nature of facts, and the presumptions to which they may give rise, are not drawn from the credit of the party, but the fact that such admissions were actually made. Steele v. Thompson, 3 Penns. R. 29. But the admission of a trespass by the wife cannot bind the husband. Hawkins v. Hatton, 2 Nott & M'Cord, 74. An acknowledgment by a feme covert, is not sufficient to establish an account against her husband, though it be for articles furnished to her before the marriage. Sheppard's Exr. v. Starke, 3 Munf. 29.) [See also Spencer v. Tisue, Addison's Rep. 319. Hughes v. Stokes, 1 Hayw. 372. Fenner v. Lewis, 10 Johns. 38.]

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxviii. 404. [2]Id. iii. 314. [3]Id. viii. 294.

each other in the prosecution of the scheme; they are partners for a bad purpose, and as much mutually responsible as to such purpose, as partners in trade are for more honest pursuits; they may be considered as mutual agents for each other (A). Where an unity of design and purpose has once been established in evidence, it may fairly and reasonably be presumed that the declarations and admissions of any one, with a view to the prosecution and accomplishment of that purpose, convey the intentions and meaning of all (d). And this seems to be the general rule, in case of trials for conspiracies, and other crimes of a like nature (e).

Against a representative.

An admission by the party represented is usually admissible in evidence against the representative (f) (B).

An admission by the owner is sometimes evidence against one who claims title through him (g).

*34 * An admission by the debtor is evidence against the sheriff, in an action for a false return or escape (h); but this, it seems, is by reason of the sheriff's misconduct.

(d) See Lord Ellenborough's observations, 11 East, 584, infra, tit. TRESPASS.

(e) See tit. CONSPIRACY.—BANKRUPT.

(f) See EXECUTOR.—BANKRUPT.—An admission made by a bankrupt before his bankruptcy, is evidence to charge his estate with a debt. P. C. 5 T. R. 513. Secus, as to subsequent admissions. So admissions made by an insolvent subsequent to his insolvency, are not admissible against the trustees of his estate. Smith v. Simmes, 1 Esp. C. 330. In an action against trustees for creditors, a declaration of the debtor is evidence of the plaintiff's debt. Robson v. Andrale,[1] 1 Starkie's C. 372. Note.—The declaration seems to have been made at the time the trust was created. So in an action against the sheriff for escapes, &c. See tit. SHERIFF. Kempland v. Macauley, Peake's C. 65; and see Dyke v. Aldridge, 7 T. R. 665; 11 East, 584, n. In an action against the sheriff for a false return of nulla bona, where the defence relied upon is an act of bankruptcy overreaching the levy, the plaintiff may give in evidence an admission made by one of the petitioning creditors as to any fact respecting his debt. Young v. Smith, 6 Esp. C. 121. To prove a bill of sale, fraudulent declarations made by the vendor at the time of executing it, are evidence. Phillips v. Eamer, 1 Esp. C. 357. Secus, of declarations made at any other time. Where the defence to an action against an acceptor is, that after the bill was due the amount was settled in account between himself and the then holder, under whose endorsement the plaintiff claims, the declarations of such holder are not evidence, as he might be called and examined. Duckham v. Wallis, 5 Esp. C. 251; and see tit. BILLS OF EXCHANGE. A. indorsed a bill to B. as a security for a running account; B., after the bill became due, indorsed to C.; an entry or declaration by B. respecting the state of his account with A. is not evidence for the latter, unless made contemporaneously with the first indorsement. Collenridge v. Farquharson,[2] 1 Starkie's C. 259; Cutler v. Newlin, cor. Holroyd, J., Winch. Spring Ass. 1819; Manning's Ind. Evidence, 253; and see Bacon v. Chesney,[3] 1 Starkie's C. 192. An admission in an answer by a former owner of property, does not bind a subsequent owner. See tit. ANSWER IN EQUITY. Gully v. Bishop of Exeter,[4] 5 Bingh. note (u). Appx. to St. Tr. 29 Hargrave's edit. and 6 St. Tr. 425.

(g) See Ivatt v. Finch, 1 Taunt. 141; also supra Vol. I. and Index, tit. HEARSAY EVIDENCE. An admission by a proprietor or an occupier possessing an interest, is frequently evidence as to the nature and extent of the interest, especially if it be connected with any act relating to the enjoyment. An admission by a former occupier of a tenement in respect of which common is claimed, is, it is said, evidence to negative the existence of the right, though the tenant be alive. Walker v. Bradstock, 1 Esp. C. 458; and see Doe d. Human v. Pettet,[5] 5 B. & A. 223; Baggaley v. Jones, 1 Camp. 367. Vol. I. and Woolway v. Rowe,[6] 1 Ad. & Ell. 114. But an admission made by one who takes a bankrupt's goods in execution, that he knew that an act of bankruptcy had been committed, is not evidence against one who takes the goods by assignment from the sheriff, the admission being subsequent to the assignment. Deady v. Harrison,[7] 1 Starkie's C. 60. And as to a declaration by the holder of a negotiable security, vide infra, BILL OF EXCHANGE. Competency. To prove a forfeiture by under-letting, declarations of persons found in possession were admitted in evidence against the lessee. Doe d. Hindley v. Rickardy, 5 Esp. C. 4, cor. Lord Alvanley, sed quære.

(h) Infra, tit. SHERIFF. See tit. RES INTER ALIOS.

(A) (The least degree of concert or collusion between parties to an illegal transaction makes the act of one the act of all, and authorizes the admission of evidence of acts of one to affect the other parties. Rogers v. Hall, 4 Watts, 359. See also M'Kee v. Gilchrist, 3 Watts, 230. Gray v. Nations, 1 Pike Ark. Rep. 557. Snyder v. Lafranboise, 1 Breese, 269.)

(B) (The widow of a person, who had sold a slave in his lifetime, was held incompetent to prove, after his decease, declarations made by him previous to such sale that the reputed slave was an Indian woman. Robin v. King, 2 Leigh, 140. See also Hester v. Hester, 4 Dev. 228. Nichol v. Ridley, 5 Yerg. 63. The declarations of a father that his conveyance to a child was fraudulent made subsequent to the conveyance, are not admissible against the child. Arnold v. Bell, 1 Hay, 396. Gray v. Harrison, 2 Hay, 292.)

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. ii. 432. [2]Id. ii. 381. [3]Id. ii. 352. [4]Id. xv. 68. [5]Id. vii. 75. [6]Id. xxviii. 52. [7]Id. ii. 295.

An admission by the principal is not evidence against his surety on a contract (i).

It is a general rule with respect to admissions, as it is in all other cases, that where an entry or declaration is entire, and one part is capable of being explained and qualified by another, the whole is to be taken as evidence (k) (1). What credit is to be given to the whole, or part, is a question for the consideration and discretion of the jury; and therefore where a party has admitted the claim made by another, but at the same time has made a counter-claim, his statement of a counter-claim is evidence to be left to the jury, as to the existence of such counter-claim (l) (A). The whole is to be read.

By the General Rules of Hilary Term, 2 Will. 4, it is ordered that the expense of a witness, called only to prove the copy of any judgment, writ, or other public document, shall not be allowed in costs, unless the party calling him shall, within a reasonable time before the trial, have required the adverse party, by notice in writing and production of such copy, to admit such copy, *and unless such adverse party shall have refused or neglected to make such admission. Admission under rule of 2 Will. 4. *35

And it is further ordered, that the expense of a witness called only to prove the handwritting to or the execution of any written instrument stated upon the pleadings, shall not be allowed, unless the adverse party shall, upon summons before a judge, a reasonable time before the trial (such summons stating therein the name, description, and place of abode of the intended witness), have neglected or refused to admit such handwriting or execution, or unless the judge, upon attendance before him, shall indorse upon such summons that he does not think it reasonable to require such admission.

And by a General Rule of Hilary Term, 4 Will. 4, it is ordered that 4 Will. 4.

(i) Infra, tit. SURETY. Hart v. Horne, 2 Camp. 92. See Perchard v. Tindall, 1 Esp. C. 394. Infra, tit. REPLEVIN.

(k) Randle v. Blackburn,[1] 5 Taunt. 245. Smith v. Young, 1 Camp. 439. Jacob v. Lindsay, 1 East, 462. Barrymore v. Taylor, 1 Esp. C. 325. Green v. Dunn, 3 Camp. 215. So in an answer in Chancery, if a party charge and discharge himself contemporaneously. Smith v. Lumbe, 7 Ves. 588. Where the only evidence against a party charged with murder, was his own confession, which admitted that he was present at the time, but took no part in the transaction; it was held that the whole was evidence for the prisoner, but that the jury might disbelieve any part. R. v. Clewes,[2] 4 C. & P. 221. Rose v. Savory, 2 Bing. N. C. 145. A prosecutor gives in evidence the statement of the prisoner, which is exculpatory; it is not therefore to be taken as true, but it is for the jury to say if they think it consistent with the other evidence. Rex v. Steptoe,[3] 4 C. & P. 397. The prosecutor offers evidence of what was said by the prisoner before the justice; it is evidence as well for as against him, it is for the jury to say under the circumstances whether they believe it or not. Smith v. Blandy,[4] 1 Ry. & M. C. 275. R. v. Higgins,[5] 3 C. & P. 609; Cray v. Halls, ib. Eq. C. Ab. 10; Thomson v. Lumbe, 7 Ves. 583; Ridgway v. Dawson, 7 Ves. 404. Giving credit in a particular, for a demand of the opposite party, is not an admission of the debt. Miller v. Johnson, 2 Esp. C. 602. Under a rule of the Court to admit a notarial copy of the condemnation of a vessel in evidence, such copy only establishes the fact of the condemnation, and is not evidence of the particular defects upon which the condemnation purports to be grounded. Wright v. Barnard, 2 Esp. C. 700. The plaintiff cannot give in evidence the examination of the defendant taken before Commissioners of Bankrupt on one day, without also reading those taken on another day, 5 Sim. 39. Nor can he give the cross-examination of a defendant in evidence, without reading his examination in chief, ib. It is otherwise where the answer of a witness in equity is put in to show his incompetency, B. N. P. 238. And see 2 Vent. 171; Com. Dig. EVIDENCE, [B.] 5.

(l) Randle v. Blackburn,[4] 5 Taunt. 245. Thompson v. Austen,[6] 2 D. & R. 361, and see note (k) and Vol. I.

(1) [But what a party to a cause had said at one time, cannot be given in evidence by himself to explain what he has said at a former time, which the other party has given in evidence. Blight v. Ashley & al. 1 Peters' R. 15.] {Stewart v. The Inhabitants, &c. of Sherman, 5 Conn. 244.} [Newman v. Bradley, 1 Dallas, 240. Farrel v. M'Clea, ibid, 392. Carver v. Tracy, 3 Johns. 427. Fenner v. Lewis, 10 Johns. 38. Wailing v. Toll, 9 Johns. 141.]

(A) (Proof of declarations made by a witness out of court, in corroboration of testimony given by him on the trial of a cause, is as a general rule inadmissible; but it seems that there are some exceptions to this rule. Robb v. Hackley, 23 Wend. 50.)

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. i, 92. [2]Id. xix. 354. [3]Id. xix. 440. [4]Id. xxi. 432. [5]Id. xiv. 476. [6]Id. xvi. 358.

either party, after plea pleaded and a reasonable time before trial, may give notice to the other, either in town or country, in the form thereto annexed, marked A., or to the like effect, of his intention to adduce in evidence certain written or printed documents, and unless the adverse party shall consent (m), by indorsement on such notice, within forty-eight hours, to make the admission specified, the party requiring such admission may call on the party required, by summons, to show cause before a Judge (n) why he should not consent to such admission, or in case of refusal be subject to pay the costs of proof. And unless the party required shall expressly consent to make such admission, the Judge shall, if he think the application reasonable, make an order that the costs of proving any document specified in the notice, which shall be proved at the trial to the satisfaction of the Judge or other presiding officer, certified by his indorsement thereon, shall be paid by the party so required, whatever may be the result of the cause (o).

Provided that if the Judge shall think the application unreasonable, he shall indorse the summons accordingly.

Provided also, that the Judge may give such time for inquiry or examination of the documents intended to be offered in evidence, and give such directions for inspection and examination, and impose such terms upon the party requiring the admission, as he shall think fit.

If the party required shall consent to the admission, the Judge shall order the same to be made.

No costs of proving any written or printed document shall be allowed to any party who shall have adduced the same in evidence on any trial, unless he shall have given such notice as aforesaid, and the adverse party
*36 shall *have refused or neglected to make such admission, or the Judge shall have indorsed upon the summons that he does not think it reasonable to require it.

A Judge may make such order as he may think fit respecting the costs of the application, and the costs of the production and inspection; and in the absence of a special order the same shall be costs in the cause.

Confessions in criminal cases.

A confession, where it is voluntary, is one of the strongest proofs of guilt; for it cannot be supposed that a person really innocent would voluntarily subject himself to infamy and punishment (A). Many of the rules applicable to admissions in civil cases are applicable to those in criminal proceedings, but there are some which are peculiar to the latter (p).

(m) In the notice of intention to produce documents in the form prescribed by the rule, one of them was described as a counterpart of a lease from E. T. to the defendant, dated 26 December, 1829. The order was, Take order by consent for admitting all but the three wills, &c. The plaintiff produced on the trial an instrument in the form of a lease from, and executed by E. T., and also executed by the defendant, indorsed "counterpart," and having a 1*l.* 10*s.* stamp, which was sufficient for a counterpart but not for a lease; and it was held that the effect of the admission was, that a document had been executed of a character corresponding with that in the notice, and that the defendant could not object that the instrument was in effect a lease and not a counterpart; and it was held that proof was unnecessary of the identity of the document produced at the trial with that inspected at the Judge's chambers. Doe v. Smith,[1] 8 Ad. & Ell. 255.

(n) The application must be made to a Judge at chambers; the court have no authority under this rule. Smith v. Bird, 3 Dowl. 641: Jervis's New Rules, 111.

(o) Notice having been given, and admission refused, and a Judge's order having been made, certified by his indorsement, that the documents were produced to his satisfaction, the party is entitled to costs, although a new trial is granted, previously to which the documents are admitted. Lewis v. Howell,[2] 6 Ad. & Ell. 769. The certificate in such case is to be granted by the Judge presiding at the first trial, Ib.

(p) As to the effect of confessions in cases of treason, see TREASON.

(A) (Naked confessions of a prisoner, unattended with circumstantial evidence, are not held sufficient in North Carolina to convict him of a capital crime. State v. Long, 1 Hay. 455. But see State v. Guild, 5 Halst. 163. The People v. M'Fall, 1 Wheel. Cr. C. 108.)

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxxv. 387. [2]Id. xxiii. 206.

A confession can never be received in evidence, where the defendant has been influenced by any threat or promise (q) (B). To say that it will be better for him if he will confess, or worse if he will not, is sufficient to exclude the consequent declaration by the prisoner; for the law cannot measure the force of the influence used, or decide upon its effect upon the mind of the prisoner, and therefore excludes the declaration, if any degree of influence has been exerted (r). And where a confession has once been induced by such means, all subsequent admissions of the same or of the like facts, must be rejected, if they have resulted from the same influence (s). It is, however, a question for the court, and not for the jury, to decide, whether under the particuler circumstances the confession be admissible (t). The general principle on which the decisions on the subject seem to have proceeded, seems to be this, that if under the circumstances there be reasonable ground for presuming that the disclosure was made under the influence of any promise or threat of a temporal nature, the evidence ought not to be received (u). Voluntary.

(q) Warrickshall's Case, Leach's C. C. L. 3d edit. 298; Cowp. 334; 2 Haw. c. 46, s. 36. Two men were charged with the murder of one who (as it afterwards appeared) was still living, and yet one of them upon a promise of pardon, confessed himself to be guilty of the crime. Note to Warrickshall's Case, Leach's C. C. L. 301, 3d edit. And an instance is mentioned in the State Trials, where not only the party himself, but his brother, were executed on a supposed confession, although all the parties were innocent.

(r) A promise made by the surgeon who was called in upon a case of administering poison, after telling the prisoner that she was suspected and had better tell all she knew, was held to render the statement of the prisoner inadmissible. R. v. Kingston,[1] 4 C. & P. 387. So after a threat by the captain of a ship to the prisoner, a mariner on board, upon the stolen property being found, that if he did not tell him who was his partner he would commit him to prison as soon as he got to N. R. v. Parratt, 5 C. & P. 570.

(s) By the Judges, in the case of Sarah Nute, Mich. T. 1800. (t) Ib.

(u) Upon the trial of Hall, for burglary, proof was offered that the prisoner had desired Last to apply to the justice to admit him as a witness for the Crown; but the evidence of such request was rejected, on the ground that it had been made under the hope of being admitted king's evidence, and could not be considered as voluntary. By Adair, Serj. Leach's C. C. L. 636; this case goes to a very great length. Where hopes had been held out to a prisoner to confess, and when brought before a magistrate he refused to confess, except upon conditions, Buller, J. admitted the general rule, with some qualifications, observing, that there must be very strong evidence of an explicit warning by the magistrate not to rely on any expected favour on that account: and that it ought most clearly to appear that the prisoner understood such warning, before his subsequent confession could be given in evidence; East's P. C. 658. And in a similar case, before Bayley, J. where the prisoner had been told by the constable's assistant that it would be better for him to confess, but the magistrate cautioned him frequently to say nothing against himself, the confession was held to be admissible. R. v. Lingate, Derby Lent Ass. 1815, and afterwards before the Judges. Where the wife of the constable had told the prisoner, some days before the commitment, that it would be better for him to confess, the confession was admitted. R. v. Hardwicke, cor. Wood, B., Nottingham Lent Assizes, 1811, and afterwards before the Judges. Where the prisoner was admonished by a stranger, in the presence of a constable, that he had better tell the truth, his subsequent confession to the constable was admitted. R. v. Row, Append. to Burn's Just. tit. Evidence, 23 edit. p. 102.) Though the prosecutor, in the presence of a magistrate, desire the prisoner to speak the truth, and suggest that he had better speak out, yet if the magistrate or his clerk immediately check the prosecutor, desiring the prisoner not to regard him, the confession is still admissible. R. v. Edwards, E. T. 1802. And where the constable told the prisoner that he might do himself some good by confessing, and the prisoner afterwards asked the magistrate if it would be any benefit to him to confess, and the magistrate said he could not say that it would, on which the prisoner declined to confess; but on his way to prison he confessed to another constable, and confessed again in prison to another magistrate, the Judges held unanimously, that the confessions were admissible in evidence, on the ground that the magistrate's answer was sufficient to efface any expectation which the constable might have raised. R. v. Rosier, on a case reserved for the Judges, East. Term. 1821.

So if the expressions be not calculated to raise any hope of some benefit or advantage of a mere temporal nature, it seems that they will not exclude a confession. Upon the trial of Hodgson, a girl at York, for arson, evidence was offered of declarations made by the prisoner to Mrs. Richardson, her mistress, after the latter

(B) (Moore v. Commonwealth, 2 Leigh. 701. The case of Bowerhan, et. al. 4 Rogers' Rec. 136. But a confession, though made under the representations of the infamy of a concealment, if without threats or promises, may be received. State v. Crank, 2 Bailey, 66. But see The People v. Ward, 15 Wend. 231. Oakley v. Schoonmaker, Id. 226. So even if a confession be induced by promises or threats, yet if, in consequence of it, facts which are evidence of the crime, are made known, those facts are admissible in proof. Commonwealth v. Knapp, 9 Pick. 496. State v. Crank, supra.)

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. xix. 434.

*Where a prisoner had been admitted king's evidence, and confessed, and upon the trial of his accomplices refused to give evidence, he was convicted upon his own confession, even although it had previously been falsely represented to him by a constable that his accomplices were in custody (x) (A). Where a witness answers questions upon his examination upon a trial, tending to criminate himself, and to which he might have demurred, his answers may be used for all purposes (y). Where a fact has been ascertained in consequence of an admission improperly obtained, it may still be proved, for the fact cannot have been affected by the influence used (z); therefore, upon an indictment for receiving stolen goods, where, in consequence of the confession, which had been unduly obtained, *38 the stoled property had been *found concealed between the sackings of the prisoner's bed, it was held by the twelve Judges, that the fact of finding the stolen property in the prisoner's custody was clearly evidence (a). But in such case nothing is to be left to the jury but the fact of the prisoner's having directed the witness where to find the goods, and his finding them, but not to the acknowledgment (b). No evidence can be received of any act done by the prisoner in consequence towards discovering the property, unless the goods be actually discovered thereby (c).

Prisoner's examination.

Any voluntary admission or confession by a defendant is evidence against him at common law (d), whether it be made to a private person or to a magistrate (e). The statutes of Philip and Mary, which directed had told her it would be better if she would confess if she were guilty, for she would never be easy in her mind till she had confessed. Holroyd, J. after consulting Bayley, J. was of opinion that the evidence was receivable, but it was afterwards excluded on other grounds. A police officer having a boy in his custody on a charge of arson, without a warrant, told him that after the prevarications he had made, there was no doubt of his guilt, and asked who was concerned with him. The prisoner had been apprehended about noon, and had no food till he made a confession, in answer to the officer's inquiries, between five and six in the afternoon; and seven of the Judges were of opinion that the evidence was receivable, no threat or promise having been used; but three were of the contrary opinion. R. v. Thornton, 1 R. & M. 27. Where the constable who had charge of the prisoner left the room, and shortly after the constable to whom the prisoner made the statement entered, the Judge refused to receive the statement without calling the other constable to negative any promise or threat, as otherwise it might lead to collusion by constables; but it appearing that the prisoner was not under charge at the time, but detained only as an unwilling witness, the Court received the statement without previously calling the other constable. R. v. Swatkins,[1] 4 C. & P. 550. Where a promise or threat has been held out, it will usually exclude the statement made to the same person. R. v. Dunn,[2] 4 C. & P. 543. But where the prisoner made a confession to a magistrate after the persuasions of a clergyman, but not with any view of temporal benefit, and after cautions that it would probably be given in evidence against him, it was held that such confession was properly admitted. Gilham's Case, 1 Ry. & M. C. 186. And where a justice had held out promises of interference to induce a confession, but afterwards had informed the prisoner that there was no hope of pardon, and the prisoner subsequently sent for the coroner, and made a full disclosure notwithstanding he was cautioned that it would be used against him, held that it was admissible.

(x) R. v. Burley, supra, tit. ACCOMPLICE.

(y) Supra, 27; and see Stockfleth v. De Tasteth, 4 Camp. 10. In the case of R. v. Merceron, cor. Abbott, J.[3] 2 Starkie's C. 366, a statement by the defendant, upon examination before a committee of the House of Commons, was received in evidence, although it was objected that the defendant could not refuse to answer the question without incurring a contempt of the House.

(z) R. v. Warrickshall, Leach's C. C. L. 298, 3d edit. Harvey's Case, East's P. C. 658. Mozey's Case, Leach's C. C. L. 301. Lockhart's Case, Ibid. 430. Butcher's Case, Ibid.; 2 Haw. c. 46, s. 38.

(a) Warrickshall's Case, Leach's C. C. L. 298, 3d edit. So, if after a promise the prisoner bring money, and gives it up to the prosecutor as part of that which had been stolen from him. R. v. Griffin, 1 Russ. & Ry. 151. But where the prosecutor said he wanted his money, and that if the prisoner gave him that, he might go to the devil if he pleased, and the prisoner took money out of his pocket, and said it was all he had left, it was held that the confession ought not to have been received. R. v. Jones, 1 Russ. & Ry. 152.

(b) Per Le Blanc, J. R. v. Grant and Craig; R. v. Marian Hodge, Wells Summ. Ass. cor. Grose, J. East's P. C. 658.

(c) R. v. Jenkins, 1 Russ. & R. C. C. L. 492.

(d) 2 Haw. c. 46, s. 23; Dy. 214; 6 St. Tr. 58. R. v. Tong, Kel. 18, 19. R. v. Wheeler, Leach's C. C. L. 349, 3d edit. R. v. Payne, 5 Mod. 105.

(e) 2 Haw. c. 46, s. 33. R. v. Dore, And. 301. Marshall's Case, 2 St. Tr. 1002; Leach's C. C. L, 298, 3d edit.

(A) (See Commonwealth v. Knapp, 10 Pick. 477.)

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xix. 520. [2]Id. xix. 518. [3]Id. iii. 385.

the prisoner's examination to be taken (f), made no difference as to the admissibility of evidence (g). The same observation is applicable to the stat. 7 Geo. 4, c. 64, s. 3. But no parol evidence of a confession can be given, where the confession has been taken down in writing, for the general rule applies, that it is not the best evidence (h). The statute directs that the examination of the prisoner shall be reduced to writing; the court will therefore presume that the magistrate has acted in conformity with the statute (i), consequently no parol evidence can be given of a prisoner's declaration before a magistrate, without previous proof that it was not taken down in writing (k). But a written examination before a magistrate will not exclude evidence of a previous parol declaration, which has not been reduced to writing (l).

The prisoner is not to be examined upon oath (m), for this would be a *species of duress, and a violation of the maxim, that no one is bound to criminate himself. And where the examination purported on the face of the magistrate's return to have been taken upon oath, the Judge rejected parol evidence to show that no oath had in fact been taken (n). *39

Proof of examination.

In Lambe's Case (o) it was held, by a majority of the twelve Judges, that a confession made by the prisoner before a magistrate might be read in evidence, upon proof, that when it was read over to the prisoner he said it was all true enough, although he declined to sign it, and although it had not been signed by the magistrate; for even a parol confession was evidence at common law before the statutes of Philip & Mary (p) (A).

(f) An examination of a prisoner, though elicited by the magistrate's questions, is admissible against him where no threat or promise was used by the magistrate. R. v. Ellis, 1 Ry. & M. C. 437. Where the prisoner's statement was reduced into writing before the witnesses against him had been examined, it was admitted by Garrow, B. with great doubts of its legality. R. v. Fagg, 4 C. & P. 566; but see R. v. Bell,[1] 5 C. & P. 162.

(g) R. v. Lamb, Leach's C. C. L. 625, 3d edit. per Grose, J.

(h) 1 Hale, 284; Summ. 263.

(i) R. v. Jacobs and others, Leach's C. C. L. 349, 3d edit. R. v. Hickman, Ib. 349. R. v. Fisher, Ib. R. v. Hall, Ib. 240. R. v. Fearshire, Ib.; B. N. P. 298; 2 Haw. c. 46, s. 43.

(k) R. v. Hall, cited in R. v. Lambe, Leach's C. C. L. 635, by all the Judges, except Gould, J. Phillips v. Winburn,[2] 4 C. & P. 273. R. v. Hollingshead,[3] Ib. 242.

(l) R. v. M'Carty, Sp. Comm. Dublin, 797. Maenally on Ev. 45. Action by bankers to recover money paid on a check purporting to be drawn by the defendant, but alleged to be a forgery, minutes of the defendant's examination on a charge made against a party as having forged the check, are receivable, although he afterwards signed a regular deposition. Williams v. Woodward,[4] 4 C. & P. 346.

(m) B. N. P. 242; Kel. 2. It generally happens that a party who is examined upon oath before the magistrate, is examined as a witness against others, and under the expectation that he will not be prosecuted. It has been said that a prisoner ought not to be questioned by a magistrate; and in the case of R. v. Wilson,[5] Holt's C. 597, cor. Richards, C. B., the prisoner's statement was, on this ground, rejected as inadmissible; but by the statute of Philip & Mary formerly, and now by the stat. 7 G. 4, c. 64, s. 3, the magistrate is to take the examination of the prisoner; and at the Carlisle Sp. Ass. 1824, Holroyd, J. admitted the prisoner's examination to be used as evidence against him, notwithstanding this objection. Where a statement by a defendant, made before a committee of the House of Commons, was objected to on the ground that the statement had been made under a compulsory process, the objection was overruled. R. v. Merceron,[6] 2 Starkie's C. 366. Before a statement made by a prisoner to the magistrate he was sworn by mistake, but as soon as it was discovered, the deposition was destroyed, and the party cautioned; his subsequent statement is receivable. R. v. Webb,[7] 4 C. & P. 564. A party is examined on oath upon a charge made against another, he not being himself charged or suspected of any offence, upon his being afterwards charged and indicted, his former deposition is admissible. R. v. Haworth, York Spring Assizes, 1830, Parke, J.

(n) R. v. Smith and another, cor. Le Blanc,[8] J. 1 Starkie's C. 242. In the case of R. v Wilson,[9] 1 Holt, C. 597, cor. Richards, L. C. B. it was held, that an examination of a prisoner, which consisted in answers to questions put by the magistrate, could not be received in evidence, although no threats had been held out.

(o) Leach's C. C. L. 625: and see 2 Haw. c. 46, s. 31.

(p) In the case of the King v. Pelicote, cor. Wood, Baron, York Summer Assizes, 1819,[10] 2 Starkie's C.

(A) (When an examination has been reduced to writing, parol evidence of it cannot be received. M'Kenna's Case, 5 Rogers's Rec. 4; but parol evidence is admissible in proof of an examination not reduced to writing. State v. Irwin, 1 Hayw. 112. Collins's Case, 4 Rogers's Rec. 139. So an examination reduced to writing but not signed is admissible in evidence. Pennsylvania v. Stoops, Addis. 383. The People v. Johnson, 1 Wheel. C. C. 193. It seems that depositions taken in pencil, instead of being properly written out, would not be considered as taken in compliance with the statute. The People v. White, 22 Wend. R. 167.)

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxiv. 256. [2]Id. xix. 380. [3]Id. xix. 365. [4]Id. xix. 412. [5]Id. iii. 192. [6]Id. iii. 365. [7]Id. xix. 528. [8]Id. ii. 374. [9]Id. iii. 192. [10]Id. iii. 442.

By the statute 7 Geo. 4, c. 64, s. 3, the examinations must be returned by the justices to the next general gaol delivery, to be held within the limits of their commission. The identity of the examination (q) is usually proved by the magistrate, coroner, or his clerk, who took it down (r), and it should be shown that it contains the substance of what the prisoner said (s). It should also appear that the confession was made freely (t); but it is not *40 *absolutely incumbent on the magistrate to warn the prisoner not to confess (u). The whole of the confession must be read (x).

Force and effect.

A prisoner may be convicted upon his own confession, without other evidence (y).

It is a general rule, founded upon principles already adverted to (z), that the admission or confession of one defendant is not evidence against any but himself (a) (A); except, indeed, such a privity and community in the same original design be proved, as to render that which has been said or done by one, in furtherance of the common object, fair and reasonable evidence of the general design and project itself. It was ruled in Tong's Case (b), upon the soundest principles, that the confession of one shall not be evidence against another. Where several are tried at the same time, and the confession of one implicates another, the evidence cannot on that account be rejected; the usual course is for the court to inform the jury that the confession is evidence against that party only by whom it is made (c).

433, where a prisoner, after his examination had been read over, refused to sign it, and did not say (as in Lamb's Case) that it was true, the learned Judge rejected the evidence. But in the later case of R. v. Dewhurst, s. c. 2 Russ. C. & 4, 645, Lancaster Spring Assizes, 1825, where the magistrate himself had taken down the examination, which was read over to the prisoner, who made no objection to it, but did not sign it, Bayley, J. held that the magistrate might at all events refresh his memory by the writing, and give evidence of the statement; but ultimately the examination itself was read. Minutes of a prisoner's examination, which have not been signed by him, or read over to him, may be used as minutes to refresh the memory of the witness, Layer's Case, 24 Howell's St. Tr. 214; 6 Hargreave's St. Tr. 229. Where the examination of a prisoner taken in writing is inadmissible from some irregularity, parol evidence of what he said upon the examination is admissible. R. v. Reed,[1] 1 Mood. & M. C. 403.

(q) It has been said that the examinations ought not to be taken before the grand jury, Gilb. Ev. by Loft, 216; but the rule seems to apply to depositions only; and, in practice, the examinations are frequently (by leave of the court,) taken before the grand jury.

(r) Parke, B. was of opinion, that it is sufficient to prove the magistrate's signature; but Lord Denman held, that this was not sufficient when the prisoner made his mark only, without writing his name.

(s) 1 Hale, 284. The safest course is to take down the very words. The statute requires the justices to take the examination, and to put the same, or so much thereof as is material, into writing. A prisoner said, "Give me a glass of gin, and I'll tell you all about it," and two glasses of gin were given by an officer to the prisoner, who then made a confession, and the officer afterwards wrote down from recollection what the prisoner had said, and the officer read over what had been so written before the committing magistrate, and the magistrate told the prisoner that a confession might do him harm, upon which the prisoner said that what had been read was the truth, and signed the paper. Best, J. refused to admit the evidence. R. v. Sexton, 2 Russ. C. & M. 645, Norwich, Summ. Ass. 1822.

(t) 1 Hale's P. C. 284.

(u) R. v. Magill, Macnally, 38.

(x) R. v. Payne, 5 Mod. 165; 2 Haw. c. 46, s. 42.

(y) Stone's Case, Dy. 214. Francis's Case, 6 St. Tr. 58. Fisher's Case, Leach's C. C. L. 3d edit. 394. Wheeler's Case, Ib. Even though there be no positive proof that the offence was committed. R. v. Eldridge, Russ. & R. C. C. L. 440. R. v. Falkner, Ib. 481. R. v. White, Ib. 508. R. v. Tippett, Ib. 509.

(z) Vol. I. See Index, tit. Admissions.

(a) 2 Haw. c. 46. The contrary was unjustly ruled in Throgmorton's Case, 1 St. Tr. 70. Earl of Essex's Case, Ib. 197; and Sir Walter Raleigh's Case, 1 Jac. 1.

(b) Kel. 18.

(c) R. v. Hearne and others,[2] 4 C. & P. 215. See the observations of Wood, B. in Bullen v. Mitchell, 2 Price, 299. It is, however, morally impossible that the hearing of such a confession should not operate to the prejudice of the parties implicated; in some instances the inconvenience might be obviated by separate trials.

(A) (On an indictment against A. for concealing a horse thief, knowing him to be such, it is not competent for the prosecutor to give evidence of what the alleged horse thief confessed in the presence of A. to establish the fact that a horse was stolen. The voluntary confessions of a man are evidence against himself but not against other persons. Morrison v. The State of Ohio, 5 Ohio Rep. 439. Lowe v. Boteler, 4 Har. & McHen. 349.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxii. 341. [2]Id. xix. 550.

In some instances, the confession of one, taken in the presence and hearing of another prisoner, may be very material evidence to explain the expressions and conduct of the latter upon that occasion; for any declarations of his, by which he assented to what was confessed by another, to his own prejudice, would be admissible evidence against him. The confession of the other may also, it seems, be evidence for the purpose of explaining such declarations (d).

ADMISSION TO A COPYHOLD. See COPYHOLD.—EJECTMENT.

ADULTERY. See CRIMINAL CONVERSATION.

AFFIDAVIT.

An affidavit sworn before a Judge is receivable in the court of which he is a Judge, though not entitled of that court, but not in any other court unless entitled of that court (e).

AFFIRMANCE OF CONTRACT. See Index, tit. WAVER.

AGENT (f) (A).

IF A. authorize B. to do an act, it is in law the act of A., and may be so alleged in pleading, except in cases of felony; for then, if A. be absent when the fact is committed, he is but an accessory before the fact (g). Accordingly *on an allegation (in a civil action) that the master and servant drove ungovernable horses in Lincoln's-Inn-Fields, both were found guilty, although the servant alone was present (h). So an allegation that the defendant negligently drove his cart, is supported by proof that it was driven by his servant (i). Before the act of B. can be given in evidence as the act of A., it must be proved that B. was the agent of A. (B). This proof may either be,—1st, direct, or it may result, 2dly, from the relative situation of A. and B.; or 3dly, from their habit and course of dealing, or other special circumstances; or, 4thly, from A.'s recognition of B.'s act, or his acquiescence in it. 1st. May be direct (k). As where the agent is called *41

(d) But a confession by one of several prisoners before a magistrate, which implicates all, cannot be read in evidence merely for the purpose of drawing an inference from their silence as to the parts which affect them. R. v. Appleby and others,[1] 3 Starkie's C. 30, cor. Holroyd, J. who said that it had been so held by several of the judges on a case from Chester, and that he was of that opinion.

(e) Reg. G., H. T. 2 W. 4. The addition of every person making an affidavit must be inserted therein, Ib. When sworn before the attorney on record or his agent, Ib.

(f) For other evidence on this head, see tit. ADMISSIONS.—ACCESSORIES.

(g) See ACCESSORY.

(h) Michael v. Allestree, 2. Lev. 172.

(i) Brucker v. Fromont, 6 T. R. 659; and see Tuberville v. Stamp, Ld. Raym. 264.

(k) A letter authorizing an agent to draw to a certain amount, coupled with a power of attorney to enter into and complete contracts, make purchases, &c., is a sufficient authority to such agent to raise money for the purposes of his employers; and a party advancing monies to such agent is not bound to call for those instruments, and inquire what money has been already advanced on the letter. Withington v. Herring,[2] 5 Bing. 442. See Attwood v. Munnings,[3] 7 B. & C. 278. A direction to an agent to enter upon premises (in mortgage) and sell the stock, &c., which was declared to be for the benefit of the plaintiff, and amounting to an authority to pay over the amount to him, being in consideration of his postponing the sale of the estate, is an irrevocable authority, and the plaintiff may sue the agent for money had and received. Metcalf v. Clough, 2 M. & Ry. 178. The steward of a manor cannot appoint a deputy without special authority. Barker v. Kett, 3 Salk. 124. The office is grantable in reversion; Ib. Where the agent had in his own

(A) (No one is obliged to accept a consignment of goods, but if it be received, the consignee, like every other agent or factor, is liable for a breach of the positive orders of his principal. Walker et al. v. Smith, 4 Dall. 389, 1 Wash. C. C. R. 202.)

(B) (The acts of agents do not derive their validity from professing on the face of them, to have been done in the exercise of their agency, but upon the facts that the acts were done in the exercise and within the limits, of the power delegated. Mech. B'k of Alexandria v. The B'k of Columbia, 5 Wheat. 326. In ascertaining these facts as connected with the execution of any written instrument, parol testimony is admissible. Ibid.)

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xiv. 152. [2]Id. xv. 493. [3]Id. xiv. 42.

Direct evidence of agency.

as a witness and proves that he was authorized to do the act, or transact the particular business. The fact of agency may be proved by collateral evidence without calling the agent (l). If the authority was in writing, it must be produced, in order that it may be seen whether it has been pursued (m). If he acted under a power of attorney, the instrument must be produced and proved (n). And parol evidence of the authority is inadmissible, where the authority from its nature must have been in writing (o). This, however, does not appear to be necessary, where the authority can be clearly inferred from the course of dealing, or from the recognition of the agent's acts by the principal. And therefore in the case of The King v. Bigg (p), which was an indictment for a felonious erasure of an indorsement upon a bank-note, although it was contended, on behalf of the prisoner, that it was necessary to prove the appointment of Adams as the agent of the Bank of England, being a corporate body, under their seal (q), it was held to be sufficient to show that Adams had been used to sign bills and notes, which from time to time had been duly paid, and answered by the Bank. It was found by the special verdict that Adams had been intrusted and employed by the Governor *and Company, but not by any instrument under their seal. A majority of the Judges were of opinion that the evidence was sufficient, and the prisoner was transported.

*42

From the relative situation of the parties.

Secondly. From relative situation.—Where the authority results from the relative situation of the parties, it is sufficient to prove such relative situation (r). Thus, to affect the sheriff with the act of the under-sheriff it is unnecessary to show more than that the latter is the under-sheriff (s). But a bailiff is not the general officer of the sheriff, and therefore the particular authority must be proved (t). Proof of the sale of a book by a servant in a bookseller's shop is primâ facie evidence of a sale by the master (u). The answer of a clerk at a banking house, transacting the business of his principals, is evidence against the latter (x). Where the name always sold the goods and received the amount, held that having an authority to sell, he had an implied one to receive the price; and that the principals could not avow the act of their agent as to one part, and repudiate it as to the other. Capel v. Thornton,[1] 3 C. & P. 353.

(l) Owen v. Barrow, 1 N. R. 101; infra, tit. Usury. Where goods were fraudulently obtained by D., the agent of W., the purchaser, and also of the defendants, without any intention of being paid for, and were immediately sold to the defendants; held, in trover, that the handwriting of D. to various contracts as the agent of W. might be proved, and as steps in proving the fraud, without calling him as a witness, although the jury found that the defendants were not privy to the fraud. Irving v. Motley,[2] 7 Bing. 543.

(m) Johnson v. Mason, 1 Esp. C. 89. Coore v. Calloway, Ib. 115. (n) Ibid.

(o) Ibid; but see 3 P. Wms. 427, R. v. Bigg. (p) 3 P. Wms. 427.

(q) It was alleged in the indictment, that one Joshua Adams was intrusted and employed by the Governor and Company of the Bank of England to sign bank-notes for the said company; and it was found by the special verdict that he was so intrusted and employed by the Governor, &c. but not under their common seal.

(r) See 7 T. R. 113. The plaintiffs, correspondents in England of a foreign merchant, had in May 1827, a Bank of England note remitted in part-payment of the account due to them, which had been stolen in February 1826, and when presented at the Bank, was detained; it was held in trover, that the plaintiffs must be taken to be the agents of the foreign merchant, and could only recover upon his title, and therefore were bound to show that it had been received without any grounds of suspicion that the note had been improperly obtained. De la Chaumette v. Bank of England,[3] 9 B. & C. 208. A deed signed by the chief clerk and solicitor of a company is binding on them, unless it be shown that he exceeded his authority; and it makes no difference whether the object of producing it were to enforce it or bind the company in any other way by its contents. Doe d. Macleod v. East London Waterworks Company,[4] 1 Mood. & M. C. 149. Agents, authorized to draw bills for a company, drew them in their own names, and not as agents, although for the purposes of the company; held that the members of the company were not liable on the bills, but, semble, they were liable as partners for the money lent. Ducarrey v. Gill,[5] 1 Mo. & M. 451, and 4 C. & P. 121. (s) Ibid. (t) Ibid.

(u) R. v. Almon, Burr. 2686. See tit. Libel.

(x) Price v. Marsh, 1 Carr. C. 60. The employment of a ship is evidence of an authority from the owner to the master, in respect of every lawful contract made by him relative to such employment of the ship. Abbott's L. S. 112, 122; 1 Vent. 190, 238. An assignment of a lease under a fi. fa. by A. B. as under-sheriff, captain of a vessel orders goods for the use of the ship, the owners are responsible (y). So it is the common course upon trials at Nisi Prius, to read the admissions of the attorney on record of either of the parties; and a plaintiff is bound by the act, not only of his attorney, but of his agent in town (z), in the course of the cause (A).

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xiv. 343. [2]Id. xx. 233. [3]Id. xvii. 356. [4]Id. xvii. 271. [5]Id. xix. 302.

A letter written to the plaintiffs, respecting the pulling down an adjoining house belonging to a corporation by their surveyor, and who had the management of their buildings, may be presumed to have been written by him in that capacity, and therefore is evidence against them (a).

Thirdly. From habit, course of dealing, &c.—In mercantile transactions, the fact of the usual and general employment of a particular agent in the transaction of business is the most usual evidence of authority (b). Thus, *the general authority of brokers to sell, so as to bind their principals in respect of the purchase, is to be collected from their general dealings, and not merely from their private instructions as to the particular parcel of goods; and if a general authority can be inferred from the usual course and habit of dealing, the principal will be bound by the contract although it be contrary to the particular instructions (c). Where an agent had been employed for a length of time to pay for work of a particular description, and workmen were always referred to him, his acknowledgment of a debt was held to be binding upon his principal (d). A master who in a single instance authorizes his servant to take up goods on credit, is afterwards liable (e). So where the defendant's wife usually gave orders for goods, her acknowledgment of a debt being due within six years, was held to be evidence against her husband (f). So where the wife had taken lodgings for herself and her husband, and afterwards gave notice of quitting, upon an action brought for use and occupation, it was held that the acknowledgment of the wife was evidence against her husband; and Lord Kenyon said, that where a wife acts for her husband in any business or department by his authority, and with his assent, he thereby adopts her acts, and must be bound by any acknowledgment, or any admission made by her respectis evidence that he is under-sheriff. Doe d. James v. Brown,[1] 5 B. & A. 243. The drawing of bills by the consignor of goods on the consignee or factor, against the consignment, does not authorize the latter to plead the goods. Gill v. Kymer,[2] 5 Moore, 518. Duclos v. Hyland, cited Ib. See Guichard v. Morgan,[3] 4 Moore, 36; Paterson v. Gandesequi, 15 East, 62; Daubigny v. Duval, 5 T. R. 604; Fielding v. Kymer,[2] 2 B. & B. 639. By the stat. 4 G. 4, c. 83, a person may take a deposit or pledge of goods to the extent of the consignee's interest.

From habit and course of dealing.

*43

(y) 1 T. R. 108; and so is the captain also; aliter, if they be ordered before his appointment, although not delivered till after. Farmer v. Davis, Ibid. And see the last note.

(z) Griffiths v. Williams, 1 T. R. 710, 711. See Hays v. Perkins, 3 East, 568.

(a) Peyton v. Governors of St. Thomas's Hospital,[4] 3 C. & P. 363. The answer of a clerk at a banking-house, transacting the business of his principals, is evidence against them. Price v. Marsh, 1 Carr. C. 60.

(b) See R. v. Biggs, 3 P. Wms. 427, and supra, note (x).

(c) Whitehead v. Tuckett, 15 East, 400.

(d) Burt v. Palmer, 5 Esp. C. 145. The plaintiff, after repeated applications for payment to the defendant, receiving no answer, applied to an attorney, supposed to act for the defendant, for payment, who answered the letter, and paid part, and to a subsequent letter replied, promising payment of the remainder; held, that as it appeared that he was the agent at one time, this was evidence to go to the jury that he continued to be so. Roberts v. Gresley,[5] 3 C. & P. 380.

(e) The defendant sent a waterman to the plaintiff for iron, on trust, and paid for it afterwards; he sent the same waterman a second time with ready money, who received the goods but did not pay for them. The C. J. ruled that the sending him on trust the first time, and paying the money, gave him credit, so as to charge the defendant on the second contract. Hazard v. Tradwell, Str. 506; and see Rusby v. Scarlett, 5 Esp. C. 76; 1 Show, 95. See tit. GOODS SOLD AND DELIVERED.

(f) Palethorp v. Furnish, 2 Esp. Cas. 211. See tit. ADMISSIONS, 29, 30.

(A) (A son who rides his father's horse with his permission, is authorized to make such disposition of him as may be necessary for his preservation. White v. Edgman, 1 Tenn. R. 19.)

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. vii. 83. [2]Id. vi. 295. [3]Id. xvi. 360. [4]Id. xiv. 349. [5]Id. xiv. 358.

ing that business in which she has acted for him (g). In such respects, the wife does not differ from any other agent. So an admission by a clerk usually employed in corresponding on business, is evidence (h).

An authority to receive payment on bonds, bills, &c. is usually evidenced by the custody of the instruments themselves (i). And it was held, that a payment to one who usually received money for an obligee of a bond, was not sufficient, unless he had the custody of the bond (k).

Recognition. Fourthly. A recognition by the principal of the agency in the particular instance, or in similar instances, is evidence of the authority to the latter (A). As, where one subscribes policies in the name of another, and, upon a loss happening, the latter pays the amount; this would be evidence of a general authority to subscribe policies (l). So where the defendant's son had, in three or four instances, signed bills of exchange by the direction of his father, it was held to be sufficient evidence for presuming an authority from the father to the son to sign a guarantee (m).

*44 *Mere evidence, however, that the agent has done acts in the name of a principal, will not bind the latter without some evidence of recognition on his part; and therefore, where a policy had been signed by one Butler, and it was proved that Butler had signed other policies in the name of the defendant, but no evidence was adduced of any authority given in the particular case, or of the defendant's having ever paid a loss on such policies, the evidence was held to be insufficient (n) (1). If an agent has authority to subscribe a policy, he has also authority to adjust it (o).

Where the defendant in an action on a policy of insurance had used an affidavit, made by a third person, for the purpose of putting off the trial,

Recognition of authority. it was held, that the statement in the affidavit, that the deponent had subscribed the policy on the behalf of the defendant, was admissible to prove the fact (p).

If a master send a servant to receive money, and the servant instead of money receives a bill, the master may, as soon as he knows it, dissent, and will not be bound by the payment; but acquiescence, or a small matter, it was said in the case of Ward v. Evans (q) (B) will be proof of the mas-

(g) Emerson v. Blonden, 1 Esp. C. 142; and see Anderson v. Sanderson,[1] 2 Starkie's C. 104. So where the wife kept a shop in the absence of her husband, and admitted a debt for goods sold and delivered. Peto v. Hague, 5 Esp. C. 134. Clifford v. Burton,[2] 1 Bing. 199.

(h) Harding v. Carter, Park on Ins. 4; vide supra, p. 42.

(i) 1 Chan. Cas. 193. Owen v. Barrow, 1 N. R. 101; 12 Mod. 564. See tit. PAYMENT.

(k) Gerard v. Baker, 1 Ch. Ca. 94. Duke of Cleveland v. Dashwood, 2 Eq. Cas. Ab. 709.

(l) Courteen v. Touse, 1 Camp. 43, n. (a); Neal v. Irving, 1 Esp. C. 61. Haughton v. Ewbank, 4 Camp. 80; although the agent acted under the power of attorney.

(m) Watkins v. Vince,[3] 2 Starkie's C. 368.

(n) Courteen v. Touse, 1 Camp. 43, n. (a).

(o) Richardson v. Anderson, 1 Camp. 43, n. (a).

(p) Johnson v. Ward, 6 Esp. C. 48. See also 2 T. R. 189, in not.; 2 Ld. Raym. 930; 11 Mod. 88.

(q) Salk. 442. Watkins v. Vince,[3] 2 Starkie's C. 368.

(A) (But if the act of the professed agent be under seal, the ratification must be under seal, to make the act the deed of the principal. Blood v. Goodrich, 12 Wend. 525.)

(B) (Where a principal is informed by his agent of what he has done, the principal must express his dissatisfaction within a reasonable time, otherwise, his assent to his agent's acts will be presumed. Cairnes v. Bleecker, 12 Johns. R. 300. Bredin v. Dubarry, 14 Serg. & Rawle, 27. Amory v. Hamilton, 17 Mass. R. 103. Kingston v. Kincaid, 1 Wash. C. C. R. 454.

The unauthorized act of an agent is not so absolutely void that his constituents may not ratify it and give it validity. Den v. Wright, et al. 1 Peters' C. C. R. 64. But the ratification of the act of an agent previously unauthorized, must, in order to bind the principal, be with a full knowledge of all the material facts. Owings v. Hull, 9 Peters' R. 607; and see also, Bell v. Cunningham, 3 Peters' R. 81.

Where an agent has sold the goods of his principal without authority, neither a demand by the principal of the price of the goods from the purchaser, which has been refused, nor the bringing of an action of assumpsit against the purchaser for such price, which action was discontinued before the trial, is a ratification of the sale. Peters v. Ballister, 3 Pick. R. 495.)

(1) [See Hooe & al v. Oxley & al. 1 Wash. 19. Hopkins v. Blane, 1 Cal. 361.] {Plant v. M'Ewen, 4 Conn. 544.}

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. iii. 314. [2]Id. viii. 294. [3]Id. iii. 386.

ter's assent, and that will make the act of the servant the act of the master. In Thorold v. Smith (r), the servant having been sent for money received a cheque, which he kept in his own hands, without the knowledge of his master, and upon the banker's failure the servant sent back the bill; and Holt, Chief Justice, and Powell, J. seem to have been of opinion, that it was a question of fact for the jury, whether the servant, under the circumstances of the case, had authority from his master to receive bills instead of money; and a new trial was granted, for the purpose of ascertaining the fact (s).

Where the defendants' agent abroad received by their orders money on their account, and communicated the fact to them, which they acknowledged, and directed the disposal of it; it was held that the agent's letters were admissible as against the defendants to charge them with the receipt of the money, they having adopted and acted upon the assertions of their agent (t). A duty arising out of particular relations or circumstances, is properly alleged as an implied promise (u).

Such presumptions and implications of authority are in general applicable to civil cases only. Evidence of a wilful trespass by the servant will not show that the master is a trespasser, without express evidence that the act was done by his direction; for an authority to commit a trespass cannot be implied (x). But fraud will vitiate a contract, although the principal take *no part in it, for he is civilly responsible for the acts of his agent (z). *45 It is a general rule, that an agent cannot bind his principal by any act beyond the scope of the authority delegated to him (a) (A). Where the Acts and declarations of an agent.

(r) 11 Mod. 87.

(s) But Holt, C. J. intimated his opinion that a jury at Guildhall would find payment by a bill to be a good payment, according to the common practice of the city; and Powell, J. said he supposed that the servant had many times received bills for his master, which was an authority for the purpose; but that that was matter of evidence, being according to the common practice of the world.

(t) Coates v. Bainbridge,[1] 2 Bing. 58, 1 M. & P. 142.

(u) Callender v. Oelriche,[2] 5 Bing. N. C. 58.

(x) Macmanus v. Crickett, 1 East. 106; 2 H. B. 443. See also Harding v. Greening,[3] Holt's C. 531; and R. v. Johnston, 7 East, 65, infra, tit. Libel. The tort of a servant or deputy does not affect the master. Mo. 777, 787; Com. Dig. Officer, [K.] 3. Harris v. Nicholas, 5 Munf. 483. Although an information for penalties is a criminal proceeding, yet it is also in the nature of a civil process to recover the Crown's debt; a party, therefore, carrying on trade by his servants, and deriving profits from their acts, is responsible for penalties incurred by their violation of the revenue laws. Attorney General v. Siddon, 1 Cr. & J. 220; 1 Tyrw. 41; and see R. v. Dixon, 3 M. & S. 11; and R. v. Gutch,[4] 1 Mood. & M. C. 433. In the case of an illegal distress, as damage feasant, by a servant, an authority to make the illegal distress cannot be inferred from lawful authority given in other instances, Lyons v. Martin, 3 N. & P. 509.

(z) Doe v. Martin, 4 T. R. 39. A principal is bound by the fraud or misrepresentation of an agent in making a contract for him. Fitzherbert v. Mather, 1 T. R. 12, Park. Ins. 321, 326. See further, App. 45.

(a) Fenn v. Harrison, 3 T. R. 357. A factor cannot pledge the goods of his principal by indorsement of the bill of lading, or even by delivery of the goods themselves. Newson v. Thornton, 6 East, 17. Daubigny v. Duval, 5 T. R. 604. Paterson v. Tash, 2 Str. 1178. Martini v. Coles, 1 M. & S. 140. Even although he has accepted bills on the faith of such consignments. Graham v. Dyster,[5] 2 Starkie's C. 21. Fielding v. Kymer,[6] 2 B. & B. 639; 5 Moore, supra, 42, note (x). But the rule does not apply to a banker who pledges an indorsed negotiable security deposited in his hands. I Bos. & Pull. 648, 651. The plaintiffs previously to a sale issued catalogues, and by one of the conditions of sale, payment was to be made on delivery by good bills on London, at four months from the date of the sale; one of the catalogues being sent to the defendants by their broker, they directed him to purchase certain lots, which he accordingly did, in his own name, and immediately drew on the defendants at four months, which they accepted, and paid when due. It appeared that at the sale the terms of payment were varied to known purchasers to "payment two and two months," by which the brokers were allowed to have the goods without giving bills at the time, and they subsequently became bankrupts. In an action against the defendants as the real purchasers, it was held that the defendants not having authorized any contract different from that mentioned in the condition, viz. a payment on delivery by good bills, and on the faith of which they might prop rly accept the bills, they were not bound by the contract varied at the sale, and that the plaintiffs therefore were not entitled to recover. Horsfall v. Fauntleroy,[7] 10 B & C. 755.

(A) (An authority to bring suit on a claim, and prosecute it to final judgment, does not imply an authority to compromise, which must be specially conferred. Kilgour v. Ratcliff's Heirs, 2 Martin, N. S. 292.)

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xv. 368. [2]Id. xxxv. 29. [3]Id. iii. 176. [4]Id. xxii. 352. [5]Id. iii. 224. [6]Id. vi. 295. [7]Id. xxi. 160.

fact of agency has been proved, either expressly or presumptively, the act of the agent, co-extensive with the authority, is the act of the principal (b), whose mere instrument he is; and then, whatever the agent says, within the scope of his authority, the principal says, and evidence may be given of such acts and declarations as if they had been actually done and made by the principal (c) himself; and it makes no difference whether the declaration be true or false, for they are just as binding upon the principal as if they had been actually made by him. But where the agent makes any declaration or representation of his own, and not as the instrument of his master, that declaration will not be evidence, but the agent himself must be called (d) to prove any fact within his knowledge; consequently, a letter *46 written by *an agent to his principal of what he has done, being the representation of the agent to his principal of what he has done, is not admissible in evidence against the principal to prove the truth of the representation (e); for he is no longer the authorized instrument of the principal to bind him by such declarations (1).

So where the question was, whether the agent of the defendant had delivered to him a bond, alleged to have been made by the defendant to the plaintiff, it was held, by the Master of the Rolls, that the declaration by the agent, that he had delivered the bond to the defendant, was not admissible evidence to prove the fact (f). But it is otherwise where the principal refers himself to his agent's declaration on a particular subject, or constitutes a party his general agent for conducting his business, for then a declaration or acknowledgment by the latter falls within the scope of his authority (g).

Defence by an agent. An agent may generally repel an action against himself by proof that he acted on the footing of an agent, and was understood so to act (h) (A),

(b) The declaration of a servant employed to sell a horse is evidence to charge the master with a warranty, if made at the time of sale; if made at any other time, the facts must be proved by the servant himself. Helyar v. Hawke, 5 Esp. C. 72; and see Irving v. Motley,[1] 7 Bing. 543. Garth v. Howard,[2] 8 Bing. 451. Schumack v. Locke,[3] 10 Moore, 39. And see note (l).

(c) As to payments to an agent, see tit. Payment, and Stewart v. Aberdeen, 4 M. & W. 211.

(d) See Kahl v. Jansen, 4 Taunt. 566, and Langhorn v. Allnutt, 4 Taunt. 511. In the first of these cases the Chief J. observed, "when it is proved that A. is the agent of B., whatever A. does or says, or writes, in the making of a contract, as agent of B., is admissible in evidence, because it is part of the contract which he makes for B., and which therefore binds him, but it is not admissible as the agent's account of what passes." See also Mestaers v. Abraham, (1 Esp. C. 375); the question was, whether the defendant, the purchaser of goods, had agreed to find bags for the carriage of them: according to the report of the case, the plaintiff offered in evidence the letter of the broker who sold the goods, (being the plaintiff's own agent,) written to the plaintiff, saying that the bags would be ready by a certain day; the broker was then in the box, and Lord Kenyon said, that he would admit evidence of what he had done on account of the defendant, but that it should be learned from himself, and not from his letter. See Ashford v. Price,[4] 3 Starkie's C. 185, infra, note (g).

(e) 4 Taunt. 511; Ib. 565, 663. As to admissions by an attorney, see tit. Attorney.

(f) Fairlie v. Hastings, 10 Ves. jun. 128.

(g) Vide supra, p. 29. A declaration by the clerk of an attorney, in taxing costs, that he would not charge extra costs, is evidence against the principal. Ashford v. Price,[5] 3 Starkie's C. 185; 1 D. & R. 48.

(h) See Vendor and Vendee. The office of clerk to a body of trustees being executed by a deputy, the clerk is not responsible for losses occasioned by the negligence of such deputy induced by the negligence of the trustees, nor for monies which came into his hands through their irregular acts; but he is for sums received at his office by such deputy without his authority, but which he had ground for believing would be paid there. Whitmore v. Wilks, 1 Mood. & M. 214. Notice that third parties are interested in a particular adventure, imposes upon an agent the duty of accounting with the latter, in respect of their proportion; but it is otherwise, if from subsequent transactions it be shown that they are content to rest upon the unless he execute an instrument in his own name (i). A public officer, trading on behalf of the public, is not liable on contracts made by him in that capacity (k) (A). One who contracts on behalf of government is not liable, although the contract be by deed (l). But if a person represent himself to be an agent for one who resides abroad, it seems that he is personally liable (m).

(1) [See Mr. Day's notes to the cases of Mestaers v. Abraham, 1 Esp. C. 375, and Helyear v. Hawke, 5 Esp. C. 74. See also 5 Esp. C. 134. 1 Taunt. 398.)

(A) (An agent who makes a contract in behalf of his principal, whose name he discloses at the time to the person with whom he contracts, is not personally liable. Rathbone v. Budlong, 15 Johns. R. 1. Mauri v. Hefferman, 13 Johns. R. 58. Meyer v. Barker, 6 Binn. 234.)

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xx. 233. [2]Id. xxi. 341. [3]Id. xvii. 133. [4]Id. xii. 352. [5]Id. xiv. 176.

So where a captain contracts for goods for the use of the ship (n).

*It is a settled rule of law (o), that an agent shall not be allowed to dispute the title of his principal. *47

One who agrees to be responsible as agent for the plaintiff in respect of a sale with the auctioneers, is liable, although the plaintiff appoint the auctioneer (p).

It is also a general rule, that an agent shall not be allowed to take an undue advantage of his principal through the medium of such agency, by standing in a double capacity (q).

responsibility of the other partners, and that the agents should account solely to them. Killock v. Greg, 4 Russ. 285. See further as to the defence that the party is but an agent. Foster v. Blakelock,[1] 5 B. & C. 328; and tit. Work and Labour. As to the liability of parishioners directing parish work to be done by the churchwardens, see Lanchester v. Tucker,[2] 1 Bingh. 201. See tit. Abatement—Churchwardens.

(i) Appleton v. Binks, 5 East, 148. But if an agent covenant in his own name, he will be personally bound, although he be described in the deed as covenanting on the part of another. Appleton v. Binks, 5 East, 147. Wilks v. Backs, 2 East, 142. White v. Cuyler, 6 T. R. 176. And if he draw a bill in his own name, he will be personally liable, although the plaintiff knew that he was merely an agent. Leadbitter v. Farrow, 5 M. & S. 345. Thomas v. Bishop, Str. 955. So where a solicitor undertakes in writing to pay rent on withdrawing a distress. Burrell v. Jones, 3 B. & A. 47. A party describing himself as agent or consignee of a vessel chartered for a specific purpose, signs an agreement in his own name, witnessing "that the said parties agree," &c., and acting as principal throughout the voyage, is personally liable. Kennedy v. Gouveia,[3] 3 D. & R. 503.

(k) Macbeath v. Haldimand, 1 T. R. 172.

(l) Unwin v. Wolseley, 1 T. R. 674.

(m) De Gaillon v. L'Aigle, 1 B. & P. 368; 3 B. & A. 47. Burrell v. Jones. Appleton v. Binks, 5 East, 148. A. appoints by power of attorney three persons to act in the management of his estates in Jamaica, as his attornies, one of whom, residing there, enters into an agreement with R. to undertake the factorage of the estates, together with others, on certain terms; R. cannot call upon A. for supplies furnished, but must look to the attorney with whom he contracted. Pennant v. Simpson, 1 Knapp, P. C. 399.

(n) Farmer v. Davis, 1 T. R. 108.

(o) And therefore, where an agent has received money on behalf of his principal, he cannot afterwards be allowed to say that he received it for some other person. Dixon v. Hammond, 2 B. & A. 310. The defendant in that case having effected an insurance for both Flowerden and Davidson, and having received the amount of a loss, it was held that he was bound to pay it over to the partnership, and could not pay it to Flowerden alone. In Farrington v. Clarke,[4] 2 Chitty's C. T. M. 429, an agent had taken out letters of administration in India for his principal, who had obtained administration of the intestate's effects; and it was held that the agent could not refuse to pay over the assets to his principal, on the ground that others had obtained administration. Ib. See also Roberts v. Ogilby, 9 Price, 269. Gosling v. Birnie,[5] 7 Bingh. 339; 5 M. & P. 160. Hawes v. Watson,[6] 2 B. & C. 541. Stonard v. Dunkin, 2 Camp. 334. But see Saxby v. Wynne, and Ogle v. Atkinson, Vol. II. Trover by Vendee.

(p) Cholmondely v. Payne, 8 C. & P. 482. And the plaintiffs receiving part of the proceeds from the auctioneer does not discharge the agent. Ib.

(q) A. being in this country, applied to B. to advise him as to dealing in foreign funds, and by his advice transferred foreign securities from one to another. It appearing that the funds purchased were B.'s own, and the transfers merely dealing with his own stock, it was held that the transaction could not be supported, the dealer standing in a situation of advantage which an agent is not permitted to be in dealing with his principal. Brookman v. Rothschild, 3 Sim. 153; and affirmed in Dom. Pr. 1 Dow. & C. 188. A party employed to purchase an estate, becoming the purchaser himself, is held in equity to be a trustee for his employer. Lees v. Nuttall, 1 Russ. & M. 53. Where the defendant having been employed by the plaintiff as broker, undertook (as he was bound to do under 6 Ann. c. 16, s. 4) to charge him only the cost price of the goods purchased, having violated his duty in every instance, the plaintiff is entitled to recover damages for such overcharges paid by him. Proctor v. Brain,[7] 2 M. & P. 284.

(A) (An agent of government, though known as such, is personally liable on a contract made by him on account of government, unless it appears that he contracted in his official capacity, and on account of government, and that the other party gave the credit, and intended to look to government for compensation. Sheffield v. Watson, 3 Caines' R. 69. See also Rathbone v. Budlong, 15 Johns. R. 1. Swift v. Hopkins, 13 Johns. R. 313;—but see Hodgson v. Dexter, 1 Cranch. 345. Powell v. Finch, 5 Yerg. 446. Perry v. Hyde, 10 Conn. R. 329.)

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. xi. 240. [2] Id. viii. 294. [3] Id. xvi. 174. [4] Id. xviii. 388. [5] Id. xx. 153. [6] Id. ix. 170. [7] Id. xvii. 207.

AGREEMENT. See ASSUMPSIT.

AMENDMENT. See Tit. VARIANCE; and see Append. Vol. II. 47.

APOTHECARIES.

An apothecary, by the stat. 55 Geo. 3, c. 194, s. 21, must, in an action for business done, prove either, that he practised (r) as an apothecary prior to or on the first day of August 1815, or that he has duly obtained his certificate (s) from the master, wardens, and society of Apothecaries. A diploma from a Scotch university does not exempt in England (t). In an action to recover penalties under the same act, sec. 20 (u), where the question was,
*48 *whether the defendant had practised as an apothecary previous to the 1st of August 1815, it was held, that the incapacity, proved on the defendant, to make up the prescriptions of physicians before that time, was cogent evidence to prove the negative (v); since the 5th section of the act describes it to be the duty of an apothecary to make up prescriptions for physicians. It has been held, that an apothecary who charges for attendance is not entitled to charge for the medicines which he finds, and vice versâ (w). In a later case, a surgeon and apothecary was allowed to recover reasonable charges for attendance, besides his charges for medicine (x).

APPLICATION OF PAYMENT. See PAYMENT.

APPORTIONMENT.

There can be no extinguishment, suspension or apportionment of rent contrary to the contract and agreement of the parties, but where the lessor enters wrongfully (y). But if the lessor take a part, then there shall be an apportionment (z); and the apportionment may be made by a jury (a). So if the lessee be evicted of part, and continue to hold the remainder (b).

(r) Wogan v. Somerville,[1] 7 Taunt. 401. It was there held that the house-apothecary of an infirmary, who officiates in making up medicines for the patients, is a person practising within the statute.

(s) Sherwin v. Smith,[2] 1 Bingh. 204. It was there held that a certificate from the Court of Examiners was conclusive to show that the party had served an apprenticeship. It is sufficient to prove the signature of one of the examiners of the Apothecaries' Company, which the certificate purports to bear, with evidence that it was issued by the court of examiners. Walmesley v. Abbott,[3] 3 B. & C. 218. By the 6 G. 4, c. 133, s. 7, the seal of the Apothecaries' Company is evidence of the certificate and qualification; but the seal must be proved. Chadwick v. Bunning,[4] 2 C. & P. 106; 1 Ry. & M. 306.

(t) Apothecaries' Company v. Collins,[5] 4 B. & Ad. 604.

(u) Apothecaries' Co. v. Toby,[6] 5 B &. A. 949. It was there held, that upon an information against the defendant to recover penalties for practising against the statute, it was necessary to show in defence that the defendant was in practice on the first day of August 1815, and that it was not sufficient to show that he was in practice on a previous day.

(v) The Apothecaries' Company v. Warburton,[7] 3 B. & A. 40. It is not sufficient to show that he professed to cure, and practised in local complaints only; to entitle himself to sue he must have compounded medicines, and practised the general duties of an apothecary. Thompson v. Lewis, 1 M. & M. 255. A practising in the service of another is not sufficient. Brown v. Robinson,[8] 1 C. & P. 264. A. bound himself apprentice to an apothecary, who resided eight miles from H. The apothecary then took a house at H., in which A. resided, and attended several patients there, the apothecary coming over occasionally, and being consulted by the defendant about the patients; held that this was a practising by A. as an apothecary within the meaning of 55 Geo. 3, c. 194, s. 20. The Master, &c. of the Company of Apothecaries v. Greenwood,[9] 2 B. & Ad. 708. If a person compounds medicines, &c. he is liable to penalties, although he cannot make up a physician's prescription. Apothecaries' Company v. Allen,[10] 4 B. & Ad. 625.

(w) Towne v. Gresley,[11] 3 C. & P. 581.

(x) Handey v. Henson,[12] 4 C. & P. 110. See further Bill of Exchange—Surgeon.

(y) Hodgson v. Thornborough, 2 Lev. 143. If A. lease to B., reserving 20*l.* rent, and B. underlet part to C. without rent, and C. assign to A., yet A. shall have the whole 20*l.* without apportionment.

(z) Per Popham, in Smith v. Malings, Cro. Jac. 160; Litt. s. 222; Co. Litt. 148 (a). So if the lessor grant or devise part of the reversion to another. Co. Litt. 148 (a).

(a) On nil debet pleaded in debt for rent. 1 Vent. 276; Com. Dig. Suspension [E.]; Cro. Eliz. 771; Cro. Jac. 160.

(b) Smith v. Malings, Cro. Jac. 160. Smith v. Raleigh, 3 Camp. 513. Stokes v. Cooper, Ib. 514, n. Dal-

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. ii. 154. [2]Id. viii. 291. [3]Id. x. 56. [4]Id. xxi. 247. [5]Id. xxiv. 123. [6]Id. vii. 313. [7]Id. v. 223. [8]Id. xi. 386. [9]Id. xxii. 175. [10]Id. xxiv. 128. [11]Id. xiv. 462. [12]Id. xix. 300.

APPROPRIATION. See PAYMENT.

The brokers of B. sell goods in their possession to C., taking in payment a bill accepted by D. and return the goods on C.'s account, with instructions to sell, if at a profit. Before the bill becomes due, D. becomes bankrupt; the brokers, of their own accord, apply to C. for security, who authorizes them to sell the goods, and apply the proceeds in payment of the bill. Before they are sold, C. also becomes bankrupt; C.'s assignees cannot maintain trover against the brokers, or against B., for the goods which, after the order from C. to the brokers to sell and apply the proceeds, remained in the hands of the latter subject to that charge, although the brokers, in requiring such security, acted without instructions from B., he having by his conduct subsequently ratified their acts, and the brokers being entitled to act for their employers' benefit (c).

* APPROPRIATION OF PAYMENT. See PAYMENT. *49

APPURTENANT (d). See TRESPASS.

ARBITRATOR. See AWARD.

ARREST.

It must be proved that the arrest was by authority of the bailiff; but it is not necessary to show that he was actually present, or in sight, or within any precise distance (e) (A). See tit. SHERIFF.—TRESPASS.

ARSON.

To establish this offence it is essential to prove, first, the act of setting fire to and burning; secondly, the house, &c.; thirdly, of the owner specified in the indictment; fourthly, with a felonious intent (f).

First. The act of setting fire to and burning.—To constitute arson at common law, there must be an actual burning of the house, or of some part of it (g). And the statutable description "set fire to," does not enlarge the common law offence in this respect (h). It is necessary to prove that Act of setting fire to.

ston v. Reeve, Ld. Ray, 77. Clun's Case, 10 Rep. 128. Burn v. Phelps,[1] 1 Starkie's C. 94. Tomlinson v. Day,[2] 3 B. & B. 680. But the lessee may at his election, on eviction from part, abandon the whole.

(c) Bailey v. Culverwell,[3] 8 B. & C. 449, (and see Appendix). Here the act of the agent, ratified by the principal, had the effect of an order given by the principal, and accepted by the brokers. See Carvalho v. Burn. As to the appropriation of a cargo in the hands of an agent as a security for advances by a third person, see Fisher v. Miller,[4] 1 Bingh. 150. A. directs B., his debtor, to pay C. his creditor, B. assents, and pledges himself to pay C., A. cannot revoke the order. Hodgson v. Anderson,[5] 3 B. & C. 842. Before payment A. becomes a bankrupt. His assignees cannot recover, for C. is entitled in equity to an assignment of debt. Crowfoot v. Gurney,[6] 9 Bing. 372.

(d) Land cannot be appurtenant to land. Buzzard v. Capel,[7] 8 B. & C. 141.

(e) Blatch v. Archer, Cowp. 65. As to arrest within a privileged jurisdiction, see Sparks v. Spinks,[8] 7 Taunt. 311. If a sheriff arrest a defendant on one writ, he is arrested as to all writs then in the sheriff's office. Per Bayley, J., Short v. Vansittart, York, 1821. See tit. TRESPASS.

(f) See the allegations, Criminal Pleadings, 417.

(g) 3 Inst. 66; 1 Hale, P. C. 568; East's P. C. 1020; 1 Haw. c. 39, s. 4; 2 Bl. Comm. 222.

(h) This was so held under the stat. 9 Geo. 1, c. 22 (now repealed). East's P. C. 1020. R. v. Spalding. R. v. Reeve. R. v. Taylor, Leach C. C. L. 58. The late stat. 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 30, s. 2, uses the same words, and makes it capital, unlawfully and maliciously to set fire to any house, stable, coach-house, out-house, ware-house, office, shop, mill, malt house, hop-oast, barn or granary, or any building or erection used in carrying on any trade or manufacture, or any branch thereof, whether the same be then in the possession of the offender, or of any other person, with intent thereby to injure or defraud any person.

(A) (No manual touching of the body is necessary to constitute an arrest. Gold v. Bissell. 1 Wend. 215. Strout v. Gooch, 8 Greenl. 127. But see United States v. Benner, 1 Baldw. 239. Huntington v. Blaisdell, 2 N. Hamp. 318. Where one not generally known as an officer makes an arrest, he must show his authority, if required. Arnold v. Steeves, 10 Wend. 514. State v. Curtis, 1 Hayw. 471. Where one not generally known as an officer makes an arrest, he must show his authority if demanded, or he may be resisted. Ib. But a party not immediately submitting to such officer, has no right to make this demand. Commonwealth v. Field, 13 Mass. R. 321.)

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. ii. 310. [2] Id. vi. 315. [3] Id. xv. 261. [4] Id. viii. 276. [5] Id. x. 247. [6] Id. xxiii. 309. [7] Id. xv. 169. [8] Id. ii. 118.

some part of the house was burnt. Upon an indictment under the statute 9 G. 1, c. 22, for burning an out-house called a paper-mill, proof that a large quantity of paper drying in a loft of the mill had been set on fire, no part of the mill itself having been set on fire, was held to be insufficient (i). But it is not necessary to show that the whole was consumed (j) (1). The act may consist in the prisoner's burning his own house, if he do it with intent to burn the house of another, which is in consequence burnt, or even with a felonious intent to defraud an insurer (k).

House. Secondly. The house, &c.—Arson, at common law, is an offence against the habitation, and therefore the house must be proved to be a dwelling-house (l) (B). The offence at common law extends to the burning not only of the dwelling-house, but also of all out-houses which are parcel of *50 the *dwelling-house, although not adjoining to it, or under the same roof (m). In what cases an out-house is to be considered as part of the dwelling-house will be more fully considered in treating of the evidence in case of burglary. The burning of a barn, containing corn and hay, was felony at common law (n). A common gaol was held to be a house, under the stat. 9 Geo. 1, c. 22 (o). An indictment under that statute for burning an out-house, was sustained by proof of burning an out-house, although it was part of a dwelling-house (p); for it is still an out-house, and the statute did not alter the nature of the crime, but only excluded the principal more clearly from clergy (q).

Ownership. Thirdly. Ownership and possession.—The house is described either as the house of a particular person specified in the indictment, or under the stat. 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 30, is described to be in the possession of the prisoner, or of some other person. If it be described generally as the house of another, then, since arson is an offence immediately against the possession, the house must be proved to be in the possession of that person, suo jure (r). Hence if the house be alleged to be the house of another, and it appear that the prisoner was in possession of the house under a lease for years, it is not felony (s). So an indictment against a prisoner for burning his own house was bad (t) before the stat. 43 Geo. 3, c. 58 (u); but it is no defence that the prisoner resided in the house by sufferance, as a pauper, by permission of the overseers, without any interest of his own; for the possession in such case is in the overseers, by the occupation of the pauper

(i) R. v. Taylor, Leach's C. C. L. 58.
(j) 3 Inst. 66; 1 Hale, 568; 1 Haw. c. 39, s. 4.
(k) R. v. Probert, East's P. C. 1030; 6 St. Tr. 222. And see the stat. supra, note (h).
(l) See Criminal Pleadings, note (h). And see the late stat. supra, note (h).
(m) 1 Hale, P. C. 567, 570; Summ. 86; 3 Inst. 67, 69; 1 Haw. c. 39, s. 1, 2; 4 Bl. Comm. 221.
(n) East's P. C. 1020; and so (semble) was the burning of a barn simply.
(o) R. v. Donnovan, Leach's C. C. L. 18. Repealed by the stat. 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 30.
(p) R. v. North, East's P. C. 1021. (q) R. v. Breeme, East's P. C. 1021.
(r) East's P. C. 1022. 1033. See East's P. C. tit. BURGLARY.
(s) R. v. Holmes, Cro. Car. 376. W. Jones, 351; 1 Hale, P. C. 568; 3 Inst. 66. The authority of this case was questioned by Mr. J. Foster, who thought that the house might with propriety be considered the house of the landlord; and in R. v. Breeme, East's P. C. 1026, Ld. Mansfield said, that if Holmes' Case had come again in question, he should have been of a different opinion.
(t) R. v. Spalding, East's P. C. 1025; 4 Bl. Comm. 222–3. Poulter's Case, 11 Co. 29. R. v. Scofield, Cald. 397. East's P. C. 1028.
(u) Now repealed, and the stat. 7 & 8 G. 4, c. 30, is substituted; vide supra, 49.

(1) [It is sufficient, if the fire is applied with a malicious intent, so as to take effect, however small a part is consumed. Commonwealth v. Van Schaack, 16 Mass. Rep. 105. The People v. Butler, 16 Johns. 203. The People v. Cotteral & al. 18 Johns. 120.]

(B) (Burning a school-house is arson; State v. Obrien, 2 Root, 516; Jones v. Hungerford, 4 Gill & Johns. 402; Wallace v. Young, 5 Monr. 156; so a common gaol. Stevens v. The Commonwealth, 4 Leigh, 683. The People v. Van Blarcum, 2 Johns. R. 105. Commonwealth v. Posey, 4 Call, 103. See further, State v. Brooks, 4 Conn. 446.)

(x). Where a widow, who was entitled to dower out of a house in the possession of a tenant, which had been mortgaged, her son, being entitled to the equity of redemption, procured another to burn the house, it was held that she was guilty as an accessory before the fact, since the possession was in the tenant on behalf of her son; and her title to dower, supposing the tenant's interest to be out of the case, did not give her even a right of entry (y). And it seems, that even if the prisoner had been entitled to the inheritance, and the tenant had been in possession, she would have been guilty of felony (z). As the offence is against the possession, it is essential to prove that person to be in possession who is alleged in the indictment to be the owner (a). In Glandfield's Case (b), the premises (which were out-houses) were alleged to be the mother's. It appeared in evidence that they were the property of Blanche Silk, widow, the mother, but that one part was occupied jointly by the mother and son, and the rest by the son alone, and the variance was held to be fatal. On an * indictment *51 against the prisoner for burning his own house, with intent to burn the house of A. B. in one count, and of C. D. in another count, it appeared that A. B., the owner of the latter house, had let it to C. D. for ninety-nine years, who had let it to E. F. for one year, who had let it to G. H. for three months, and the variance was held to be fatal (c).

Fourthly. With a felonious intent, &c.—An indictment at common law alleges that the prisoner did the act feloniously, wilfully, and maliciously (d). And although the words maliciously and wilfully were no part of the description of the offence under the stat. 9 Geo. 1, c. 22 (e), yet, in order to oust the offender of his clergy under that statute, it was held that it must appear that the act was wilful and malicious (f). If A. set fire to his own house, with intent to defraud the insurer, and the house of B., his neighbour, be burnt in consequence, and it was likely that this circumstance would happen, A. is guilty of arson, since the common law connects the primary felonious intention with the immediate consequence (g) (A). So if A., intending to burn the house of B., set fire to Felonious intent.

(x) R. v. Gower, East's P. C. 1027. Qu. whether in such a case the pauper could have committed a burglary in the house?

(y) R. v. Ann Course, Foster, 113. (z) Ibid.

(a) R. v. Breeme, Leach's C. C. L. 261. R. v. Spalding, Ib. 258; 11 Co. 29. R. v. Holmes, Cro. Car. 376. Rickman's Case, East's P. C. 1034.

(b) East's P. C. 1034.

(c) R. v. Pedley, Cald. 218; Leach's C. C. L. 277; 1 Hale's P. C. 268; East's P. C. 1026.

(d) See Criminal Plead. 417.

(e) Now repealed; the words of the stat. 7 & 8 G. 4, c. 30, are, unlawfully and maliciously, and with intent to injure or defraud any person.

(f) 1 Hale's P. C. 567, 569; 3 Inst. 67. Minton's Case, East's P. C. 1021. Ib. 1033. Criminal Pl. 419, n. (o).

(g) R. v. Isaac, East's P. C. 1031. The prisoner was indicted for a misdemeanor in setting fire to his own house, whereby the neighbouring and contiguous dwelling-houses of other persons were endangered; and upon its appearing, from the statement by counsel, that the act was done with intent to defraud the insurers, and that the adjoining houses were actually burnt, Buller, J. was of opinion that the misdemeanor was merged in the felony, and directed an acquittal. Note, that at that time the burning a man's own house with intent to defraud an insurer was but a misdemeanor; there was therefore no primary felonious intent. The offence was made felony by the express provisions of the stat. 43 Geo. 3, c. 58, s. 1, and by the subsequent stat. 7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 30, the former act being repealed. And in Probert's Case, East's P. C. 1030, where the prisoner was indicted and convicted of a misdemeanor for having set fire to his own house, and thereby endangering contiguous houses, Grose, J. said, on passing sentence, that if any of the contiguous houses had been actually burnt in consequence of the defendant's wilful and malicious act in setting fire to his own house, (which was proved to have been done in order to cheat the insurance office,) it would clearly have amounted to a capital felony.

(A) (See Sullivan v. The State, 5 Stew. & Port. 175. The burning of one's own property unaccompanied with injury to, or a design to injure some other person, is not a punishable offence by common law. Bloss v. Tobey, 2 Pick. 325.)

the house of C., and burn it, this, for the same reason, would be evidence of a felonious intent to burn the house of C. (h), although the house of B. escaped by some accident. So if A. procure B. to burn the house of C. and he does it, and the fire extends to the house of D. and burns it, A. is accessory to burning the house of D. (i). But if it appear that the house of the prosecutor was burnt by the negligence of the prisoner, however gross, or by accident, or even by his committing an unlawful act, which does not amount to a felony, the burning will not amount to arson. As, where an unqualified person, shooting at game, sets fire to the thatch of a house; or where a person is committing a trespass, by shooting at the poultry of another (k), provided he did not mean to steal them. Where the intent is laid to defraud the insurer, the books of the insurance company are not evidence without notice to produce the policy (l). Where the prisoner's goods, in a particular house, had been insured, and a memorandum had been indorsed on the policy, stating that the insured goods had been *52 removed to another house, and the policy had been properly stamped, *but the memorandum had no new stamp; on the trial of the prisoner for setting the latter house on fire, it was objected that the memorandum could not legally be received in evidence for want of a stamp. The case was argued before the twelve Judges, and the prisoner was afterwards discharged (m). Where the indictment was framed under the stat. 43 Geo. 3, c. 58, s. 1 (n), it was held that the act of wilfully burning the property carried within itself sufficient evidence of an intention to injure the owner, without proof of any other act which indicated malice (o); although the principal object of the statute was to comprise the case of a person burning a house of which he was tenant or owner, to the injury of his landlord or neighbour, or to defraud the insurers (p).

General evidence. General Evidence.—In Rickman's Case (q), evidence was adduced that a bed and blankets, which had been taken from the house at the time of the fire, had been in the possession of the prisoners, and had been concealed by them from that time. Buller, J. doubted at first whether such evidence of another felony could be admitted in support of this charge; but, as it seemed to be all one act, although the prisoners came twice to the house fired, which was adjoining to their own, the evidence was admitted. The evidence to prove this offence, as in other cases, resolves itself into the probable motives of the prisoner, his opportunity and means of committing the offence, and his conduct. Where the prisoner is charged with setting fire to his own house, with intent to defraud the insurer, the value of the property as compared with the amount insured, obviously becomes a question of great importance, in order to establish or repel the inference of motive.

Variance. A variance from the ownership, as laid in the indictment, is fatal (r). Upon a charge of burning an out-house the prisoner may be convicted, (h) 1 Hale, 569; 3 Inst. 67; 1 Haw. c. 93, s. 5; East's P. C. 1019.

(i) Plowden, 475; East's P. C. 1019.
(k) 1 Hale, 569; 3 Inst. 67; 1 Haw. c. 39, s. 5; East's P. C. 1019.
(l) R. v. Doran, cor. Kenyon, C. J. 1 Esp. C. 127.
(m) R. v. Gillson, 2 Leach, 1007, 4th edit.; 1 Taunt. 95. Phillips on Evidence, 457.
(n) Now repealed; but the language of the stat. 7 & 8 G. 4, c. 30, is nearly similar, supra, 49, note (i).
(o) Farrington's Case, Russel, 1674. The fact of the prisoner having set his master's mill on fire was clearly proved by his own confession; but it appeared that he was in other respects a harmless inoffensive man, and that he had never had any quarrel with his masters. After conviction, sentence was respited to take the opinion of the Judges upon this clause of the statute; and they held the conviction to be proper, since the burning of the mill must, under the circumstances, have been done with an intention to injure.
(p) Ibid. (q) East's P. C. 1035.
(r) See above, p. 50; and Rickman's Case, East's P. C. 1034; Glandfield's Case, Ib.

although it appear that the out-house was part of a dwelling-house (s). An allegation that the offence was committed in the night-time need not be proved (t).

ASSAULT AND BATTERY.

For the evidence in an action for an assault and battery, see TRESPASS.

An indictment for an assault is supported by evidence of an attempt, with force and violence, to do a corporal hurt to another (u). An indictment for a battery is sustained by evidence of the smallest injury done to the person of a man, in an angry, rude, revengeful or violent manner (x) (A). A previous assault upon the defendant by the prosecutor is evidence in justification (y) under the plea of not guilty. But in order to make this a good justification, *it seems that it ought to appear that the striking by the defendant was in his own defence, and was in proportion to the attack made; and that if A. give B. a slight blow, it will not justify B. in maiming A., or in beating him violently and outrageously, and without a view to his own defence (z) (B). Evidence upon an indictment. *53

Where the defendant is indicted for an assault, with intent to murder, and it appears that if death had ensued it would have amounted to manslaughter only, the defendant should be acquitted on the first count (a).

(s) North's Case, East's P. C. 1021. (t) Minton's Case, Ib.

(u) 1 Haw. b. c. 62. The riding after a plaintiff, and threatening to horsewhip him, so as to compel him to run into a place of shelter, is an assault in law. Martin v. Shepper,[1] 3 C. & P. 373.

(x) 1 Haw. b. c. 62. As by spitting upon him. R. v. Cotesworth, 6 Mod. 172.

(y) Per Holt, C. J., 6 Mod. 172.

(z) Cockcroft v. Smith, 2 Salk. 642. In an action for assault, battery and mayhem, the plea of son assault demesne was held to be a good plea, because it might be such an assault as endangered the party's life; but upon the question what assault was sufficient to maintain such a plea in mayhem, Holt, C. J. said that Wadham and Wyndham, Justices, would not allow it if it was an unequal return, but that the practice had been otherwise, and was fit to be settled; that for every assault he did not think it reasonable that a man should be banged with a cudgel; and that the meaning of the plea was, that he struck in his own defence. That if A. strike B., and B. strike again, and they close immediately, and in the scuffle B. maims A., that is son assault; but, if upon a little blow given by A. to B., B. give him a blow that maims him, that is not son assault demesne. See 11 Mod. 43, S. C.

(a) Per Ld. Kenyon, R. v. Mytton, East's P. C. 411 Bacon's Case, 1 Lev. 146; 1 Sid. 230; Stanndf. 17. But if there be but one count, semble the defendant may be found guilty of the assault simply. See Crim. Pl. 388; and R. v. Dawson, cor. Holroyd, J., York Summer Ass. 1821, infra, tit. VARIANCE. The same point was also ruled by Hullock, B. York Summ. Ass. 1827; vide infra, tit. VARIANCE. The defendant, a soldier, marching in file along the Strand, wantonly jostled the prosecutor off the pavement, who thereupon struck him with a small stick which he had in his hand, on which the defendant aimed a blow at the prosecutor with his bayonet fixed on his musket, and thrust him under the ear; and Ld. Kenyon, being of opinion that if death had ensued it would have been manslaughter only, directed an acquittal on the first count. R. v. Mytton, East's P. C. 411.

(A) (An assault is an offer to strike, beat or commit an act of violence on the person of another, without actually doing it, or touching his person. A battery is the touching or commission of any actual violence to the person of another in a rude or angry manner. Johnson v. Tompkins, 1 Baldw. 600. If a man raise his arm against another, but accompany the action with words, showing a determination not to strike, it is not an assault. Commonwealth v. Eyre, 1 Serg. & R. 347. See also, The United States v. Hand, 2 Wash. C. C. R. 435. The United States v. Ortega, 4 Wash. C. C. R. 534. It is an assault to attempt to run against the wagon of another on the highway. The People v. Lee, 1 Wheeler's Cr. C. 364. But it is not an assault to point a cane at one in the street, in derision, and for the purpose of insult, but without an intention to strike. Goodwin's Case, 6 Rogers's Rec. 9. Striking anything attached to the person of another as a cane, is a battery. Republica v. De Longchamps, 1 Dall. 111. State v. Davis, 1 Hill, 146. An assault with intent to murder, is not a felony in common law. Commonwealth v. Barlow, 4 Mass. R. 439. A person advising, promoting, or aiding the commission of an assault and battery, is liable, though he were not present at the time the trespass was committed. Bell v. Miller, 5 Ohio, 251. Avery v. Buckley, 1 Root, 275. Sikes v. Johnson, 16 Mass. 389. But if husband and wife join in an assault and battery, he only is liable in damages. Sisco v. Cheeney, Wright, 9. Where persons fail when it is in their power to prevent a merciless battery upon a feeble old man, other slight circumstances may convict them all as principals in the trespass, though they did prevent his being murdered. Gillon v. Wilson, 3 Monr. 217.)

(B) (Gates v. Lounsbury, 20 John. R. 427; Elliott v. Brown, 2 Wend. 497; Baldwin v. Hayden, 6 Conn. 453. State v. Lazarus, 1 Rep. Const. C. 34; Wartrous v. Steel, 4 Verm. 629; Shain v. Markham, 1 J. J. Mash. 578; State v. Wood, 1 Bay. 351.)

[1] Eng Com. Law Reps. xiv. 355.

Assault with intent to rob.

Assault with intent to rob.—In Parfait's Case (b), the indictment charged an assault with a pistol, with intent to rob. It appeared in evidence that the prisoner did not make any demand or motion, or offer to demand the prosecutor's money, but only held a pistol in his hand towards the prosecutor, who was on the coach-box, and bade him stop; and L. C. J. Willes and Chappell, Justices, are said to have held, that the case was not within the act, because, no demand was proved; but the words of the act are in the disjunctive; and where the indictment is framed upon the first branch of it, a demand is unnecessary, and it is for the jury to decide with what intent the assault was made (c).

In Thomas's Case (d) it appeared that the prosecutor, Lowe, was in a chaise, and that the prisoner, after following it for some time, presented a pistol, to Dring, the postboy, bidding him stop, with many violent oaths, but making no demand of money: the carriage stopped, and the prisoner rode up to the chaise, but perceiving that he was pursued, immediately rode away. Upon an indictment for an assault on Lowe with intent to rob him, the prisoner was acquitted, because there was no evidence of an assault upon Lowe. And he was acquitted upon an indictment for an assault on Dring, the postboy, with intent to rob him, because it appeared that there was no intent to rob him; for when he stopped, the prisoner made no demand upon him, but went up to the person in the chaise (e.)

And in the case of Trusty and Howard (f), where the prisoners were *54 indicted *for a felonious assault, with an offensive weapon, with intent to rob, it appeared that one of them, presenting a pistol to the prosecutor, bade him stop, which he did, but called out for assistance; on this the prisoners threatened to blow his brains out if he called out any more, which he nevertheless continued to do, and the men were taken; and, although no demand of money was made, they were convicted and transported. Under this branch of the act it must be proved that the assault was made upon the person whom the prisoner intended to rob. And if the assault be made on A. D., and it appear in evidence that the intent was to rob C. D., the prisoner cannot be convicted.

In Sharwin's Case (g), it was held, that an allegation that the assault was made with an offensive weapon called a wooden staff, was satisfied by evidence of an assault made with a stone (h).

Assault with intent to spoil clothes.

Assault with intent to spoil clothes, &c., 6 Geo. 1, c. 23, s. 66 (i).—In Renwicke Williams's Case (k), a majority of the Judges appear to have been of opinion that a prisoner ought not to be convicted where it appeared in evidence that his primary intention was to injure the person, and not the clothes. But, Buller, Justice, was of a different opinion, relying on the authority of Coke and Woodburn's Case. He considered that the intent of the prisoner was to wound the party, by means of cutting through her clothes; and the jury, whose sole province it was to find the intent, had found that fact. The case was ultimately decided on a different point, and therefore, cannot be considered as a direct authority upon this point. On the other hand, the case of Coke and Woodburn is a most strong and express authority on the other side, and seems to rest upon a very plain and substantial principle of justice, frequently recognized by one of the most (b) East's P. C. 406. Under the stat. 7 G. 2, c. 20. This is now repealed; but the stat. 7 & 8 G. 4, c. 29, s. 6, makes it felony, punishable with transportation for life, &c. to assault with intent to rob, or with menaces, or by force to demand property, with intent to steal, &c.

(c) See East's P. C. 417.

(d) East's P. C. 417; Leach, C. C. L. 372.

(e) East's P. C. 417; Leach, C. C. L. 372.

(f) Sess. Pap. 735; Crim. Pl. 404.

(g) East's P. C. 421.

(h) See Crim. Pl. 85. 405.

(i) See the averments, Crim. Pleadings.

(k) Leach's C. C. L. 597; East's P. C. 424.

enlightened Judges that have presided in our courts; namely, that every man shall be presumed to contemplate that which is the natural and immediate consequence of his act.

Assault on account of money won at play.

Under an indictment for an assault, on account of money won at play (l), it is necessary to adduce proof to show that the assault was made or challenge given on account of money won at play, which is question of fact for the jury; and this may be proved, although the assault was not committed at the time of playing, and although it was not committed till the day after (m). The prosecutor having lost his money to the defendants, they proposed to depart; the prosecutor objected; and complained that they would not give him an opportunity of recovering his loss: Buller, Justice, directed an acquital, being of opinion, that since the game was over before the assault began, it could not be said to have arisen out of the game, but out of what had been said to the defendants; and that to bring the case within the statute, it was necessary that the assault should arise out of the play, and during the time of the game (n). But in the subsequent case of the King v. Darley (o), it was held that the act was not confined to an assault during the time of play (p); and it was considered to be a question for the *jury, whether a subsequent assault was made on account of the money previously won (q). *55

ASSETS.

Assets.

The principle of distributing assests is, that where there are two funds, and one party may claim under either, but another is confined to one, the former party will primarily be excluded from the latter fund (r).

ASSIGNEE.

For the evidence in an action by the assignee of a bankrupt, see tit. Bankrupt.

For the evidence in an action by an assignee of a reversion or term, see Covenant.

Where a plaintiff brings an action as assignee, and the assignment is put in issue by the pleadings, he must give regular evidence of the different steps, by the production and proof of the requisite deeds, will, or probate, (if the subject-matter be of a chattel interest), according to the circumstances of the case. Where a defendant is sued as the assignee of a term, it is sufficient primâ facie evidence, on the part of the plaintiff, to prove the payment of rent by the defendant, or even to show that he is in possession of the premises (s); for he is not privy to the defendant's title. But if the defendant show that he is but the under-tenant under the original lessee, that will defeat the action, although a reversion of one day only be left in the original lessee (t).

An admission by a lessee that he has assigned the premises to another, is evidence of the fact against himself, although it could not have been effected without an instrument in writing (u).

(l) Under the stat. 9 Ann. c. 14. See Crim. Pleadings, 407, and the stat. there cited.
(m) R. v. Darley, 4 East, 174.
(n) R. v. Randall and others, East's P. C. 423. (o) 4 East, 174.
(p) Ld. Ellenborough observed, that it more frequently happened that such disputes did not arise till after the play was over.
(q) Heath, J., who tried the question, left it to the jury to say whether the result was committed on account of the abusive language used at the time, or on account of the money won the day before.
(r) 2 Powell on Dev. by Jarman, 30.
(s) Doe v. Parker, cor. Ld. Kenyon, Stafford Summ. Ass. 1788, Peake's Ev. 304. Holford v. Hatch, Doug. 133. Hare v. Cator, Cowp. 766.
(t) Ibid. (u) Doe v. Watson,[1] 2 Starkie's C. 230.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. iii. 328.

ASSUMPSIT (x).

The essentials to this action (y), to the proof of which the plaintiff may be put by proper pleas, are a promise by the defendant (A), as stated in the declaration, founded upon a sufficient consideration (B) (z), and in some instances the performance of conditions precedent by himself and a breach of that promise by the defendant. The declaration is either upon a special contract, or upon a general indebitatus assumpsit.

Proof of the promise.

A special promise may be proved; 1st. By a written agreement. 2dly. In some instances by oral evidence. Or, 3dly. It results from the special circumstances of the case.

*56

Written agreement.

First. By a written agreement.*—In order to establish a written contract, the plaintiff, if he have it in his possession, must produce it, and prove it by evidence of the defendant's signature (a); or by the evidence of the attesting witness, if the instrument be so attested. It may then be read in evidence, provided a proper stamp has been affixed to it (b).

(x) For proofs in actions of special assumpsit on bills of exchange, guaranties, &c., see the titles respectively.

(y) Assumpsit is the proper form of action in all cases of injury from a breach of contract not under seal.

(z) A consideration may consist in any act or omission either beneficial to the defendant, or prejudicial to the plaintiff. See Bunn v. Guy, 4 East's R. 194; March v. Culpepper, Cro. Car. 70; Sturlyn v. Albany, Cro. Eliz. 67; 4 Taunt. 611. It is sufficient if the benefit accrue to a third person at the defendant's request; and it seems that any benefit of value will be sufficient to support a promise. But the consideration must be of some value. A promise in consideration that the plaintiff would make an estate at will to the defendant was held to be insufficient, for the plaintiff might immediately revoke it. 1 Roll. Ab. 23, pl. 29. So the mere performance of an act which the plaintiff was otherwise bound to perform, is not a sufficient consideration. Harris v. Watson, Peake's C. 72. Stilk v. Meyrick, 2 Camp. 317. The allowing the defendant to weigh the plaintiff's boilers will support a promise to return them. Bainbridge v. Firmeston, 1 P. & D. 1.

Natural affection, though sufficient to raise an use, will not support a promise. Brett v. J. S. & Wife, Cro. Eliz. 755; and it is very doubtful whether a mere moral consideration is sufficient. See note to Wennall v. Adney, 3 B. & P. 249; and see the case of Wennall v. Adney, and infra, 69. But the release of a merely equitable right is a good consideration in law. Wells v. Wells, 1 Lev. 273. Thorpe v. Thorpe, Ld. Raym. 663. Contra, Preston v. Christmas, 2 Wils. 87. So the consideration may consist in some loss or damage to the plaintiff himself. As if he forbear a legal suit to the debtor, 1 Roll. Ab. 29. pl. 40. Bond v. Payne, Cro. J. 273. King v. Wills, Str. 873; Cro. J. 47. But the forbearance must either be for some certain or definite, (Mapes v. Sidney, Cro. J. 683. Fisher v. Richardson, Cro. J. 47; 1 Roll. Ab. 23, pl. 25, 26), or at least a reasonable time. Johnson v. Whitcott, 1 Roll. Abr. 24, pl. 33. See also Scott v. Stephens, Sid. 89; Lev. 71; Roll. R. 27. Keech v. Kennegall, 1 Ves. 125. Where the plaintiff was about to enforce a debt of 57*l.* and costs 65*l.*, by an execution against the goods of A., the defendant, in consideration the plaintiff would forbear to execute the writ, promised to pay him 107*l.* in seven days, it was held to be a sufficient consideration to support the promise, and that the action was maintainable. Smith v. Algar,[1] 1 B. & Ad. 603. In assumpsit for breach of an agreement "to remain with the plaintiff two years, for the purpose of learning the business of," &c., held, that there being no stipulation to instruct, and no consideration for the defendant's undertaking, it was not binding on the latter to serve. Lees v. Whitcomb,[2] 5 Bing. 34; 2 M. & P. 80; and 3 C. & P. 289. Again, the consideration must move from the plaintiff. Bourne v. Mason, 1 Vent. 6. Crow v. Rogers, Str. 592; Dutton et ux v. Poole, 2 Lev. 210; 1 Vent. 318, 334. For the very notion of a contract implies mutuality of intention and privity between the parties. A. agrees to pay the rent of tolls hired from the commissioners of a road to the treasurer; the treasurer cannot recover. Pigott v. Thompson, 3 B. & P. 147, infra A. having made a contract with B. to supply him with a carriage for three years, transfers his interest to C., a secret partner; A. and C. cannot jointly sue B., who refuses to continue the contract with C. Robson v. Drummond,[3] 2 B. & Ad. 303. Lastly, the consideration must be legal, vide infra; for it would be against legal policy to sanction in any way an illegal agreement.

(a) The signature of the party would not conclude him without acceptance by the other party; see Payne v. Ives,[4] 3 D. & R. 664; but the very delivery of an absolute undertaking, signed by the defendant, would be evidence of a mutual agreement, till the contrary was shown.

(b) Vide infra, tit. STAMP.—AGREEMENT.

(A) (A promise by A. to B. for the benefit of C., will enable C. to maintain an action against A. Schermerhorn v. Vanderheyden, 1 Johns. R. 139. So an action will lie on an implied promise, though there be also a special one in writing. Gibbs v. Bryant, 1 Pick. R. 118.)

(B) (See Miller v. Drake, 1 Caines R. 45. Powell v. Brown, 3 Johns. R. 100. Gardner v. Hopkins, 5 Wend. 23. In all actions of assumpsit a consideration must be alleged, otherwise no cause of action is shown, and the declaration will be bad after verdict in error. Bender v. Manning, 2 N. Hamp. 289. Moreley v. Jones, 5 Munf. 23. Connolly v. Cottle, 1 Breese, 286.)

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xx. 452. [2]Id. xv. 357. [3]Id. xxii. 81. [4]Id. xvi. 180.

If the written contract has been lost or destroyed, after due proof of its former existence and subsequent loss or destruction, parol evidence may be given of its execution by the defendant, and of its contents (A), such secondary evidence is also admissible where the plaintiff has proved that the instrument is in the possession of the defendant, and that he has had notice to produce it. If parol evidence be given of an agreement proved to have been lost, it should also be proved that it bore a proper stamp (c). But against a party who refused to produce it, a proper stamp would be presumed (d). Proof of written contract.

Parol evidence cannot be received where the instrument was not, when in existence, duly stamped, even although it has been destroyed by the party objecting to the want of a stamp (e).

Secondly. By oral evidence.*—An oral contract, agreeing with that stated in the declaration, may be proved by any witness who was present at the time, or who heard the defendant admit the existence of such a contract. In two classes of cases, however, parol evidence is inadmissible: first, where the parties have condescended upon a written contract, for that is the best and only evidence of the intention of the parties, so long as it exists, that can be produced; and when it is lost, or in the hands of the defendant, who refuses to produce it after notice, secondary evidence is to be given of its contents; secondly, where written evidence of the contract is expressly required by the Statute of Frauds (f). *57 Proof of the contract by oral testimony.

Where a party proposes to prove that which has been agreed on in writing, it is necessary to produce the writing as being the best evidence (g).

(c) Supra, Vol. I. Index, tit. Stamp. Goodier v. Lake, 1 Atk. 246. R. v. Sir T. Culpepper, Skinn. 677.

(d) Crisp v. Anderson,[1] 1 Starkie's C. 35.

(e) Rippiner v. Wright, 2 B. & A. 478. Non constat that the commissioners would have stamped it on payment of the penalty.

(f) Infra. Frauds, Statute of.

(g) See vol. I. and Index, tit. Best Evidence, and infra. tit. Parol Evidence. In an action for work and labour in building, &c., it appeared that there was an agreement in writing, relating to the claim, and it was held that the plaintiff could not proceed without producing it, nor recover for items as extras proceeded on even after an admission by the defendant that they were such, and which the written instrument might furnish a means of ascertaining the amount to be paid for: the course would be highly inconvenient if the Judge were to be called upon to look into it, to ascertain whether items alleged to be extras were or were not to be included in it. Vincent v. Cole,[2] 1 Mo. & M. 257, and 3 C. & P. 481. Where, after the plaintiff had made out and closed his case, it appeared from the defendant's evidence that there existed a written contract, but which, for want of being properly stamped, he was unable legally to produce; it was held that the plaintiff could not be nonsuited for its non-production, upon the mere assertion of the defendant, since the written instrument, if produced, might have turned out not to apply to the contract in question. Fielder v. Ray,[3] 6 Bing. 332, and 4 C. & P. 61. Where, in an action for work and labour in printing, the case was opened on the quantum meruit, without stating that there was a special contract; after which, the defendant having proved that the plaintiff had agreed to do the work at a certain sum, the plaintiff proposed to show the special contract, which was different from that set up by the defendant; it was held that he could not be permitted to abandon the cause of action first relied on, and resort to that which he ought to have set up in the outset, nor be allowed to impeach that proved by the defendant. Soulby v. Pickford,[4] 2 Moore & P. 545. Where one of the parties to an agreement, after its execution, and within the twenty-one days allowed for stamping it, obtained possession of it, and swore it was lost, the Court ordered him to produce a copy in his possession to be taken to the Stamp-office, and that if the plaintiff should produce the same on the trial, stamped, the defendant should not be permitted to produce the original agreement. Bousfield v. Godfrey,[5] 5 Bing. 418. Where a written agreement refers specifically to a plan, if there be clear and satisfactory

(A) (Cauffman v. Congregation of Cedar Spring, 6 Binn. 59. Jackson v. Neely, 10 John. R. 376. But proof of a voluntary and deliberate destruction of a note by a plaintiff will not let in parol evidence of its contents. Blade v. Noland, 12 Wend. 173. Riggs v. Tayloe, 9 Wheat. 483. But the bare circumstance of the party not having it in his power to produce a paper, is not sufficient reason for admitting parol evidence. It will always be a question whether with proper exertions he might not have had it in his power; and sometimes it will be a question, whether if the paper be in existence, its production is not indispensable. It seems there is no case where parol evidence has been admitted merely because the paper is in the hands of a third person, and a subpœna duces tecum has been refused. Gray v. Pentland, 2 Serg. & R. 31. See also McCalley v. Franklin, 2 Yeates, 340. Hamilton v. Van Swearingen, Addis. 48.)

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. ii. 283. [2]Id. xiv. 400. [3]Id. xix. 94. [4]Id. xvii. 216. [5]Id. xv. 485.

In an action for use and occupation, it appeared upon cross-examination that there was an agreement in writing, which had not been stamped, and the plaintiff was nonsuited (h). The rule does not apply where a mere memorandum has been made in writing, preparatory to an agreement, but which has not been signed as an agreement (i). Upon the letting of premises to a tenant, a memorandum of an agreement was drawn up, the terms of which were read over, and assented to by him; and it was agreed that he should, on a future day, bring a surety, and sign the agreement, which he never did: it was held that the memorandum was not an agreement, but a mere unaccepted proposal, and that the terms might be proved by parol evidence (i). So where a verbal contract is made for the sale of goods, and is put into writing afterwards by the vendor's agent, for the purpose of assisting his recollection, but the memorandum is not signed by *58 the vendor, it need not *be produced (k). The plaintiff in ejectment having made out a primâ facie case, by proof of a payment of rent, and notice to quit, it appeared upon cross-examination of his witness, that an agreement relative to the same land had been given in evidence on a former trial between the same parties, and had been seen the same morning in the hands of the plaintiff's attorney, the contents of which the witness did not know; no notice having been given by the defendant to produce that paper, it was held that the plaintiff was not bound to produce it; for although it was an agreement relative to the land it might not at all effect the question between the parties (l).

From special circumstances.

Thirdly. Where the promise results from the special circumstances of the case, those circumstances must be proved; as, where the plaintiff declares upon a contract by the defendant, as his tenant, to use the farm in a husbandlike manner, according to the customary course of good husbandry in that part of the country, the plaintiff must prove that the defendant occupied the lands in question as his tenant, and the promise results as an inference of law from the premises (m) (A).

parol evidence to identify it, it is admissible for that purpose; where however it was not satisfactorily shown to the Court that the parties had agreed upon either of two suggested, the Court held that it was properly refused. Hodges v. Horsfall, 1 Russ. & M. 116.

(h) Brewer v. Palmer, 3 Esp. 213, cor. Ld. Eldon; and see Jeffery v. Walton,[1] 1 Starkie's C. 267.

(i) Doe v. Cartwright, 3 B. & A. 326.

(k) Dalison v. Stark, 4 Esp. C. 163. See Doe v. Morris, 12 East, 236; 3 B. & A. 326.

(l) Doe dem. Wood v. Morris, 12 East, 237. See also Doe v. Pearson, Ibid. 238, where in a similar case it appeared, on cross-examination of the plaintiff's witness, that an agreement as to the time of quitting did exist, and the objection that the plaintiff was bound to produce it was overruled by Chambre, J. See also Buell v. Cook, 5 Conn. Rep. 206. And where the plaintiff, in an action for work and labour, proved his case, and the defendant's witness proved that a written agreement had been entered into, but had not been stamped, and the defendant had given no notice to produce it, it was held that the plaintiff's case was not disturbed. Stevens v. Pinney,[2] 2 Moore, 439. Sed quære, the general rule seems to be, that where the subject-matter of proof is vouched by a written contract, it ought to be produced and proved by the party who relies on the contract. Where the master had undertaken, by the bill of lading, to deliver goods to the consignee on payment of freight, it was held that he could not maintain an action for not unloading in a reasonable time, on an implied contract. Evans v. Forster,[3] 1 B. & Ad. 118. And see Brouncker v. Scott, 4 Taunt. 1. Where a party engaged to perform works under a written contract, during which a separate order was given for other work, it was held that it was not necessary to produce the written contract. Reid v. Batte,[4] 1 Mood. & M. C. 413. In an action for not delivering goods, manufactured by the defendant in pursuance of an order signed by the plaintiff only, the precise terms of the contract, and the defendant's accession to it, may be proved by parol. Ingram v. Lea, 2 Camp. C. 521. An assignee of a lease, who has been compelled by distress to pay rent due before, the lessee having granted the lease by deed of assignment with the usual covenant for quiet enjoyment, cannot recover on an implied promise. Baber v. Hamil, P. & D. 360.

(m) Powley v. Walker, 5 T. R. 373; Legh v. Hewitt, 4 East, 154. So in special actions against carriers,

(A) (Assumpsit will not lie to recover the value of specific articles, in the possession of one person, which are claimed by another. Willet v. Willet, 3 Watts' R. 277.)

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps, ii. 385. [2]Id. iv. 117. [3]Id. xx. 354. [4]Id. xxii. 343.

*The plaintiff must establish his right of action, and contract, in evidence, as set forth in the declaration; and a variance in any circumstance that is essential to the contract will be fatal (n) (A). Variance.

It is now perfectly well established, that a misjoinder of plaintiffs is a ground of nonsuit, as also is a joinder of too many defendants; but that the omission of any party who jointly promised, must be pleaded in abatement (o). Where the action is brought by several, or against several, it must appear either that the promise was so expressly made (B), or that the plaintiffs in the one case, or the defendants in the other, were partners, and that the contract was made in behalf of all: this is a consequence which usually follows, from proof of the partnership itself (p). In order to establish the fact of partnership, it is sufficient even for the plaintiffs to prove that they have carried on business as partners, without proving the partnership deeds. Parties.

The allegation of a contract between the plaintiff and defendant, is proved by evidence of a contract made between their agents on their behalves (q).

&c., where the alleged promise is a legal duty resulting from the nature of the particular service which the defendant has undertaken to perform, it is sufficient to prove the original undertaking. Nelson v. Aldridge,[1] 2 Starkie's C. 435. Although (as it seems) the declaration allege a specific promise to do or omit that which in performance of the general duty, the defendant was bound to do or omit. Ibid. And therefore, where the declaration alleged an undertaking on the part of an auctioneer, employed to sell goods, not to rescind a contract made by him as such auctioneer, &c., it was held, that general evidence of employment was sufficient. Ibid. In Witherington v. Buckland, Cas. Temp. Hardw. 309, Lord Hardwicke is reported to have said, that where the plaintiff does not declare on any general custom, but on a special contract, the contract must be proved as laid. But in that case, where the plaintiff had declared on an undertaking to repair and enlarge a house, and particularly a certain room in the house called the club-room, it appeared that the defendant had been employed not by the plaintiff, but by an insurance company, except as to some alterations in the club-room, and therefore the plaintiff was nonsuited. Promises in law exist in those cases only where there is no special agreement between the parties. Per Buller, J. Toussaint v. Martinnant, 2 T. R. 100. An agreement to grant a lease contains no implied engagement for general warranty, nor for delivery of an abstract of the lessor's title. Gwillim v. Stone, 3 Taunt. 433. Temple v. Brown,[2] 6 Taunt. 60; vide infra, Vendor and Vendee. A party agreeing to let, virtually undertakes to give possession, and not a mere right of action; where therefore the premises were held over by a preceding occupier, it was held that the plaintiff was not driven to his ejectment, but might support an action for breach of agreement. Coe v. Clay,[3] 5 Bing. 440.

(n) 1 T. R. 140; Gilb. Law. Ev. 229. Shute v. Hornsey, Doug. 643. Bristow v. Wright, Doug. 640. Grant v. Astle, Doug. 695; 3 T. R. 646.

(o) B. N. P. 152; 2 M. & S. 23; 2 Str. 820. Wilsford v. Wood, 1 Esp. 183. A joint contractor must be sued, although he be a certificated bankrupt. Bevil v. Wood, 2 M. & S. 23.

(p) See tit. Partners.

(q) See tit. Agent—Partners—Set-off—Vendor and Vendee. In general an action may be brought either in the name of the person with whom the contract was made, or in the name of the party really interested, (Skinner v. Stocks, 4 B. & A. 437) (C); and therefore joint owners of a vessel employed in the whale fishery may sue a purchaser of whale oil, although the contract of sale was made by one of the part-owners,

(A) (A contract must be proved as laid in the declaration. Crawford v. Morrell, 8 John. R. 253; Goulding v. Skinner, 1 Pick. 162. The rule is, that a trivial variation, in setting out a contract or written instrument is fatal, if the plaintiff has it in his possession, or can by due exertions obtain it. Dunbar v. Jumper, 2 Yeates, 74.)

(B) An allegation of a several promise is not proved by evidence of a joint one, or that of a joint promise by evidence of a several one. Conolly v. Cottle, 1 Breese, 287; Erwin v. Devine, 1 J. J. Mash. 205; Musgrave v. Gibbs, 1 Dall. 216; Latshaw v. Steinman, 11 Serg. & R. 357.)

(C) (A verbal promise made by one party to another that the promiser will pay to a third party, may be enforced by an action in the name of the latter, wherever as between the contracting parties there is a legal obligation, and the payee was not a stranger to the consideration. Clarke v. M'Farland's Exrs. 5 Dana, 45. When a promise is made to A. for the benefit of B., either of them may sue for a breach of it. U. S. v. Kennan, Peters' C. C. R. 169. A promise by a debtor to his creditor to pay his debt to a third person, will not enable such person to maintain an action in his own name to recover it. Owings v. Owings, 1 Harr. & Gill, 484.)

[See Upton v. Gray, 2 Greenleaf, 373. Bickerton v. Burrell, 5 M. & S. 383. Rathbone v. Budlong, 15 Johns. 1. Vischer v. Yeates, 11 Johns. 23. Sargent v. Morris,[4] 3 B. & A. 281. Per Bayley, J. Motley & al. v. Rogerson, Metcalf's Digest, 263. Duke of Norfolk v. Worthy, 1 Camp. 337.]

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. iii. 419. [2]Id. i. 306. [3]Id. xv. 492. [4]Id. v. 282.

A contract alleged as between the plaintiff and defendant, is not proved by evidence of a contract between the plaintiff and a deceased partner with the defendant; but it is sufficient to prove that the defendant and a deceased partner made the contract with the plaintiff (r).

Where the plaintiffs sue in a particular capacity, as where they sue as assignees of a bankrupt upon promises to the bankrupt, they must, under the general issue, prove their title to sue as assignees (s).

Promise. The contract consists of the promise itself, and the consideration on which it is founded. A promise alleged absolutely is not supported by proof of a promise in the alternative (t) (A). The allegation of a promise to deliver forty bags of wheat immediately, and the remainder of one hundred bags on the next market-day, is not supported by proof of a promise to deliver forty or fifty bags immediately, and the residue on the next market-day (u). So an absolute promise varies from a conditional promise (x).

*60 *The allegation of a promise to pay the amount of a promissory note on Variance. the death of J. S., is not supported by proof of a promise to pay the amount Promise. on the death of J. S., provided he left the party sufficient, or he was able to pay it (y).

So if the plaintiff allege a promise by the defendant to sell his tallow to the plaintiff at four shillings per stone, and prove an agreement by the defendant to sell his tallow to the plaintiff at four shillings per stone, but that if the plaintiff gave more to any other person, he should give the same to the defendant (z).

An agreement to pay 20*l.* if a given number should be drawn on a given day, varies from an agreement to deliver an undrawn ticket, or pay 20*l.* (a). One of two pleas of usury stated the forbearance to be until September 1st, 1785; the second until January 1st, 1786. The evidence was an agreement of forbearance till either of those days; and it was held that the evidence did not support either of the pleas (b).

Subject-matter. So a variance as to the subject-matter contracted for will be fatal. A declaration on a promise to deliver good merchantable wheat, is not supported by evidence of an agreement to deliver good second-sort of wheat (c) (B). A contract to deliver soil or breeze, varies from a contract and the purchaser did not know any other person in the transaction. The statutes of set-off do not prevent the action from being maintainable in the names of all the parties interested. Ibid. So in case of policies of insurance. Ibid. See Lloyd v. Archbowle, 3 Taunt. 324. Mawman v. Gillett, Ib. 325.

(r) Richards v. Heather, 1 B. & A. 29. Hyat v. Hare, Comb. 383. Smith v. Barrow, 2 T. R. 479. Slipper v. Stidstone, 5 T. R. 493. Contra, Spalding v. Mure, 6 T. R. 363. See Rice v. Shute, 5 Burr. 2663. Whelpdale's Case, 5 Rep. 109. (s) See tit. BANKRUPT.

(t) 8 East, 8; 2 B. & P. 116. In assumpsit on the warranty of a horse, the consideration stated for the warranty was, that the plaintiff would purchase the horse for 63*l.*, but the consideration as proved was, that the plaintiff would pay that sum, and if the horse was lucky, would give the defendant 5*l.* more, or the buying of another horse: held no variance, the conditional promise omitted in the declaration being too vague to be legally enforced, and not amounting in point of law to a promise. Guthing v. Lynn,[1] 2 B. & Ad. 232.

(u) Penny v. Porter, 2 East, 2; 8 East, 8. White v. Wilson, 2 B. & P. 116. Shipham v. Sanders, 2 East, 4.

(x) Churchill v. Wilkins, 1 T. R. 447. Layton v. Pearce, Doug. 14.

(y) Roberts v. Peake, 1 Burr. 325. The court were of this opinion, but the case was not decided on this point.

(z) Churchill v. Wilkins, 1 T. R. 447. (a) Layton v. Pearce, Doug. 14.

(b) By Lord Kenyon, and Buller, and Grose, Js., Tate v. Willing, 5 T. R. 531.

(c) Ld. Ray. 735.

(A) (A contract in the alternative must be so set forth, or the variance will be fatal. Russell v. South Britain Society, 9 Conn. 508; Hatch v. Adams, 8 Cow. 35; Stone v. Knowlton, 3 Wend. 374; Trask v. Duval, 4 Wash. C. C. R. 97. If the money counts allege the promise to have been made to pay on demand with interest, the action cannot be maintained unless an express promise to pay interest is proved. Tappan v. Austin, 1 Mass. R. 31.)

(B) (Where the declaration stated a contract of warranty to be of a good and superior quality, to wit, to deliver soil (d). A contract to carry goods, and deliver them to A. B. the plaintiff, varies from a contract to carry goods and deliver them to J. S. (e). A contract to deliver so many bushels of corn varies from a contract to deliver so many bushels, according to a particular measure, which is greater than the Winchester measure, since by the bushel generally, the Winchester bushel must be understood (f).

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxii. 63.

It is no variance that the defendant promised some other distinct matter in addition to that alleged, since the proof supports the declaration as far as is requisite (g). It is true that the defendant did promise that which is alleged, although he further promised some other thing in addition; therefore a declaration on a contract to pay 52*l.* 10*s.* for rum-money, is supported by proof of a note, by which the defendant undertook to pay the plaintiff 52*l.* 10*s.*, together with a pint of rum per day (h). So a promise to deliver a horse which should be worth 80*l.*, and be a young horse, is supported by proof of a promise to deliver a horse which should be worth 80*l.*, and be a young horse, with a warranty that it had never been in harness (i).

It is no variance that a part of the contract has not been alleged which merely regards some collateral engagement as to the subject-matter of the contract. The declaration alleged that the defendant bought of the plaintiff

(d) Cook v. Munstone, 1 N. R. 351.
(e) Leery v. Goodson, 4 T. R. 687.
(f) Hockin v. Cooke, 4 T. R. 314. See the stat. 12 Hen. 7, c. 5; 22 Car. 2, c. 8.
(g) Cotterell v. Cuff, 4 Taunt. 285. Tempest v. Rawling, 13 East, 630. For other instances, see tit. VARIANCE.
(h) Baptiste v. Cobbold, 1 B. & P. 7.
(i) Miles v. Sheward, 8 East, 7. [See Godb. 154, pl. 202. Yelv. 57 note (1), and cases there cited.]

prime quality winter oil, and the proof was that the defendant warranted the oil to be prime quality winter oil, it was held not to be a variance. Hastings v. Lowring, 2 Pick. 214. A promise to pay $9 25 a month for twelve months work, was held not to be supported by proof of a promise to pay $92 50 for ten months work. Cranmer v. Graham, 1 Blackf. 406. The declaration was on a promise to pay $100 for improvements. Proof of a promise, if the promisor should obtain a contract for the land, is a fatal variance. Lower v. Winters, 7 Cow. 263. If a promissory note in the French language is declared on as if it were in English, the variance is immaterial. Lambert v. Blackman, 1 Blackf. 59. Where a note was made payable to the payee or his order, if he declare on it, as payable to himself, it is not a material variance. Fay v. Goulding, 10 Pick. 122. Proof of a note dated the 26th of July does not support a declaration stating a note dated on the 25th—the date is a material part of a note. Stephens v. Graham, 7 Serg. & R. 505.)

[A declaration for the sale and delivery of pine timber is not supported by evidence of the sale and delivery of spruce timber. Robbins v. Otis, 1 Pick. 368. A declaration alleging that certain machines were warranted to be good and merchantable, is not supported by proof that they were warranted to be equal to any in America. Goulding & al. v. Skinner & al. 1 Pick. 162. Where a declaration stated, that in consideration the plaintiff would deliver a certain note to a third person, there to remain until the defendant should pay a note given by the plaintiff to A. the defendant promised the plaintiff to save him harmless, &c.—and the evidence was that the plaintiff agreed to deliver the note to a third person, and let it remain until he should return from a journey, and that in consideration, &c. the defendant promised; the variance was held to be fatal. Colt v. Root, 17 Mass. Rep. 229. The plaintiff cannot give in evidence an entire contract relating to two distinct subjects, when he declares only as to one of them. Crawford v. Morrell, 8 Johns. 253; and where the contract declared on was that the defendant should pay for half the land for a highway, and the contract proved was that he should pay for all the land, it was held to be a fatal variance. Ibid. A declaration on a promise to deliver cloth to the plaintiff is not supported by the evidence of a contract to deliver cloth at the defendant's factory. Clark v. Todd, 1 Chip. 213. A note payable at sixty days cannot be given in evidence to support a count which does not state when the note was payable. Sheehy v. Mandeville, 7 Cranch, 208. In New Jersey a declaration on a contract to carry salt for $1 87½ per tierce, was supported by evidence of a written agreement to carry it for fifteen shillings, and by proof, that by the currency of New York, the amount was the same. Salter v. Kirkbride, 1 Southard's Rep. 223. And in action on a promise of indemnity, alleging that A. had recovered a certain sum against the plaintiff, proof of the recovery of a different sum by A. was held not to be a fatal variance, because the recovery was stated by way of inducement, and not as the ground of the suit. Ripsher v. Shane, 3 Yeates, 575. See also Livingston v. Swanwick, 2 Dallas, 300. Cunningham v. Kimball, 7 Mass. Rep. 65. United States v. Colt, 1 Peters' Rep. 153. Ferguson v. Harwood, 7 Cranch, 408. Henry v. Henry, 1 Chip. 265. Silver v. Kendrick, 2 N. Hamp. Rep. 160. Porter v. Talcott, 1 Cowen, 359. Wroe v. Washington, 1 Wash. 351.]

a quantity of East India rice, according to the conditions of sale of the East India Company, at a specified price, to be put up at the next Company's sale, if required; and it appeared in evidence, that in addition to those conditions, the rice was to be sold per sample; it was held that this was no variance, for it was not a description of the commodity, but a collateral engagement that it should be of a particular quality (k).

*61 Consideration.

*In assumpsit, the consideration is of so entire a nature, that not only must it be proved to the extent alleged, but an omission to allege any part is fatal; for if any part be omitted, then the basis of the promise is misdescribed (A). It is not true, as stated, that the defendant's promise was founded upon the consideration alleged, when it was in fact founded upon that and something else, which is also essential to its support (l). An averment that stock was to be transferred on request, is not proved by evidence that it was to be transferred on a particular day (m).

An allegation of an executory consideration is not proved by evidence of an executed consideration, though it is otherwise where an executed consideration is alleged, and the law implies the promise (n). An averment that a note was given in repayment of monies paid, is not satisfied by proof of a note given to secure money to be paid (o). So if the moral obligation on which the action is founded is misdescribed (p).

So where the declaration alleged an agreement to sell goods expected by the Fanny Almira, and the agreement proved was for the goods expected by the Fanny and Almira (q). So an agreement alleged to be for the delivery of all merchandisable skins, varies from the proof of a contract to deliver all merchandisable calf-skins (r).

(k) Parker v. Palmer, 4 B. & A. 387. The goods did not correspond with the samples, but after seeing the samples the defendant had taken upon himself the disposition of the goods, and had put them up to sale at a limited price, and bought them in again, and the Court held that after this he could not repudiate the contract; and the jury found that he had not repudiated the contract within a reasonable time; therefore the sale was in effect complete. So where the plaintiff declared that the defendant had agreed to buy of the plaintiff a large quantity of head-matter and sperm oil, in the possession of the plaintiff, and the contract proved was for the purchase of all the head-matter and sperm oil per the Wildman, it was held that there was no variance, for the allegations were proved as far as they went, and the additional matter proved (that it was oil by the Wildman) was immaterial; it did not qualify or annex any condition to what was stated. Wildman v. Glossop, 1 B. & A. 9. So if part of the contract has not been alleged, which merely regards the liquidation of damages after a right has accrued by a breach of the contract; for it is matter of evidence only in reduction of damages. Clarke v. Gray, 6 East, 564. In an action against a carrier it is not necessary to allege the limitation of his responsibility by notice. Ibid. See 1 Starkie's C. 267.[1] In an action of assumpsit for breach of an agreement for the assignment of a lease, alleging that the defendant had no title to assign, held that it was no variance that the declaration did not set out a clause in the agreement restraining the plaintiff from carrying on a certain trade in general terms, that not forming any part of the consideration. M'Allen v. Churchill,[2] 11 Moore, 483.

(l) Swallow v. Beaumont, 2 B. & A. 265.

(m) Bordenave v. Gregory, 5 East, 111.

(n) 3 Lev. 98. Com. Dig. Action on the Case.—Assumpsit [F.] 6.

(o) Amory v. Merreyweather,[3] 2 B. & C. 573.

(p) The declaration alleged that the plaintiff had supplied goods to Elizabeth S. to the amount of 16*l.* and that in consideration of the premises and of the said sum being unpaid, the said E. S. afterwards promised to pay as soon as it was in her power; averment, that though it was afterwards in her power, she refused. The proof was, that the goods were supplied to her when she was a feme covert, living apart from her husband, and that she after his death promised to pay. Held, that as the price of the goods originally constituted a debt from the husband and not from the defendant, the ground of the supposed moral obligation, on which the assumpsit proceeded, was not properly set out in the declaration, and therefore the plaintiff could not recover. Semble, that a moral obligation is not in every case a sufficient consideration for a promise. Littlefield, Executrix, v. Shee,[4] 2 B. & Ad. 811.

(q) Boyd v. Siffkin, 2 Camp. 326.

(r) B. N. P. 145.

(A) (The words for value received in setting forth a promissory note in a declaration are words of description; and if not proved the variance is fatal. Saxton v. Johnson, 10 John. R. 418. Rossiter v. Marsh, 4 Conn. R. 196. But see Wilson v. Codman, 3 Cranch, 193. McWilliams v. Smith, 1 Call. 123. See also Welch v. Lindo, 7 Cranch, 159. Chitty on Bills, 583 (8th Ed.) Bulkley v. Landon, 2 Conn. R. 404. Fouquet v. Hoadley, 3 Conn. R. 534. Robertson v. Lynch, 18 John. 451. Bender v. Manning, 2 N. Hamp. R. 289.)

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. ii. 385. [2] Id. xxii. 418. [3] Id. ix. 183. [4] Id. xxii. 187.

In an action against a carrier, if the contract be alleged to be to carry from A. to B., the termini are material, and must be proved as laid (s).

*It is in all cases sufficient to prove the promise alleged according to the substance and legal effect of the allegation. Where the declaration alleged an agreement to purchase eight tons of hemp under a videlicet, and the contract proved was for the purchase of about eight tons; and it also appeared that after the contract the hemp had been weighed, and amounted to eight tons, it was held that the variance was not material, for when the weight had been ascertained, the contract was in effect for eight tons (t). *62

Variance. Substance and legal effect.

A variance as to the time and place of the contract is not material (A), unless they be made part of the description of a written instrument (u). But where a particular sum, magnitude or quantity, is part of the contract, and the allegation is material, it must be proved as laid, though it be averred under a videlicet. Thus, where the defendant averred that the plaintiff held certain lands of him as his tenant, at a certain rent, to wit, at 110*l.* rent, payable half-yearly; upon non-tenet pleaded, it appeared that the land had been let by a written contract at 15*s.* per acre, and that the whole amounted to 111*l.*; the variance was held to be material (x).

Time, place, magnitude, &c.

(s) Tucker v. Cracklin,[1] 2 Starkie's C. 387. So where a sailor declared for wages, and the average price of a negro slave, due to him in consideration of service during a certain voyage, to wit, "A voyage from London to the coast of Africa, and from thence to the West Indies," and in the articles it was described as "A voyage from London to the Coast of Africa, from thence to the West Indies or America, and afterwards to London in Great Britain, or to some delivering port in Europe," the variance was held to be fatal, notwithstanding the scilicet. White v. Wilson, 2 B. & P. 116. So a declaration which alleges a retainer to cause the plaintiff's ship to proceed to Gottenburgh, in order that she might afterwards proceed to Petersburgh, is not proved by evidence of a retainer to cause the ship to proceed to Gottenburgh, and afterwards, under certain conditions, to Petersburgh. Lopez v. De Tastet,[2] 1 B. & B. 538. In the case of Frith v. Gray, 4 T. R. 561, n., in an action for not building the plaintiff a booth at a horse-race to be run on Barnet Common, in the county of Middlesex, it was proved that the whole of Barnet Common was in the county of Hertford. But Lord Mansfield and the rest of the Court, on a motion for a new trial on the ground of variance, held that as it was perfectly immaterial whether Barnet Common was in Middlesex or not, those words might be rejected as surplusage: tam. qu. A warranty to buy a horse at a certain price, scil. 86*l.* 5*s.*, is not supported by evidence of a warranty upon the purchase of two horses jointly for the sum of 60 guineas. Hart v. Davis, N. P. Dec. 1796.

(t) Gladstone v. Neale, 13 East, 409. So where the alleged promise was to deliver stock on the 27th of February, but the contract proved was to deliver stock on the settling day, which at the time was fixed for and understood by the parties to mean the 27th of February, it was held that the proof was sufficient, the contract proved being in substance the same with that alleged. Wilks v. Gordon, 2 B. & A. 335. So an allegation of a contract for the delivery of gum-senegal is supported by evidence of a contract for the delivery of rough gum-senegal, coupled with evidence that all gum-senegal, on its arrival in this country is called rough. Silver v. Heseltine,[3] 1 Chitty's R. 39; vide infra, 63, note (z).

(u) Where the promise was laid on the 24th of March, and to a plea of tender, the plaintiff replied a bill filed on the 12th of February; upon the objection being taken, the Court held that the day was alleged merely for form, and that the plaintiff would not have been confined to it in evidence; but, that if it had been the case of a note it would have been different, since then the day would have been an essential part of the agreement (Matthews v. Spicer, Str. 806); and semble, not even then, unless it had amounted to a misdescription of the instrument, by alleging that it bore date on sueh a day. Where an action was brought on a note dated 1704, and the replication alleged a bill filed in 1713, and that the cause of action arose within six years, it was held to be a departure because the day was material, and judgment was arrested. Stafford v. Farrer, cited Stra. 22. [See Ballentine on Limitations, chap. x. 1 Chit Pl. 622, 623. Yelv. 71, note (2).]

(x) Brown v. Sayer, 4 Taunt. 320. Mansfield, C. J. observed, that the record would certainly be evidence as to the amount of the rent between the same parties in another action. So where the plaintiff alleged that he had agreed to sell, and that the defendant had agreed to buy, certain goods and merchandises, to wit, 328 chests and 30 half-chests of oranges and lemons, at and for a certain price, to wit, the price of 623*l.* 3*s.* and the contract proved was for 308 chests and 30 half-chests of China oranges, and 20 chests of lemons; it

(A) (Where the time of doing a thing is material it must be proved as laid. Aliter where the time is immaterial, Drown v. Smith, 3 New Hamp. 301. Perry v. Botsford, 5 Pick. 189. See, also, Hollingsworth v. Fry, 4 Dall. 345. M'Crelish v. Churchman, 4 Rawl. 26. A variance in the date, or in the substance of a note offered in evidence, from that set out in the statement, is a fatal objection to such evidence. Church v. Feterow, 2 Penn. 301. In a declaration on a former note, the omission of the place where it is payable is fatal. Sebree v. Dorr, 9 Wheat. 558; but see Bank of the U. S. v. Smith, 11 Wheat, 171.)

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. iii. 394. [2] Id. v. 180. [3] Id. xviii. 23.

Variance. * And even where it is unnecessary to allege the precise sum, quantity or magnitude, yet if it be alleged without a videlicet, precise proof will, it seems, be necessary. Thus where the declaration in an action on a warranty of soundness on the sale of sheep, alleged the consideration for the purchase to be 54*l.* 11*s.* 6*d.*, and it turned out to be 54*l.* 19*s.* 6*d.*, the variance was held to be fatal (y).

So where the consideration was alleged to be the forbearance of 21*l.* 6*s.* without a videlicet, and the proof was of a forbearance of 20*l.* 18*s.*, the variance was held to be fatal (z).

But where the declaration alleged that S. F., the father of the defendant, was indebted to the plaintiff in a certain sum, to wit, the sum of 26*l.* 13*s.* 6*d.*, being the unpaid balance of a larger sum, and that in consideration of the plaintiff's forbearance to sue for the recovery of the balance of 26*l.* 13*s.* 6*d.*, the defendant undertook to accept a bill for the amount of 26*l.* 13*s.* 6*d.*, and the balance really due was 26*l.*, it was held to be no variance; the payment of the balance being the consideration for the promise, the statement of a particular sum was unnecessary (a).

Legality. It is essential that the agreement should be such as the law will sanction; if it be illegal or contrary to justice and sound policy, no action can be founded upon it (b).

Where the illegality is set forth upon the record, the objection may be taken either by demurrer or in arrest of judgment. Where it does not appear on the record, the defendant may show that the claim is in reality founded upon an illegal and noxious agreement. In some instances, however, the plaintiff's claim is even founded upon the illegality of the agreement; as, where he seeks to rescind an illegal contract, whilst it is executory, and recover the money which he has advanced under it (c).

was held to be a fatal variance. Crispin v. Williamson, 1 Moore, 547. In an action for not retaining the plaintiff as a servant at a yearly salary, the declaration averred the agreement to pay 250*l.* per annum for the service; it was held to be necessary to prove the specific sum as alleged, though it was laid under a videlicet, Preston v. Butcher,[1] 1 Starkie's C. 3. So, in general, where the sum, quantity or magnitude, is material and traversable, the averment under a scilicet will not render it immaterial, so as to protect from a traverse, or to render precise proof unnecessary. See the observations of Lawrence, J. in Grimwood v. Barrett, 6 T. R. 463. Johnson v. Pickett, which was an action on the statute of Usury, cited Ibid. S. P. Pope v. Foster, 4 T. R. 590, cited also by Lawrence, J. Also, Symmons v. Knox, 3 T. R. 65; 2 Will. Saund. 207.

(y) Durstan v. Tatham, cited in Symmons v. Knox, 3 T. R. 67; cited by Dampier, J., in Arnfield v. Bates, 3 M. & S. 175.

(z) Arnfield v. Bates, 3 M. & S. 175. In the case of Laing v. Fidgeon, 6 Taunt. 108, it was held that an allegation of a contract to deliver saddles to the plaintiff at a reasonable price, was supported by proof of an agreement to deliver saddles at 24*s.* and 26*s.*; and it seems, that if the declaration state the consideration to be certain reasonable reward, proof that a specific sum was agreed on, will not be material as to variance. Bayley v. Trecker, 2 N. R. 458.

(a) Bray v. Freeman,[2] 2 Moore, 114.

(b) In conformity with the rule of civil law, ex turpi causâ non critur actio, no action can be maintained if any part of the entire consideration (Cro. J. 103), or any branch or part of the matters promised, be so. T. Jones, 24.

(c) In general, where the demand arises out of any agreement which is illegal or immoral, or contrary to sound policy, the Courts will not lend their aid to enforce it. See Jordaine v. Lashbrook, 7 T. R. 601; Cockshott v. Bennett, 2 T. R. 763; and the cases cited; tit. MONEY HAD AND RECEIVED; MONEY PAID; Aubert v. Maze, 2 B. & P. 371. Booth v. Hodgson, 6 T. R. 405; Mitchell v. Cockburne, 2 H. B. 379. As where the consideration is a simoniacal presentation to a living (Cro. Car. 337, 353, 361), or the escape of a prisoner in execution. Martin v. Blithman, Yelv. 197, 1 Roll. R. 313. Where money has been advanced in furtherance of a joint illegal agreement, or received upon an executed illegal agreement (see the cases under the count for money had and received). So where the consideration is any act inconsistent with the party's duty as a sheriff or other public officer. Morris v. Chapman, T. Jones, 24. Martin v. Blithman, Gil. 197. So if the consideration be the sale of spirituous liquors, unless to the amount of 20*s.* at one time; 24 G. 2, c. 40; and the statute applies though the spirits be sold in a state mixed with other ingredients; as where grog is sold. Gilpin v. Kendle, Devonshire Lent Ass. 1809; Sel. N. P. 61. It has been held, that this statute does not extend to a security given in payment for small quantities of spirituous liquors. Spencer v. Smith, 3 Camp. 9; contrà Scott v. Gilmore, 3 Taunt. 226. The statute is not confined to sales to the consumer. Bennyatt v. Hutchinson, 5 B. & A. 241; overruling, as it seems, Jackson v. Attrill, Peake's C. 40. So, in general, agreements against the principles of sound policy are void. As, for instance, all agreements for the sale of public offices; or that one person shall hold an office of trust for another. Parsons v. Thomson, 1 H. B. 322. Blackford et al. v. Preston, 8 T. R. 89. Layng v. Payne, Willes, 571; 3 T. R. 19; 2 Wills. 133. Garforth v. Fearon, 1 H. B. 327; and see the stat. 12 R. 2, c. 2; 5 & 6 Ed. 6, c. 15. So, all agreements are illegal and void which tend to the obstruction or hindrance of public justice: as to prevent the due examination of a bankrupt by the commissioners. Perott v. Wallace, 3 T. R. 17. To omit to call the defendant up to receive judgment for a misdemeanour. Pool v. Bousfield, 1 Camp. C. 55. So, all agreements in restraint of trade are illegal; but an agreement not to use a trade in a particular place is legal. Cro. J. 596. Bunn v. Guy, 4 East, 190. So is a general agreement among those who use a particular trade to establish a general lien. Hickman v. Shawcross, 6 T. R. 14. It is also a general rule that fraud will vitiate a contract: for illustrations of this position, see tit. Bills of Exchange.—Fraud.—Money had and received.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. ii. 268. [2]Id. iv. 68.

* Where the promise is merely conditional, upon some precedent act to be performed by the plaintiff, the promise must be so alleged in the declara- Condition Precedent.

Thus, any secret agreement or stipulation, or compositions with insolvents, by means of which one creditor seeks to obtain an unfair advantage, are void. Cockshott v. Bennett, 2 T. R. 763. Leicester v. Rose, 4 East, 372. Stocke v. Madder, 1 B. & P. 286. Thomas v. Courtnay, 1 B. & A. 1; or by which any unfair advantage may be obtained over a third person (Jackson v. Duchaire, 3 T. R. 551. Pidcock v. Bishop,[1] 3 B. & C. 605), is void. So also no action will lie in furtherance of any agreement whatsoever of a vicious or immoral tendency. As if lodgings be let for an illegal purpose. Crisp v. Churchill, 1 B. & P. 340, 1, n. Girardy v. Richardson, 1b. As prostitution, 1b. Or where the plaintiff lodges unfortunate women and partakes of the profits. Howard v. Hodges, cor. Ld. Kenyon, C. J. Dec. 2, 1796. Nor for the price of immoral, libellous, or indecent prints, per Lawrence, J., 4 Esp. C. 97. It seems, however, that though clothes or lodgings are supplied to a prostitute, the mere knowledge on the part of the plaintiff of her situation and circumstances will not exclude his right of action, unless they were directly supplied for that purpose; or under an agreement or expectation, at least, that he should be paid out of the illegal profits. Bowry v. Bennett, 1 Camp. 348. It was held that a washerwoman might recover for the washing of expensive clothes and dresses, though it was obvious that the plaintiff must have known that they were to be used for improper purposes. Buller, J. observed, "This unfortunate woman must have clean linen, and it is impossible for the Court to take into consideration which of these articles were used for an improper purpose, and which were not." Lloyd v. Johnson, 1 B. & P. 341; and see tit. Money had and received.

Some of the decisions upon this head have conflicted, not so much in consequence of any doubt upon general principles, as of the difficulty in applying them. The general principle and foundation of them all is this, that the law will not lend its aid in furtherance of an illegal or immoral transaction, or of any contract which is in general inconsistent with sound policy; but that, on the contrary, it will interfere for the purpose of preventing the execution of an illegal agreement, and of furthering the enactments of any prohibitory or remedial statute. The application of this principle is strongly exemplified in the case of the action for money had and received, where the law prohibits or enforces the recovery of the money, just as the prohibition or enforcement will further the object of the legislature. If the money has been paid upon an illegal agreement which remains executory between the parties, the law enforces the recovery of the money, because it thereby prevents a violation of the law by carrying the illegal agreement into effect; it affords the party a locus pœnitentiæ, and encourages him to recede from the illegal contract before it is too late. Where the money has been paid by one who was the object of the law's protection, and who is not equally culpable with the defendant who has received the money, the Courts allow it to be recovered, although the agreement has been carried into effect, since the object of the statute was to protect the plaintiff. But where both parties are equally implicated in guilt, and the illegal contract has been carried into effect, the law denies its aid; for both parties are equally guilty, and equally undeserving of the aid of the law, and the best policy is to favour neither. (See Lacaussade v. White, 7 T. R. 535, contra; but this case has often been denied.) (1) The principal difficulty has arisen where a claim has been made by one partner in an illegal transaction against another. It has been allowed on all hands, that where one partner has paid money for another in an illegal transaction, no action can be maintained, without evidence of an express request made by the defendant to the plaintiff to pay the money, since no implied assumpsit to pay the money can arise out of an illegal transaction; where such request has been made, many learned Judges have been of opinion that the partner or agent in the illegal transaction who paid the money, might rely on the express assumpsit, and that he had no more concern with the illegal transaction itself in the course of which the money was paid, than if a mere stranger had paid it at the defendant's request; and that therefore where the illegal object was merely malum prohibitum, the plaintiff was entitled to recover. In other and later instances very learned Judges have held, that a partner in such an illegal transaction, who had paid money even at the express request of his co-partner, could not recover, since his claim is mixed up and contaminated with the illegal agreement itself, and cannot be separated from it; that the distinction founded on an express request is untenable, because in every case of such a partnership the jury would be warranted in finding an assent to the payment; and lastly, that the distinction between malum prohibitum and malum in se is not a sound one. It is indeed a distinction very difficult to be supported; every act which is immoral, must, it

(1) [See Evan's "Essay on the action for Money had and received," Part II. where the inaccuracy of the report of Lacaussade v. White is very satisfactorily exposed, and the actual decision of the court shown to be conformable to previous and subsequent cases.]

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. x. 197.

tion, * or the variance would be fatal. Where the promise depends upon *66 the *performance of a condition precedent, the plaintiff either alleges per-should seem, be malum in se, and it can scarcely be denied that the wilful violation of any positive law is not more or less immoral. A man may in fact be more guilty in a moral point of view in doing that which is usually termed a mere malum prohibitum, than in committing that which is malum in se. The destruction of the current coin of the realm to the prejudice of the whole community is merely malum prohibitum, if there be any virtue in the distinction; yet surely any act tending to this prejudice is more mischievous and more immoral than the telling a lie, which is malum in se. In reality, an act is immoral, independently of any prohibitory law, in proportion to the evil which is likely to result from it; in a moral point of view, every act from which evil is likely to flow is malum in se, and the abstract immorality does not depend on any positive prohibition. The broad, general, and intelligible test for the decision of these cases, seems to depend upon the question, whether the sustaining such actions would encourage and support illegal or immoral contracts, or whether the immorality be not so far out of the question that no rule or principle of sound policy is violated in enforcing a contract which in conscience ought to be performed? If money be advanced in order to effectuate a criminal purpose, and be applied in furtherance of that object, a Court, in lending its aid to the recovery of that money, would be sanctioning and consummating a contract founded in criminality; the affording legal protection to the lender would encourage the affording of aid and supplies for such purposes in future, and in consequence encourage the committing of the offence itself.

A party who lends his aid to the commission of an offence is himself criminal in point of law as well as morals. If a man were to advance money to another to purchase a weapon for the committing of treason or murder, would he not at least be guilty of a misprision of treason or felony? In such cases, and where the money is so applied, the plaintiff's claim is tainted with criminality, and he seeks to recover through the medium of an illegal transaction. It can make no difference in principle whether the money was advanced by a partner, or by a stranger, provided the criminal object was known and intended, or whether the contract was express or implied. Upon the same principle of policy, the law, in many instances, permits money supplied for an illegal purpose to be recovered before the object has been executed; for it is the policy of the law to assist and encourage parties in receding from illegal projects. Where money has been paid in execution of an illegal contract to the agent, whose principal is a particeps criminis, the principal, it seems, ought to recover it; the party who paid it to the agent is not entitled to it, since it has been paid in consummation of an executed illegal contract, and it would be against conscience that the agent should be allowed to retain it; it is the money of the principal, and the case seems to be the same in effect as if the principal had received the money with his own hands, and then delivered it to the agent. He does not claim as from the agent, through the medium of an illegal contract: his title arises immediately from the act of the agent in receiving the money to his use; and therefore the case differs widely from that of money knowingly lent for an unlawful purpose, where the illegal object is immediately connected with the lending, which is the consideration for the promise.

The case of Cannon v. Bryce,[1] 3 B. & A. 179, seems to remove the doubts formerly entertained upon questions of this nature, vid. infra, 77–93.

For further illustration of the principles above adverted to, it may be proper to refer to the following decisions. Where the plaintiff received into his employment the defendant, a person of competent but inferior skill in the plaintiff's profession, upon a stipulation that he might discharge him upon three months' notice, and the defendant covenanted in case of dismissal not to practise within 100 miles, it was held that the contract was one which contained a restraint on the defendant in respect to his trade far larger than was necessary for the protection of the plaintiff in the enjoyment of his, and could not therefore form the subject of an action. Horner v. Graves,[2] 7 Bing. 735. So where the consideration of an agreement, by which a party undertook to work exclusively for another, was wholly without adequate consideration, and placed him entirely at the mercy of the latter; and a promissory note, given by the former for breaches of the agreement on his part, cannot be set off against his claim for work performed by him before he became bankrupt, in an action by his assignees, such note being void for want of consideration. Young v. Timmins, 1 Cr. & J. 330, and 1 Tyrw. 226. Where three persons carrying on a similar trade, and vending their manufactures about the country, entered into an agreement for their mutual benefit, to confine themselves to certain districts, and that neither should purchase certain articles at or beyond a certain price, and that if any other persons should set up the same trade, and oppose them, that then they would meet together, and enter into such mutual agreement as should be beneficial to their mutual interests, it being their intention not to do any acts prejudicial, but to aid and assist each other in the said trade to the utmost of their power; held that such agreement not operating as a general restraint of trade, was valid, and that there was on the face of it a sufficient consideration for the partial restraint it contemplated. Wickens v. Evans, 3 Y. & J. 318: and see Davies v. Mant, 5 East, 120. An agreement, reciting that the plaintiff was possessed of the means of furnishing evidence enabling the defendant to recover certain sums, of which it was alleged that he had been defrauded, and stipulating that he should use his utmost means and influence for procuring evidence to substantiate the defendant's claims, and that he should receive a certain proportion of the amount recovered by his means; was held to be illegal. Stanley v. Jones,[3] 7 Bing. 369, and 5 M. & P. 193. An agreement between two sons to convey and assign, the one to the other, a moiety of all such real or personal estate as they should respectively derive under their father's will, so that each should take an equal moiety, and that in such division all sums, &c. received in his lifetime as advancement should be taken into account, was held to be valid. Wethered v. Wethered, 2 Sim. 183. So was an agreement between two parties having expectancies from a third party, to divide equally what he might leave them respectively. Harwood v. Tooke, 2 Sim. 192. Where the plaintiff had purchased the certificates or obligations of a revolted colony of a foreign State assuming to be an independent State, but not recognised by the government of this country, the defendants representing that they had entered into a contract for the loan, and expected it would bear a premium; held formance, *or alleges some matter in excuse for the non-performance (d); and the proof varies accordingly. And where the agreement contains mutual conditions or covenants to be performed at the same time, the plaintiff must either aver performance, or a readiness to perform his part of the contract (e).

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. v. 255. [2] Id. xx. 310. [3] Id. xx. 165.

that independently of any question of fraud, the purchase being founded on a contract which the Court upon grounds of public policy could not sanction, it could not relieve the plaintiff as to the instalments he had paid; held also, that as it did not appear that the payments of the interest on such instruments were to be paid in this country, the stipulation for six per cent. interest was not usurious. Thompson v. Powels, 2 Sim. 195. A publican cannot recover for beer, &c. furnished to third persons, by order of a party who has been allowed to become previously intoxicated; the permitting persons to become so in his house being illegal, he cannot take advantage of an offence which he has been instrumental to. Brandon v. Old,[1] 3 C. & P. 440. Where, pending an action, a party undertook to pay the plaintiff's attorney his costs, in consideration of the plaintiff's, with his attorney's consent, giving an authority to the defendant to pay over the debt sued for to a creditor of the plaintiff; it was held, that the action could not be supported. Taylor v. Watson, 4 M. & Ry. 259. Where the plaintiff, a creditor, having seized goods in execution, afterwards at a meeting of creditors declared he would not come into a composition nor withdraw the execution, without security for a certain part of his debt, to which a third party consented, and gave a guarantee, and he there upon signed the deed; held that such security was fraudulent as against the rest of the creditors, and void. Colman v. Waller, 3 Y. & J. 212. Upon a previous agreement with a third person for a benefit by supplying coals, to a stated amount, if the plaintiff would sign an agreement for a composition with his debtor for 10*s* in the pound, and for which the defendant afterwards signed a joint and several note, although the coals were supplied, and no other creditor was acquainted with or influenced by the transaction, it was held that the plaintiff could not recover on the note. Knight v. Hunt,[2] 5 Bing. 432. Where the insolvent having been opposed by a creditor was remanded to a future day, and in the meantime his attorney undertook, in consideration of the creditor's withdrawing his opposition, that he should be appointed sole assignee, and receive a certain sum within a fixed time, held that such agreement being contrary to the policy of the Insolvent Acts, no action could be maintained thereon. Murray v. Reeves,[3] 8 B. & C. 421. Where a party elected died before taking his seat, held that the representation having become vacant on his death, the plaintiff, a publican, could not recover for beer, &c. supplied to voters on a canvass by a third party on behalf of a candidate at the following election, although the latter neither ordered nor was shown to have knowledge of the treating; held also that the Treating Act was not confined merely to successful candidates. Ward v. Nanney,[4] 3 C. & P. 399. Where a contract for the purchase of a heifer was made on a Sunday, but the defendant retained possession, and subsequently promised payment, held that the plaintiff was entitled to recover for the value on a quantum meruit, though not for the price agreed on upon the bargain completed on Sunday, Williams v. Paul,[5] 6 Bing. 653. Where the lessee of premises covenanted that he would indemnify the parish against all costs whatsoever, for or by reason of his taking an apprentice or servant, who should thereby gain a settlement, or become chargeable to the parish; the agreement was held on demurrer to be valid. Walsh v. Fussell,[6] 6 Bing. 163. The forbearing to petition against the return of a sitting member on the ground of bribery, is an illegal consideration for a promise to pay money. Coppocke v. Bower, 4 M. & W. 361. The agreement, although unstamped, was admitted in evidence. In assumpsit on an agreement to pay a sum in consideration of the plaintiff using his influence, and securing an appointment to the defendant; plea (inter alia) that the plaintiff had procured the appointment through fraudulent representation; it was held that the issue was whether the representation was false to the knowledge of the plaintiff at the time. Neeley v. Locke,[7] 8 C. & P. 527.

(d) Ughtred's Case, 7 Rep. 10, a. 1 T. R. 638. Doug. 690. Com. Dig. Pleader, c. 51. Chitty on Pleading, 309. An allegation of the actual performance of a condition precedent, or of readiness to perform a condition conusant, is not satisfied by evidence of a discharge, or excuse for non-performance by the act or omission of the defendant. Ib. And see the observations of the Court in Heard v. Wadham, 1 East, 619. Jones v. Berkeley, Doug. 659. Kingston v. Preston, cited Ib. Rawson v. Johnson, 1 East, 203. P. C. Berry v. Deighton, K. B. Mich. 1827. Where, in an action on a breach of a contract to convey on board of plaintiff's ship, a boat not exceeding certain dimensions, which when tendered proved to be a decked boat within that size, which the plaintiff refused to receive unless the defendant would consent to remove the deck, as obstructing the navigation of the ship; held that evidence of its being always usual to take off the deck of such boats in stowing them, was properly admitted, and that the plaintiff having declined to permit it, could not recover for breach of the contract. Haynes v. Holliday, 7 Bing. 587.

(e) See 1 East, 203. The question, what will constitute a condition precedent, is purely a consideration of law, arising upon the inspection and construction of the agreement itself. (See 1 Will. Saund. 320, a.) Since, however, the omission to aver the performance of a condition precedent is a ground of nonsuit at the trial, when it appears that the defendant has not undertaken or covenanted absolutely, but only upon the performance of some condition by the plaintiff, the performance of which he has not alleged, it may be proper to observe, in the first place, that the covenants and agreements are to be construed according to the intention and meaning of the parties, to be collected from the whole instrument. Porter v. Shephard, 6 T. R. 668. Hotham v. East India Company, 1 T. R. 645. Campbell v. Jones, 6 T. R. 571. Morton v. Lamb, 7 T. R. 130. And see above, note (d).

If a day be appointed for the payment of money, or part of it, or for doing any other act, and the day is to happen, or may happen before the thing which is the consideration for the payment of the money, or the [1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xiv. 384. [2]Id. xv. 488. [3]Id. xv. 254. [4]Id. xiv. 369. [5]Id. xix. 192. [6]Id. xix. 40. [7]Id. xxxiv. 514.

*To satisfy an averment that the plaintiff was ready and willing to transfer, and requested the defendant to accept stock, which he refused, the plaintiff must prove an actual tender and refusal; or that he waited at the Bank on the day appointed for the transfer, until the close of the transfer books, the latest moment when the transfer could have been effected (f) (A).

doing of any other thing, an action may be brought for the breach before performance, since it appears that the party relied upon his remedy, and did not intend to make the performance a condition precedent. 1 Will. Saund. 320, a. And so it is where no time is fixed for the performance of that which is the consideration for the payment of the money or other act. Ibid.; and see Campbell v. Jones, 6 T. R. 572; Thorpe v. Thorpe, 1 Salk. 171; 1 Ld. Raym. 665; 1 Lut. 250; 12 Mod. 461; 1 Vent. 177; Peters v. Opie, 1 Salk. 113; 2 H. B. 389. But where the consideration is to precede the act covenanted for, it is a condition precedent. Ibid.; and Boon v. Eyre, 1 H. B. 273; 1 Salk. 171; 1 Ld. Raym. 665; 12 Mod. 462; 1 Lutw. 251; Dyer, 76, a. Where a covenant goes to part only of the consideration on both sides, and a breach of such covenant may be paid for in damages, it is an independent covenant, and an action may be maintained for a breach of such covenant, without averring performance. Boon v. Eyre, 1 H. B. 273, n. a. Campbell v. Jones, 6 T. R. 570; 1 Will. Saund. 310, b. But where the mutual covenants go to the whole of the consideration on both sides, they are mutual conditions, and performance must be averred. Duke of St. Albans v. Shore, 1 H. B. 270. Large v. Cheshire, 1 Vent. 147. Where the two acts are to be done at the same time, they are also mutual conditions; as, where A. covenants to convey an estate to B. on the day specified, and in consideration thereof B. covenants to pay A. a sum of money on the same day. 1 Salk. 112, 113, 171. Thorpe v. Thorpe, 2 Salk. 623; 1 Will. Saund. 320, c. and the cases there cited. Where upon an arrangement of cross actions it was agreed, inter alia, that the defendant, the attorney of one party, should give his note for ——l. as a collateral security for the amount to be paid to the other, and that the latter should give up all the effects which he had of the former into the defendant's hands; which note was given immediately after the signing of the agreement; it was held that the delivery of the goods was not a condition precedent to the right to recover on the note. Irving v. King,[1] 4 C. & P. 409. Where upon a building contract, the defendant covenanted to pay a further sum, provided the pavement were laid and other work completed before a certain day, held that the non-completion of the pavement by that time, although occasioned by bad weather, defeated the right to such further sum. Maryon v. Carter,[2] 4 C. & P. 205. By an agreement with a foreign mining company the plaintiff was engaged as superintendent for three years, at a salary increasing yearly, with a proviso for a twelvemonth's notice of dismissal, or a twelvemonth's salary, and the reasonable expenses of his return; and if he stayed the three years, he should also be entitled to all reasonable expenses of the return to his family; the defendant dismissed him before the expiration of the second year, without notice, or paying the year's salary or expenses; held that he could only recover such damages as he would have received if notice had been given, and not for the salary which would subsequently have accrued, or the expenses of the return to his family. French v. Brookes,[3] 6 Bing. 354. Where the defendant subscribed and paid a deposit for a "New History of Scotland, by," &c., and the work when delivered appeared to be only a translation of Buchanan's work, with notes and continuation by J. H., which the defendant had insisted upon the plaintiff's taking back; held that the latter could not recover the price. Paton v. Duncan,[4] 3 C. & P. 336. The plaintiff consented to a composition with other creditors, but the trustees afterwards refused to allow him to sign the deed, alleging that his claim was usurious; held that he was remitted to his original legal rights. Garrard v. Woolner,[5] 4 C. & P. 471. R. agreed to supply W. with straw, to be delivered at W.'s premises at the rate of three loads in a fortnight, during a specified time, and W. agreed "to pay R. 33*s*. per load, for each load of straw so delivered on his premises" during the above period. After the straw had been supplied for some time, W. refused to pay for the last load delivered, and insisted on always keeping one load in arrear; held, that according to the true effect of the agreement, each load was to be paid for on delivery; and that on W.'s refusal to pay for them, R. was not bound to send any more. Withers v. Reynolds,[6] 2 B. & Ad. 882. Upon a stipulation in a charter-party, that if the ship did not arrive at the port of loading on or before ——, unless prevented by stress of weather or other unavoidable impediment, the freighter should not be obliged to ship a cargo; held, that the captain was only bound to use ordinary diligence, and that if the arrival of the vessel had been delayed by impediments not to be overcome without unusual exertion, the defendant was liable for a breach of the covenant to ship a cargo. Granger v. Dent,[7] 1 Mood. & M. C. 475. Where the terms of the contract of the charter-party (dated June 30) were, that the vessel should be ready "forthwith," and not being so on the 4th of July, the plaintiffs renounced the contract, and sued the defendants for the default; held, that having regard to the state of the vessel, which was known to both parties, the question was, whether the vessel could, with reasonable and proper diligence, have been got ready; and if the jury thought that it could not have been reasonably expected to be so, that the defendants were entitled to the verdict, Simpson v. Henderson,[8] 1 Mood. & M. C. 300.

(f) Bordenave v. Gregory, 5 East, 107.

(A) (A militia-man was drafted to perform a tour of duty, and contracted with C. to pay him for performing that tour for him, "upon his return from performing the same." Held, that the performance of the duty was a condition precedent to the payment of the money, and that C. having deserted before he had fully performed it, could not recover. Conrod v. Conrod, 2 Virg. Cases, 138. Where one party covenants to give a deed on a certain day, and the other covenants to pay money on the same day, neither can maintain an action against the other until he has performed or tendered performance on his part. Green v. Reynolds, 2 Johns. R. 207. Meriwether v. Can, 1 Blackof. 413).

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xix. 401. [2]Id. xix. 392. [3]Id. xix. 100. [4]Id. xxi. 335. [5]Id. xix. 478. [6]Id. xxii. 203. [7]Id. xxii. 361. [8]Id. xxii. 313.

Where the plaintiff alleged, in an action for not completing the purchase of certain shares, that he was lawfully entitled to so many shares, and it appeared from the act of parliament which created the shares that no legal *title had been vested in him, it was held to be a ground of nonsuit (g). *69
Where a mere duty is to be paid on request, the bringing of the action is a sufficient request; but if the defendant promise to pay a collateral sum on request, an actual request must be alleged and proved. As where the defendant undertakes to pay 10*l.* on request if he does not perform an award (h).

Indebitatus assumpsit.

The general count of indebitatus assumpsit is founded upon an implied promise to pay a certain debt or duty, upon a consideration, executed at the instance and request of the defendant, or upon a legal obligation arising from the particular circumstances of the case (i). The plaintiff must prove, 1st, a consideration executed; 2dly, at the request of the defendant. The necessity of proving a request, or that which is equivalent to it, or is evidence from which a request may be inferred, follows from the principle of law, that no one can constitute another person his debtor without his permission; and consequently it is not sufficient that the plaintiff should have rendered services to the defendant (k), without also showing that the defendant assented to the services, and expressly or impliedly agreed to remunerate the plaintiff for them. In order to show this it is essential, in every declaration in assumpsit, which is founded upon a past consideration, to allege it to have been done at the special instance and request of the defendant (l); and, in evidence, it is necessary in some instances to prove an express request by the defendant, and in others, to prove circumstances from which a previous request may be inferred (m) either in fact or in law (1).

Proof of actual request.

If the service be not for the benefit of the defendant himself, evidence of an express previous request is essential, and a subsequent promise is not sufficient (A). A.'s servant being arrested, B., the friend of A., bailed him, and A. afterwards undertook to indemnify B.; and it was held that this promise was not binding, because the consideration was past; but that (g) Latham v. Barber, 6 T. R. 67. (h) B. N. P. 151; 1 Saund. 33; 1 Str. 68.

(i) See B. N. P. 129; Bell v. Burrows, 5 Geo. 3, cited 1bid. Indebitatus assumpsit will not lie in any case where debt would not lie; Hurd's Case, Salk. 23. But it will not lie in all cases where debt would lie; it is not maintainable on a specialty. But it will lie on a foreign judgment. Plaistow Van-Uxem, Doug. 5, n. and on an Irish judgment. Vaughan v. Plunkett, 3 Taunt. 85, n. Harris v. Saunders,[1] 4 B. & C. 411. Crawford v. Whittall, Doug. 4, n.

(k) See Birks v. Trippett, Saund., as to the distinction between a duty and a collateral undertaking. Back v. Owen, 5 T. R.

(l) Lamplugh v. Braithwaite, 1 Roll. Ab. 11. Bosden v. Thin, Cro. J. 18; 1 Will. Saund. 264, n. (1); Dyer, 272; Hob. 106. Hayes v. Warren, Str. 933.

(m) A. requests B. to endeavour to procure a pardon for A.; if, after endeavour made, A. in consideration thereof, promises to pay B. a certain sum, it is a good consideration. 1 Roll. Ab. 11, pl. 6.

(1) [See Yelv. 41. a. note, and cases there collected. 16 Johns. 284. note. Inhabitants of Roxbury v. Worcester Turnpike Corporation, 2 Pick. 41.]

(A) (But where the interest of a man is promoted, though not at his request, and he afterwards deliberately engages to pay, his promise will bind him. Greeves v. M'Allister, 2 Binn. 591. No action lies against overseers of the poor for medical or other services rendered to a pauper, although in the most pressing necessity, without their request, or express promise to pay. Gourley v. Allen, 5 Cow. 644. Everts v. Adams, 12 John. R. 352. Miller v. Inh's. of Somerset, 14 Mass. R. 396. And an assumpsit cannot be raised by doing an act against the will of the person sought to be charged. Schureman v. Wilkes, Anth. N. P. 168. n. a. Mayor, &c. of Baltimore v. Hughes, 1 Gill & Johns. 497. Richardson v. M'Ray, 1 Const. Rep. 472. Assumpsit lies on an implied promise to discharge a legal obligation created by statute. The Inh's. of Bath v. The Inh's. of Freefort, 5 Mass. R. 325. So assumpsit can be maintained for a pecuniary legacy without any express promise. Clark v. Herring, 5 Binn. 33. A request by a father that a physician will attend on his son who is of full age, and sick at his father's house, does not render the father liable to pay for the service rendered. Boyd v. Sappington, 4 Watts, 247; and the natural affection and moral duty arising from the connection between a father and his illegitimate child, do not constitute a sufficient consideration to impart a legal obligation to a verbal promise. Clarke v. M'Farland's Ex'rs. 5 Dana, 45.)

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. x. 370.

it would have been otherwise had A. previously requested B. to bail his servant (n).

Request when presumed.

But if the defendant voluntarily derive benefit from the service, that will be evidence of a previous request: as, where the plaintiff has paid a sum of money for the defendant, or bought goods for him without his knowledge or consent, and he afterwards assents to the payment or uses the goods (o) (A).

From legal obligation.

Where the defendant was under a legal obligation to procure the service to be done, a subsequent promise to pay will be evidence of a previous request. And therefore, where a pauper was suddenly taken ill, and an apothecary attended her without the previous request of the overseers, and cured her, and afterwards the overseers promised payment, it was *70 holden to be *binding (p). But a mere moral obligation is insufficient without a previous request (q), or a subsequent express promise (r), in respect of a debt due in point of natural justice, but which, for technical (n) Dyer, 272, a; 1 Roll. Ab. 11, pl. 2, 3.

(o) Assumpsit lies by the owner of a market for stallage, without showing any contract with the occupier. Mayor, &c. of Newport v. Saunders,[1] 3 B. & Ad. 411.

(p) Watson v. Turner, B. N. P. 129, 147, 281. See also Wing v. Mill, 1 B. & A. 105. And where a casual pauper accidentally fractured his leg, and was attended by a surgeon who attended the parish poor, with the knowledge of the overseer of the poor, who visited the pauper there, it was held that a request by the overseer might be presumed. Lamb v. Bunce, 4 M. & S. 275. An accident having happened to one of the defendant's children, who were residing at a distant place under the care of servants, the latter called in the plaintiff, an apothecary, to attend: held, that the father was liable, although he never knew of the plaintiff's attendance, and the accident was owing to the servants' negligence; held also, that he was liable for attendance on one of his servants, in illness brought on in consequence of the service, but not for illness occasioned by the servant's own imprudence, unless the master had been informed of it, and acquiesced. Cooper v. Phillips,[2] 4 C. & P. 581. An executor having assets is liable, upon an implied contract, to pay suitable funeral expenses, although ordered by a third party, it not appearing that they were furnished upon his credit. Rogers v. Price, 3 Y. & J. 28. And see Tugwell v. Hayman, 3 Camp. C. 298.

(q) See the note 3 B. & P. 249, and the cases there collected. [Yelv. 41. 6 note;[3] 5 Taunt. 37; 13 John. 259.]

(r) A feme covert having an estate settled to her separate use, gave a bond for repayment, by her executors, of money advanced at her request, on security of that bond, to her son-in-law; after her husband's death, she wrote, promising that her executors should settle the bond; and it was held that the executors were bound. Lee v. Muggeridge, 5 Taunt. 36. This, with many other cases, falls within a very general principle, that wherever a debt in point of natural justice is due, but cannot be legally claimed by reason of the intervention of some positive law, the consideration will support an express promise: for a party may always waive a provision for his own benefit. The principle, therefore, applies not only in the above case, where the legal claim was impeded by coverture, but also where it is prevented by the Statute of Usury (Barnes v. Heady, 2 Taunt. 184); or of Limitations (Hyeling v. Hastings, Ld. Raym. 589; see tit. Limitations); or by the defendant's infancy (Southerton v. Whitlock, 2 Str. 690, & infra, tit. Infancy); or by an insolvent act (Mucklow v. St. George, 4 Taunt. 613); or by the Statute of Bankruptcy (Fleming v. Haynes,[4] Starkie's C. 370; Linbuy v. Weightman, 5 Esp. C. 198); or where the holder of a bill of exchange omits to give due notice of the dishonour to the drawee. (Lundie v. Robertson, 7 East, 231. Roper v. Alder, 6 East, 10, n.) In such cases, however, it is a general essential that the promise should be distinct and unequivocal. Per Lord Ellenborough, in Fleming v. Haynes,[4] 1 Starkie's C. 370. A promise made to pay an old debt discharged by an insolvent act, by instalments, without specifying the amount or time of payment, was held to be insufficient. Mucklow v. St. George, 4 Taunt. 613. And if the subsequent promise be conditional, it is incumbent on the plaintiff to show performance. Besford v. Saunders, 2 H. R. 116. By the stat. 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 131, a certificated bankrupt is not liable on a subsequent promise, unless it be in writing. A subsequent promise will not revive a void security. Cockskott v. Bennett, 2 T. R. 763.

(A) ("It is a general rule, that when the parties have made an express contract, the law will not imply a contract. How far this rule will apply, when the express contract is of such a nature, that no remedy will lie for a breach of it, when at the same time there is a sufficient consideration to support an implied contract, may be a question." Per Parsons, Ch. J. Worthen v. Stevens, 4 Mass. R. 449. A promise to pay, will be implied from an agreement of parties, to abide by the decision of individuals named between them, to appraise the value of certain work and services done and performed by one party for the other. Efner v. Shaw, 2 Wend. 567. Where an agreement does not designate the person to whom its consideration is to be paid, the law will raise an assumpsit, and this is always implied in favour of those who are the meritorious cause of action, or from whom the consideration moves. Higden v. Thomas, 1 Harr. & Gill, 139. If a surety have paid money for his principal, the law implies an assumpsit, and the proper form of action is indebitatus assumpsit for money paid. Smith v. Sayward. 5 Greenl. 504. Gray v. Bowls, 1 Dev. & Bat. 437. So even if the contract made with the principal be usurious, if made without the surety's knowledge of the usury. Ford v. Keith, 1 Mass. 139.)

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxiii. 108. [2]Id. xix. 535. [3]Id. i. 10. [4]Id. ii. 431.

reasons cannot otherwise be enforced. A master is not liable on an implied assumpsit to pay for medical attendance on his servant (s). And the overseers of a parish to which a pauper belongs are not liable, without an express promise, to reimburse the overseers of another parish, for medicines supplied to the pauper during his casual residence there (t). Where the obligation is a legal one, the parties who ought to discharge it are liable, though there be no previous request or subsequent promise. Thus the overseers of a parish are liable, not only in respect of necessary medical attendance on a casual pauper accidentally disabled within the parish, but even for such attendance in the pauper's own parish, to which they have improperly removed the pauper (u).

*Where goods are supplied to a feme covert living apart from her husband, without any fault of her own, suitable to her rank in life (x); or where the plaintiff, to save himself, pays money for the defendant, which the latter was in law bound to pay (y), no evidence of a previous request or subsequent promise is necessary (z). So in many instances, where the defendant has committed a tort with respect to the property of the plaintiff, the latter may waive the tort, and bring his action for goods sold and delivered, or for use and occupation, according to the circumstances of the case (a). In these cases no evidence, either of a previous request or subsequent promise, is necessary; for as soon as, in point of law, a debt certain is due from the defendant to the plaintiff, the law infers a promise on his part to pay it; whereas, in the other cases, either a previous request, or subsequent promise, or some evidence of assent, is essential to constitute a perfect legal duty. *71

When the terms of a special agreement have been performed so as to leave a mere simple debt or duty between the parties, the plaintiff may give the circumstances in evidence, and recover under a general count of indebitatus assumpsit (b) (1). But in such case if it appear that the work Proof by special agreement.

(s) Wennall v. Adney, 3 B. & P. 247. But see Newby v. Wiltshire, 2 Esp. C. 739; Scarman v. Castel, 1 Esp. C. 270.

(t) (In Atkins v. Banwell, 1 East, 505, a pauper residing in the parish A. was relieved there, and supplied with medicines by the parish officers, and it was held that the officers of the parish B., to which the pauper belonged, were not bound to repay the money so expended. And see Tomlinson v. Bentall, 5 B. & C. 738. Gent v. Tompkins, 5 B. & C. 746.

(u) Tomlinson v. Bentall,[1] 5 B. & C. 738. Note, that after the removal, one of the defendants sent for the surgeon, who resided in the pauper's own parish, in order that he might attend the pauper; but the Court seem to have decided the case wholly on the ground of legal obligation. See R. v. Inhab. of St. James, Bury St. Edmunds, 10 East, 25. In the case of Gent v. Tompkins, 5 B. & C. 746, the pauper being settled in N. met with an accident in W., and was attended by a surgeon of W.: the defendant who was the overseer of N., after a fortnight's attendance, called and desired of the surgeon (the plaintiff) that the pauper might continue to receive every attention, saying that he (the defendant) would see the plaintiff paid. The Court were of opinion that the overseers of W., where the pauper met with the accident, and not those of N., to which the pauper belonged, were liable in the first instance, but expressed a doubt whether the defendant might not be liable if, in consequence of his promise, the plaintiff continued to attend, and thought that this point ought to have been left to the jury; and on that ground granted a new trial.

(x) Jenkins v. Tucker, 1 H. B. 90. So for the funeral expenses of the wife. Ibid. Secus, where she leaves the house of her husband without necessity. Horwood v. Heffer, 3 Taunt. 421.

(y) Vide infra, 58.

(z) Qu. Whether in the former case the wife, and in the latter the plaintiff, may not be considered to be the agents of the defendant?

(a) Vide infra, 83.

(b) Gordon v. Martin, Fitzg. 303. B. N. P. 139; Gilb. Law of Evid. 191: Tri. per Pais, 399; Style, 461. But an indebitatus assumpsit does not lie on a collateral undertaking. Mines v. Sculthorp, Camp. C. 215, such as in guarantee.

(1) [But a plaintiff cannot recover on an implied assumpsit for the value of goods delivered, where there is an existing written contract, in part performance of which the goods were delivered. Wood & al. v. Edmunds & al. 19 Johns. 205. {See Willoughby v. Raymond, 4 Com. Rep. 130.} Where both parties have departed from the special agreement, an action may be maintained on an implied promise. Goodrich v. Lafflin & al. 1 Pick. 57. Or where a special agreement contains nothing more than the law will imply. Gibbs v. Bryant, 1 Pick. 119. See also McWilliams v. Willis, 1 Wash. 199. So where a special agreement is void has been done under a written agreement, the plaintiff must produce and prove it, or he will be nonsuited; so if he produce it and it cannot be received in evidence for want of a proper stamp (c).

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xii. 368.

If goods are to be paid for at a specified time, an indebitatus assumpsit will lie when the time has expired (d). If goods are to be paid for by a bill at two months, although the acceptance of the bill be refused, the action of indebitatus assumpsit cannot be brought until the expiration of the time of credit, and then the action will lie (f). If a bill be given in payment for goods, and there be no agreement as to time, and the bill turn out to be worthless, an action may be commenced immediately (g) (1).

*72 And it is *sufficient, if, from the memorandum, it appear that the bill was filed after the time when the credit expired (h).

If the plaintiff declare upon a special contract, as well as upon the general count, and fail in his proof upon the special count, but yet establish a special contract, the terms of which have been performed, he will still be entitled to recover on the general count, provided he would have been entitled to recover on that count if no special agreement had been laid in the declaration (i). If he declare upon a special agreement, and prove a special agreement which varies from that laid, and which still remains in force, the special performance or rescinding of the agreement not having raised a simple debt or duty, he cannot recover; for he cannot recover on the special count, on account of the variance; nor on the general count, since the terms of the special agreement have not been rescinded, or reduced

(c) See Brewer v. Palmer, 3 Esp. C. 213, cor. Ld. Eldon. Jeffery v. Walton,[1] 1 Starkie's C. 267; supra, 56.

(d) Mussen v. Price, 4 East, 147. Where the time of delivery is specified, the plaintiff having delivered part of the goods before the time, cannot recover the price of such part before the expiration of the time; for the contract is entire, and cannot be split. Waddington v. Oliver, 2 N. R. 61.

(e) Dutton v. Solomonson, 3 B. & P. 582.

(f) Mussen v. Price, 4 East, 75, 147. Brooke v. White, 1 N. R. 330. Lord Alvanley's dictum, 3 B. & P. 582, contra. See tit. GOODS SOLD AND DELIVERED. [See Henry v. Donaghy, Addison's Rep. 39. Roget v. Merritt, & al. 2 Caines' Rep. 117. Salem Bank v. Gloucester Bank, 17 Mass. Rep. 1.]

(g) Stedman v. Gooch, 1 Esp. 5. Puckford v. Maxwell, 6 T. R. 52. Owenson v. Morse, 7 T. R. 64. A debtor is not discharged by giving an unproductive cheque, though he has previously tendered cash. Everett v. Collins, 2 Camp. C. 505. Though the cheque was given by an agent of the buyer, who was at the time indebted to his principal in a larger amount. Ib.

(h) Swancott v. Westgarth, 4 East, 75. Vid. infra, tit. TIME.

(i) B. C. P. 139. Harris v. Oke, Winch. Summ. Ass. 1759. In Buller's C. P. 139, it is laid down, that if a man declare upon a special agreement, and likewise upon a quantum meruit, and upon the trial prove a special agreement, but different from what is laid, he cannot recover on either count; not on the first, because of the variance; nor on the second, because there was a special agreement; but in a subsequent part of the same paragraph it is intimated that the plaintiff ought to have been suffered to recover on the indebitatus assumpsit count, provided the terms of the special agreement had been performed.(2) on account of illegal consideration, assumpsit will lie on an implied promise to pay what was justly due before the special agreement was made. Thurston v. Percival, 1 Pick. 415.]

---

(1) [See Ellis v. Wild, 6 Mass. Rep. 321. Wiseman & al. v. Lyman, 7 Mass. Rep. 286. The People v. Howell, 4 Johns. 296. Johnson v. Weed & al. 9 Johns. 310. Wilson v. Force, 6 Johns. 119. Putman v. Lewis, 8 Johns, 389. Markle v. Hatfield, 2 Johns. 455.]

(2) [Where there is a count on a special agreement, coupled with a general count for goods sold, the plaintiff may, undoubtedly, abandon his special count, even after he has attempted to prove it, and failed; and may then resort to his general count. But this can be done only where the proof is adapted to the general count. It can never be allowed, where the goods were, in truth, delivered under a special agreement, and where the plaintiff might, beyond all question, sustain a proper count on the special agreement. A contrary rule would enable the plaintiff in every case, by his mere volition, to convert a special contract into a general indebitatus assumpsit. Robertson v. Lynch, 18 Johns. 456. Where the plaintiff declares on a special contract, and adds the general counts, if the special count is ruled insufficient on demurrer, he cannot give the special contract in evidence under the general counts, on the issue of non-assumpsit. Culver v. Barnet, 1 Tyler, 182. In an action of general indebitatus assumpsit for services rendered, the plaintiff cannot give in evidence an agreement to pay him in specific articles: He should declare on the special agreement. Brooks v. Scott's Ex'r. 2 Munf. 314. S. P. Spratt v. McKinneys, 1 Bibb. 595. See Keyes v. Stone, 5 Mass. Rep. 391. Tuttle v. Mayo, 7 Johns. 132, and note (a) 2d edition. Where the special contract is still in force, the plaintiff cannot resort to the general counts. Raymond & al. v. Bernard, 12 Johns. 274. Jennings v. Camp, 13 Johns. 94. Clark v. Smith, 14 Johns. 326.]

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. ii. 385.

by performance to a mere duty (A). In Cooke v. Munstone (k), the plaintiff declared for not delivering thirty-five chaldrons of soil or breeze, according to a special contract. It was proved that the contract was for the delivery of thirty-five chaldrons of soil (only), and that the plaintiff had paid 2*l.* 5*s.*, as earnest, and that it had not been delivered on account of a dispute between the parties as to the wharf from whence the soil should be loaded; and it was held that the plaintiff could not recover on the special count, on account of the variance, soil and breeze being distinct things; nor upon the count for money had and received, since the contract had never been rescinded (l).

Indebitatus assumpsit: effect of special contract.

Where the plaintiff proves a special agreement and work done, but not pursuant to such agreement, it is said that he shall recover upon the quantum meruit; for otherwise he would not be able to recover at all (m). As if, on a quantum meruit for work and labour, the plaintiff should prove that he had built a house for the defendant, though the defendant should prove that there was a special agreement about the building of it, viz. that it should be built at such a time and in such a manner, and that the plaintiff had not performed the agreement, yet the plaintiff would recover on the quantum meruit, although such proof on the part of the defendant might be proper to lessen the quantum of damages (n).

*Where the plaintiff, under a special agreement, has executed the work improperly, since he has not done that which he engaged to do, and which is the consideration of the plaintiff's promise to pay, it seems to be now settled (o) that the plaintiff must recover, if at all, upon the quantum meruit, and that he cannot recover more than the value of the work and materials to the defendant (p). And where the plaintiff has executed his work so ill that the defendant has derived no benefit from it, or none which exceeds in value the sum which he has paid, the plaintiff is not entitled to recover at all (q), even for the labour and materials (1). *73

(k) 1 N. R. 351.

(l) See tit. MONEY HAD AND RECEIVED, for the different cases in which a contract is to be considered as rescinded. See also Towers v. Barret, 1 T. R. 133. Weston v. Downes, Doug. 23. Power v. Wells, Cowp. 818. Giles v. Edwards, 7 T. R. 181. Hunt v. Silk, 5 East, 449. Payne v. Bacomb, Doug. 628. [Mr. Day's note to Taylor v. Hare, 1 N. R. 263, (g).]

(m) B. N. P. 139. Mr. Keck's Case, at Oxon, 1744. But in such case it should be shown that the defendant has voluntarily derived some benefit from the work, for otherwise he would be made to pay for work which he never contracted for, and against his assent. See Ellis v. Hamlin, 3 Taunt. 55.

(n) It seems, however, to be clear, that the plaintiff is not entitled to recover on the quantum meruit or quantum valebant, where a specific sum or price has been agreed on. 2 Will. Saund. 122, n. 2. And as he may recover on the general indebitatus assumpsit as much as the work is worth, &c. the quantum meruit and valebant counts are unnecessary.

(o) Basten v. Butter, 7 East, 479. It had before been held that the remedy of the defendant was by a cross-action, and had been so ruled by Buller, J. in Brown v. Davis, Taunton Lent Ass. 1794, where the plaintiff had built a booth for the defendant on a race-course so ill that it fell down, and the defendant had paid part of the sum agreed for.

(p) But where this defence is intended to be set up, the defendant ought to give the plaintiff notice to that effect. Basten v. Butter, 17 East, 479.

(q) Basten v. Butter, 7 East, 473. Ellis v. Hamlin, 3 Taunt. 52; vid. infra, WORK AND LABOUR.

(A) (Where the terms of a special agreement have been performed by the plaintiff, and nothing remains, but the mere duty on the part of the defendant to pay money, the plaintiff may recover on the common money counts in assumpsit. Bomeisler v. Dobson, 5 Whart. 398. But where the time for the performance of a covenant under seal, was enlarged by parol, although the performance was only in pursuance of the parol enlargement, it was held that the plaintiff could not recover in assumpsit, but must bring covenant. Green v. Roberts, 5 Id. 84. Indebitatus assumpsit will not lie upon a special contract, unless the payment was to be in money, and the plaintiff has performed or executed the agreement on his part, and the time of payment has arrived. But if the contract was to pay in a bill or note due at a future day, and that day has passed, the action will lie. Carson v. Allen, 6 Dana, 397. Indebitatus assumpsit will not lie on a collateral undertaking to pay the debt of another; in such case the action must be special. Elder v. Warfield, 7 Har. & I. 391.)

(1) (Taft v. Inhabitants of Montague, 14 Mass. Rep. 282. Rose v. Parker, 2 Southard's Rep. 780.)

Where a builder undertook a work of specified dimensions, and deviated from the specification, it was held that he could not recover on a quantum meruit for work and labour and materials (r). Where a special contract has been entered into for the performance of a work, according to a specification, and deviations are made by mutual consent, the plaintiff is entitled to recover according to the terms of the contract and specification, as far as they are applicable, and upon a quantum meruit as to the rest (s). A lessor contracted to pay his tenant, at a valuation, for certain erections, pursuant to a plan to be agreed upon, provided they were completed in two months; no plan was agreed upon, and the lessee proceeded, after condition broken, with the assent of the lessor; and it was held, that the lessee might recover, as for work and labour, upon an implied promise, arising out of so many of the facts as were applicable to the new agreement (t). Upon an indebitatus assumpsit for board, schooling and clothes, with a count on a quantum meruit, stating, that, in consideration that the plaintiff had taken J. W. as a scholar in an academy kept by him, and that he had left it without giving due notice, the defendant promised to pay so much as the plaintiff reasonably deserved to have, it was held that the plaintiff was entitled to recover for one quarter beyond the time when J. W. left; a quarter's notice not having been given, according to the original terms of the contract (u).

Variance. The plaintiff, in this form of action, may recover in respect of any number of different claims included in the same count, provided it be applicable to them. Thus, under a count alleging that the defendant was indebted to the plaintiff in the sum of 1,000*l.* for work and labour, goods sold and delivered, money had and received, &c., the plaintiff may recover in respect of any number of demands proved within the different descriptions (x). Under the same count he may recover money due from the defendant solely, and money due from him as surviving partner (y).

*74 *In order to sustain the count for money paid, laid out and expended for Money paid. the use of another, the plaintiff must prove,

First. The payment of the money.

Secondly. At the request of the defendant, either express or implied (z).

(r) Ellis v. Hamlin, 3 Taunt. 52.

(s) Robson v. Godfrey,[1] 1 Starkie's C. 275. Pepper v. Burland, Peake's C. 103.

(t) Burn v. Miller, 4 Taunt. 745.

(u) Eardley v. Price, 2 N. R. 333. And see Gandall v. Pontigny,[2] 1 Starkie's C. 198. The African Company v. Langdon, 15 Vin. Ab. tit. Master and Servant, G. Pl. 5, Ch. Pr. 221. And Miles v. Solebay, 2 Mod. 242. [S. C. 4 Camp. 375. In this case, a servant hired by the quarter, having been discharged without sufficient cause in the middle of a quarter, was held entitled to his full quarter's wages, under a count in indebitatus assumpsit for work and labour.]

(x) Webber v. Tivil, 2 Saund. 121.

(y) Ib. and Richards v. Heather, 1 B. & A. 29.

(z) Vide supra, 69. Where the plaintiff, a sheriff's officer, had been obliged to pay the debt and costs on an attachment against the sheriff for not putting in bail above, and the defendant, both before and after the sheriff had been fixed, had repeatedly promised to indemnify the plaintiff, and repay him the money expended: held, that to the extent of the debt it was money paid to the defendant's use. White v. Leroux,[3] 1 M. & M. 347. The defendant received from H., as a security for goods sold, a bill accepted without consideration by the plaintiff; H. afterwards paid for the goods, and required the bill to be delivered back, which the defendant refused to do, and afterwards indorsed it over to a third person, who sued and recovered the amount from the plaintiff; held, that the plaintiff was entitled to recover the amount from the defendant as for so much money paid for his benefit, but not for the costs of the action, which he ought not to have defended. Bleaden v. Charles,[4] 7 Bing. 246. After an agreement by the inhabitants in vestry to prosecute a party for encroachments, a committee had been formed, who retained an attorney, and a judgment was obtained; the attorney having recovered the amount of his bill, and with costs of the action, against the plaintiff, one of the committee, it was held that he might recover contribution from the others as for money paid. Holmes v. Williamson, 6 M. & S. 158. Goods were consigned from India to London, the bill of lading expressed the freight to have been paid, the consignee indorsed the bill of lading for value, after which it was found, that, through the default of the shipper, the freight had not been paid; held, that the ship owners could not detain the goods until payment of the freight from the assignees of the bill of lading, and that the brokers of the latter, paying

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. ii. 380. [2] Id. ii. 354. [3] Id. xxii. 331. [4] Id. xx, 119.

The plaintiff must show an actual payment of money, or its equivalent, the mere giving a security for the payment is not sufficient (A). A surety for the defendant, who had been discharged under an insolvent debtors' Act, was obliged to give a bond and warrant of attorney as a new security for the debt; and it was held that he could not hold the defendant to bail as for money paid to his use (a). Payment of the money.

So, where one of several joint makers of a bill gave the holder a bond, and then sued the rest for contribution, in an action for money paid, it was held that the action was not maintainable, no money having in fact been paid (b). And it has been held that the receipt of stock cannot be considered as the receipt of money, either upon an agreement to pay a per centage on the receipt of money (c), or in an action for money had and received (d).

*The damages to be recovered are measured by the sum which the plaintiff has actually at the express or the implied request of the defendant. Where the payment has been compulsory, the plaintiff cannot recover more than he was under the necessity of paying; and therefore although bail above may recover from their principal any sum which they have fairly expended in endeavouring to take him, they cannot recover the costs which have been occasioned by unadvisedly resisting the payment of those expenses (e). *75

Secondly. At the defendant's request.—Where there is no request, either express or implied, the action cannot be maintained (f), and therefore it cannot be maintained where the money has been paid against the express direction of the party for whose use it is supposed to have been paid. Where two parishes had long been united, and paid a joint sexton, and afterwards one claimed a right of electing a separate sexton, it was held that the other parish could not, after notice, recover a moiety of the sum Request.

the freight in order to obtain the goods, after instructions from their employers not to pay the freight, it having been paid in India, as they supposed, paid it in their own wrong, and could not recover it as money paid for their principals. Howard v. Tucker,[1] 1 B. & Ad. 712. One who has been obliged to pay a joint debt, cannot recover a proportion from the rest of the share of one jointly liable who has become insolvent. Brown v. Lee,[2] 6 B. & C. 689.

(a) Taylor v. Higgins, 3 East, 169.

(b) Maxwell v. Jameson, 2 B. & A. 51.

(c) Jones v. Brindley, 1 East, 1.

(d) Nightingale v. Devismes, 5 Burr. 2589. The cases of Taylor v. Higgins, and Maxwell v. Jameson, seem to overrule that of Barclay v. Gooch, 2 Esp. C. 271; where the plaintiffs having become sureties for the defendant, and having been called upon after his bankruptcy to pay the money, gave their promissory note for the amount; and Lord Kenyon held, that as the club had consented to take the note as money in payment, it was to be so considered for the purpose of the action, and the plaintiff had a verdict, and a new trial was refused. In Israel v. Douglas, 1 H. B. 239, the defendants being indebted to Delvaleé, who was indebted to the plaintiff, Delvaleé gave an order to the plaintiff, on the defendant's requiring them to pay what was due to him to the plaintiff, and they accepted the order, but on Delvaleé's becoming bankrupt, refused to pay the amount; and the Court of Common Pleas (Wilson, J. dissentiente) held, that the defendants were to be considered as having received so much money as they owed Delvaleé to the use of the plaintiff. Lawrence, J. in the case of Taylor v. Higgins, said, that the case of Israel v. Douglas had been afterwards disapproved of upon that point, and that he had a note of the case, which differed materially from that cited. Wilson, J. although he differed from the rest of the court in their opinion, that this was money had and received, was of opinion that this was evidence under the count, upon an account stated. And see Wade v. Wilson, 1 East, 195; Surtees v. Hubbard, 4 Esp. C. 203; and infra, 79 (g).

(e) Fisher v. Fullows, 5 Esp. 171.

(f) Alexander v. Vane, 1 M. & W. 711.

(A) [It seems that a count for money paid can never be sustained without proof either of an actual payment in money or in negotiable paper. The giving of a bond is not sufficient to prove the allegation. Camming v. Hackly, 8 Johns. R. 202. Craig v. Craig, 5 Rawle, 91. But the giving of a note is not equivalent to the payment of money, unless it is so received. Van Ostrand v. Reed, 1 Wend. 424. This count will not lie where property has been parted with. Morrison v. Berkey, 7 Serg. & R. 246. Dobler v. Fisher, 14 Id. 179; though it has been held to be otherwise where property has been received as money. Ainslie v. Wilson, 7 Cow. 662.)

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xx. 478. [2]Id. xiii. 294.

paid as the sexton's salary, as money paid to the use of the seceding parish (g). So where the holder of stock authorized his broker to contract for the transfer of it, upon the opening of the stock which was then shut, and the broker sold without disclosing the name of his principal, and the stock rising in value, the principal refused to transfer, alleging that the broker had sold the stock at a lower rate than he was authorized to do, and the broker paid the deficiency to the purchaser; it was held that since he had paid the money without the consent of the principal, and could not be considered as a guarantee for his principal, he could not recover for money paid to the use of the principal (h).

The request may be implied from the special circumstances. The action lies against a shipowner for money supplied to the captain, either in a foreign or English port, for necessary repairs, provided it be expressly borrowed for that purpose (i) and be so applied. A request is never implied when a party is compelled to pay money through his own neglect, or breach of duty (k). (A).

Assent implied; surety.

The defendant's assent is implied (l) in all cases where the plaintiff is compelled to pay the debt of another through his default (m); as where a surety is compelled to pay money on the default or his principal (B). The plaintiff in such case must prove the execution of the bond, or other instrument, by which he became the surety for the defendant, and that he be-

(g) Stokes v. Lewis, 1 T. R. 20.

(h) Child v. Morley, 8 T. R. 610. So if the vendor of stock to be transferred on a certain day make default, the vendee purchasing the amount with his own money cannot recover the price as money paid. Lightfoot v. Creed,[1] 8 Taunt. 268.

(i) Thacker v. Moates, 1 Mo. & R. 79. Robinson v. Lyall, 7 Price, 392. Rocher v. Busher,[2] 1 Starkie's C. 27. Palmer v. Gooch,[3] 2 Starkie's C. 428.

(k) Pitcher v. Bailey, 8 East, 171. Copp v. Topham, 6 East, 392.

(l) The defendant is not liable in this form of action, unless he be primarily liable or the liability be incurred at his express request. An agreement with the plaintiff to pay money to a third party is not sufficient. Spencer v. Parry,[4] 3 Ad. & Ell. 331. Lubbock v. Tribe, 3 M. & W. 607.

(m) Exall v. Partridge, 8 T. R. 310; Dawson v. Linton, 5 B. & Ad. 521. The plaintiff need not declare specially. Vanderheyden v. Paiba, 3 Wils. 528. Bail may recover such sums as they have been necessarily and fairly obliged to expend; as in sending after and securing their principal after he has absconded, in order to surrender him. Fisher v. Fallows, 5 Esp. C. 571. In the case of Exall v. Partridge, above referred to, A. B. C. being joint lessees of premises, and B. and C. having assigned their interest to A., the plaintiff, with notice of the facts, placed his carriage on the premises where A. carried on business as a coach builder, to be repaired; the carriage was seized as a distress for rent, and the plaintiff having paid rent in the name of the three to redeem his goods, it was held that all three were liable on an implied promise. Note, that if the carriage had been sold, and the money paid over to the landlord, the plaintiff could not have maintained his form of action, for then this money would not have been paid by him. Moore v. Pycke, 11 East, 52. The law will not sanction a promise of repayment where the necessity for payment has been occasioned by the default or failure of the party who has so paid it; as where an auctioneer, for want of taking proper precautions in putting up an estate for sale has been compelled to pay the auction duty. Copp v. Topham, 6 East, 392. But a bailiff who seizes and sells the goods of a bankrupt after an act of bankruptcy has been committed, may after a recovery against himself and the execution creditor, in an action of trover by the assignees, recover from the creditor the amount as paid under mistake, though he cannot sue him upon an implied engagement to indemnify him. 2 Camp. 452. So there is no implied assumpsit on the part of a sheriff to indemnify an auctioneer employed by the sheriff's bailiff to sell goods under a fi. fa. Farebrother v. Ansley, 1 Camp. 343. Where a person has been induced ignorantly to commit an illegal act, an express promise of indemnity is valid. Fletcher v. Harcott, Hutt. 55. Secus where the party indemnified had notice, or may from the nature of his office, be presumed to have known, that the act was illegal. Martin v. Blithman, Yelv. 197. But it seems that where one person at the request of another ignorantly commits a trespass, he is entitled to a remedy in doing that which is apparently legal. An executor who has paid legacy duties in full, and afterwards paid the legacy duty, may recover from a legatee. Foster v. Ley,[5] 2 Bing. N. C. 269.

(A) (Money paid will lie where one obtains money by extortion or oppression, and by taking an undue advantage of a party's situation, or by deceit and mala fide. Bliss v. Thompson, 4 Mass. 488.)

(B) (The first endorser of a negotiated accommodation note who pays the whole sum cannot call on the second endorser for contribution though the maker is insolvent. Hixon v. Reid, 2 Litt. 174. M'Donald v. Magruder, 3 Peters, 470.)

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. iv. 100. [2] Id. ii. 280. [3] Id. iii. 416. [4] Id. xxx. 107. [5] Id. xxix. 331.

came so at the request of the defendant, or that he assented to it: (1) and that he was called upon to pay the money, and gave the defendant notice to pay it.

*Notice to the party for whom the indemnity is given is not necessary previously to defending an action on a guarantee: but if he refuse after notice to defend the action, he is estopped from saying that the plaintiff was not bound to pay the money (n). *76

Where there are two sureties, each of whom has been obliged to pay part of the debt, separate actions should be brought (o), unless the payment has been made out of a joint fund (p). Where several are sureties for another, and one of them is compelled to pay the whole debt, he may by separate actions compel the others to contribute their proportions towards his loss (q). (2).

The defendant as principal, and the plaintiff as his surety, made a joint and several promissory note; the holder gave time to the defendant, L., a stranger, subscribing his name by way of additional security; the plaintiff having paid the money, is entitled to recover the amount as money paid; the payment was not voluntary and the subscription did not annul his original liability (r).

Where one who has been bail sues another who was bail with him, he must prove the judgment as well as the execution (s).

Money paid by compulsion (A).

Where a verdict has been obtained against several in an action of assumpsit, and the damages have been levied upon one, he may maintain

(n) Duffield v. Scott, 3 T. R. 374. Smith v. Compton,[1] 3 B. & Ad. 408.

(o) Beard v. Boulcot, 3 B. & P. 235.

(p) Osborne v. Harper, 5 East, 225; as where the two sureties jointly borrowed the money which they paid, and gave a joint note for it.

(q) Cowell v. Edwards, 2 B. & P. 268. Johnson v. Johnson, 11 Mass. Rep. 359. Bachelder v. Fiske & al. 17 Mass. Rep. 464. The People v. Duncan, 1 Johns. 311. Secus, where the surety who has paid induced the co-surety to join, and has taken a bill of sale from the principal for his own security. Turner v. Davis, 2 Esp. C. 478.

(r) Catton v. Simpson,[2] 8 Ad. & Ell. 136.

(s) Belldon v. Tankard,[3] 1 Marsh, 6.

(1) (The surety may recover in this form of action where he has paid the debt of his principal, by conveying land which is accepted in satisfaction. Barney v. Seely, 2 Wend. 481. Randall v. Rich, 11 Mass. 498. If a surety pay in depreciated paper he is entitled to remuneration only to the extent of the value he actually paid. Crosier v. Grayson, 4 J. J. Marshall, 517. Co-trespassers and other joint wrong-doers are not entitled to contribution, whoever pays the whole of a judgment recovered against them. Campbell v. Phelps, 1 Pick. 65. Dupuy v. Johnson, 1 Bibb. 562. Where money is paid by a surety for two principals, the law implies a promise by each principal to reimburse the surety for the whole amount paid. Duncan v. Keiffer, 3 Binney, 126. But where A. was surety in a bond for B., and C. agreed with B. that if B. would pay one half of the debt, he would pay the other half on account of C., and B. accordingly paid one half; it was held that A. could not maintain an action against both principals to recover the amount he had paid; the express agreement counteracting the general implication of law. Ibid. A surety, qua surety, cannot call on his principal at law, until he has actually paid the money. Powell v. Smith, 8 Johns. 249. Thus if judgment be obtained against a surety, who is taken in execution and afterwards discharged under an insolvent act, he cannot maintain an action against the principal, without showing payment, or a promise to indemnify him from all damages and costs, ibid. And if the surety of A. and his partners, pay the amount, he can bring no action against the partners, but must look to A. alone. Tom v. Goodrich, 2 Johns. 213. See also Stuby v. Champlin, 4 Johns. 461. See Hassinger v. Solms, 5 Serg. & Rawle. 4.)

(2) [In North Carolina, one joint surety, who has paid the whole debt cannot maintain assumpsit against the other, without an express promise,—but must seek relief in chancery. Carrington v. Carson, Cam. & Nor. 216. And if a person become surety, at the request of another surety who pays the debt, he is not liable to the latter, in law or equity for contribution. Taylor v. Savage, 12 Mass. Rep. 102. If one surety in a bail-bond voluntarily satisfy the judgment recovered against the principal, after execution issued, and non est inventus returned, but before scire facias served and entered, he cannot compel contribution from the co-surety, because the latter is thus deprived of the privilege of surrendering the principal. Skillin v. Merrill, 16 Mass. Rep. 40.]

(A) (The owner of property in the possession of a tenant of demised property, may buy it on a sale of the same as a distress for rent and bring his action for money paid against the tenant. Wells v. Porter, 7 Wend. 119. If a defendant acting bonâ fide and without connivance with the plaintiff, is compelled in due actions against the rest for money paid to their use (t), and the record will *77 *be evidence against them (u). But no action can be maintained by one of several co-trespassers, or other wrong-doers, to recover such contribution; for where the transaction is illegal, the law will not raise any implied assumpsit (x). So where the plaintiff, in consequence of the default of the defendant, has been compelled to pay money to relieve himself, which the defendant ought to have paid, the defendant's consent will be implied; as where the goods of the plaintiff, a lodger in the house of the defendant, are distrained upon by the landlord, and the plaintiff, on default of the defendant's paying his rent, pays the amount to redeem his goods (y). Where an accommodation acceptor defends an action at the request of the drawer, he may recover the costs as money paid to the use of the drawer (z). Where a carrier by mistake delivered to B. the goods of C., and B. appropriated the goods, and the carrier on demand, and without action, paid the money, it was held that he might recover against B. for money paid to his use (a).

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxiii. 106. [2]Id. xxxv. 355. [3]Id. iv. 326.

A. and B. were employed as assurance brokers, and A. paid the premium with his own money; after the bankruptcy of B. it was held that A. might maintain the action in his own name (b).

In an illegal transaction.

If one of two debtors pay the whole of a joint debt, the law gives him a right to recover a moiety in an action for money paid to the use of the other, on the ground that both are liable to pay; but if one pay the whole of a debt in furtherance of an illegal contract, he cannot recover a moiety upon an implied contract to pay, since no implied contract can arise out of an illegal transaction (A). And although the contrary was formerly
*78 held (c), it *seems to be now settled, that if one of the parties pay the whole

(t) Merryweather v. Nixon, 8 T. R. 186. There may, however, be contribution if the plaintiff were not aware that the transactions were illegal or doubtful. Betts v. Gibbins,[1] 2 Ad. & Ell. 57. Pearson v. Skelton, 1 M. & W. 504.

(u) Dic. in Pawel v. Layton, 2 N. R. 365. (x) Merryweather v. Nixon, 8 T. R. 186.

(y) Exall v. Partridge, 8 T. R. 308; supra, note (m). It has even been held, that an intermediate indorser of a bill who pays part of the amount to a remote indorsee, who has obtained a verdict against the acceptor for the whole amount, but who has not levied an execution for the part so paid, may recover the sum so paid from the acceptor, though there was no privity between them, except on the bill which the indorsee still continued to hold. Pownal v. Ferrand,[2] 6 B. & C. 439. But he cannot recover the costs of a former action. Dawson v. Morgan,[3] 9 B. & C. 618; and see Smith v. Napier, supra, 147; Fisher v. Fallows, supra, 76. Money paid by the drawer and indorser of a bill of exchange to the indorsee is paid for the acceptor. Le Sage v. Johnson, Forrest, 23. A. holds a lease under a covenant for re-entry for non-repair, and underlets to B., who undertakes to repair within three months after notice; after default by B., A. may repair, and recover the amount expended. Colley v. Stretton,[4] 2 B. & C. 273. Note, the plaintiff declared specially.

(z) Howes v. Martin, 1 Esp. C. 162.

(a) Brown v. Hodgson, 4 Taunt. 189. But see Sills v. Laing, 4 Camp. 81.

(b) Thacker v. Shepherd,[5] 2 Chitty's C. T. M. 652.

(c) In Faikney v. Reynous, 4 Burr. 2069, the defendant had given a bond to the plaintiff to secure the amount of one moiety of 3,000*l.*, paid by the plaintiff for the differences in certain illegal stock-jobbing transactions for himself and one Richardson, in which transactions the plaintiff and Richardson were jointly concerned; and the Court held, that since the bond was not given for the payment of the composition-money, which is prohibited by the statute, but only to secure the repayment of money which the plaintiff course of law to pay what another, and not that plaintiff is entitled to, he may in an action by that other against him to recover the same money, plead the former judgment in bar. The money so recovered is to be considered as money had and received to the use of the real owner, who may maintain assumpsit against the person so receiving. Mayer v. Faulkrod, 4 Wash. C. C. R. 503. So where money has been paid under such circumstances as gives it the character of a payment by compulsion, as money paid to release a raft of lumber detained in order to exact an illegal toll. Chase v. Devnial, 7 Greenl. 134.)

(A) (Where money has been paid upon an illegal transaction, if the party paying it be not equally guilty with the other party, as where the latter has taken advantage of the former and oppressed him, it may be recovered back. Inhabitants of Worcester v. Eaton, 11 Mass. 376. Where the parties are in pari delicto, it cannot be recovered back. Greenwood v. Curtis, 6 Mass. 381. Barnard v. Crane, 1 Tyler, 457. See also Perkins v. Savage, 15 Wend. 412.)

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxix. 29. [2]Id. xiii. 230. [3]Id. xvii. 457. [4]Id. ix. 83. [5]Id. xviii. 444.

of such a debt at the express request of another party, and upon a promise of repayment, he cannot maintain the action, even upon the express promise. It seems to be now also settled on broad and satisfactory principles, notwithstanding the doubts which once prevailed, that money advanced by one person to another, with a knowledge that it is to be applied in furtherance of an illegal purpose, cannot, after it has been so applied, be recovered. For another in an illegal transaction.

In the late case of Cannan v. Bryce (d), which was an action to recover money lent, and applied to the borrower for the express purpose of settling losses on illegal stock-jobbing transactions, to which the lender was no party, it was held, on very broad principles, that such an action could not be maintained. The distinction between malum prohibitum and malum in se, was denied. It was said, that if it be unlawful in one man to pay the money, how can it be lawful in another to furnish him with the means of payment; and it was held, that the case was not distinguishable in principle from that of the druggist, who sold to the brewer, for the purpose of being mixed with beer, certain drugs, which the latter was prohibited by act of parliament from mixing with the beer (e).

Where an officer permitted a prisoner to go at large, on his promise to pay the debt, in consequence of which the officer himself was obliged to had advanced for Richardson, upon contracts in which they had been jointly concerned, the bond was good.

It was observed by Lord Kenyon, in Petrie v. Hannay, 3 T. R. 418, that the decision in Faikney v. Reynous turned wholly on the consideration, that the action was upon a bond, and that nothing had been disclosed in the plea which showed any illegality between the parties, and that they could not take into consideration matter not properly introduced by the plea. But according to the report, 2 Burr. 2069, the Court seemed to have considered that the agreement to repay was not illegal; and see the opinions of Ashurst, Buller, and Grose, Justices, in Petrie v. Hannay.

That case was as follows: A. and B. having been jointly engaged in stock-jobbing transactions, came to a settlement with their broker, who paid all the differences; A paid his own share to the broker, and drew a bill on B. for his share, which B. accepted; A.'s executors were afterwards sued upon the bill by the broker, who recovered the amount, and the exeeutors afterwards brought an action for money paid for the defendant's use. It seemed to be admitted on all hands, that the money was to be considered as paid with the consent of the defendant; and the question turned upon the illegality of the transaction. Three of the Judges, Ashurst, Buller, and Grose, were of opinion that the money was recoverable, since the action was not founded on any promise arising by implication of law out of the illegal transaction, but on an express subsequent promise; and they considered the case as undistinguishable from that of Faikney v. Reynous, and as standing upon the same footing as if the broker had paid the amount with the consent of the defendant, and brought the action; or the testator had himself paid him. Lord Kenyon was of opinion, that A. and B. were to be considered as particeps criminis, and that the money was not recoverable. In Steers v. Lashley, 6 T. R. 61, the defendant having engaged in stock-jobbing transactions with the different persons, his broker paid the differences, and a bill was drawn by the broker, and accepted by the defendant, for part of the sum awarded by the plaintiff, and three others, to be due from the defendant to the broker on account of these differences; and it was held that the plaintiff, who was the indorsee of the bill, and privy to the transaction, could not recover upon it. And in Brown v. Turner, 7 T. R. 630, where the broker had paid the differences in stock-jobbing transactions, and the defendant, his employer, had accepted a bill for the amount, the court held, on the construction of the act of parliament, and the authority of Steers v. Lashley, that the plaintiff, to whom the broker had indorsed the bill after it became due, was not entitled to recover. In Mitchell and others v. Cockburne, 2 H. B. 380, (Buller, J. being absent), A. and B. had entered into a partnership for insuring ships in the name of A., and A. had paid the whole of the losses, and it was held that he could not recover a moiety of such payments from B.; and Eyre, L. C. J. distinguished the case from those of Faikney v. Reynous, and Petrie v. Hannay, since those cases were one step removed from the illegal contract itself, and did not arise immediately out of it; and Heath, J. observed, that it did not appear that the payments had been made by A. at the request or with the consent of B. In the case of Aubert v. Maze, (2 B. & P. 371,) it was held that money paid by one of two partners on joint insurances, could not be recovered from the other partner. Lord Eldon in this case questioned the soundness of the decision in Petrie v. Hannay, and the distinction grounded upon an express consent of the partner; and Heath and Rooke, Justices, denied the distinction between the case of money paid in a concern which is malum prohibitum, and where it is paid in a transaction which is malum in se. The cases of Booth v. Hodgson (6 T. R.) and Sullivan v. Greaves, (Park on Insurance, 8,) were also relied upon by the Court as strong instances to show that the Court would not assist a plaintiff in enforcing an agreement which is contrary to law. [See 13 Ves. 313, 14 Ves. 191.]

(d)[1] 3 B. & A. 179.

(e) Langton and others v. Hughes and others, 1 M. & S. 594.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. v. 255.

pay the creditor, it was held that he could not recover the money from the *79 *debtor, having been guilty of a breach of duty, from which he could not derive a cause of action (f).

Money lent. The assignment of a debt without the assent of the debtor does not confer a right of action, the ordinary rule being, that choses in action are not assignable; but if the debtor assent to the arrangement, it seems that the transaction is equivalent to a loan by the assignee to the debtor. If A. owe money to B., and B. owe the same sum to C., and the parties agree to the transfer, it is equivalent to a loan by C. to A. (g). Where the money has been advanced to the defendant's agent, the authority of the defendant to the agent must be proved. Such authority may arise out of the special circumstances. Thus a shipowner is liable for money advanced to the master in case of necessity (h).

A promissory note given by the defendant to the plaintiff is evidence under this count (i), since the note imports the maker's having so much money of the payee in his hands. But the mere circumstance of the defendant having received money from the plaintiff is primâ facie evidence of the payment of an antecedent debt, and not of the loan of money (k).

So the receipt of money by the defendant, on a cheque drawn by the plaintiff on his banker, primâ facie imports a payment, and not a loan, and is not evidence to go to a jury; unless the plaintiff can give evidence of money transactions between himself and the defendant, from which a loan can be inferred, or of some application by the defendant to borrow money (l).

Interest cannot be recovered without proof of a contract to that effect express or implied, or unless a written security be given for the payment of the money at a time specified (m).

A lender of money who has received goods as a security, may recover without proof of having returned or tendered the goods (n).

Money had and received. Under the count for money had and received, the plaintiff must prove, 1st, the receipt of money by the defendant (o); 2dly, that it was received to his (the plaintiff's) use; i. e. his title to it (p) (A).

(f) Pitcher v. Bailey, 8 East, 171.

(g) Wade v. Wilson, 1 East, 195. The assent of the debtor is essential, for he may have an account against the assignor, and choose to insist on his set-off; but if there be anything like an assent on the part of the holder of the money, it seems that the action for money had and received may be supported. See Lord Ellenborough's observations in Surtees v. Hubbard, 4 Esp. C. 203; and supra, 75, note (d). It must appear that at the time of the promise to pay the debt a defined and ascertained sum was due. Fairlie v. Denton,[1] 8 B. & C. 395. Where the debtor of the plaintiff having goods at the defendant's wharves, gave an authority to the defendant to sell them, and out of the proceeds to pay the plaintiff the balance of freight due to him, and the defendant accordingly sold the goods and received the proceeds, held that the authority did not require a stamp as an order for payment of money, and that, after the sale and receipt of the money, the plaintiff was entitled to sue for money had and received. Humphreys v. Briant,[2] 4 C. & P. 157.

(h) Rocher v. Busher,[3] 1 Starkie's C. 27. Even in an English port. Robinson v. Lyall, 7 Price, 292.

(i) Story v. Atkins, 2 Str. 719; B. N. P. 136, 137. Harris v. Huntbach, 1 Burr. 373. [Kiddie v. Debrutx, 1 Hayw. 420.]

(k) Welsh v. Seaborn,[4] 1 Starkie's C. 474. If a parent advance money to a child, it is supposed to be by way of gift, per Bayley, J. Hick v. Keats,[5] 4 B. & C. 71.

(l) Cary v. Gerrish, 4 Esp. C. 9. [See Cushing v. Gore et al. 15 Mass. Rep. 74.]

(m) Calton v. Bragg, 15 East, 223. But see Trelawny v. Thomas, 1 H. B. 303; and tit. Interest.

(n) Lawton v. Newland,[6] 2 Starkie's C. 73.

(o) It has been held that proof must be given of the receipt of some particular sum, and that in default the plaintiff must be nonsuited. Bernasconi v. Anderson,[7] M. & M. 183. Harvey v. Archbold, 5 D. & R. 504. But see below, and Leeson v. Smith,[8] 4 N. & M. 304.

(p) The action cannot be maintained if it be against equity and good conscience that the money should be recovered. Davis v. Bryan,[9] 6 B. & C. 651.

(A) (See Jackson v. Mayo, 11 Mass. 152. Evidence of bank notes and any other property received as

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. xv. 246. [2] Id. xix. 310. [3] Id. ii. 281. [4] Id. ii. 473. [5] Id. x. 277. [6] Id. iii. 251. [7] Id. xxii. 285. [8] Id. xxx. 372. [9] Id. xiii. 290.

*It must be proved that the money came into the hands of the defendant. And therefore the action will not lie to recover stock (q). The action is not maintainable against one of two grantors of an annuity, (upon failure of the annuity-deed for want of a memorial), who was a mere surety, and had received no part of the consideration (r). But a debt may be transferred to a third person by mutual arrangement between the parties, on a sufficient consideration. If A. be the creditor of B. for money had and received, and A. himself is indebted to C. in the same amount, and by mutual agreement A.'s debt is cancelled, and C. is to be the creditor of B., the money in B.'s hands is had and received to the use of C. (s). A bill of *exchange payable to the order of the drawer, is evidence in an action by the drawer against the acceptor of money had and received by the latter *81

Actual receipt of the money.

(q) Nightingale v. Devismes, 5 Burr. 2589. Nor against the finder of bank notes, although if they be not produced at the trial it may be presumed that their value in money has been received. Noyes v. Price, 16 G. 3; Roscoe on Evidence, 300; Select Ca. 242; Chitty on Bills, 426, 5th ed.; Longchamp v. Kenny, Doug. 138. Where the defendant, captain of the plaintiff's ship, drew at Rio a bill on the plaintiff's agent in London, for disbursements, and the bill was paid in London by the agent; it was held by the Court of C. P. that there was not sufficient evidence of the actual receipt of the money by the defendant. Scott v. Millar,[1] 3 Bing. N. C. 811. Qu?

(r) Stratton v. Rastall, 2 T. R. 366. Though he has given a receipt for the money, Ib. And see Scholey v. Daniel, 2 B. & P. 540. In an action for debt for penalties against the surveyors under the stat. 13 Geo. 3, c. 78, s. 48, by the succeeding surveyors, for not paying over monies in their hands, with a count also for money had and received, it was held that as it appeared that the monies collected had only come to the hands of one of the defendants, the count for money had and received could not be supported against the two, as there must be evidence of something done by each touching the receipt of the money. Heudebourch v. Langton,[2] 3 C. & P. 566. A member in a banking firm forges a power of attorney to transfer stock belonging to trustees, and after the transfer makes entries of the crediting the trustees with supposed dividends upon the stock, on the ground of which cheques are drawn by the trustees on the firm, and paid. Though the circumstances afford primâ facie evidence against the firm of the receipt of such dividends, the amount is not money had and received by the firm to the use of the trustees; for the transfer being a nullity, they are entitled to receive the dividends at the Bank of England; but they may recover damages for the false representation that such dividends had been received. Hume v. Bolland, 2 Tyr. 575.

(s) Wilson v. Coupland, 5 B. & A. 228. For the debt may be considered as a loan by C. to B., or as so much money had and received by B. to the use of C., and as so much due on an account stated. See Israel v. Douglas, 1 H. B. 239. Ld. Ellenborough's observations in Wade v. Wilson, 1 East, 195. Surtees v. Hubbard, 4 Esp. C. 203; supra, 75, 79. It is essential to such an agreement that A.'s debt is extinguished. Cuzon v. Chadley,[3] 3 B. & C. 591. Wharton v. Walker,[4] 4 B. &. C. 163. And the debt transferred must be a wrong demand. Blackledge v. Hurman, 1 Mo. & R. 344. Wharton v. Walker,[4] 4 B. & C. 163. The expenses of a conveyance on the sale of an estate were to be paid equally by the vendor and vendee, and it was afterwards agreed that if the vendor would pay the whole of the expense of another transaction, the vendor should be discharged of his moiety of the expense of the conveyance; it was held that the transaction was the same as if the vendor had paid the vendee a sum of money, the vendee taking upon himself the vendor's share of the expenses of the conveyance, and that an attorney who had for a consideration undertaken to effect the conveyance, and not to apply for further remuneration, if the vendor objected to pay any expenses, was entitled to recover against the vendee the amount of such expenses as money had and received to his use. Noy v. Reynolds,[5] 1 Add. & Ell. 159. Such an arrangement of transfer is binding, although before its completion the intermediate debtor to the one and creditor to the other party becomes bankrupt. Crowfoot v. Gurney, 9 Doug. 372. Note, that in that case the debt due to the middle party was not ascertained at the time of the agreement, but had been ascertained previous to the bankruptcy. But see on this latter point Fairlie v. Denton,[6] 8 B. & C. 395. So the taking credit from a third person is in some instances equivalent to a receipt of money. A. on the 18th paid notes of the Dartmouth bank into the Totnes bank, to receive interest from that time. The Dartmouth bank continued to pay on their notes till the evening of the 19th, when the bank failed. On the morning of the 19th, according to the course of dealing between the two banks, the Dartmouth gave credit to the Totnes bank for the amount of the notes, and it was held that A. was entitled to recover, for the giving credit was equivalent to payment. Gillard v. Wise,[7] 5 B. & C. 134. See 2 Ad. & Ell. 36.[8] Spratt v. Hobhouse,[9] 4 Bing. 173, where, per Best, C. J., the principle in all the cases is that if a thing be received as money, it may be treated as such in an action for money had and received.

money, will support this action. Mann v. Waite, 17 Mass. 560. Witherup v. Hill, 9 S. & R. 11. Under the statute of Anne against gaming, this action lies for money lost at gaming, though the winner was paid in goods. Hook v. Boleter, 3 Har. & M'Hen. 348. Assumpsit for money had and received may be maintained by the indorsee of a promissory note against any previous party to the note. Ellsworth v. Brewer, 11 Pick. 316.)

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxxii. 334. [2] Id. xiv. 453. [3] Id. x. 191. [4] Id. x. 302. [5] Id. xxviii. 58. [6] Id. xv. 246. [7] Id. xi. 177. [8] Id. xxix. 22. [9] Id. xiii. 395.

to the use of the drawer (t). The receipt of provincial notes by the defendant, which he has received as money, is evidence of a receipt of money by him (u) (A); and it may be laid down as a general rule, that if a thing be received as money, it may be treated and recovered as such (x) (B).

Upon a count for money had and received by the defendant to the use of the plaintiff, the latter may prove the receipt of money by the defendant and his deceased partner, and also the receipt of money by the defendant himself to the use of the plaintiff; for every partner is liable for the whole, and the proving that another person, together with the defendant received the money, does not negative the allegation that the defendant himself received it, and therefore there is no variance (y).

Money received by the defendant's authorized agent, is money received by the defendant. But where money is received by the mutual agent of both plaintiff and defendant, it cannot be recovered by the former as received by the latter to his use (z).

Where money was put into a banking-house, for the purpose of taking up a particular bill then lying there for payment, although the banker's clerk said at the time that he could not give up the bill, but took the money, it was held to be money had and received to the use of the owner and holder of the bill, and that it could not be applied by the bankers to the general account of the acceptor, who had paid the money (a) (C). But where A. sent bills to B., his banker, directing him to pay part of the produce to C., and B. refused to act upon the order, but received the produce of the bills, it was held that C. could not maintain an action against B. for so much money had and received to his use, since, as between the plaintiff and defendant, there was no privity, either express or implied (b).

And where money has been received, with directions to pay it to another in discharge of a bill, but the order is revoked before payment, and the receiver is directed to hold it for another purpose, the holder of the bill cannot maintain this action (c).

A banker who takes credit with the underwriter for a loss due to the principal, whereupon the name of the underwriter is proved from the (t) Thomson v. Morgan, 3 Camp. 101. And see BILLS OF EXCHANGE.

(u) Pickard v. Banks, 13 East, 20. Fox v. Cutworth, cited 4 Bing. 179. And even in a criminal case, on an indictment for obtaining money by means of a false token, the receipt of a bank-note of the same amount has been held to be evidence to the jury of the receipt of the money at the Bank.

(x) Per Best, J. in Spratt v. Hobhouse, 4 Bing. 179. An agent for the sale of goods, refusing to account after a reasonable time, may be presumed to have sold them. Hunter v. Welsh,[1] 1 Starkie's C. 224. But where a defendant, sued for the proceeds of a bill, admitted that he had paid it into his banker's, and the banker's clerk was called to prove that credit was given to the defendant for the bill, the evidence was held to be insufficient without the production of the bill. Atkinson v. Owen,[2] 2 Ad. & Ell. 35; 4 N. & M. 123.

(y) Richards v. Heather, 1 B. & A. 29, in which the doctrine laid down in Spalding v. Mure and others, 6 T. R. 363, was overruled.

(z) Goods were consigned to A. and B., in return for goods sent out by the plaintiff, with orders to sell and hold the proceeds to the order of the defendant, who had a lien on the goods; it was held that the plaintiff could not recover the surplus from the defendant. Tenant v. Mackintosh, 4 B. & A. 594.

(a) De Bernales v. Fuller, 14 East, 590, in the note.

(b) Williams v. Everett, 14 East, 582.

(c) Stewart v. Fry,[3] 7 Taunt. 339; 1 Moore, 74.

(A) (Mason v. Waite, 17 Mass. R. 560. Phillips v. Blake, 1 Metc. 156. Contra Filgo v. Penny, 2 Murph. 182.)

(B) (Ainslie v. Wilson, 7 Cow. 662. Arms v. Ashley, 4 Pick. 74.)

(C) (But if there be no privity between the parties there must be mala fides, an unjust receipt of the money, or at least a receipt of it without a valuable consideration. Rapelye v. Emory, 2 Dall. 54. Winter v. Bank of New York, 2 Caines, 337. Hall v. Marston, 17 Mass. R. 579. Eagle Bank v. Smith, 5 Conn. 71. Graham v. Bank of U. States, 5 Ohio, 266.)

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. ii. 365. [2]Id. xxix. 22. [3]Id. ii. 129.

policy, is *estopped from objecting that he has not received the money (d). Where an agent refuses to account for property delivered to him to be sold, and the contrary does not appear, a presumption arises that he has sold it, and received the value. And the same presumption may be made against a wrong-doer who has wrongfully possessed himself of property which he refuses to produce or account for (e). But where goods distrained by the plaintiff were redelivered by him to the defendant, on a promise by the latter to pay the rent, it was held that the action for money had and received was not maintainable; for, as the goods were not delivered to be sold, no presumption as to the receipt of money could arise (f).

The plaintiff can recover no more than the net sum received, without interest (g).

The plaintiff must not only prove the receipt of the money, but also an undertaking, express or implied, on the part of the defendant, to pay it to him. To the use of the plaintiff.

In numerous instances the undertaking is merely of the latter description. The action for money had and received resembles a bill in equity (h); and whenever the defendant has received money to which the plaintiff is in justice and equity entitled the law implies a debt, and gives this action quasi ex contractu.

The plaintiff must, therefore, prove an undertaking on the part of the defendant to pay the money; or a legal (i), or at least an equitable title in himself to demand it (A).

(d) Andrew v. Robinson, 3 Camp. 122.

(e) Longchamp v. Kenney, Doug. 137. The defendant got possession of a masquerade ticket given to the plaintiff to dispose of, and to account to the owner for the proceeds; and on being required by the owner to pay the produce, said, Well if I have it, what then? go to the person who received it of you; let him pay it. The defendant on the trial did not produce the ticket, and it was held that there was presumptive evidence of the receipt of money.

(f) Leary v. Goodson, 4 T. R. 687.

(g) Walker v. Constable, 1 B. & P. 306. Tappenden v. Randall, 2 B. & P. 447.

(h) Per Ld. Mansfield, Cowp. 793. It has been held that assignees of a bankrupt may recover against his trustees in trust to permit the trader to receive the proceeds for his life, such proceeds as were received after notice of the bankruptcy. Allen v. Impett,[1] 8 Taunt. 263.

(i) The plaintiff is not always entitled to recover in this form of action, even although he can show a legal or equitable title to money received, without showing some privity with the defendant, created either by the fact of receiving the money or by the circumstances. See Baron v. Husband,[2] 4 B. & Ad. 611. Wharton v. Walker,[3] 4 B. & C. 163. Scott v. Parker, 3 Mer. 652. Wedlake v. Hurley, 1 C. & J. 83. Sims v. Britain,[4] 4 B. & Ad. 375. A. B. and others, being owners of a ship in the East India Company's service, B. the managing owner employs C. as his agent, to receive and pay monies on account of the ship; C. receives a sum from the East India Company on account of the ship, on a receipt signed by B. as managing owner, and by another owner, and placed the money to B.'s credit; held that there was no privity between C. and the part owners, and that the action was not maintainable against C. Ib. The action does not lie against a sheriff for not paying rent due on an execution against the tenant. Green v. Austin, 3 Camp. 260. Where the plaintiff and defendant each paid A., a witness, his expenses, the loser, after paying the winner his taxed costs, cannot recover from A. for money had and received. Crompton v. Hutton, 3 Taunt. 230. Benson v. Schneider, 1 Moore, 76. And see Williams v. Everett, 14 East; supra, 81. A bank bill was remitted to A., with an indorsement, "pay to the order of B. (the defendant), under provision for my note in favour of C." (the plaintiff); B. received the proceeds, but refused to pay them over to C.; held, in an action for money had and received by C., that the action was not maintainable, without something having been done by the remitter of the bill amounting to privity or assent. Wedlake v. Hurley, 1 C. & J. 83. The clerk to an attorney, in the absence of the latter, receives a payment on account of a client of the attorney, and gives a receipt in his master's name; the attorney never returns; the client cannot recover from the clerk; for there was no privity of contract. Stephens v. Badcock,[5] 3 B. & Ad. 354. But where an assignee under a bankrupt's commission was insane, it was held that his brother, who received money due to the estate, was liable to a new assignee. Stead v. Thornton, 3 B. & Ad. 357. A party, after improperly allowing the debtor to be discharged without paying the full debt, paid out of his own monies 100*l*., which was agreed to be re-

(A) (If one purchase a foreign bill of exchange, which he loses before it is presented, and the seller refuse to give a second bill, the purchaser may recover back the purchase money. Murray v. Carrott, 3 Call, 373.)

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. iv. 97. [2]Id. xxiv. 123. [3]Id. x. 302. [4]Id. xxiv. 78. [5]Id. xxiii. 93.

*The mere bearer of money from one person to another cannot be sued (k).

The assignees under a joint commission against A. and B. cannot recover money paid by B. before his own, but after A.'s bankruptcy, either as money had or received to the use of the bankrupts, before the bankruptcy, or to the use of the assignees since (l).

Where money has been paid into the hands of a trustee for a specific purpose, it cannot be recovered so long as the trust subsists, except according to the terms of the trust. Thus, money deposited by litigating parties in the hands of a trustee, in trust for the party entitled, cannot be sued for except by the party entitled (m). A holder of money to be paid over to the party entitled according to the decision of a referee, cannot be recovered by the party entitled, previously to notice to such holder of the decision of the referee (n). Where money has been deposited with an attorney to conduct a particular suit, it cannot be recovered till the specific purpose be proved to be at an end (o).

Money obtained by fraud.

The plaintiff is entitled to recover where he can show that the defendant has received money belonging to him under any fraud, false colour or pretence (A), as, that he has received the rents of the plaintiff's estate (p), under pretence of title, or as an intruder into the plaintiff's office (q); and the title to the office may be tried in such an action (r). But in such case the plaintiff cannot maintain the action unless he has a legal title to the profits so received by possession of the office; and therefore the nominee of a perpetual curacy cannot maintain an action for money had and received against an intruder before he has been licensed (s), although it would be otherwise in the case of a donative (t). So the action will not lie to recover mere gratuitous donations to an intruder, such as are given by strangers for showing a church (u).

So the plaintiff may recover in any case where the defendant has by turned to him as soon as the residue of the debt was recovered; held, that as soon as received it became money had and received to the use of the person so paying it, and that he need not declare as on a contract depending on the contingency. Platts v. Lean,[1] 3 C. & P. 561. Per Lord Mansfield, Moses v. Macfarlane, Burr. 1008; and per Ld. Ellenborough, (4 M. & S. 478): the action is maintainable wherever the money of one man has, without consideration, got into the pocket of another.

(k) Coles v. Wright, 4 Taunt. 198; and see Buller v. Harrison, Cowp. 566. Cox v. Prentice, 3 M. & S. 344. Edwards v. Hodding,[2] 5 Taunt. 815. Horsefall v. Handley,[3] 8 Taunt. 136. But an agent who pays over money after notice that the right is disputed, is liable. Edwards v. Hodding,[2] 5 Taunt. 181.

(l) Smith v. Goddard, 3 B. & P. 465. But being joint assignees of both, they may recover for money had and received to the use of either. See tit. BANKRUPT.

(m) Kerr v. Osborne, 9 East, 378. And money so deposited can be recovered from the stakeholder only, and not from the principal debtor. Ib.

(n) Wilkinson v. Godfrey,[4] 9 Ad. & Ell. 536. And it was held that his changing the cheque which he held, into money, did not render him liable.

(o) Case v. Roberts,[5] Holt's C. 500.

(p) For in such case an action of account will lie; and whenever an account will lie, an action of indebitatus assumpsit will lie. Aris v. Stukely, 2 Mod. 260; 1 Salk. 9.

(q) Aris v. Stukely, 2 Mod. 260; T. Jon. 126; 1 Lev. 245; 2 Show. 21.

(r) Ibid. and 2 Vent. 170; 7 Mod. 147.

(s) Powell v. Milbank, 1 T. R. 399, n. R. v. Bishop of Chester, 1 T. R. 403.

(t) Powell v. Milbank, 1 T. R. 399, n.; R. v. Bishop of Chester, 1 T. R. 403. For there the title accrues upon mere nomination.

(u) Boyter v. Dodsworth, 6 T. R. 681. [See 8 Taunt. 265. 2 Moore, 247.][6]

(A) (If one overreaches another by false allegations, or fraudulent concealments, the law will compel him to pay over the money obtained by such means, to the party to whom in equity and good conscience it belongs. Bliss v. Thompson, 4 Mass. R. 488. So special assumpsit lies to recover damages on a warranty express or implied on a fraudulent sale of property. Kimball v. Cunningham, 4 Mass. R. 502.)

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xiv. 450. [2]Id. i. 277. [3]Id. iv. 46. [4]Id. xxxvi. 195. [5]Id. iii. 172. [6]Id. iv. 98.

fraud or deceit received money belonging to the plaintiff (A); for he may waive the *tort, and rely upon the contract which the law implies for him; as where the plaintiff's clerk having received bills from customers for the plaintiff, pays them over to the defendant to effect illegal insurances (x). Where A. under false pretences procured a bill of exchange from B., and A.'s assignees received the amount, it was held that B. might recover against the assignees for money had and received (y). Waiver of tort. *84 Fraud.

In the case of Aris v. Stukely (z), it was said by the Court, that indebitatus assumpsit would lie for rent received by one who pretended a title, because an action of account would lie. But this, it should seem, must be understood of rent received from a lawful tenant, where an ejectment cannot be brought; for it seems that an action of account does not lie against a disseisor, or other wrong-doer (a). And it has been held, that an action of assumpsit for rents received would not lie against a defendant who claimed title to the premises (b).

But it was held that a woman might recover against a man who, having a wife alive, pretended to marry her, and received the profits of her estates (c).

Where a creditor of a bankrupt received, in common with the rest of the creditors, a composition of 8*s.* in the pound, and then recovered the whole amount from the acceptor of a bill which he held as a security for the debt, it was held that the bankrupt was entitled to recover the amount as money had and received to his use (d).

(x) Clarke v. Shee, Cowp. 197. Lightly v. Clouston, 1 Taunt. 112. Eades v. Vandeput, 5 East, 39, n. See B. N. P. 130; Kitchen v. Campbell, 3 Wils. 304, where goods were sold under an execution after an act of bankruptcy committed. Read v. James,[1] 1 Starkie's C. 134; B. N. P. 131. Thomas v. Whip, B. N. P. 133, where Parker, Ch. J. said he knew of two cases only where the plaintiff had not such election; the one was in case of money won at play, and the other in case of money paid by a bankrupt (though on a valuable consideration, after an act of bankruptcy committed); for you cannot confirm the act in part, and impeach it for the rest. So in general where goods have been wrongfully taken and distrained, and converted into money, the plaintiff may waive the tort, and recover the clear amount of the money produced by the sale of the goods. See Feltham v. Terry, B. N. P. 131; Cowp. 419; Aris v. Stukely, 2 Mod. 260; T. Jo. 126; 2 Show. 21; Howard v. Wood, 2 Lev. 245; 1 Ld. Ray. 703. The sheriffs seized and sold under an execution a pony claimed by a third party, who it appeared had originally purchased it whilst under coverture, and had, since her husband's death, kept and paid for its feed; and it was held, that as against a mere wrongdoer, she had a sufficient possessory title, and might waive the tort, and sue for the amount produced by the sale. Oughton v. Seppings,[2] 1 B. & Ad. 241. See further Manifold v. Morris,[3] 5 Bing. N. C. 420.

(y) Harrison v. Walker, Peake's C. 111. See Willis v. Freeman, 12 East, 656. So semble, where a legatee obtains payment from an executor by fraud. Crockford v. Winter, 1 Camp. 124. So where the defendant, being a married man, married the plaintiff, and received the rents of her land. 1 Salk. 28. And see Abbots v. Barry,[4] 2 B. & B. 369; 5 B. Moore, 98. Hogan v. Shee, 2 Esp. C. 522. Bristow v. Eastman, Peake, 223; 1 Esp. C. 172.

(z) 2 Mod. 260.

(a) Bac. Ab. Accompt, [B.]

(b) By Wilson, J. in Cunningham v. Lawrents, 1 Bac. Ab. 260, 5th edit. in the note; and he nonsuited the plaintiff. And see Use and Occupation; and infra, 85, n. (o).

(c) Hassen v. Wallis, 1 Salk. 28.

(d) Stock v. Mawson, 1 B. & P. 286. There was a clause in the deed by which the creditors agreed to release all debts and to give up all securities, &c.; and it was the clear intention of the parties that all should share equally; and it was a fraud on the other creditors to receive more than they did. Where the creditors, by an instrument not under seal, agreed to receive a composition of 12*s.* in the pound, payable by instalments, and the agreement did not contain any stipulation for delivering up collateral securities, it was held that a creditor might avail himself of a collateral security, (a bill drawn by the insolvent and accepted by a third person); Thomas v. Courtnay, 1 B. & A. 1; for an undertaking to deliver up securities was not to be

(A) (When a tort may be waived and assumpsit maintained. Whitwell et al. v. Vincent, 4 Pick. 449. Lamb v. Clark, 5 Pick. 193. Jones v. Hoar, 5 Pick. 285. Miller et al. v. Miller, 7 Pick. 133.

An action for money had and received, lies against one who has tortiously taken the chattel of another, and manufactured it into a different article, and in that state has sold it and received the money for it. Gilmore v. Wilbur, 12 Pick. 120. But assumpsit will not lie to recover the value of a personal chattel, alleged to belong to the plaintiff, but in the possession of one and claimed by another. Willet v. Willet, 3 Watts, 277.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. ii. 327. [2]Id. xx. 380. [3]Id. xxxv. 159. [4]Id. vi. 157.

*The defendant having obtained payment by a false representation of default in the plaintiff's agent in honouring a bill given for the amount, it is not necessary previous to the action to tender the bill; for the right accrues on the payment of the money upon the misrepresentation of facts (e).

Duress. So the plaintiff may show that he has been compelled by duress to pay money to the defendant; as that he was obliged to pay an exorbitant demand to retrieve his goods from pawn (f), or to procure his admission into a copyhold (g); or, being a publican, that it was paid to the justices of a borough, who unlawfully demanded it in order to procure a renewal of his license (h); or to the toll-keeper of a turnpike gate (i); or to a sheriff who exacts a larger fee than he is entitled to (k); for in such cases the parties are not on an equal footing, and the payment cannot be considered as voluntary (l). So it lies to recover money levied under a conviction which has been quashed (m); or money which has been paid to a revenue officer to procure the release of goods seized as forfeited (n), but which were not liable to be seized. The plaintiff cannot, however, substitute this form of action for the more appropriate ones of trespass or replevin, when they are the specific remedies provided by the law for the particular grievance (o). And therefore where the proprietor of cattle wrongfully

*86 *distrained, pays money in order to obtain the possession of them, he cannot recover it in an action for money had and received, but must proceed in replevin or trespass (p). So it is if a tenant, under threat of distress, implied. So where a plaintiff has been induced by a fraud and deceit to purchase goods or an interest in land, to which the vendor has no title, in consequence of which he has lost the goods or lands, an action lies to recover the price. Matthews v. Hollings, Woodfall's Landlord and Tenant, 2d edit. 35; Cripps v. Reed, 6 T. R. 606; infra, tit. FAILURE OF CONSIDERATION.

(e) Pope v. Wray, 4 M. & W. 451.

(f) Astley v. Reynolds, Str. 915; B. N. P. 132. The court said that it was a payment by compulsion, for the plaintiff might have had such an immediate want of his goods, that an action of trover would not have answered his purpose; and the rule volenti non fit injuria holds only where the party has a freedom in exercising his will. Fitzroy v. Gwyllim, 1 T. R. 153. Secus, where there is no immediate and urgent necessity for the redemption of goods, or preservation of the person. Fulham v. Down, 6 Esp. C. 26, n.

(g) Leake v. Lord Pigot, Staff. Sum. Ass. 1799, Sel. N. P. 87.

(h) Morgan v. Palmer,[1] 2 B. & C. 729.

(i) Fearnley v. Morley,[2] 5 B. & C. 25. Parsons v. Blundy, Wightw. 22. See also Shaw v. Woodcock,[3] 7 B. & C. 73. Athe v. Backhouse, 3 M. & W. 646.

(k) Dew v. Parsons, 2 B. & A. 568.

(l) Waterhouse v. Keen,[4] 4 B. & C. 200. Notice of action ought to be given of such an action, where the statute requires it, for anything done under that Act. Ibid. Where the toll is imposed on carriages drawn by horses, and an exemption for persons repassing the same day with the same horses and carriage, or with the same horses or carriage, and the same carriage returns the same day drawn by different horses, no second toll is payable. Williams v. Sangar, 10 East, 56. Waterhouse v. Keen,[4] 4 B. & C. 200. Jackson v. Curwen,[5] 5 B. & C. 31. Chambers v. Williams, 5 B. & C. 36. When the toll is upon horses drawing the carriage, with a similar exemption, no second toll is payable if the same horses return with a different carriage. Gray v. Shilling,[6] 2 B. & B. 30; per Bayley, J. 5 B. & C. 34. Norris v. Poate,[7] 3 Bingh. 41. Where the toll is on horses, and the exemption is in respect of the same horses and carriage, a second toll is payable unless both carriage and horses be the same. Loaring v. Stone,[8] 2 B. & C. 515. An exemption of horses attending cattle returning from pasture, does not exempt a horse ridden by the owner to fetch cattle from pasture. Harrison v. Brough, 6 T. R. 706. See further as to the construction of Acts imposing tolls, &c., Leeds and Liverpool Canal Company v. Hustler,[9] 1 B. & C. 424. R. v. Trustees of Bury and Stratton Roads,[10] 4 B. & C. 363. Phillips v. Hooper, 2 Chitty, 112. Major v. Oxham,[11] 5 Taunt. 340. Harrison v. James,[12] 2 Chitty's C. T. M. 547.

(m) Feltham v. Terry, B. N. P. 131, cited Cowp. 419; 1 T. R. 387.

(n) Irving v. Wilson, 4 T. R. 485.

(o) Where the defendant claims title, an action of assumpsit for the rents will not lie against him, supra, 84, note (b); and semble, he ought to bring ejectment, or if ejectment cannot be brought, an action against the tenant who paid the rent in his own wrong. Cunningham v. Laurents, 1 Bac. Ab. 260, 5th ed. And in an action for use and occupation by a stranger, the title cannot be tried. Morgan v. Ambrose, Peake's Ev. 258. And see Staplefield v. Yewd, and Sadler v. Evans, B. N. P. 133.

(p) Lindon v. Hooper, Cowp. 414. In Anscomb v. Shore, 1 Camp. C. 285, Sir J. Mansfield, C. J. held, that pays more rent than is due (q). But it was held by the Court of Common Pleas, in a subsequent case, that the action lies to recover money which has been obtained through fear of process by distress by an excess of authority, although it had been paid over to a third person, who was the proper officer to whom it should have been paid, in case the distress had been legally made (r).

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. ix. 232. [2]Id. xi. 137. [3]Id. xiv. 14. [4]Id. x. 310. [5]Id. xi. 138. [6]Id. vi. 9. [7]Id. xi. 21. [8]Id. ix. 164. [9]Id. viii. 118. [10]Id. x. 357. [11]Id. i. 127. [12]Id. xviii. 414.

So where money has been paid under a mistake to one who is not entitled to receive it, and who has no claim in conscience to retain it (s) (A); as where money is paid to the assignees of a bankrupt by a debtor to the bankrupt, without claiming a set-off due to him (t). And so it was held where the defendant, supposing himself to be the legal representative of a lessee for years, sold the term and delivered the lease to the plaintiff, who was afterwards ejected by the rightful administrator (u). But, although the party paid the money under a mistake, in fact, yet if he was guilty of negligence in doing so, where he might have known the fact, and ought to have known it, he cannot recover (B). As where the drawee of a bill of exchange, the signature of the drawer being forged, pays the amount (x). So where bankers paid the amount of a forged acceptance to an innocent holder for value (y). So a fortiori, if the party who pays by mistake an action on the case would not lie for detaining cattle distrained damage-feasant after tender of amends, the tender not having been made till after the impounding.

Mistake.

(q) Knibbs v. Hall, 1 Esp. 84. Lothian v. Henderson, 3 B. & P. 529.

(r) Snowden v. Davis, 1 Taunt. 359. [9 Johns. 201. Ripley v. Gelstone.] Upon a distress made, the tenant, in consideration of forbearance, promised to pay the broker's charges; time was accordingly given, and the charges paid, but the amount thereof, as well as of the rent demanded, was at the time objected to; held that the payment was not voluntary, and that he might recover back such charges as were not usually allowed; the broker, as a public officer, cannot be permitted to exceed them. Hills v. Street,[1] 5 Bing. 237, and 2 M. & P. 96. A creditor, upon threats of proceeding to a bankruptcy, obtained from his debtor, before signing a composition deed, bills to the full amount of his debt, which he indorsed over to a third person, who, when they became due, enforced payment from the debtor by action; held, that it was not to be deemed a case of par delictum, but as of money obtained illegally and extorsively, and might be recovered back as money had and received by the defendant, through the medium of the person to whom by his order it was paid. Smith v. Cuff, 6 M. & S. 160.

(s) Bonnell v. Foulkes, 2 Sid. 4. Cripps v. Reed, 6 T. R. 606.

(t) Bize v. Dickinson, 1 T. R. 285. Milnes v. Duncan,[2] 6 B. & C. 671. Hodgson v. Williams, 6 Esp. C. 29. Vide Cobdin v. Kenrick, 4 T. R. 432, in not. and infra.

(u) Cripps v. Reed, 6 T. R. 606.

(x) Price v. Neale, 3 Burr. 1554; Abbott, L. C. J. in Wilkinson v. Johnson,[3] 3 B. & C. 428, observed, that the opinion of Lord Mansfield in this case appears to have been grounded, not on the delay, but on the general principle that an acceptor is bound to know the handwriting of the drawer, and that it is rather by his fault and negligence than by his mistake that he pays on a forged signature. An acceptor of a bill of exchange is liable though the bill be forged. Smith v. Chester, 1 T. R. 654; infra, tit. Bill of Exchange. Where the drawee, without looking at the bill on its being presented for payment, desired the holder's clerk, who presented it, to call again on a subsequent day, Lord Kenyon held that he was not excluded from the defence of forgery of the drawer's signature, as he had not looked at the bill. But on proof that the defendant had in other instances paid bills so drawn, he being connected with the supposed drawer in business, Lord Kenyon held that he could not set up forgery as a defence. Barber v. Gingell, 3 Esp. C. 60.

(y) Smith v. Mercer, 1 Marsh. 453. Chambre, J., who tried the cause, thought that the plaintiffs were entitled to recover. Dallas and Heath, Js. were of opinion that they were not so entitled, on the ground of the fault or neglect of the plaintiffs, who ought to have known the signature of their customer. Gibbs, C. J. held, that the delay which had occurred (the forgery not having been discovered for a week) was sufficient for the decision of the cause; intimating, however, that he did not mean to dissent from the larger ground on which the case had been put by the two former Judges. See also Hall v. Fuller,[4] 5 B. & C. 759; infra, tit. Negligence.

(A) Bond v. Hays, 12 Mass. R. 34. Lazell v. Miller, 15 Mass. R. 207. Dickens v. Jones, 6 Yerg. 483. Where an administrator supposing an estate solvent pays a creditor of the estate more than his distributive share upon final settlement, the administrator may, in his individual character, recover back the excess in an action for money had and received. Rogers v. Weaver, 5 Ohio, 536.)

(B) (Levy v. The Bank of the U. S. 4 Dall. 234. S. C. 1 Binn. 27. See also, The Salem Bank v. The Gloucester Bank, 17 Mass. Rep. 1. See also, Wetherill v. The Bank of Penns. 1 Miles, 399.)

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xv. 358. [2]Id. xiii. 293. [3]Id. x. 140. [4]Id. xii. 368.

occasions *delay and inconvenience to the holders of the bill (z). But if one party, under a mistake, induce another to act on the same mistake, so that negligence is as imputable to the one as to the other, the latter is, on the general principle, entitled to recover (a).

If A., being indebted to B., pay the amount to an attorney, who sues in B.'s name, but without any authority from B., the latter may still recover against A., but A. may recover against the attorney, although he was imposed on by a counterfeited warrant of attorney (b).

When money had been paid on account, and a dispute afterwards occurring, a balance was struck omitting to notice the sums paid, and the plaintiff paid the whole balance, he was permitted to recover as for money paid under a mistake of fact, in the hurry of business (c).

Mistake in law.

But money paid under a knowledge of all the facts, or where the party possesses full means of knowledge, cannot be recovered on the ground that the plaintiff mistook the law (d) (1) (A).

(z) See the cases last cited. Wilkinson v. Johnson,[1] 3 B. & C. 428; and see Smith v. Chester, 1 T. R. 654.

(a) A. paid to B. a navy bill, purporting to be of the value of 1,800*l.*, but which was in reality worth 800*l.* only, a figure having been forged, and it was held that B. was entitled to recover the difference from A. who was ignorant of the fraud. Jones v. Ryde,[2] 5 Taunt. 488; 1 Marsh. 157. So in Bruce v. Bruce, 5 Taunt. 495. So where the plaintiff in London, at the request of the defendant, the holder of a bill purporting to have been indorsed by H. at M. and dishonoured, paid the amount the same day for the honour of H. (whose name was forged), but gave notice to the defendant in time to enable him to give notice of the dishonour of the bill to the previous parties by that day's post. Wilkinson v. Johnson,[3] 3 B. & C. 428. And although the plaintiff in the above case had struck out the names of the indorsers subsequent to that of H, it was held that this having been done by mistake, did not alter the rights of the parties, but was capable of explanation by evidence. Ib. So where the plaintiffs discounted for the defendants a bill of exchange, which the latter did not indorse, and the signatures of the drawer and acceptor, the latter of whom kept an account with the defendants, were forged. Fuller v. Smith,[4] R. & M. 49.

(b) Robson v. Eaton, 1 T. R. 62.

(c) Lucas v. Worswick, 1 Mo. & R. 293. Where an estate is sold, which turns out to be of less value than the price given for it, the difference cannot, in the absence of fraud, be recovered. Cox v. Prentice, 3 M. & S. 349, per Le Blanc, J. But if the parties agree to abide by the weighing of any article, at particular scales, and in the weighing an error not noticed at the time takes place, from misreckoning a weight, in consequence of which the article is taken to be of greater than its real value, and the price is paid, money had and received is sustainable. Per Ld. Ellenborough, Ib.

(d) Bilbie v. Lumley, 2 East, 469. Lowry v. Bourdieu, Dougl. 467. Chatfield v. Paxton, cited 2 East, 470. Davies v. Watson,[5] 2 N. & M. 709; and see The East India Company v. Tritton,[6] 3 B. & C. 280; and infra, 88, note (m). Ld. Ellenborough, in the case of Bilbie v. Lumley, observed that in the case of Chatfield v. Paxton, 2 East, 471, note (a), it was so doubtful on what the case turned, that it was not reported. Ashurst, J. had in that case intimated that if money was paid without full knowledge of the facts, and under, what he termed, a blind suspicion of the case, and was found to have been paid unjustly, it might be recovered. Ld. Kenyon observed that the plaintiff had not paid the money under a fair knowledge, and that he had done so under a protest; but Grose and Lawrence, Js. seem to have doubted the sufficiency of these grounds; and Lord Ellenborough, in Bilbie v. Lumley, seems to intimate that the principle of decision in that case was not sufficiently clear to make it a precedent. It makes no difference that the party paid the money under a protest, declaring his intention to bring an action to recover it. Brown v. M'Kinnally, 1 Esp. C. 279; see also S. P. Cartwright v. Rowley, 2 Esp. C. 723. Upon the same principle, the giving a bill of exchange or promissory note for the amount of a debt, precludes the debtor from afterwards disputing the amount. Nash v. Turner, 2 Esp. C. 217. Solomon v. Turner,[7] 1 Starkie's C. 51. The same reasons also apply where the amount has been allowed in account. Skyring v. Greenwood,[8] 4 B. & C. 281. So if the vendor waive a contract for the sale of goods, he cannot afterwards insist on the contract because he waived the contract in ignorance of the law. Gomery v. Bond, 2 M. & S. 378; see also Lothian v. Henderson, 3 B. & P. 520. So if a drawer promise to pay a bill of exchange, with knowledge that time has been given to the acceptor. Stevens v. Lynch, 12 East, 38. See tit. Bills of Exchange. It has even been held that a plaintiff cannot recover in respect of a claim which he might have insisted on in a former action when he was defendant, in reduction of damages. Kist v. Atkinson, 2 Camp. 68.

(1) [See Evans' Pothier, Appendix, 386—407. Elting v. Scott, 1 Johns. 165. Warder & al. v. Tucker, 7 Mass. Rep. 449. Garland v. Salem Bank, 9 ib. 408. Crain v. Colwell, 8 Johns. 384. Donaldson v. Means, 4 Dallas, 109. Selw. N. P. (Wheaton's ed.) tit. Assumpsit.]

(A) (Elliot v. Swartwout, 10 Pet. 137. Hubbard v. Martin, 8 Yerg. 498. Ladd v. Kenney, 2 N. Hamp. 341. Lee v. Stuart, 2 Leigh. 76. Sed quære. Elting v. Scott, 2 John. Rep. 127. Haven v. Foster, 9 Pick.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. x. 140. [2]Id. i. 166. [3]Id. x. 140. [4]Id. xxi. 379. [5]Id. xxviii. 377. [6]Id. x. 79. [7]Id. ii. 291. [8]Id. x. 335.

*Where the captain of a king's ship brought home in her public treasure, upon the public service, and also treasure of individuals for his own emolument, and received freight for both, and paid over one-third of it (according to the usual practice) to the admiral, and having afterwards discovered that the law would not have compelled him to pay the third, brought an action against the executrix of the admiral to recover it back; it was held, that he could not recover back the private freight, because the whole of that transaction was illegal; nor the public freight, because he had paid it under a full knowledge of the facts, although under ignorance of the law, and because it was not against conscience for the executrix to retain it (e) (1). Where money has been paid by mistake, which the law would not have compelled the plaintiff to pay, but which in equity and conscience he ought to have paid, he cannot recover it (f). As where he pays a debt otherwise barred by the Statute of Limitations, or a debt contracted during his infancy (g).

A plaintiff who has paid the whole of an attorney's bill cannot after taxation recover the sum deducted from the bill (h). Where a tenant omitted to deduct the property-tax out of his rent, it was held to be a voluntary payment, which he could not recover back (i).

Money received by an agent.

In case of the payment of money to a known agent, the general rule is that the action ought to be brought against the principal (k); and mere evidence of the receipt of money by the defendant as the agent of another is insufficient to support the action (l); and an agent, who having received money pays it over without notice to the contrary, is not liable, for it would be unjust that he should suffer for the mistake of another (m); and the (e) Sir C. Brisbane v. Dacres,[1] 5 Taunt. 143; and see Stevens v. Lynch, 12 East, 38.

(f) 1 T. R. 286. (g) Bize v. Dickinson, 1 T. R. 286.

(h) Gower v. Popkin,[2] 2 Starkie's C. 85.

(i) Denby v. Moore, 1 B. & A. 123. [3 Moore, 278, S. P.] An unsuccessful party in a cause, who pays the witness a second time over (the winner having already paid) in the taxed costs, cannot recover it back. Crompton v. Hutton, 3 Taunt. 230. So it has been held that if a lessee be evicted, he cannot recover the rent which he has paid. See Stainforth v. Staggs, cited 1 Camp. 396, n. King v. Martin, cited 2 Camp. 268. But where the tenant, after payment of rent, was ejected by a third party establishing his title to the premises, and who subsequently recovered mesne profits during the time for which the rent had been paid, it was held that the tenant was entitled to recover it back from the party to whom it had been paid, as money had and received, he not having set up any title at the trial of the ejectment. Newsome v. Graham,[3] 10 B. & C. 234. See 1 Freeman, 479, note (d), 2d edit. After the death of a bankrupt tenant for life, his assignees were allowed to recover as money had and received the by-gone rents, from one who had received them under a fraudulent assignment. Brown v. Day, cited 3 Russ. & Myl. 124, 481.

(k) B. N. P. 133. Sadler v. Evans, 4 Burr. 1094. Smith v. Bromley, Doug. 696, n. Horsfall v. Handley,[4] 2 Moore, 5; 9 Taunt. 136. The action does not lie against an excise officer who has received duties after the repeal of the Act, but who has paid over the amount to his superior. Greenway v. Hurd, 4 T. R. 553. Whitbread v. Brookesbank, Cowp. 69. And see Campbell v. Hall, Cowp. 204; there the duties remained in the hands of the officer for the purpose of trying the question. So where a churchwarden has paid over burial fees to the treasurer of the trustees of a chapel. Horsfall v. Handley,[5] 8 Taunt. 136.

(l) As where the agent signs a receipt for his principals; e. g. "for S. & W.," W. R. Edden v. Read, 3 Camp. 399; and see Stevens v. Badcock,[6] 3 B. & Ad. 354.

(m) B., a banker, being the agent of A., who indorses a bill of exchange to him, receives the amount from the acceptor and pays it over to A. The acceptor cannot recover from B., although it turn out that the bill was indorsed to A., under a supposed authority, viz. a warrant of attorney, which did not warrant the transfer. East India Company v. Tritton,[7] 3 B. & C. 280. Note, that the acceptors had made all such

112. Ignorance of the law of a foreign government, is ignorance of fact, and in this respect, the laws of other states in the Union are foreign laws. Money paid by mistake through ignorance of the law of another of the United States, may be recovered back. Ib.)

(1) [Where a sheriff claimed as of right, upon a warrant issued by him in the execution of his office, a larger fee than he was entitled to by law, and the attorney paid it in ignorance of the law; it was held that the latter might maintain an action for money had and received, for the expenses paid above the legal fee, or might set-off the same in an action by the sheriff against him. Dew v. Parsons, 2 B. & A. 562. This was held not to be a voluntary payment. See Hall v. Shultz, 4 Johns. 240.]

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. i. 43. [2]Id. iii. 257. [3]Id. xxi. 63. [4]Id. iv. 46. [5]Id. iv. 46. [6]Id. xxiii. 93. [7]Id. x. 79.

*party who made the mistake has his remedy against the principal. It is otherwise in special cases: as where the agent has, previous to the payment, received notice not to pay it over (n); or where he has received the money malâ fide (o). To make this defence available, it must appear that the money was paid to the agent expressly for the use of the person to whom he had so paid it over (p); and that he has paid it over, or done that which is equivalent to such payment (q).

Where an agent receives money for his principal under a claim of right, as for tithe, the right of a principal cannot be tried in an action against the agent, if he can show the least colour of right in the principal; as for instance, his having been some time in possession (r).

Where money is deposited with an agent of the party, his authority is in general revocable; and after countermand, the principal is entitled to recover it. Thus the authority of a stakeholder may be revoked before the decision has taken place (s), and the stake recovered.

*90 *Where the drawer of a bill paid the amount to an indorser, to take it up when due, but the bill not having been presented in due time, the drawer directed the indorser not to pay the amount, and offered to indemnify him; and notwithstanding this, the indorser afterwards paid the bill, it was held that he paid it in his own wrong, and that the drawer might recover the amount (t).

A trustee, such as the provisional assignee of a bankrupt, is not liable for money received by an agent appointed with due care, who has failed (u).

inquiries as they deemed to be necessary, and that the defendant was not privy to the facts. Semble, that an indorser does not warrant the genuineness of previous indorsements. If A. give a letter of attorney to B. to receive money from C., and bring an action against C., C. cannot, except in mitigation of damages, show that he has paid money to B. since the action brought, for the bringing the action is a revocation of the authority. B. N. P. 153. Ca. K. B. 408. So if A. receive quit-rents for W., and after notice to A. not to pay the money over to W., because it is not due, he afterwards pays it over, the action lies. Sadler v. Evans, B. N. P. 133.

(n) Sadler v. Evans, B. N. P. 133.

(o) As where a gaoler illegally receives rent from a prisoner for a room in the prison. Miller v. Aris, B. R. Midd. Sitt. after M. 41 G. 3, cor. Lord Kenyon. So where a sum of money has been paid by the putative father to a parish officer, for the purpose of indemnifying the parish against a bastard child. Townson v. Wilson, 1 Camp. 396. Watkins v. Hewlett, 1 B. & B. 1. Clark v. Johnson,[1] 3 Bing. 424. Stainforth v. Staggs, 1 Camp. 398, n. & 564. King v. Martin, cited 2 Camp. C. 268. S. P. ruled by Hullock, B. Lanc. Spring Ass. 1826. So if money be paid to a bailiff, who exceeds his authority, under terror of process, see 1 Taunt. 359.

(p) Snowden v. Davis, 1 Taunt. 359; where money was paid by the plaintiff to a bailiff, who exceeded his authority, in order to redeem his goods, and not that it might be paid over to any one in particular.

(q) If things at the time of the notice remain unaltered as between the agent and his principal, if no advance has been made, bills accepted or new credit given by the agent, in consequence of the payment, he is still liable, although the money has been passed in account, or a rest made. Buller v. Harrison, Cowp. 566. Cox v. Prentice, 3 M. & S. 344. And although he has paid it over, yet if the defendant has induced the plaintiff to suppose that the money had not in fact been paid over before notice, he cannot avail himself of such payment. Edwards v. Hodding,[2] 5 Taunt. 815. Secus, if the situation of the agent has been altered. The agents of the plaintiff in England were directed by him to pay, through the defendants, money to be placed to his credit in India, which was done, and an entry made in the defendant's books to the credit of their correspondents, to whom they sent advice to account for it to the plaintiff: before the letter of advice reached their correspondents, the latter failed, having drawn on the defendants, between the date of such letter and the failure, bills, which the defendant had accepted to an amount exceeding the amount paid in by the plaintiff. It was held, that the defendants having only acted as directed, and the situation in which they stood towards their correspondents being altered, the plaintiff could not maintain assumpsit against them for the money so paid in. M'Arthy v. Colvin, 1 Perr. & Dav. 429.

(r) Staplefield v. Yewd, Tr. 27 G. 2, cor. Lee, C. J., B. N. P. 153; Cas. K. B. 409. [See Potter v. Benniss, 1 Johns. 514.]

(s) Although, as it seems, the wager be legal, for the situation of the stakeholder does not differ from that of an arbitrator, whose authority is countermandable. See Eltham v. Kingsman, 1 B. & A. 683, et vid. infra, 95. Aliter, where a legal wager has been determined against the plaintiff. Brandon v. Hibbert, 4 Camp. 37. Bland v. Collett, Ibid. 157. [See Mr. Howe's note to Bland v. Collett, 4 Camp. 157.]

(t) Whitfield v. Savage, 2 B. & P. 277.

(u) Raw v. Cutten,[3] 9 Bing. 96.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xiii. 33. [2]Id. i. 277. [3]Id. xxiii. 272.

Under this count the plaintiff may also show that he has paid money to the defendant upon a consideration which has failed (A). As, for a bill of exchange upon a banker who breaks before it can be tendered to him (x). Or for goods which have not been delivered (y); or money paid as a deposit on the purchase of an estate, where the vendor cannot make out a title (z). So he may recover the money paid as a consideration for an annuity where the deeds for securing it have been set aside for informality (a). Or where one of the several securities fails (b). Or where one, having purchased a lease from the defendant as the supposed representative of the lessee, is ousted by the real administrator (c). But where a personal representative assigned a mortgage-deed, which turned out to be a forgery, for a valuable consideration, but without any knowledge of the forgery, it was held that the purchaser was not entitled to recover the price (d).

Failure of consideration.

A. pays B. an annuity for the use of an invention, for which B. has obtained a patent, and it afterwards turns out that the patent was void, the invention having been in public use before. A. cannot recover the amount so paid (e); for he has had the use of it.

*So where an article, which the vendee has an opportunity of examining, is sold without fraud, the vendee cannot afterwards recover the price, upon discovering that the article was internally defective at the time of sale (f). *91

(x) B. N. P. 131. See also Jones v. Ryde,[1] 1 Marshall, 157, where A. paid to B. a navy bill purporting to be of the value of 1,800*l.*, but which was in reality worth 800*l.* only, a figure having been forged; it was held that B. was entitled to recover the difference from A. who was ignorant of the fraud. But where A. & Co., bankers, paid the amount of a forged acceptance to an innocent holder for value, it was held that they could not recover the amount. Smith v. Mercer,[2] 1 Marshall, 453; supra, 86.

(y) Str. 407; B. N. P. 131.

(z) 8 T. R. 516; 3 B. & P. 181. See VENDOR AND VENDEE.

(a) Shore v. Webb, 1 T. R. 732. In such case the deeds should be produced, and their execution proved, and the setting them aside proved by the production of the rule of court. See Hicks v. Hicks, 3 East, 16.

(b) Scurfield v. Gowland, 6 East, 241. The defendant is entitled to deduct for payments made by him in respect of the annuity. Hicks v. Hicks, 3 East, 16; and see Davis v. Bryan,[3] 6 B. & C. 651.

(c) Cripps v. Reed, 6 T. R. 606. In such case the assignment should be produced and proved, and the ouster should be proved by evidence of the judgment in ejectment; and the writ of possession, and the revocation of the letters of administration, should be proved. Lord Kenyon observed that he did not wish to disturb the rule caveat emptor, adopted in Bree v. Holbeach, Doug. 654, and other cases; that where a regular conveyance was made, other covenants ought not to be added; and that, in general, a seller covenants for his own acts and those of his ancestors only; in which respect, the case of a mortgagor differed from it, as he covenants that at all events he has a good title; but that here the whole passed by parol, under a misapprehension by both parties that the defendant was the legal administrator of the lessee. In the case of Bree v. Holbeach, no action could have been maintained. Where a defendant in possession of premises which he formerly held under a tenant for life, who was dead, sold his interest, under a representation that it was a good lease for seven years, and was afterwards ejected, Lawrence, J. held, on the authority of Cripps v. Reed, that the price might be recovered. Matthews v. Hollings, Salop Summ. Ass. 1801; Woodfall's Landlord and Tenant, 2d edit. 35.

(d) Doug. 655.

(e) Taylor v. Hare, 1 N. R. 260. Note, that the Judges in this case laid considerable stress on the consideration that the parties acted under a mistake; but so they did in the case of Cripps v. Reed; the true distinction seems to be, that in Taylor v. Hare, the plaintiff did in fact derive benefit from the patent; and Heath, J. said, "We cannot take an account here of the profits; it might as well be said, that if a man lease land, and the lessee pay rent, and be afterwards evicted, he shall recover back the rent, though he has taken the fruits of the land. The defendant sold his patent-right, such as it was, and there was no express or implied warranty that the patent should stand, and there was no fraud."

(f) Bluett v. Osborne,[4] 1 Starkie's C. 384. But where the plaintiff, a stock-broker, sold for the defendant four Guatemala bonds, and paid him the amount, and after the bonds had been two days in the hands of the purchaser they were found not to be marketable, and the plaintiff took them back and reimbursed the purchaser, it was held that he was entitled to recover for the amount paid by him to the defendant. Young v. Cole, 3 Bing. N. C. 724.

(A) (Watkins v. Otis, 2 Pick. 88. Shearman et al. v. Akins, 4 Pick. 295. [In such case, the sum paid forms the measure of damages, the jury cannot give vindictive damages. Neel v. Deans, 1 Nott & M'Cord, 210.])

[1]Eng Com. Law Reps. i. 106. [2]Id. i. 312 [3]Id. xiii. 290. [4]Id. ii. 437.

A putative father giving a note for a fixed sum to the parish officers, who receive the amount, may recover back such part as remains unexpended on the death of the child, as money had and received to his use (g). A plaintiff who has paid money on a consideration not performed, may either affirm the agreement by a special action for non-performance, or disaffirm it by reason of the fraud, and bring an action for money had and received (h).

Rescinded contract.

Where money has been paid by the plaintiff to the defendant, upon a contract which is afterwards rescinded, either in consequence of the nature of the contract, or by consent (i), or by the act of the defendant, then, since the consideration fails, the plaintiff is entitled to recover the money (A). As, where the plaintiff paid ten guineas to the defendant for a chaise, on condition that it should be returned in case the plaintiff's wife did not approve of it, paying 3*s.* 6*d.* per day. In the mean time the plaintiff's wife disapproving of it, the chaise was sent back to the defendant after three days, and left on his premises without his consent, and the 3*s.* 6*d.* per day was tendered, which the defendant refused to receive; and it was held that the plaintiff was entitled to recover the ten guineas (k). And in Giles v. Edwards (l), where the defendant by his neglect prevented the plaintiff from carrying a special agreement between them, for the sale of cord-wood to the plaintiff, into execution, it was held that the plaintiff might recover the sum which he had paid under the contract, as money had and received to his use. So, it was held in Dutch v. Warren (m), *92 where the defendant *had refused to transfer to the plaintiff five shares in the Welsh Copper Mines, according to his agreement, under which the plaintiff had paid him the price.

Contract still open.

Where, however, the terms of the special contract are still open, this action does not lie. As, where money is paid as the price of a horse warranted sound, which turns out to be unsound (n); for an action for (g) Watkins v. Hewlitt, 1 B. & B. 1. See Townson v. Wilson, 1 Camp. 396. Clarke v. Johnson,[1] 3 Bing. 424. S. P. cor. Hullock, B. Lanc. Sp. Ass. 1826. In the case of Chappel v. Poles, 2 M. & W. 867, the money was held to be recoverable although the defendants (the overseers who had received the money) had paid it over to their successors. It seems that the whole sum was to be considered as money had and received to the plaintiff's use, the contract being illegal and void.

(h) B. N. P. 132.

(i) The plaintiff agreed to let to the defendant land on building leases, and to advance him ——l., to be repaid by a certain day, and the defendant engaged to build houses thereon, and to convey them as a security: after some of the houses had been built, and part only of the money agreed to be lent had been advanced, the plaintiff requested the defendant not to proceed further with the buildings, which was assented to, and the agreement rescinded by mutual consent; held, that the day for repayment being passed, the plaintiff might recover the money advanced on the common counts, and was not bound to declare on the special agreement. James v. Cotton,[2] 7 Bing. 266, and 5 M. & P. 26; and see Oxendale v. Wetherell,[3] 9 B. & C. 386.

(k) Towers v. Barrett, 1 T. R. 133. Sale of an article by A. to B., with liberty to return it in a month, B. allowing 10*l.* out of the price paid, and in case B. kept the article beyond the month he was to pay 10*l.* more to A.; B. returning the article within the month is entitled to recover the price, deducting the 10*l.* Hurst v. Orbell,[4] 8 Ad. & Ell. 107.

(l) 7 T. R. 181.

(m) Cited 2 Burr. 1010. Subscriptions advanced under a scheme for establishing a tontine to directors, who abandon the scheme, Nockles v. Crosby,[5] 3 B. & C. 814; or for the purchase of shares in a joint-stock company, Kempson v. Saunders, 4 Bing. 5; may be recovered without any deduction for expenses.

(n) Power v. Wells, Doug. 24, n.; Cowp. 818. Weston v. Downes, 1 Doug. 23. Payne v. Whale, 7 East, 274; 1 T. R. 133. [Byers v. Bostwick, 2 Rep. Conn. Ct. 75 Acc.]

(A) (Where a plaintiff sues to recover back money paid upon a contract which has failed, he must show that he has done all in his power to restore the defendant to the same situation in which he was when the contract was made, or that the defendant has been the cause of the failure of the contract. If, from circumstances beyond the plaintiff's control, he be prevented from placing the defendant in his original position, and the plaintiff yet be injured, he cannot have the action for money had and received. His remedy is upon the special contract to recover damages. Reed v. M'Grew, 5 Ohio, 386. See also Marshall v. Sprott, Addis, 361.)

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xiii. 33. [2]Id. xx. 126. [3]Id. xvii. 401. [4]Id. xxv. 341. [5]Id. x. 237.

money had and received is not a proper form of action to try the warranty. So, in the case of Cooke v. Munstone, above cited (o), it was held that the money which had been paid for the delivery of the soil could not be recovered, whilst the contract for the soil remained still open. And in general it seems that money paid upon a contract cannot be recovered back after part execution of the contract, and where the parties cannot be placed in statu quo (p). If money be paid which is due in honour and conscience, it cannot be recovered, although payment could not have been compelled (q).

Recovered by legal process.

It is a general rule, that money recovered by means of legal process cannot be recovered, although it be afterwards discovered that it was not due (r) (A). But the action lies against an overseer of the poor, to recover

(o) 1 N. R. 151. See also Hull v. Heightman, 2 East. 145; supra, 56.

(p) Hunt v. Silk, 5 East, 449. Giles v. Edwards, 7 T. R. 181. Where an infant has paid money to the defendant as a premium for a lease, and has taken possession of the premises, he cannot, after an avoidance of the lease on coming of age, recover back the money. Holmes v, Blogg,[1] 8 Taunt. 508. The purchaser of a moiety of his partner's share of a vessel had entered upon and derived the full profits of the vessel, and also deposited the title-deeds with a third person, as a security for money advanced to him; held that the vendor could not recover as for money had and received. Beed v. Blandford, 2 Y. & J. 278. An original contributor to a foreign loan paid a deposit to the contractor upon scrip receipts, and transferred them to the defendant in error, and the contractor, the plaintiff, afterwards, from time to time, extended the period of paying up the instalments to stated periods, on certain terms; held that the defendant, omitting to comply with the terms of such indulgence, could not afterwards insist upon the contractor accepting the instalments with interest, or returning the deposit, so as to maintain assumpsit for money had and received. Rothschild v. Hennings, 4 M. & Ry. 411; S. C. 12 Moore, 559. The plaintiff put money into the hands of the defendant to be paid to J., with the qualification that it was not to be paid over until, &c.; before which the plaintiff demanded that it should be paid back; held that he was entitled to recover it back or not, according as the jury were satisfied that J. looked to the plaintiff or defendant for payment of that sum. Owen v. Bowen, 4 C. & P. 93.

(q) Farmer v. Arundell, 2 Bl. R. 824.

(r) Marriott v. Hampton, 7 T. R. 269. See Moses v. Macfarlane, Burr. 1006; B. N. P. 130. Thorp v. How, Ibid. See also Brown v. M'Kinnally, 1 Esp. C. 279. There the money was paid under a protest that it was paid without prejudice, but Ld. Kenyon, C. J. held, that it was to be regarded as a voluntary payment. And see Hamlet v. Richardson,[2] 9 Bing. 644. See also Barbone v. Brent, 1 Vern. 176; where the defendant demurred to a bill, which stated that the plaintiff having paid the defendant for goods but lost the receipt, the latter recovered in an action, and the demurrer was allowed. In that case North, Ld. Keeper, said, that if A. having paid money in part satisfaction, afterwards is compelled by an action to pay the whole value, the party who paid the money may recover it at law. The assignee of a bankrupt cannot recover from the plaintiffs, in an action against the bankrupt, money deposited in lieu of bail, and paid over by order of court to the plaintiffs, on default of depositing a further sum in lieu of bail. Reynolds v. Wedd,[3] 4 Bing. N. C. 694. 6 Dowl. P. C. 728. [Mr. Day's note to Marriott v. Hampton, 2 Esp. C. 546.]

(A) Assumpsit for money had and received lies to recover back money paid on an execution issued on a satisfied judgment. Wisner v. Bulkley, 15 Wend. 321. So to recover back money paid under a judgment subsequently reversed. Sturgis v. Allis, 10 Wend. 354. Clark v. Pinney, 6 Cow. 299.

But it cannot be sustained for money even improperly recovered by suit at law. Walker v. Ames, 2 Cow. 428. White v. Ward, 9 John. R. 232. See also Battey v. Britton, 13 John. R. 187. Nor can money be thus recovered after payment of a judgment in an inferior court, on the ground that the money was not due and had been unconscientiously obtained. Cobb v. Curtiss, 8 John. R. 470. This action does not lie to recover back money received under a judgment in a foreign attachment laid in a foreign country, however erroneous the decision may be. Rapelye v. Emory, 2 Dall. 231. S. C. 1 Yeates, 533. But see Wright v. Towers, 1 Browne, App. 1. Assumpsit will not lie to recover back money which has been ordered to be refunded, on the reversal of the judgment of an inferior court. Duncan v. Kirkpatrick, 13 S. & R. 292. Secus, if there had been no order of restitution. Ibid.

Where A. gave B. a promissory note payable on demand, which B. transferred to C. after A. had paid it, and C. sued A. and recovered the amount—it was held that A. could not recover of B. the amount of the note, in an action for money had and received, but that he should have defended the action brought by C. Loomis v. Pulver, 9 Johns. 244. S. P. White v. Ward, et al. 9 Johns. 232. Le Guen v. Gouverneur et al. 1 Johns. Cas. 436. Bentley v. Morse, 14 Johns. 468. But if a plaintiff recover by means of the defendant's inability or neglect to produce an existing receipt for the money sued for, and afterwards promise the defendant that he will refund the money, on the production of the receipt—such promise is valid, and will support an action. 14 Johns. ubi sup.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. iv. 189. [2]Id. xxiii. 407. [3]Id. xxxiii. 498.

money in his hands levied under a conviction which has since been quashed (s). So it lies to recover money paid under a compromise of an action; the compromise having failed, and another action having been *93 brought (t). *And where the defendant, knowing that he had no real claim, arrested the plaintiff, a foreigner, at Falmouth, on his arrival from abroad, for 10,000*l.*, and under the compulsion of a colourable legal process extorted from him 500*l.* as in part payment, the court held that the action was maintainable to recover the money so paid (u).

Where the holder of a bill of exchange, being a trustee for the plaintiff, sued the drawer, and after his bankruptcy his assignees recovered against the sheriff, in the name of the bankrupt, for an escape, damages to the amount of the bill; it was held that the plaintiff might recover the damages from the assignees, allowing them the costs and expenses (x).

Illegal consideration.

It seems to be a general rule, that where money has been paid by the plaintiff to the defendant, on a consideration which is illegal in itself (y), as being prohibited by some statute, but where the plaintiff does not stand in pari delicto with the defendant, and cannot be considered as particeps criminis, the money may be recovered. And therefore, where a statute is made for the protection of persons standing in the plaintiff's situation, the party injured may, even after the transaction prohibited by the statute has been finished and completed, recover the money so paid. Here the law acts in futherance of the provisions of the statute; hence a debtor may recover from a creditor all the usurious interest which he has paid beyond legal interest (z).

Action by one not particeps.

So the plaintiff may recover the premiums for illegal insurances of numbers in a lottery after the chances have terminated in his favour, since the contract is not criminal, but merely void (a). Or money given by the

(s) Feltham v. Terry, cited in Birch v. Wright, 1 T. R. 187; and B. N. P. 131.

(t) Cobden v. Kendrick, 4 T. R. 432.

(u) Duke de Cadaval v. Collins,[1] 4 Ad. & Ell. 858. Where a certificated bankrupt, on being arrested on a ca. sa., for a debt proveable on the commission, paid the money under a protest, stating his bankruptcy and certificate, and warning the plaintiff that he should apply to the Court to have the money returned, it was held, that he was not precluded from maintaining the action. Payne v. Chapman,[2] 4 Ad. & Ell. 364.

(x) Randoll v. Bell, 1 M. & S. 714, Ld. Ellenborough dissentiente: qu. therefore.

(y) See further on this subject, tit. VENDOR AND VENDEE.

(z) Per Ld. Mansfield, in Smith v. Bromley, Doug. 696, (n); B. N. P. 133. Lowry v. Bourdieu, Doug. 471. The authority of Tomkyns v. Barnet, Skinn. 411, and Salk. 22, has frequently been denied. In Clarke v. Shee, Cowp. 199, Ld. Mansfield said that it had been denied a thousand times. And see Alsop v. Milton, Sel. N. P. 89, 4th edit; Shore v. Webb, 1 T. R. 732; Scurfield v. Gowland, 6 East, 241.

(a) By the statute 14 Geo. 3, c. 76. Jacques v. Golightly, 2 Bl. R. 1073. Jacques v. Withy, 1 H. B. 65; S. P. Clarke v. Shee, Cowp. 199. A., who buys a horse from B. on a Sunday, not knowing that B. was a horse-dealer, may recover the price, for he was particeps criminis, and the consideration has failed. Bloxsome v. Williams,[3] 3 B. & C. 232; and see Drury v. Defontaine, 1 Taunt. 134. But note, that the horse was of the value of 10*l.*, and there was no memorandum in writing; and the horse was not delivered or the money paid till the Tuesday after; and therefore, as there was no complete contract of sale on the Sunday, the case was not within the stat. 29 C. 2, c. 7, s. 2; Qu. per Bayley, J. whether the statute is not confined to manual labour, and other work visibly laborious, and the keeping of open shops? A horse-dealer cannot maintain an action upon a contract for the sale and warrant of a horse, made by him on a Sunday; Fennel v. Riddler[4]

Where A. extended an execution on B.'s real estate and became tenant in common thereof with C., and afterwards obtained a judgment against C. for a share of the rents and profits accruing after the extent, upon the subsequent reversal of A.'s judgment against B., C. in an action for money had and received, recovered back the rents and profits paid by him to A., though the judgment of A. against C. remained unreversed. Lazell v. Miller, 15 Mass. Rep. 207.

So money paid on a judgment, which was afterwards reversed, may be recovered back, in Maryland, in an action for money had and received, unless it was equitably due when the judgment was rendered. Green v. Stone, 1 Har. & J. 405.]

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxxi. 206. [2]Id. xxxi. 89. [3]Id. x. 60. [4]Id. xi. 261.

plaintiff, as a friend of a bankrupt, to the defendant, a creditor, to induce him to sign *the bankrupt's certificate, which he actually did (b). So, *94 where the defendant, having brought an action against the plaintiff, on the ground of an alleged usurious transaction between the plaintiff and A. B., procured money from the plaintiff to compromise the action, it was held that the plaintiff might recover the money, on the ground that the prohibition and penalties of the stat. 18 Eliz. 2, c. 5, s. 4, solely attached upon, and were confined to, the informer or plaintiff in the penal action, and did not attach upon or extend to the person compounded with; and the distinction was taken as laid down by Lord Mansfield in the case of Smith v. Bromley (c), that if the act itself be immoral, or a violation of the general laws of public policy, the party paying the money shall not be allowed to recover it; but that in the case of other laws which are calculated for the protection of the subject against oppression, extortion and deceit, if such laws be violated, and the defendant take advantage of the plaintiff's situation or condition, then the plaintiff shall recover (d).

Where money is paid by the plaintiff to the defendant upon an illegal agreement, to which both are parties, and equally culpable, it may be recovered whilst the agreement remains executory, but not afterwards (A). A., in consideration of 210*l.*, gave B. a bond for the payment of an annuity of 100 guineas until the hop duties should amount to a certain sum, and it was held that B., who brought his action before the event happened, was entitled to recover, on the ground that the contract still remained executory (e). So it was held where a sum of money had been paid to procure a place in the customs (f). So, where a prisoner in custody in Newgate, for clipping coin, gave a sum of money to a solicitor to procure his discharge (g).

Action by a particeps criminis.

Where, however, money is paid by the plaintiff to the defendant, upon an agreement grossly immoral, it seems that it cannot be recovered,

5 B. & C. 408; although the contract was made by an agent, and was entered into at the request of the party who takes the objection. Smith v. Sparrow,[1] 4 Bing. 84. Where goods having been bought on a Sunday, the buyer afterwards, whilst the goods were in his possession, promised to pay for them, it was held, that the seller was entitled to recover on a quantum meruit. Williams v. Paul,[2] 6 Bing. 653. The hiring of a servant by a farmer on a Sunday is good, R. v. Whitnash,[3] 7 B. & C. 596; and see Begbie v. Levi, 1 C. & J. 180. The object of the Act was to prevent parties from carrying on their trade and ordinary occupations and callings on a Sunday.

(b) Smith v. Bromley, Doug. 696. Cockshott v. Bennett, 2 T. R. 763. Jackson v. Lomas, 4 T. R. 166; 3 T. R. 551. Leicester v. Rose, 4 East, 472; B. N. P. 133. The stat. 5 G. 2, c. 30, s. 11, formerly, and now the stat. 6 G. 4, c. 16, s. 125, vacates all securities given by the bankrupt, or any person on his behalf, as the consideration for signing his certificate. See Nerot v. Wallace, 3 T. R. 25. A creditor executing a composition deed, takes bills from the debtor to the full amount; the debtor may recover the surplus. Turner v. Hoole,[4] 1 D. & R. 27.

(c) Doug. 670, n.

(d) Williams v. Hedley, 8 East, 378. Browning v. Morris, Cowp. 790.

(e) Tappenden and others v. Randall, 2 B. & P. 467. In this case the Court considered the distinction between executed and executory contracts as completely established. See Sir J. Mansfield's observations in Aubert v. Walsh, 3 Taunt. 281. Bush v. Walsh, 4 Taunt. 960. Webb v. Bishop, B. N. P. 16, 132. It seems, however, that the Courts do not consider wagers on the amount of duties to be illegal or immoral, but refuse to enforce them, on account of the public inconvenience which might otherwise result. Shirley v. Sunbury, 2 B. & P. 130.

(f) Walker v. Chapman, cited by Buller, J. in Lowry v. Bourdieu, Doug. 471.

(g) Wilkinson v. Kitchen, 1 Ld. Raym. 89. But see Norman v. Cole, 3 Esp. 253, where Lord Eldon is reported to have held, that a sum of money placed in the hands of the defendant, in order to procure a pardon for one who was under sentence of death in Newgate, could not be recovered.

(A) (But money paid in consideration of the composition of a felony cannot be recovered back. Worcester v. Eaton, 16 Mass. 368. Assumpsit for money lent or money had and received will not lie to recover the price of a note sold, which was given for a gaming consideration. Herd v. Vincent, 1 Tenn. 869.)

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xiii. 351. [2]Id. xix. 192. [3]Id. xiv. 100. [4]Id. xvi. 418.

although the agreement remain executory: for in such case it is contrary to sound policy to yield the plaintiff any assistance. As where the money is paid as a consideration for the murder of a third person (h). It is however to be observed, that the distinction between malum in se and malum prohibitum has frequently been disapproved of (i); and if the doctrine is to prevail that the party ought to be allowed a locus pœnitentiæ, is it not *95 reasonable that he *should be allowed and induced to repent of his intention to perpetrate a great and heinous crime, as well as of his intention to commit a more trivial offence?

Money in hands of stakeholder, &c.

In cases of illegal transactions, money may always be stopped whilst it is in transitu to the person who is to receive it (k).

Where the money has been paid to a mere depositary or stakeholder, the plaintiff may recover it at any time before it is paid over, although the agreement be illegal and no longer executory. As, where a wager is deposited with a stakeholder on the event of a battle to be fought by the parties, and the battle be fought, either party may recover his deposit before it be paid over (l) (1) (A). So, where the plaintiff, in order to avoid a prosecution for a misdemeanor, paid a sum of money to the defendant for the use of the poor, it was held that after notice not to pay the money over he might recover it (m).

Of an agent.

It is a general rule that an agent shall not be allowed to set up the title of a third person against his principal (n).

Where the defendant, a broker, had received from the underwriters the amount of an illegal insurance, it was held that he could not set up the illegality of the transaction as a defence in an action by the assured (o). For having received money to the use of another, he cannot in conscience retain it, and no one is entitled to it but the plaintiff. So, where the defendants, who were carriers, received for the plaintiffs the price of a quantity of counterfeit halfpence, it was held that the plaintiff was entitled to recover, and the illegality of the transaction was considered as unimportant to the decision of the question (p), since the plaintiff sought but to recover his own. But it is otherwise where the money has not been actually paid, but

(h) Per Heath, J. Tappenden v. Randall, 2 B. & P. 471.

(i) Aubert v. Maze, 2 B. & P. 371. Cannan v. Bryce,[1] 3 B. & A. 179.

(k) Per Ld. Ellenborough, C. J. in Edgar v. Fowler, 3 East, 222. See the cases cited below. A premium is in transitu if not actually paid by the broker to the underwriter, although the former has given credit for it to the latter. Ibid.

(l) Cotton v. Thurland, 5 T. R. 405. Eltham v. Kingsman, 1 B. & A. 683. And see Howson v. Hancock, 8 T. R. 575. Smith v. Bickmore, 4 Taunt. 474. Aubert v. Walsh, 3 Taunt. 277. Farmer v. Russell, 1 B. & P. 296. Vide etiam, Bate v. Cartwright, 7 Price, 540, which was the case of a wager on a foot-race. A stakeholder having paid over the money deposited, after the wager had been decided against the plaintiff, who claimed the whole as winner; it was held that the plaintiff might recover back his own deposit in an action for money had and received, against the stakeholder; the Court distinguishing between actions by one party to an illegal contract against the other, and those against the stakeholder paying over without authority, and in opposition to his desire. Hastelow v. Jackson, 8 B. & C. 221, and 2 M. & Ry. 209; and see Hodson v. Terril, 1 C. & M. 797. Vide infra, tit. WAGER.

(m) Taylor v. Lendey, 9 East, 49.

(n) White v. Bartlett,[2] 9 Bing. 378. Nicholson v. Knowles, 5 Mad. 47. Crosskey v. Mills, 1 C. M. & R. 298. An agent receiving money to be paid over to a third person, is accountable to his principal until he has entered into some binding engagement to hold the money to the use of such third person. See Williams v. Everett, 14 East, 582; supra, 81. Wedlake v. Hurley, 1 C. & J. 83. Baron v. Husband,[3] 4 B. & Ad. 612; and tit. APPROPRIATION.

(o) Tenant v. Elliott, 1 B. & P. 3. The case was distinguished from that of a stakeholder.

(p) Farmer v. Russell, 1 B. & P. 296.

(1) [This doctrine was adopted by the Sup. Court of New York, in the case of Vischer v. Yates, 11 Johns. 23. But in the Supreme Court of Errors, the decision was reversed by a great majority. 12 Johns. 1.]

(A) (Perkins v. Hyde, 6 Yerg. 228. Hickman v. Littlepage, 2 Dana, 344.)

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. v. 255. [2]Id. xxiii. 312. [3]Id. xxiv. 123.

credit only has been given. An underwriter on an illegal insurance cannot recover the premium from the broker, though the broker has given the underwriter credit for it in their account; no money having been actually received by the broker (q).

Illegal contract.—

In the case of Booth v. Hodgson (r), A., B. and C. being partners in underwriting insurances, which were underwritten in the name of A. alone; C., one of the partners, and D., as the brokers of A., B. and C., received *premiums of insurance to their use, and it was held that B. was not entitled to recover the amount of those premiums from C. and D. as money had and received to his use. Here it is to be observed, that the party could not recover except through the medium of the illegal transaction, and the case differs from that of money paid to a mere agent of the plaintiff, where the illegality of the transaction is out of question.

*96

Receipt by an agent.

In the case of Sullivan v. Greaves (s), the plaintiff and one Bristow, being partners in an insurance underwritten by the plaintiff in his own name, a loss happened, and the plaintiff paid the whole to the defendant, a broker; Bristow afterwards paid his moiety of the loss to the broker, and then the plaintiff brought his action against the broker to recover half of what he had paid; and Lord Kenyon held, that since the plaintiff came to enforce an illegal contract, he could not recover (t). This case may seem at first view to be inconsistent with that of Tenant v. Elliott (u); but it appears to be distinguishable from it; for there the ground of the decision was, that the agent of the plaintiff having received money for his own use, the illegality was out of the question; it was the plaintiff's own money; but in the latter case the plaintiff sought to recover money which he had paid under an executed illegal agreement; before Bristow's payment of the money, the plaintiff, for the reason just stated, was not entitled to recover any part of it; and when Bristow paid the money he did not actually pay it to the plaintiff's use, as in the case of Tenant v. Elliott, but in discharge of his own share in an illegal contract; and the law will not raise an implied assumpsit in favour of a particeps criminis.

Illegal executed consideration.

Money paid over to a party cannot be recovered after the event has happened; for where the parties are in pari delicto, potior est conditio possidentis (x). And therefore a plaintiff cannot recover from the underwriter the premium of a re-assurance void by statute (y) after capture (z). So, where an insurance was made on a ship belonging to a British subject, without interest (a), it was held that the assured could not recover the premium after the ship had arrived safe (b). And in such cases it is pre-

(q) Edgar v. Fowler, 3 East, 222.

(r) 6 T. R. 405.

(s) Park on Ins. 8.

(t) Lord Kenyon afterwards mentioned the case to the other Judges of the Court of K. B., who approved of it; and the doctrine was recognized and approved of by the Court of C. P. in the case of Mitchell and others v. Cockburn, 2 H. B. 379.

(u) 1 B. & P. 3, and supra, 95. See Mr. Selwyn's quære, 1 Selw. N. P. 4th ed. 90.

(x) There is no case to be found where money has been paid by one of two parties to another, on an illegal contract, both being particeps criminis; an action has been maintained to recover it back again. Per Lord Kenyon, in Howson v. Hancock, 8 T. R. 577. The case of Lacaussade v. White, 7 T. R. 535, where money paid on an illegal wager was allowed to be drawn after the event had taken place, has been considered as completely overruled by Howson v. Hancock, 8 T. R. 575, where the contrary was decided. See Vandyck v. Hewitt, 1 East, 96; Williams v. Headly, 8 East, 382; Aubert v. Walsh, 3 Taunt. 284; Morck v. Abel, 3 B. & P. 35; Thistlewood v. Craycroft, 1 M. & S. 500; Stokes v. Twitchen,[1] 8 Taunt. 492; Bayntun v. Cattle, 1 Mo. & R. 265.

(y) 19 Geo. 2, c. 37.

(z) André v. Fletcher, 3 T. R. 266. Webb v. Bishop, B. N. P. 132.

(a) Which is illegal by 19 Geo. 2, c. 37.

(b) Lowry v. Bourdieu, Doug. 467. See also Lubbock v. Potts, 7 East, 449.

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. iv. 183.

sumed that all parties know the law, and the municipal laws of this country are as binding in that respect upon foreigners as upon natives (c).

Where, however, an insurance has been effected in ignorance of particu-
*97 lar *facts which avoid the policy, it has been held that the premium may be recovered (d).

So, where money had been paid by an illegal insurer of lottery tickets, in consequence of having insured the defendant's tickets, it was held that the plaintiff could not recover, because the contract was executed; and the distinction was taken between that case and that of a plaintiff who seeks to recover premiums paid for such illegal insurances (e).

Notice of action. In some instances this form of action cannot be maintained, even though the plaintiff be entitled to receive the money, without proof of notice of action (f), according to the special provision of some statute.

Account stated. The count, upon an account stated, is supported by evidence of an acknowledgment on the part of the defendant of money due (g) to the plaintiff (h), upon an account between them (i). A qualified acknow-

(c) André v. Fletcher, 3 T. R. 266. Morck v. Abel, 3 B. & P. 35. Vandyck v. Hewitt, 1 East, 96; where the money was paid on an illegal insurance to cover a trading with the enemy, and the plaintiff declared on the policy as well as on the money counts.

(d) Hentig v. Staniforth,[1] 1 Starkie's C. 254; 5 M. & S. 122. Owen v. Bruce, 12 East, 225, [and Mr. Day's notes to that case.]

(e) Browning v. Morris, Cowp. 790.

(f) Thus the action does not lie against an excise officer in respect of duties received after the repeal of the Act which imposed them, without notice, according to the 23 G. 3, c. 70, s. 30. For this act protects them in all cases where intending to act within the statute they exceed it. Greenway v. Hurd, 4 T. R. 555. See also, Wallace v. Smith, 5 East, 114. But where the defendants made an excessive charge on a distress for arrears of taxes, it was held that the defendants in an action of assumpsit were not entitled to notice, for the act was not done colore officii. Umphelby v. Maclean, 1 B. & A. 42; and supra, 66, note (t), Ind. tit. Notice.

(g) Tucker v. Barrow,[2] 7 B. & C. 623. A mere acknowledgment of a debt being due, and a promise to pay it, but no amount specified, is insufficient to entitle the plaintiff even to nominal damages on an account stated. Bernasconi v. Argyle,[3] 1 M. & M. 183, and 3 C. & P. 29.[4] Unless the amount be proved aliunde. Dickson v. Doveridge,[5] 2 C. & P. 109. Leeson v. Smith,[6] 4 N. & M. 304. The plaintiff sued as executrix, and proved that the defendant being applied to by her for payment of interest, stated, that she would bring her some on the following Sunday; it was held, that although there was an admission that something was due, yet that as it did not appear what the nature of the debt was, nor whether it was due to the plaintiff as executrix, or in her own right, nor if it was one for which assumpsit would lie, the plaintiff was not entitled to recover even nominal damages. Green v. Davies,[7] 4 B. & C. 235; and see Teal v. Auty,[8] 2 B. & B. 101. The plaintiff must show some precise sum, per Tindal, C. J., Kirton v. Wood, 1 Moo. & R. 253. Where at a meeting of the plaintiff and defendant to settle an account, the clerk of the former made the entries into one book which the defendant copied into another, but no admission was made as to the correctness of the items; and the defendant admitted that the balance against him, as stated by the clerk, was correct; but added, that as he had done many things, there would not be much, if anything, between them; held, that the plaintiff's book would not bind the defendant so as to require its production, or its absence to be accounted for; held also, that the defendant's admission was evidence of something due on the account stated. Rigby v. Jeffrys, 7 Dowl. (P. C.) 561. Where the declaration contained counts, on an instrument in the form of a promissory note, payable at "nine years after date, provided D. M. did not return to England, or his death be certified in the mean time," with common counts for money lent, and upon an account stated; and the only evidence was of handwriting, and that D. M. had never been heard of for 25 years; held that the plaintiff, failing to prove the consideration stated in those counts to have been given for the promise, could not recover upon the latter counts; the instrument not raising any presumption of money lent; on the contrary, the contingency on which it is payable raising rather a different presumption. Morgan v. Jones, 1 Cr. & J. 162; and 1 Tyrw. 21.

(h) Where a plaintiff could not prove his title as indorsee of a bill by evidence of an indorsement, it was held that letters written by the defendant in answer to applications, in which the defendant did not admit any liability to the plaintiff or to any particular holder, but only a liability on the bill to the holder, were not sufficient evidence of title to recover. Jardine v. Payne,[9] 1 B. & Ad. 663.

(i) A. agrees with B. to purchase a house, and take the fixtures at a valuation; an inventory and valuation are made, and the gross amount stated at the foot; A. takes possession and enjoys, and pays part of the amount. In an action for goods sold and delivered, and on an account stated, B. is entitled to recover the remainder on the account stated. Salmon v. Watson,[10] 4 Moore, 73. Upon a verbal agreement for the sale of growing turnips, part of them being drawn, the purchaser promised to pay the amount before he drew any ledgment is not *sufficient (k); neither is a casual acknowledgment, made to a mere stranger (l); nor one made after action brought, without proof of previous dealings (m). Where accounts are submitted to an arbitrator, not by bond, his award is evidence on this count (n). A promissory note given by the defendant to the plaintiff is evidence under this count, even where the note cannot be given in evidence under a special count, because of variance (o). It is unnecessary to prove the items of which the account consists, but sufficient to prove the account stated (p); for the stating of the account is the consideration of the promise (q); and therefore an action upon this count cannot be maintained against an infant (r); for since an infant cannot state an account, the consideration fails.

[1]Eng. Com Law. Reps. ii. 378. [2]Id. xiv. 103. [3]Id. xxii. 285. [4]Id. xiv. 175. [5]Id. xii. 49. [6]Id. xxx. 372. [7]Id. x. 319. [8]Id. vi. 32. [9]Id. xx. 463. [10]Id. xvi. 363.

It is sufficient, although the account be stated of that which is due to the plaintiff only, without making deduction for any counter-claim by the defendant (s). An acknowledgment of a single item in an account is sufficient to support the count (t). It is also sufficient that the account be *stated with the wife of the plaintiff (u). An entry in a bankrupt's ex- *99 amination of a sum due to A. is evidence of an account stated between them, and sufficient to take case out of Statute of Limitations (x).

An account alters the nature of the debt (y); and therefore, if a tenant, more, but which he did not do; held that that sum was recoverable on the account stated. Pinchon v. Chilcott,[1] 3 C. & P. 236. Where the defendant, an incoming tenant, agreed to pay the plaintiff, the offgoing tenant, for all crops sown before a certain day, and the defendant, in answer to a demand of 40*l.* tendered 17*l.*; held that it did not amount to an acknowledgment of debt to support an account stated, but was to be considered as a mere offer to purchase peace. Wayman v. Hilliard,[2] 7 Bing. 101.

(k) Evans v. Verity,[3] R. & M. 239. As where the defendant said, "I would have paid you, if you had not removed the grates." And see Wayman v. Hilliard,[2] 4 M. & P. 629; 7 Bing. 101, S. C.; and supra, note (i).

(l) Buchan v. Smith,[4] 1 Ad. & Ell. 488.

(m) Allen v. Cook, 2 Dowl. P. C. 546. The offer of a cognovit after action brought, is not evidence of an account stated. Spencer v. Parry,[5] 3 Ad. & Ell. 331.

(n) Keen v. Batshore, 1 Esp. C. 194.

(o) See tit. Bills of Exchange. In Leaper v. Tatton, 16 East, 420, Bayley, J. held, that an acknowledgment by the defendant of his having accepted a bill of exchange, and that he had not paid it, created a debt, and was evidence on the account stated: although the defendant, when he acknowledged the acceptance, said that he had been liable, but was not liable then, because the bill was out of date. See the observations of Wood, B. in Partridge & Ux v. Court, 5 Price, 412. Where a memorandum had been given to the plaintiff on a receipt stamped, in the terms "received of E. A. 150*l.*, which we promise to pay," &c., and was not receivable in evidence for want of a promissory note stamp, and there was no count for goods sold, which had been the consideration, but the defendant had acknowledged that he owed the testatrix 150*l.*, without referring to the note; held, that the plaintiff might recover on the count for an account stated. Ashby v. Ashby, 3 M. & P. 186. A plaintiff may recover on an I. O. U. upon the account stated, although it may have been given as the consideration of an agreement not declared upon. Payne v. Jenkins,[6] 4 C. & P. 324. A promissory note not duly stamped is not evidence by way of admission. Green v. Davies,[7] 4 B. & C. 235. Neither is a note payable upon a contingency. Morgan v. Jones, 1 C. & J. 162. Where a promissory note by the defendant to the plaintiff is admissible, it is evidence of an account stated at the time of the date, and shows that the cause of action did not accrue till the time of payment, Whattey v. Williams, 1 M. & W. 533.

(p) Bartlett v. Emery, Hil. 2 G. 2, B. R. 1 T. R. 42, n.

(q) B. N. P. 129. May v. King, Ca. K. B. 537, where the evidence was, that the parties had come to an account, and that 5*l.* was due on the balance; and held, that the plaintiff was entitled to recover on that account. Per Buller, J. Truman v. Hurst, 1 T. R. 40.

(r) Truman v. Hurst, 1 T. R. 40. In Ingledew v. Douglas,[8] 2 Starkie, C. 36, Lord Ellenborough held, that an account stated by an infant was not evidence after he had attained his age, even to show that he had had the necessaries mentioned in the account.

(s) Stuart v. Rowland, 1 Show. 215.

(t) Highmore v. Primrose, 5 M. & S. 65.

(u) 1 Show. 215; B. N. P. 129.

(x) Eicke v. Nokes, 1 M. & R. 359. As amounting to an absolute admission of an existing debt. Per Tindal, L. C. J.; see Knowles v. Mitchell, 13 East, 249; Brigstock v. Smith, 1 C. & M. 483; Kennett v. Milbank,[9] 8 Bing. 38. But where a party examined before Commissioners of Bankrupt, admitted that he had received a sum of money on account of the bankrupt after an act of bankruptcy, but not that it was a subsisting debt, it was held to be insufficient.

(y) Vent. 268; Allen, 73; 2 Lev. 110.

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. xiv. 283. [2] Id. xx. 62. [3] Id. xxi. 427. [4] Id. xxviii. 125. [5] Id. xxx. 107. [6] Id. xix. 404. [7] Id. x. 319. [8] Id. ii. 233. [9] Id. xxi. 213.

being in arrear of rent, settle an account with his landlord, and promise to pay him, assumpsit lies (z). And it seems to be immaterial in which way the debt arose, if there be an account stated, and an express undertaking to pay the balance (a). The action lies, even althongh the items of account were secured by a specialty (b).

Thus, after an account has been liquidated between two partners, assumpsit will lie for the balance upon an account stated, and a promise to pay, although the partnership deed contains a covenant between the parties to account at certain times (c); for if a partnership be dissolved, and an account settled, it is a good consideration for a promise to pay (d). But in general, so long as any partnership concerns remain unadjusted, no action can be maintained by one partner against another (e).

Although it appear that there was a memorandum of agreement for the sale of growing trees, but neither stamped nor signed, an admission of the sum due, after the trees have been cut and carried away, is evidence on this count (f).

*100 *Where the plaintiff had sold a ship to the defendant who became the sole registered owner, and afterwards, by way of security to the plaintiff for advances for the ship, executed a bond conditioned for making a bill of sale to the plaintiff, which he failed to do, and subsequently sold the ship to a third person; and, on being applied to by the plaintiff, promised to render to him an account of the produce of the sale and disbursements; it was held to be evidence that he had sold the ship on account of the plaintiff, and an admission of his liability to pay over the balance in his hands (g).

The plaintiff may recover on an account stated by the defendant with the plaintiff's wife; but not on an account stated by the defendant's wife, unless her agency be proved (h).

Parties. Where an account was stated between the defendant and his wife with the plaintiff, of an account due from the wife whilst sole, to the plaintiff, for goods sold, it was held that the action could not be maintained against (z) Roll. Ab. 9; Bro. Account, 81; Ray. 211; 2 Keb. 813.

(a) In Foster v. Allanson, 2 T. R. 479, where the partnership had been dissolved, and an account stated, which the defendant promised to pay, Buller, J. distinguished the case from that of Drue v. Thorne, Alleyn, 72, on the ground of the express promise. In that case a feme sole being indebted to the plaintiff for goods, married, and she and her husband stated an account with the plaintiff, which the husband promised to pay, and it was held that the wife must be joined.

(b) Moravia v. Levy, 2 T. R. 483. (c) Moravia v. Levy, 2 T. R. 483, (n).

(d) Foster v. Allanson, 2 T. R. 479. And a judgment in that action might be pleaded in bar of an action on the covenant, per Buller, J. 2 T. R. 403; and see Brierly v. Cripps,[1] 7 C. & P. 709. It seems, however, that as between partners such an action cannot be maintained but on a final balance. Fromont v. Copeland,[2] 2 Bing. 170. Goddard v. Hodges, 1 C. & M. 37; and see tit. Partners; and Wilson v. Cutting,[3] 10 Bing. 436. It has been questioned whether an express promise be not necessary. But see Clark v. Glennie,[4] 3 Starkie's C. 10. Henley v. Soper,[5] 2 M. & R. 166; 8 B. & C. 20, S. C.; Rackstraw v. Imber,[6] Holt's C. 368; and the cases above referred to, and tit. Partners. [See 14 Mass. Rep. 99, 15 ib. 121.]

(e) Foster v. Allanson, 2 T. R. 479. Robson v. Curtis,[7] 1 Starkie's N. P. C. 78. Plaintiff and defendant agree to buy goods on their joint account, the defendant agreeing to furnish the plaintiff with half the amount in time for payment, the plaintiff having paid the whole, may recover the moiety, although an account is still to be taken between them as partners, on the disposal of the whole stock. Venning v. Leekie, 13 East, 7. Where A. a partner with B. & C., supplied his own money to B. for the benefit of the firm, on a promise by B. to repay him out of proceeds already received for goods of the firm; it was held that A. might recover the amount from B. as money had and received to his use. Coffer v. Brian,[8] 3 Bing. 54. [See 15 Johns. 403; 12 Mass. Rep. 34.]

(f) Teal v. Auty,[9] 2 B. & B. 99. Knowles v. Mitchell, 13 East, 249; secus, if no precise sum be admitted. Ibid. So on an agreement for purchase of furniture and fixtures, the inventory containing a mixed valuation of goods and fixtures, the plaintiff may recover the value on this count. Salmon v. Watson,[10] 4 Moore, 73. But not on the count for goods sold and delivered, semble, Ibid. And see Lee v. Risdon,[11] 7 Taunt. 188.

(g) Prouting v. Hammond,[12] 1 Gow's C. 41. (h) B. N. P. 129.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxxii. 701. [2]Id. ix. 366. [3]Id. xxv. 187. [4]Id. xiv. 147. [5]Id. xv. 147. [6]Id. iii. 132. [7]Id. ii. 303. [8]Id. xi. 25. [9]Id. vi. 32. [10]Id. xvi. 363. [11]Id. ii. 69. [12]Id. v. 432.

the husband alone (i). So, the plaintiff cannot recover against the defendant upon an account stated by him partly as administrator, and partly in his own private capacity (k).

Where the defendant dealt with B., and then with B. and C., his partner, and an account was settled between the defendant and B. and C., which included both the accounts, it was held that B. and C. might maintain an action on this account (l).

And the plaintiff may recover on an account stated with the defendant, including debts due from the defendant alone, and from the defendant and a deceased partner jointly (m).

An account stated is not so conclusive in its effect as to exclude evidence of errors which have crept into the account (n). The accounting with the plaintiff in a particular character, is an admission of the character (o).

Variance. A variance in evidence between the amount of the balance proved and that averred in the declaration, is now held to be immaterial (p).

It seems that under this count, one account only is admissible (q).

Interest is not recoverable in the absence of a contract, express or implied, for the payment of interest on the balance (r).

Breach. An omission to prove the whole breach, as alleged in the declaration, is not material. The plaintiff in an action upon a policy of insurance may allege a total loss, and recover for a partial or average loss (s).

Where the breach alleged that the defendant had treated the estate contrary *to good husbandry and the custom of the country, it was held to be supported by showing that the defendant had treated it contrary to the prevalent course of good husbandry in that neighbourhood; as by tilling half his farm at once, when no other farmer tilled more than one third; and that it was not necessary to prove any precise definite custom or usage in respect to the quantity tilled (t). *101

In an action against the defendant, as wharfinger, for not procuring a sufferance for goods, in consequence whereof the goods were seized as forfeited to the king, it appeared that it was the defendant's duty, as wharfinger, to obtain a sufferance from the custom-house for the shipping of the goods, which he had not done, and in consequence of which the right of seizure had attached. It was also proved that the goods had been seized by a custom-house officer, and sold in the usual manner. It was objected that the record of a sentence of condemnation ought to be proved, but it was held that the proof was sufficient (u).

Proof by defendant on non-assumpsit. Previous to the late rules, the defendant, by the plea of non-assumpsit, might have put the plaintiff to the proof of his whole case, and in answer he might in general have adduced any evidence which disproved the case set up by the plaintiff, and showed that at the time when the action was

(i) Drue v. Thorne, Alleyn, 72. But Buller, J. in Foster v. Allanson, 2 T. R. 483, intimated that it would have been otherwise if the defendant had expressly promised to pay.

(k) Herrenden v. Palmer, Hob. 88.

(l) Moore v. Hill, Sitt. Guildhall after Easter, 1795; Peake's Ev. 257, 3d edit. Qu. whether there was not an express promise in this case to transfer the credit to the new firm, and pay the consolidated account? And see Gough v. Davis, 4 Price, 214; David v. Ellis,[1] 5 B. & C. 196.

(m) Richards v. Heather, 1 B. & A. 29.

(n) Formerly it was considered to be more conclusive. See Ld. Mansfield's observations in Truman v. Hurst, 1 T. R. 42. But see Roper v. Holland,[2] 3 Ad. & Ell. 22. S. C. 4 N. & M. 668.

(o) Peacock v. Harris, 10 East, 104. (p) Thompson v. Spencer, B. N. P. 129.

(q) Per Littledale, J. Kennedy v. Withers,[3] 3 B. & Ad. 769.

(r) Nichol v. Thompson, 1 Camp. 52. Dawes v. Pinner, 486, n. Moore v. Voughton,[4] 1 Starkie's C. 487. See tit. INTEREST.

(s) Gardiner v. Crousdale, Burr. 905: and see the cases, 5 Will. Saund. 205; Bl. 198.

(t) 4 East, 154. (u) Baker v. Liscoe, 7 T. R. 171.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xi. 201. [2]Id. xxx. 37. [3]Id. xxiii. 182. [4]Id. ii. 479.

brought the plaintiff had no cause of action, or at least no right to maintain this form of action (A).

The evidence admissible under the plea of non assumpsit is much limited by the following rules of Hil. T., 4 W. 4.

Defence under the new rules.

1. In all actions of assumpsit, except on bills of exchange and promissory notes, the plea of non assumpsit shall operate only as a denial in fact (v) of the express contract or promise alleged, or of the matters of fact from which the contract or promise alleged may be implied by law (w).

102 Ex. gr. in an action on a warranty, the plea will operate as a denial of the fact of the warranty having been given upon the alleged consideration, but not of the breach; and in an action on a policy of insurance, of the (v) And, therefore, in the case of an express contract the plea does not operate as a denial of the alleged consideration. Where the declaration alleged, that in consideration of receiving a horse and 2*l.*, the defendant agreed to sell a horse on warranty to the plaintiff; it was held that the plaintiff, on non assumpsit pleaded, was not bound to prove the delivery of the horse and 2*l.* Smith v. Parsons,[1] 8 C. & P. 199. And where the plaintiff alleged that, as author, he had a right to the music and poetry of an opera, and that in consideration of the premises, and that the plaintiff would sell him such right, the defendant undertook to buy it; Tindal, C. J., held, that under a similar plea it was not competent to the defendant to contend, either that the plaintiff was not the author, or had not the right, or did not sell it to the defendant. De Pinna v. Polhill,[2] 8 C. & P. 78. And in Passenger v. Brookes,[3] 1 Bing. N. C. 587, it was held, that the defendant could not prove want of consideration as a defence under this plea. But see the observations of Parke, B. on this case in Bennion v. Davison, 3 M. & W. 19. In assumpsit on a guarantee for goods supplied to A., the plea admits the supply, and the fact need not be proved, except to show the amount of damages. Taylor v. Hilary,[4] 7 C. & P. 30. See Gibson v. Harris,[5] 8 C. & P. 379. But it is clear that the plea does not admit the truth of any immaterial averment in the declaration. When the declaration on a special agreement to carry goods safely in a vessel lying in a certain river, alleged that they were to be carried by the defendants as owners of the said vessel; it was held that this plea did not admit the ownership. Bennion v. Davison, 3 M. & W. 19.

(w) The defendant may, under the general issue, show that the action was brought on a partnership transaction between himself and the plaintiff. Pearson v. Shelton, 1 M. & W. 504. Worrel v. Grayson, 1 M. & W. 166. So in an action by one joint owner of a ship against another for contribution to recover a proportion of the damages paid by the plaintiff to a third party for the value of goods sent by the ship and lost, the defendant may show that the goods were lost, and damages incurred, through the plaintiff's own misconduct. Gregory v. Hartnell, 1 M. & W. 183. In an action for work and labour, he may show that the work was done under a special contract, on which nothing is due. Jones v. Nanney, 1 M. & W. 333. And see Grounsell v. Lamb, 1 M. & W. 352; Dicken v. Neale, 1 M. & W. 556. By the express provision of the statute 55 G. 3, c. 194, the plaintiff in an action on an apothecary's bill must, under this plea, prove his certificate, or that he was in practice before August 5, 1815. Wagstaff v. Sharpe, 3 M. & W. 521; and see tit. APOTHECARY. It has been held at Nisi Prius, that in an action for goods sold and delivered, the defendant under this plea could not prove that the goods were of no value. Roffey v. Smith,[6] 6 C. & P. 662. It seems, however, to be impossible to imply a contract to pay anything for that which is of no value. On a quantum meruit for service rendered, it has been held that the defendant, under the general issue, may show the worthlessness of the alleged service. The defendant, under the plea of non assumpsit, may show that the goods did not correspond with the warranty. Dicken v. Neale, 1 M. & W. 556. Grounsell v. Lamb, 1 M. & W. 352. See tit. VENDOR AND VENDEE.

(A) (Any matter which shows that the plaintiff never had any cause of action may be given in evidence under the general issue; Champlin v. Butler, 18 John. R. 169; Wilt v. Ogden, 13 Id. 56; as an illegal consideration; Craig v. Missouri, 4 Pet. 426; Jones v. Pryor, 1 Bibb. 614; or usury, Cotton v. Lake, 2 Mass. R. 540. The incapacity of the defendant to make a contract at the time of the alleged contract, because he was then an infant; Wailing v. Toll, 9 John. R. 141; Stansbury v. Marks, 4 Dall. 130; or non compos, Mitchell v. Kingman, 5 Pick. 431. A former judgment between the same parties for the same cause of action, Young v. Black, 7 Cranch, 565; Kilheffer v. Herr, 17 Serg. & R. 325; Wright v. Butler, 6 Wend. 289, may likewise be given in evidence, under the general issue; that the defendant is an insolvent debtor, and that his property has been assigned to trustees for the use of his creditors, may also be proved under the general issue. Kennedy v. Ferris, 5 Serg. & R. 394. Aliter, where the claim in suit has been previously assigned under a voluntary assignment. Hopkins v. Banks, 7 Cow. 650. On the plea of non assumpsit, everything, even a general release, may be given in evidence, which shows that the plaintiff has no right to recover, notwithstanding that no notice has been given of special matter. Dawson v. Tibbs, 4 Yeates, 349, or payment. Drake v. Drake, 11 John. R. 531; Coe v. Givan, 1 Blackf. 367. So in New York. Eddy v. Smith, 13 Wend. 488. But the defendant cannot give evidence of damages sustained by a breach of the contract for which the note was given, on which the action was brought. Cheongwo v. William Jones, 3 Wash. C. C. R. 359.)

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxxiv. 351. [2]Id. xxxiv. 298. [3]Id. xxvii. 498. [4]Id. xxxii. 425. [5]Id. xxxiv. 437. [6]Id. xxv. 585.

subscription to the alleged policy by the defendant, but not of the interest, of the commencement of the risk of the loss, or of the alleged compliance with warranties. Bills of exchange, bills or notes by way of accommodation, set-off, mutual credit, unseaworthiness, misrepresentation, concealment, deviation, and various other defences must be pleaded.

In every species of assumpsit, all matters in confession or avoidance, including not only those by way of discharge, but those which show the transaction to be either void or voidable in point of law, on the ground of fraud or otherwise, shall be specially pleaded; ex. gr. infancy, coverture, release, payment, performance, illegality of consideration, either by statute or common law, drawing, indorsing, accepting, &c. bills or notes by way of accommodation, set-off, mutual credit, unseaworthiness, misrepresentation, concealment, deviation, and various other defences must be pleaded.

Denial of the contract.

Subject to these rules, which regulate the form of the plea by which the defence to the action is properly to be raised, the defendant may insist that the agreement was under hand and seal, for then the form of action is mistaken (x). That the action has not been brought by the proper parties, the promise having been made to the plaintiffs jointly with others (y) (1); or that the defendant was a partner with the plaintiff (z): That the plaintiff who sues as a feme sole was married when the contract was made (a): That one of the defendants did not promise jointly with the rest (2): That the action was commenced before the cause of action arose (b).

He may controvert the promise in fact by showing that none such was ever made; or if in fact made, may avoid it in point of law, by proof that it was obtained by duress, or whilst the party was in a state of intoxication, *or by proof of infancy (c), coverture (d), lunacy (e), illegality (f) or fraud (g). *103

(x) Gilb. Law of Ev. 183; Cro. J. 506, 508; Hutt. 34; infra, 78. (y). Where the plaintiff had contracted by deed to perform certain works, and for extra works at prices to be fixed by a third party, who fraudulently awarded that nothing was due in respect thereof; held that the plaintiff could not reject the deed upon the ground of fraud, and recover in assumpsit, as on a simple contract; the defendant having paid into court a sum upon certain counts, held that it could only be applied to the sums which were recoverable under those counts on which it was paid in. Churchill v. Day, 3 M. & Ry. 71.

(y) Gilb. Law of Ev. 189; Tri. per Pais, 187; B. N. P. 152; on the ground of variance.

(z) Cheap v. Cromond,[1] 4 B. & A. 663. See Waugh v. Carver, 2 H. B. 235. Such evidence would, it seems, be admissible under the general issue. Worrel v. Grayson, 1 M. & W. 166. Pearson v. Shelton, 1 M. & W. 504.

(a) 3 Camp. 438. (b) Ld. Raym. 1249.

(c) Gilb. Law of Ev. 186; 2 Lev. 144; Tri. per Pais, 308; Ld. Raym. 389; Salk. 279; B. N. P. 152. Vide infra, tit. Infant.

(d) Gilb. Law of Ev. 183. Cowley v. Robertson and Mary his wife, 3 Camp. 438; where it was proved in bar, that when the goods were supplied to the defendant Mary, she was the wife of one Gilley, who was still living. Vide infra, Husband and Wife.

(e) Gilb. C. P. 65. It is a good defence that the defendant at the time of the contract was of unsound mind, and that the plaintiff took advantage of the circumstance to impose upon him. Browne v. Joddrell, M. & M. 105. Long v. Baker. 1b. 106. Sentance v. Poole,[2] 3 C. & P. 1. But lunacy is no defence to an implied promise for necessaries. Baxter v. Lord Portsmouth,[3] 5 B. & C. 170.

(f) The defence must be specially pleaded. Lord Lyndhurst, in Colbourne v. Patmore, observes, "I know of no case in which a person who has committed an act deemed by the law to be criminal, has been permitted to recover compensation against a person who has acted jointly with him in the commission of a crime." Vide supra and infra, tit. Vendor and Vendee. Bensley v. Bignold,[4] 5 B. & A. 635. Stephens v. Robinson, 2 C. & J. 209. A promise to indemnify the plaintiff, in consideration of the plaintiff having published a libel and defended an action brought against him, is void. Shackell v. Rosier,[5] 2 Bing. N. C. 634.

(1) [Baker v. Jewell, 6 Mass. Rep. 462. 7 Mod. 360. (Leach's ed.) 2 Stra. 1146, 820. 2 Show. 446. 2 T. R. 282. 1 Taunt. 7. 7 T. R. 254, acc.]

(2) [East, 48. So in actions ex quasi contractu. 2 N. R. 454. 12 East, 452.]

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. vi. 556. [2]Id. xiv. 179. [3]Id. xi. 190. [4]Id. vii. 121. [5]Id. xxix. 438.

Discharge from the contract.

Or that a condition precedent was not performed (h); or he may show that the promise has been discharged by the plaintiff before breach (i), or by a subsequent contract inconsistent with the former. Thus if A. promise to marry B. within three months, and it is afterwards agreed that he shall marry her in half a year, this will discharge the former promise; for by taking the latter promise of a longer time, the parties must be supposed to intend to discharge the former, for otherwise the latter could have no intent at all (k).

Or that it had been discharged by accord and satisfaction (l); or by a *104 *release (m); or that it has been merged in some higher security (n); or has Money expended for the purposes of an unlicensed theatre cannot be recovered against one at whose request the money was expended, and who participated in the profits. De Begnis v. Armistead,[1] 10 Bing. 107. The proprietor of a newspaper cannot, before the filing of the affidavit required by the statute, recover on a contract for the printing of the paper. Houston v. Mills, 1 M. & R. 325. And see Poplett v. Stockdale, R. & M. 337. Coates v. Hatton,[2] 3 Starkie's C 61. So as to money lent for the purpose of playing at an illegal game. M'Kinnell v. Robinson, 3 M. & W. 434. See also Cannan v. Bryce,[3] 3 B. & A. 179, as to money advanced for settling illegal stock-jobbing transactions. Money advanced to an agent to be expended in illegal disbursements, as (semble) paying the travelling expenses of voters, cannot be recovered. Bayntum v. Cattle, 1 M. & R. 265. A broker cannot, unless duly licensed according to the stat. 6 Anne, c. 16, maintain an action for work and labour for buying and selling stock. Cope v. Rowlands, 2 M. & M. 149.

(g) Campbell v. Fleming,[4] 1 Ad. & Ell. 40. As in consideration of puffing at an auction. Icely v. Grew,[5] 6 C. & P. 671. And see Hill v. Grey,[6] 1 Starkie's C. 534. Boxwell v. Christie, Cowp. 395. Crowder v. Austen,[7] 3 Bing. 368. Wheeler v. Collier,[8] M. & M. 126; and infra, tit. Fraud, and Vendor and Vendee. This defence must be specially pleaded.

(h) Supra, but he cannot show that the condition was not performed with intent to insist on the promise. Williams v. Carnardine,[9] 4 B. & Ad. 621.

(i) And this may be proved by parol agreement; but after a breach, it cannot be discharged by any new agreement, without a deed, unless it operate in satisfaction. B. N. P. 152; 2 Lev. 144; 1 Mod. 259; Ca. K. B. 518.

(k) Gilb. Law of Ev. 198; Tri. per Pais, 402. But a second promise to marry in a fortnight would not discharge the former. Ibid.

(l) Salk. 140; B. N. P. 152, Ld. Ray. 566. See tit. Accord and Satisfaction, supra, 15. A debtor, being unable to meet the demands of his creditors, they signed an agreement, which was assented to by the debtor, to accept payment by his covenanting to pay two-thirds of his annual income to a trustee of their nomination, and give a warrant of attorney as a collateral security. The creditors never nominated a trustee, and the agreement was not acted upon. The debtor appeared to have been always willing to perform his part of the engagement; held, that the agreement, though not properly an accord and satisfaction, was still a good defence on the general issue, as it constituted a valid new contract between the creditors and the debtor, capable of being immediately enforced, and the consideration for which to each creditor was the forbearance of the rest; and as there appeared no failure of performance on the part of the debtor. Good v. Cheeseman,[10] 2 B. & Ad. 328.

(m) B. N. P. 152; Doug. 107.

(n) Vide Pudsey's Case, cited 2 Leon, 110; 3 East, 258. Hosier v. Lord Arundell, 3 B. & P. 7. Partridge v. Court, 5 Price, 412. Where the contract is under seal, assumpsit does not lie, for the law will not raise an assumpsit where the party resorts to a higher security; therefore, if the obligor of a bond, without some new consideration, as forbearance, promise to pay the money, assumpsit will not lie. Toussaint v. Martinnant, 2 T. R. 100. There the surety took a bond from the principal. So where a sum is due for freight and demurrage under a specialty contract, the plaintiff cannot recover in indebitatus assumpsit. Atty v. Parish, 1 N. R. 104. But a freighter may recover against ship owners for negligence, although the captain (one of the ship owners) has entered into a charter-party under seal with the plaintiff. Leslie v. Wilson,[11] 3 B. & B. 171. For ship owners are chargeable upon their general liability in respect of the duties which belong to them as such, and which are not inconsistent with the charter-party. The only exception to the rule is an action of debt for rent, and that rests on the consideration that by the demise an interest in the land passes. 1 N. B. 104. And vide Hardr. 332; Warren v. Consett, 8 Mod. 107: Com. Dig. tit. Pleader, [O.] 15; Kemp v. Goodall, 1 Salk. 277. Hence in an action for rent due under a demise by deed, nil debet is a good plea. Ib. Where the obligor of a respondentia bond, by indorsement upon it agreed to pay the money to any assignee, it was held that an assignee might maintain indebitatus assumpsit. Fenner v. Mears, 2 Bl. 1269. But this has been doubted by Lord Kenyon, in Johnson v. Collins, 1 East, 104; and Bayley, J. White v. Parkins, 12 East, 582. But where there is a subsequent parol agreement not inconsistent with the deed, and founded on a sufficient consideration, assumpsit lies. See Leslie De la Torre, cited 12 East, 583; White v. Parkins, 12 East, 578. A guarantee by the deed of a third person is no merger. White v. Cuyler, 1 Esp. C. 200; 6 T. R. 176.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxv. 47. [2]Id. xiv. 163. [3]Id. v. 255. [4]Id. xxviii. 29. [5]Id. xxv. 590. [6]Id. ii. 459. [7]Id. xiii. 11. [8]Id. xxii. 266. [9]Id. xxiv. 126. [10]Id. xxii. 89. [11]Id. vii. 395.

been rescinded (o); waived (p); or suspended (q); or that the recovery would occasion circuity.

That the performance became impossible, by the act of God; as that a *horse hired by the defendant for a journey, died on the journey without the defendant's fault (r). *105

He may show that no consideration existed; or that it has wholly failed through the negligence of the plaintiff (s); or was insufficient in law (t); or

(o) Where the defendant hired a carriage of the plaintiff for a certain time, and before it had expired sent it back; held that if the plaintiff sold it within that time, it would have been a rescinding of the contract, and he could not be entitled to the stipulated hire. Wright v. Melville,[1] 3 C. & P. 542. See further, Garrard v. Woolner.

(p) The seller of goods, on the buyer's refusing to accept them, requested him to sell them, which the buyer agreed to do, but could not; this amounts to a waiver by the seller. Gomery v. Bond, 9 M. & S. 378.

(q) Stock having been transferred to another name under a forged power of attorney, whilst it was doubtful whether the Bank of England was by law liable to make good the loss, the stock owners entered into a contract with the Bank, whereby the latter agreed to replace the stock and pay the intermediate dividends, and the former agreed, in the first instance, and before they claimed the stock, adversely to tender a proof on the estate of the party who had fraudulently transferred it, and had received one payment of such dividends, but had refused to tender the proof; held, that the Bank were entitled to avail themselves of the agreement, as a suspension of the plaintiff's right to sue, until they had performed their part of the stipulation. Stracey v. Bank of England,[2] 6 Bing. 754; and see Longridge v. Dorville,[3] 5 B. & A. 117. Action by the drawer against the acceptor of two bills, the latter, upon an arrangement, assigned certain property as a security for certain sums then due, as well as for future demands, with a power of sale after six months' notice; held that it could only be considered a collateral security, and did not suspend the personal remedy. Emes v. Widdowson,[4] 4 C. & P. 151. Upon an agreement with their general creditors, the defendants surrendered all their stock to trustees, and agreed to execute a conveyance of all their estate, the trustees entered on the management and paid dividends to the amount of 10*s.* in the pound; the defendants afterwards being called upon to execute the conveyance, required that it should contain a general release from the creditors, and deeming the one inserted insufficient, refused to execute; but all the creditors had not then executed it; and before an adjourned meeting was held to obtain such execution, the plaintiff commenced his action; held that the agreement, purporting to contemplate a suspension of the right of action by the creditors until a final meeting and execution of the instrument by the creditors, and refusal by the defendants, the creditors were not remitted to their former rights, and the action was therefore premature. Tutlock v. Smith,[5] 6 Bing. 339.

(r) Gilb. Law of Ev. 187; Tri. per Pais, 399. Secus, where performance was impossible at the time of the promise. Com. Dig. Action on the Case on Assumpsit, [G.]; and see Com. Dig. Condition, [D.] 1. And a plaintiff cannot show that performance of the consideration became impossible by the act of God. Ibid. If the condition of a feoffment be impossible at the time of making, and precedent, the estate does not vest; if subsequent, the estate becomes absolute. If a condition subsequent on the feoffment be possible at the time of the feoffment, but afterwards become impossible, the estate is absolute, for it has vested; secus, in the case of an obligation, which is executory. Co. Litt. 206. A condition to create an estate is to be construed according to the intention of the parties; to destroy an estate, is to be construed strictly. 1 Ins. 219 b; 3 B. & C. 246.

(s) See tit. Goods sold and delivered.—Negligence.—Work and Labour. Grimaldi v. White, 4 Esp. C. 95. Basten v. Butter, 7 East, 479. Farnsworth v. Garrard, 1 Camp. 48. Fisher v. Samuda, Ibid. 190. Lewis v. Cosgrave, 2 Taunt. 2. The inference from these cases seems to be, that where a contract is made for a specific thing, at a specific price, and the contract be not performed, the party must either rescind the contract in toto, or pay the price; but that where there is no specific contract, and the plaintiff proceeds on a quantum meruit, he must recover according to the value of the work, or the article to the defendant; and consequently where there has been no beneficial service, he is not entitled to recover anything. In Roffey v. Smith,[6] 6 C. & P. 662, it was held that the defendant in an action of indebitatus assumpsit, was not at liberty, under the plea of non assumpsit, to show that the goods were of no value; tamen qu., for in such a case the plea is to operate as a denial of the matters of fact, from which the contract may be implied by law. In the case of Fowler v. Marksell, York Summer Ass. 1836, Parke, B. admitted evidence of negligence in defence of an action of indebitatus assumpsit for work and labour under this plea. Where the action is on a special contract, the want of consideration is not, it seems, admissible under this plea. Passenger v. Brookes,[7] 1 Bing. N. C. 587; but see Bennion v. Davison, 3 M. & W. 179. In an action for contribution by one joint owner of a ship against another, to recover a portion of damages recovered by a third person against the plaintiff for the recovery of the value of goods sent by the ship, the defendant may show, under the general issue, that the goods were lost and damages incurred through the misconduct of the plaintiff. Gregory v. Hartnall, 1 M. & W. 183. Under the same issue, the defendant may show that the goods were not equal to the warranty. Dicken v. Neale, 1 M. & W. 556. Grounsell v. Lambe, 1 M. & W. 352; or that the work was done under a special contract, under which nothing is done. Jones v. Nanny, 1 M. & W. 333.

(t) The receiver of the wife's estate, by the direction of the husband, but without the wife's authority, accepted a bill for the husband's debt to the drawer, and being afterwards called upon by the husband and illegal (u); or lastly, he may prove that the promise has been performed, as by payment (x), or the delivery of the thing contracted for (y).

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xiv. 438. [2]Id. xix. 224. [3]Id. vii. 43. [4]Id. xix. 316. [5]Id. xix. 94. [6]Id. xxv. 585. [7]Id. xxvii. 498.

*106 Defence—damages. *The defendant cannot give evidence of any matter which arose after the commencement of the action, not even payment of the debt and costs, except for the purpose of diminishing the damages, which in such case would be merely nominal (z) (A). So for the same purpose he may give in evidence any other payment (a). The Statute of Limitations will be no bar under this issue, although it appear from the plaintiff's own showing, or even from the declaration itself, that the cause of action did not arise within the six years (b).

The fact that others who are not joined contracted jointly with the defendant, is available by plea in abatement only; if it be proved it shows no variance; for it is still true as alleged, that the defendant undertook and promised (c).

The evidence under the pleas of a tender of the money before action brought; the Statute of Limitations; a set-off; payment; infancy (d); coverture (e), will be afterwards considered.

ATTAINDER OF FELONY (f).

Is pleadable in bar against a demand accruing after the attainder (g). The proof is by the record of the judgment (h). For the effect of an wife to pay over to them the rent received, when the bill became due having refused to pay it, unless the plaintiff would give him an indemnity for being reimbursed by the husband and wife, which was accordingly given; the bill not being ultimately paid, held, that to avoid circuity of action, the drawer could not maintain the action. Carr v. Stephens,[1] 9 B. & C. 758.

(u) Supra, 63. Every such defence must be specially pleaded; as that the work and labour were illegal. Potts v. Sparrow,[2] 1 Bing. N. C. 594; 3 Dowl. P. C. 630. Marten v. Smith,[3] 4 Bing. N. C. 436. So where a contract is made void by statute. Barnett v. Glossop, 3 Dowl. P. C. 625;[4] 1 Bing. N. C. 633. But it seems that the want of a sufficient memorandum of the contract may be objected under the general issue. Johnson v. Dodgson, 2 M. & W. 653. Elliott v. Thomas, 3 M. & W. 170.

(x) By a late rule of pleading, T. T. 1 Vict., it is ordered that payment shall not be allowed in any case to be given in evidence, in reduction of damages or debt, but shall be pleaded in bar.

(y) B. N. P. 152; Salk. 140; Ld. Ray. 566. Although it was once held that performance must be pleaded. Ibid.; and 1 Mod. 210. See tit. PAYMENT. So it is a defence that the amount has already been recovered in a former action; or that the plaintiff, in a former action where he was defendant, might have availed himself of his present claim in diminution of damages. Hirst v. Atkinson, 2 Camp. 63; see Basten v. Butter, 7 East, 479. A consignee is not liable for the delay of the vessel, if he cannot get his goods because another's goods prevent him; but where the delay is occasioned by his own default, it is no answer to the claim for demurrage that other consignees have already paid to a larger amount for the same period. Dobson v. Droop, 1 M. & M. 441. In an action on the charter-party for not taking a full cargo, which appeared to have arisen from waste of room in making the arrangements for stowage, which varied from that stipulated by the charter-party; but one of the plaintiffs and their broker, who managed the business, were present at the time, and allowed the expense to be incurred without making any objection; held that they were not entitled to recover. Hovill v. Stephenson,[5] 4 Carr. & P. C. 470.

(z) Holland v. Jourdain,[6] Holt's C. 6. After money has been paid without a rule of court, the defendant cannot try the merits, and the costs inevitably follow. Per Ld. Ellenborough. Atkinson v. Thornton, 1 Camp. C. 559, n.

(a) B. N. P. 153; 2 Lev. 81. But the payment of must be pleaded; see the new rule, supra, 105, note (x).

(b) B. N. P. 152; 1 Will. Saund. 283, n. (z); Ib. vol. 2, 63, (a); Salk. 278.

(c) 1 Will. Saund. 291, note (4); but see Gilb. L. Ev. 189; Vent. 52; and see B. N. P. 152.

(d) The evidence applicable to these will be considered under those respective titles.

(e) See HUSBAND AND WIFE.

(f) The stat. 54 Geo. 3, c. 145, takes away corruption of blood as a consequence of attainder, except in high and petit treason, murder.

(g) Bullock v. Dodds, 2 B. & A. 273. (h) Vide Vol. I. and Index, tit. JUDGMENT.

(A) (The defendant cannot prove payment after action brought, as an answer to an action on a note; but it may be given in evidence to reduce damages. M'Millian v. Wallace, 3 Stew. 185. Pemigewasset Bank v. Brackett, 4 N. Hamp. 557. Moore v. M'Nairy, 1 Dev. 319.)

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xvii. 491. [2]Id. xxvii. 502. [3]Id. xxxiii. 402. [4]Id. xxvii. 522. [5]Id. xix. 477. [6]Id. iii. 5.

attainder as to competency, see title INFAMOUS WITNESS; and see also tit. CERTIFICATE.

ATTORNEY (A).

Proof that the plaintiff is an attorney.

IN an action by an attorney for slandering him in his profession, he may prove that he is an attorney by means of an examined copy of the Roll of

(A) (The office of attorney is in some of our states, preserved partially or entirely, distinct from that of barrister or counsellor, in others not, but everywhere the functions of attorney or counsellor draw after them distinct rights and liabilities, whether exercised by the same or different individuals. Retainer. In an action by an attorney for his costs, though he need not prove the original employment, yet he must show some recognition of him by his client, as attorney, in the progress of the suit. Evidence, that he acted as attorney, and that he was considered as such by the attorney of the opposite party, is sufficient. Hotchkiss v. Le Roy, 9 Johns. 142. Talby v. Reynolds, 1 Pike's Ark. Rep. 99. It is not the practice of Pennsylvania, to file warrants of attorney; and where an attorney, without authority, professing to act as the attorney of the defendant, entered an amicable action in 1797, on which judgment was signed in 1798, against the defendant, the court on a motion to set aside the judgment, said, that nothing could then be done, but to let the judgment stand as a security, and permit the defendant to contest the demand in point of law. Coxe v. Nicholls, 2 Yeates' R. 547. An attorney, who enters an appearance in a suit without authority, is answerable in damages for the injury, which he may thereby have occasioned to the parties. Field v. Gibbs et al., 1 Peters' C. C. R. 155. But where an attorney appears for a party, the court will look no farther, and will proceed, as if he had sufficient authority, leaving the party to his action against him. Jackson v. Stewart, 6 Johns. 34. M'Cullough v. Guetner, 1 Binn. 214. Coit v. Sheldon, 1 Tyler, 304. Aliter in Ohio. Crichfield v. Porter, 3 Ham. 518. Reinholdt v. Alberti, 1 Binn. 469. If an attorney appear for a defendant, (whether process has been served or not), without his authority, and confess judgment, or let it go by default, the judgment is regular, and will not be set aside: but the attorney is liable to an action. Denton v. Noyes, 6 Johns. 296. In this case the court permitted the defendant to plead to the merits, the judgment standing as a security, and directed proceedings to be staid in the mean while. See also Smith v. Bowditch, 7 Pick. 137. In Hall et al. v. Williams et al., 6 Pick. 232, it was held, that if an attorney appears for a defendant, against whom judgment is rendered without any notice of the suit, he will not be estopped by the record to object, that the attorney appeared without authority, in order to avoid the judgment. See also Aldrick v. Kinney, 4 Conn. R. 380. Robson v. Eaton, 1 T. R. 62. Notwithstanding the rule that the acts of an attorney who appears for a party are to be taken as his acts, yet the court will in every case interpose and grant relief, so far as it can be done without injury to the other party. Campher v. Anawalt, 2 Watts, 493. Burke v. ———, cited. Ib. See also Campbell v. Kent, 3 Penns. R. 75. Kitchen v. Williamson, 4 Wash. C. C. R. 84.

Authority. In Pennsylvania, the authority of an attorney is more extensive than in other countries, and it has not been considered that his authority ceases with the judgment. Lynch v. The Commonwealth, 16 Serg. & R. 368. He has authority to receive the amount of the judgment and discharge it. Langdon v. Potter, 13 Mass. R. 310. Commissioners v. Rose, 1 Desaus. 469. Canterbury v. Commonwealth, 1 Dana, 416. Branch v. Barnbury, 1 Call, 147. Brackett v. Norton, 4 Conn. R. 517. The general authority of the attorney does not cease with the entry of the judgment. He has at least the right to issue an execution, although he may not have the right to discharge such execution without receiving satisfaction. Union Bank v. Gray, 5 Peters, 113. But it has been held in New York, that the general authority of the plaintiff's attorney ceases with the judgment, or at least with the issuing of an execution within the year. Jackson v. Bartlett, 8 John. R. 361. See also Richardson v. Talbot, 2 Bibb. 382. And he cannot discharge the defendant from execution on a ca. sa. without satisfaction. Kellogg v. Gilbert, 10 Johns. R. 220; contra, Scott v. Seiler, 5 Watts, 235. Even in Pennsylvania he has no right to enter into an agreement, by which land is to be taken, instead of the money which has been recovered. Huston v. Mitchell, 14 Serg. & R. 307. The authority of the defendant's attorney is competent to restore an action after non pros., though without the consent of his client. Reinholdt v. Alberti, supra. But he has no right to give up the security of his client, without receiving the money. Tunkersby v. Anderson, 4 Desaus. 45.

Liability. The court will always look into the dealings between attorney and client, and guard the latter from imposition. Starr v. Vanderheyden, 9 Johns. 253. Bibb v. Smith, 1 Dana, 580. Smith v. Bowen, 2 Wend. 245. Where two attornies are in partnership, and one does the business of a client unskilfully, both are liable to him in damages. Warner v. Griswold, 8 Wend. 665. An attorney at law is liable to his client for neglect in the management of a suit, even though it is done without fraud; but not for an error of judgment, except perhaps if it be very gross. Breedlove v. Turner, 9 Martin's R. 354. A judgment is not evidence against an attorney, who is sued for neglect in the management of the cause, wherein the judgment was obtained, of the facts stated in it. Breedlove v. Turner, 9 Martin's R. 354. To an action brought by A. against B., an attorney at law for not instituting a suit against C. to recover an alleged debt, it is a good defence, that the debt was due to another person and not to C. Jackson v. Tilghman, 1 Miles, 31.

[Whenever an attorney disobeys the lawful instructions of his client, and a loss ensues, the attorney is responsible for that loss. Gilbert v. Williams, 8 Mass. Rep. 57. He is not, however, answerable for every error or mistake, but shall be protected when he acts with good faith, and to the best of his skill and knowledge. Ibid. Though an attorney is liable for a debt lost by his negligence, he is not of course liable for the loss of the evidence of a debt—and in an action against him for such loss, he may show that the plaintiff had another remedy for the recovery of the debt, which he successfully pursued. Huntingdon v. Rumrill, 3 Day, 390. An attorney, who undertakes to collect a debt, is bound to sue out all process necessary to Attornies (i), or by the book of admissions from the Master's Office (k). But it is sufficient to prove that he has acted as an attorney of the court of which he is alleged to be an attorney (l). It is not necessary to prove that he has taken out his certificate (m). And if the defendant's words assume *107 *that the plaintiff is an attorney, it operates as an admission that he is so, and supersedes the necessity of other proof (n).

In an action by an attorney on his bill (o), he must prove (p) his

(i) 4 T. R. 366. When an attorney is admitted and takes the oath, he subscribes his name upon the roll. 2 Esp. C. 526.

(k) This contains the names copied from the original roll, and is admissible for the purpose of such proof upon an indictment for perjury. R. v. Crossley, 2 Esp. C. 526.

(l) Berryman v. Wise, 4 T. R. 366.

(m) Jones v. Stevens, 11 Price, 235. And the court were of opinion that although the plaintiff had, previously to the libel and the action, omitted to take out his certificate for one whole year, during which he continued to practise, he still so far retained his character of an attorney as to be entitled to recover in respect of a libel published against him in that capacity, although he could maintain no action for fees, and was subject to penalties under the stat. 37 G. 3, c. 90, (tamen quære). At all events it would be insufficient, as in that case, merely to show the omission to take out the certificate, without evidence to negative a readmission. Pearce v. Whale,[1] 5 B. & C. 38; where the point was ruled in an action by the plaintiff, as an attorney, for fees.

(n) P. C. Ib. Where the plaintiff alleged generally that he was an attorney, and declared for the words, "he is a pettifogging, blood-sucking attorney," proof of the words was held to be sufficient, without any evidence of attorneyship. Armstrong v. Jordan, cor. Hullock, B. Carlisle Summ. As. 1826.

(o) Indebitatus assumpsit lies for fees against a third person who has retained the plaintiff as an attorney. Sands v. Trevilian, Cro. Car. 194. Ambrose v. Roe, Skinn. 217. Though the business has been transacted in another Court. Thursby v. Warren, Cro. Car. 159. But a solicitor on the equity side of the Exchequer is not entitled to practice in Chancery; and it seems that a solicitor in Chancery cannot authorize a solicitor on the equity side of the Exchequer to practice there in his name. Vincent v. Holt, 4 Taunt. 452. But an attorney may recover the costs of a commission of bankrupt, though he be not a solicitor in Chancery. Wilkinson v. Diggett,[2] 1 B. & C. 158. Although an attorney may, it seems, practise in another court, in the name of, and with the consent of, an attorney of the latter court, he cannot do so in his own name. Latham v. Hyde, 1 C. & M. 28; 3 Tyr. 143. But see Vincent v. Holt, 4 Taunt. 452. Where several sued as attornies of the Palace Court, and it appeared that but one of them was an attorney of that court, it was held that they could not recover. Arden v. Tucker, 1 M. & R. 191;[3] 5 C. & P. 248.

(p) That is in an action of indebitatus assumpsit, which is the usual form, and when the general issue has been pleaded.

---

the object, and if he neglect seasonably to sue out a scire facias against a bail, in a suit which he has commenced against a debtor, he is liable to the judgment creditor for the loss thereby occasioned. Dearborn v. Dearborn, 15 Mass. Rep. 316. In an action against an attorney for negligence, the amount of the debt in the first suit is not the criterion of damages; but the amount of damages sustained is a question of fact for the jury. Semb. Ibid. Eccles v. Stephenson, 3 Bibb, 517. When the evidence of a debt, which is then due, is left with an attorney, who gives a general receipt for it, it will be presumed that he received it for collection; and in action against him for his negligence, by which the debt was lost, it is incumbent on him to show that he received it specially and for some other purpose. Executors of Smedes v. Elmendorf, 3 Johns. 185. If an attorney be sued for neglect of duty in not having filed a declaration, it must be proved that he was engaged in the cause in season to have filed it. Stephens v. White, 2 Wash. 211. But in an action against an attorney for negligence, it is not necessary to aver or to prove that the plaintiff had paid or secured him a fee, it is sufficient if the attorney undertook to prosecute the suit for a compensation to be paid afterwards. Eccles v. Stephenson, ubi sup.]

Whether in an action by an attorney against his client, to recover his fees, the defendant can set up the plaintiff's negligence in conducting the suit in bar? Qu. Such a defence, however, must be pleaded, or notice given, that it is intended to be insisted on at the trial; the defendant cannot give it in evidence under the general issue. Runyan v. Nichols, 11 Johns. 547. But see Brackett v. Norton, 4 Conn. 517.

Compensation. An attorney may recover for his professional services, counsel fees, on a quantum meruit. Gray v. Brockenridge, 2 Penns. R. 75. Overruling, Mooney v. Lloyd, 5 Serg. & R. 452. Foster v. Jack, 4 Watts, 334. But fraudulent conduct on his part, in a case, will deprive him of all claim for compensation for his services therein. Bredin v. Kingsland, 4 Watts, 420. The claims which an attorney may have on his client for extra services, or for counsel fees, make no part of the attorney's lien upon the taxed costs, or of that which the court will protect against the interference of his client. The People v. Hardenburg, 8 John. R. 335. The court will support the attorney's lien to the same extent as the rights of an assignee. Bradt v. Koon, 4 Cowen, 416. In Louisiana, attorney's claims for professional services, are barred after the lapse of three years. Howe's heirs v. Brent, 6 Mart. N. S. 248. Where a client by misrepresentation, induced an attorney to undertake his case for a contingent fee, the attorney may treat the contract as a nullity, and recover upon an implied promise to pay him for services rendered. Evans v. Bell, 6 Dana, 479. The agreements which lawyers may make with their clients for fees, are not restricted by law, and where there is no special agreement, the law will allow compensation according to the value of the services. Downing v. Major, 2 Dana, 228.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xi. 138. [2]Id. viii. 50. [3]Id. xxiv. 303.

retainer (q) by the defendant; which may be proved by evidence that the defendant attended at the plaintiff's office, and gave directions from time to time whilst the business was going on. Undertaking to pay what is due is an admission of a retainer; and therefore in an action on the bill, the production of the Judge's order for taxation, the defendant's undertaking, and the master's allocatur, is sufficient evidence of the fact. He should next prove that the business was done as stated in the bill, which is usually proved by a clerk or other agent who was concerned in the management of the suit or business, without proving the bill item by item (r). *If the charge be not for business done in court, evidence must also be given of the reasonableness of the charges (s); but if it be for business done in court, he must (t) prove the delivery of a bill to the defendant (u) according to the stat. (x), or that he left one at his dwelling-house

Proofs in actions for costs.

Business done.

*108

(q) An attorney made an agreement with his client to conduct all his suits in consideration of the client giving to him exclusively the drawing of his leases, it was held, that the breach of this agreement would not enable the attorney to recover on his bill, he must either put an end to the agreement, or sue for a breach of it. Parker v. Harcourt, 5 Esp. C. 249. A declaration by the plaintiff's clerk on a taxation of costs, that the attorney undertook the cause gratis, is evidence for the defendant in an action by the attorney. Ashford v. Price, 3 Starkie's C. 135. Quære, whether an attorney can legally guarantee the petitioning creditor against the costs of the commission, on condition of being employed as solicitor to the commission. Gillet v. Rippon,[1] 1 M. & M. 406. And see Murray v. Reeves,[2] 8 B. & C. 421. An agreement to pay at a certain specified rate is not binding upon the client; at all events it is not conclusive. Drax v. Scroope,[3] 2 B. & Ad. 581. In order to entitle the attorney to proceed in the action for costs, after the debt has been settled without his intervention, he is bound to make out a clear case of collusion between the plaintiff and the defendant, to deprive him of such costs; where there was only a ground for suspicion, the Court stayed the proceedings, but without costs. Nelson v. Wilson,[4] 6 Bing. 568. Where the defendant alone employed the plaintiff in suing out a commission of bankrupt on the petition of a third person who never employed him in it, the defendant is alone liable to the plaintiff. Pocock v. Russell,[5] 4 C. & P. 14. Where the commission had not been proceeded in, nor anything received under it, held that the attorney was entitled to recover his charges against the creditor employing him. Pocock v. Russell,[5] 1 M. & M. 357. Where one attorney does business for another, the ordinary implication is that credit is given to the latter, and not to the client; although the business was known to have been done on behalf of the client. Scrace v. Whittington,[6] 2 B. & C. 11.

(r) Phillips v. Roach, 1 Esp. D. N. P. 10.

(s) It is not however unusual to give evidence of the reasonableness of the charges, although the bill be for business done in court; and I have known such evidence to be required.

(t) Such evidence is unnecessary, unless the plea deny the delivery. Moore v. Dent,[1] 1 M. & R. 462; Robinson v. Roland, 6 Dowl. 271; Lane v. Glenny,[7] 7 Ad. & Ell. 83.

(u) Where there were two defendants not partners, held to be sufficient to deliver the bill to the one who managed the business. Finchett v. Howe, 2 Camp. 277. Per Ld. Ellenborough, C. J. 1 Camp. 438; and semble that it would be insufficient to deliver it to the party who did not intermeddle. 2 Camp. 277. Where several parties have a joint interest in resisting a claim for tithes, though their individual interests be separate, and jointly retain an attorney, the delivery of the bill to the party who actually retains him is sufficient. And see further as to a joint retainer. Hildeys v. Gregory,[8] 1 C. & P. 627; Oxenham v. Lemon, 2 D. & R. 461. See Snowden v. Shee, 1 Camp. 437. Where a party in a cause changed his attorney pendente lite, and the second attorney obtained an order for the delivery to him of a bill signed by the first, it was held that such delivery was a delivery to the party charged, within the words and meaning of the statute. Vincent v. Slaymaker, 12 East, 372, by three of the judges; Ld. Ellenborough, C. J dissentiente. The showing and explaining the bill without a delivery is insufficient. Crowder v. Shee, 1 Camp. 437. Personal service is not necessary; a re-delivery to an agent appointed for the purpose is sufficient. Finchett v. Howe, 2 Camp. 277. As to the attorney of the party, Warren v. Cunningham,[9] Gow. 71. Vincent v. Slaymaker, 12 East, 372. Where a bill has been delivered containing taxable items, the unreasonableness of the charges cannot in strictness be disputed on the trial. Anderson v. May, 2 B. & P. 237. Lee v. Wilson,[10] 2 Chitty's R. 65. But it is not unusual to give such evidence.

(x) 2 G. 2, c. 23, s. 23; which enacts that no attorney or solicitor in any of the courts aforesaid (viz. any court of record in England, wherein attornies have been accustomably admitted and sworn,) shall commence or maintain any action, &c. for the recovery of any fees, charges, or disbursements at law, or in equity, until the expiration of one month, or more, after such attorney, &c. shall have delivered unto the party or parties to be charged therewith, or left for him, &c. at his, &c. dwelling-house or last place of abode, a bill of such fees, &c. written in a common legible hand, and in the English tongue (except law terms, and the names of writs), and in words at length, except terms and sums; which bill shall be subscribed with the proper hand of such attorney or solicitor respectively. The month is to be reckoned exclusively of the days on which the bill is delivered and action brought. Blunt v. Heslop,[11] 8 Ad. & Ell. 577. This statute extends to business done at the quarter sessions. Clark v. Donovan, 5 T. R. 694: Ex parte Williams, 4 T. R. 496; Silves- ter v. Webster,[1] 9 Bing. 388; although attornies be not admitted there contrary to the ruling of Buller, J. in Stephenson v. Taylor, York Summer Assiz. 1786. To a charge for a dedimus potestatem, ex parte Prichett, 1 N. R. 266; or warrant of attorney with a view to business in court, under the head of "fees at law." Sandon v. Bourne, 4 Camp. 68. But see Burton v. Chatterton,[2] 3 B. & A. 488; Weld v. Crawford,[3] 2 Starkie's C. 538; Wilson v. Gutteridge,[4] 3 B. & C. 157. For business done in the Insolvent Court. Smith v. Wattleworth,[5] 4 B. & C. 364. In the County Court. Wardle v. Nicholson,[6] 4 B. & Ad. 469; 1 N. & M. 356. In a criminal suit in the Great Session in Wales. Lloyd v. Maund, 6 Tidd. 330. For drawing an affidavit of debt and getting it sworn. Winter v. Payne, 6 T. R. 645. Obtaining the Chancellor's signature to a bankrupt's certificate. Collins v. Nicholson, 2 Taunt. 321. See Ford v. Webb,[7] 3 B. & B. 241. Attending at a lock-up house, procuring the defendant's release, and filling up a bail-bond. Fearne v. Wilson,[8] 6 B. & C. 87. Attesting a replevin bond. Wardle v. Nicholson,[9] 4 B. & Ad. 469, 1 N. & M. 356. Attending bail and endeavouring to arrange and procure cognovits. Watt v. Collins, 1 R. & M. 284. Charges for attending and advising steps in a suit which has been brought against his client are taxable, and bring the whole bill within the effect of the statute of 2 Geo. 2; the advance of money to the client to pay the costs of such suit does not vary the case. Smith v. Taylor,[10] 7 Bing. 259, and 5 M. & P. 66. (diss. Alderson, J.) To money paid by the attorney on a judgment against his client. Crowder v. Shee, 1 Camp. 437. It has even been held, that if any one of the items in the bill relate to business done in court, the plaintiff cannot recover as to items which are not within the statute, but which are connected with his professional capacity, unless he prove the delivery of a bill. Winter v. Payne, 6 T. R. 645. Hill v. Humphreys, 2 B. & P. 343. But although the bill contains items not specified according to the statute, he may recover in respect of a portion of his bill as to which the provisions of the statute have been complied with. Waller v. Lacy, 1 M. & G. 54. The bill ought to contain the whole charges, one containing only the items of the extra costs, and omitting the items of taxed costs received from the other side is not a compliance with the statute. Ib. But where no bill has been delivered, although the plaintiff cannot recover costs out of pocket, he may recover in respect of mere conveyancing business, per Lord Kenyon. Miller v. Towers, Peake's C. 102; and per Ld. Eldon, in 2 B. & P. 345. So where an attorney had not delivered any bill, but merely particulars of demand under a judge's order, held, that he was entitled to recover for monies paid to his client's use, having no reference to his business of an attorney, although the particulars contained some taxable items. Mowbray v. Fleming, 11 East, 285. Weld v. Crawford,[11] 2 Starkie's C. 538. An attorney cannot split his demand, and thereby exempt part of it from taxation; where therefore a second bill containing items not taxable, was found not to have been delivered a month before the action, it was held that he could not recover. Thwaites v. Mackerson,[12] 1 M. & M. 199; and 3 C. & P. 341. But an attorney may recover for money lent on a distinct occasion, and not being disbursements in the cause. Heming v. Wilton,[13] 1 M. & M. 529; and 4 Carr. & P. C. 318. Although his bill has been regularly delivered according to the statute. And see Hill v. Humphries, 2 B. & P. 343; Benson v. Garcia, Esp. C. 149. This rule seems however to be subject to the proviso, that the distinct and untaxable items have no reference to the plaintiff's professional character. An attorney not having delivered any bill before action brought, and delivered particulars containing some taxable items, it was held that he could not recover in respect of items not taxable, but which was due in respect of business done, as money paid to his client's use in his character of an attorney. Wardle v. Nicholson,[14] 4 B. & Ad. 469; 1 N. & M. 356. Business done by an attorney for assignees, the greater part of which relates to proceedings under the commission, is not within the 2 Geo. 2, c. 28, s. 23; charges also for attending to advise with the solicitor of a creditor as to opposing the bankrupt's discharge from custody, and a like charge as to opposing his discharge under the Insolvent Act, are not taxable charges within the Act; proceedings in bankruptcy are not proceedings in equity within the statute. Crowder v. Davies, 3 Y. & J. 433. The statute does not extend to mere charges for conveyancing. Hill v. Humphreys, 2 B. & P. 345; B. & P. 145. Nor to a charge for searching at the Judgment Office, whether issues had been copied or docketed, or satisfaction entered on the roll. Fenton v. Corria,[15] 1 R. & M. 262. Nor to business done in the House of Lords upon an appeal. Williams v. Odell, 4 Price. 479. Or in the Middlesex Court of Requests, Becke v. Wells, 1 C. & J. 75. Nor to business done under a commission of bankruptcy. Crowder v. Davies, 3 Y. & J. 433. Hamilton v. Jones, 4 M. & P. 869. Nor to a payment of debt and costs by an attorney, who has put in bail for the defendant, and paid such debt and costs without having them taxed, and without making any charge for his own labour. Prothero v. Thomas,[16] 6 Taunt. 196; tamen qu. for the statute uses the term disbursement as well as fees: and see Crowder v. Shee, 1 Camp. C. 437; nor to a charge for preparing an affidavit of a petitioning creditor's debt (which is not sworn), and bond to the Chancellor. Barker v. Chatterton, 5 B. & A. 686; in which case the court questioned the decision in Sandon v. Bourne, supra; secus, (semble) had the affidavit been sworn. Ib. Where the bill contained abbreviations of whose meaning there could be no doubt, it was held to be sufficient to enable the plaintiff to recover. Frowd v. Stillard,[17] 4 C. & P. 51; and see Reynolds v. Caswell, 4 Taunt. 193. Where the bill charged for attendances on particular days, and at the end a charge for "several attendances," the Judge directed the latter to be deducted. Rowson v. Earl,[18] 4 C. & P. 44. An item of costs charged to have been paid according to the allocatur, but not stated in detail, is not sufficiently described, but the plaintiff is not precluded by the misdescription from recovering the residue of the bill. Drew v. Clifford,[19] 1 R. & M. 280. See the statute 3 J. 1, c. 7, s. 1, and Brooks v. Hague, T. Ray. 245; Clark v. Godfrey, Str. 633; Milner v. Crowdall, 1 Show. 338. It seems that the name of the court need not be stated in the bill. Frowd v. Stillard,[20] 4 C. & P. 512; Reynolds v. Caswell, 4 Taunt. 193. Where attornies sue as partners, a bill signed in the name of the firm is sufficient. Smith v. Jago, 1 C. & J. 542. In assumpsit by the plaintiff, as attorney and agent for the defendant, a country client of the plaintiff, for work and materials, and for fees, &c.: held that the plaintiff was not the attorney of the defendant within the statute requiring the delivery of the bill a month before action, but the court would not limit the term "monies in the first count mentioned" to the fees. Hill v. Weight, 5 S. c. 662.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxii. 342. [2]Id. xv. 254. [3]Id. xxii. 145. [4]Id. xix. 169. [5]Id. xix. 254. [6]Id. ix. 7. [7]Id. xxxiv. 41. [8]Id. xi. 500. [9]Id. v. 468. [10]Id. xviii. 250. [11]Id. xxxv. 461.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxiii. 314. [2]Id. v. 352. [3]Id. iii. 465. [4]Id. x. 42. [5]Id. x. 358. [6]Id. xxiv. 106. [7]Id. vii. 426. [8]Id. xiii. 108. [9]Id. xxiv. 106. [10]Id. xxi. 125. [11]Id. iii. 465. [12]Id. xiv. 237. [13]Id. xxii. 376. [14]Id. xxiv. 106. [15]Id. xxi. 434. [16]Id. i. 355. [17]Id. xix. 268. [18]Id. xix. 266. [19]Id. xxi. 439. [20]Id. xix. 268.

(y) *or last place of abode (z), subscribed by him, one month (a) or *more *110 previous to the commencement of the suit. It is sufficient to show that the Delivery bill was left at the defendant's last known apparent place of abode at the of a bill.
time when the bill was delivered (b), although the defendant prove that he had another known place of abode subsequently to the delivery of the bill. It must be proved that the bill was left with the client, and not taken back again (c). Where a bill was produced, with an indorsement upon it in the hand-writing of a deceased clerk of the plaintiff, whose duty it was to have delivered the bill, purporting that he had delivered a copy on a particular day, and the indorsement was proved to have existed at that date, it was held that the entry was evidence of the delivery of the bill (d). It is unnecesary for an executor or administrator to prove the delivery of a bill for business done by his testator or intestate (e); so where the defendant is also an attorney (f); or where the plaintiff sues as the assignee of an insolvent attorney (g): nor is such proof necessary where the attorney sets-off the amount of his bill; it should not, however, be produced at the trial by surprise, but be delivered time enough for the plaintiff to have it taxed before the trial (h). The bill may be proved by a duplicate, original, or copy, without notice to produce the one delivered (i), provided proof be given that it was signed by the plaintiff. A mistake in the date of the items, which does not mislead the plaintiff, will not vitiate the delivery (k).

It was held that an action might be maintained by a solicitor against an assignee for business done under a commission of bankruptcy, although the bill had not been taxed by a master in chancery, under the stat. 5 Geo. 2, c. 30, s. 45 (l).

*It is a general rule in such cases that the bill cannot be taxed at the *111 trial, for the defendant might have had it taxed previously, and his delay

(y) Leaving at the counting-house is not a good delivery. Hill v. Humphreys, 2 H. & P. 343.

(z) It is not sufficient to show that the bill was delivered at a particular place, without evidence that it was the defendant's place of abode; and that the defendant afterwards delivered it to his attorney's clerk. Eicke v. Noakes, M. & M. 305. But it is sufficient to show that it was left at the last known place of abode, and it is not sufficient for the defendant to show a change of abode without also showing a later known place of abode. Wadeson v. Smith, 1 Starkie's C. 324.

(a) A lunar month sufficient. Hurd v. Leach, 5 Esp. C. 168. By the uniformity of process Act, 2 W. 4, c. 39, s. 11, the issuing of the writ is for all purposes the commencement of the suit. Alston v. Underhill, 1 C. & M. 492, See tit. TIME.

(b) Wadeson v. Smith,[1] 1 Starkie's C. 354.

(c) Brooks v. Mason, 1 H. Bl. 290. The object of the statute is, that the defendant shall have due time to consider the charges. Ib. It is not sufficient that the client acquiesce in the reasonableness of the charges. Crowder v. Shee, 1 Camp. 437.

(d) Campneys v. Peck,[2] 1 Starkie's C. 404.

(e) 1 Barnard, K. B. 433; Andr. 276; 1 Tidd, 316. Barrett v. Moss,[3] 1 C. & P. 2.

(f) Although the business was done before the defendant became an attorney. Ford v. Maxwell, 2 H. B. 589; 12 G. 2; c. 13. Bridges v. Francis, Peake's C. 1; 1 Esp. C. 221. Wildbore v. Bryan, 8 Price, 677. And such a bill is not within the st. 3 J. 1, c. 7, s. 1. Sandys v. Hornby, 1 M. & Ry. 33. So agents are not within the statute. Ib. and Jones v. Price, cor. Lee, C. J. 1748, Scl. N. P. 163. Hill v. Sydney,[4] 7 Ad. & Ell. 956.

(g) Lester v. Lazarus, 2 C. M. & R. 665. So in case of a set-off it has been held to be sufficient to deliver it to the plaintiff in time to have it taxed before the trial. Martin v. Winder, Doug. 199, n.; but see Bulman v. Burkett, 1 Esp. C. 449. Where Lord Kenyon intimated that in such case a written notice is necessary, and see also Murphy v. Cunningham, contra.

(h) Dougl. 199; 1 Esp. C. 499; 1 Tidd, 318. Bulman v. Birket, 1 Esp. C. 449.

(i) Anderson v. May, 2 B. & P. 237. And see Jory v. Orchard, 2 B. & P. 39. Philipson v. Chase, 2 Camp. 110. Colling v. Trewicke,[5] 6 B. & C. 394. Fyson v. Kemp,[6] 8 C. & P. 72. Vide supra, Vol. I. and Ind. tit. INSTRUMENTARY PROOF; and infra, tit. NOTICE.

(k) Williams v. Barber, 4 Taunt. 806.

(l) Turn v. Heys,[7] 1 Starkie, 278. See Arrowsmith v. Barford, Ib. in note; 2 Camp. 277.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. ii. 424. [2]Id. ii. 445. [3]Id. xi. 296. [4]Id. xxxiv. 263. [5]Id. xiii. 208. [6]Id. xxv. 287. [7]Id. ii. 390.

for the space of a month before the commencement of the action is evidence of his acquiescence (m). It is sufficient to give in evidence a Judge's order to tax the bill, the defendant undertaking to pay what should appear to be due on the master's allocatur thereon (n). The delivery of a former bill is conclusive evidence against any increase of charge in a subsequent bill, or any of the items contained in it, and is strong presumptive evidence against any additional items (o); but it will not estop the plaintiff from proving that in fact he had transacted other business for the defendant.

An admission by the defendant of the delivery of the bill to enable the attorney to prove it under the defendant's commission, does not afford such a presumption as to dispense with proof in an action of the delivery required by the statute, no such delivery being necessary to enable him to prove his bill under the commission (p).

The plaintiff must also prove that the action was not commenced till a month after the delivery of the bill, by the production of the writ, or by the Nisi Prius record (q).

The contract to conduct a suit is entire, and where the suit has ended within six years, the Statute of Limitations will not bar the demand for such business as was done more than six years ago (r).

Defence. The defendant may insist (under a proper plea) in bar of the action that the plaintiff, at the time the business was done, was disqualified from practising as an attorney, by having omitted to take out his certificate for one whole year (s).

It has been doubted whether the defendant can set up the plaintiff's negligence, however gross, as a defence to the action (t); there seems, however, to be no reason to except this case from the operation of the general rule now established, that a plaintiff shall not be allowed to recover in respect of services so negligently rendered that the employer has derived no benefit from them (u).

(m) Williams v. Frith, Doug. 197. Hooper v. Till, Ib. 198; Barnes, 124; 1 Tidd, 317. Anderson v. May, 2 B. & P. 237. But the bill may be taxed at any time before verdict or judgment. Sel. N. P. 166, cites Shaw v. Pickering, Doug. 198, in not.

(n) Lee v. Jones, 2 Camp. 496. As to taxation, where the attorney pays proctor's fees in Ecclesiastical Court. See Franklin v. Featherstonhaugh,[1] 1 A. & E. 475.

(o) Loveridge v. Botham, 1 B. & P. 49.

(p) Eicke v. Nokes,[2] 1 M. & M. 303.

(q) See WRIT.—COMMENCEMENT OF ACTION. Webb v. Pricket, 1 B. & P. 263.

(r) Harris v. Osborne, 2 C. & M. 629.

(s) Under the st. 37 G. 3, c. 90. But it would not be sufficient to show that he had merely neglected to take out his certificate, unless at the time a full year had elapsed. See Prior v. Moore, 2 M. & S. 605, where it was held that in such case the attorney might still sue by attachment of privilege.

(t) Templer v. M'Lachlan, 2 N. R. 146. Pasmore v. Birnie, 2 Starkie's C. 59.

(u) See Farnsworth v. Garrard, 1 Camp. 38; Denew v. Daverell, 3 Camp. 451; Fisher v. Samuda, 1 Camp. 490; infra, tit. WORK AND LABOUR. It is a good defence to show that the costs sought to be recovered have been incurred through want of proper caution on the part of the attorney. As that they have arisen from his neglect to enter into the recognizances, and give the notice necessary, in order to appeal against a claim of tithes. Montriou v. Jefferys,[4] 1 R. & M. 317; 1 C. & P. 113. Hopkinson v. Smith,[5] 1 Bing. 15. Where an attorney had incurred expenses which were useless for the object in view, although done bonâ fide, held that he was not entitled to recover them from his client. Hill v. Featherstonhaugh,[6] 7 Bing. 569. Entire items for useless work may be discarded by the jury. Shaw v. Arden, 228. And such evidence is admissible under the general issue. Hill v. Allen, 2 M. & W. 283. If other causes besides the defendant's negligence conduce to the loss of benefit, such negligence will not supply a defence to the action. Dax v. Ward,[7] 1 Starkie's C. 409. It is no defence to such an action that the plaintiff was instructed to put in a plea of abatement for delay, which he neglected to do. Johnson v. Alston, 1 Camp. 176. An attorney is entitled to recover in respect of preparing document, although its legality at the time was doubtful, and it turns out to be illegal. Potts v. Sparrow,[8] 6 C. & P. 749. An attorney cannot abandon his client's cause for want of being supplied with funds, unless he give reasonable notice to the client. Hoby v. Built,[9] 3 B. & Ad. 350. And per Lord Eldon, C., in Cresswell v. Bryan, 14 Ves. 271; see also 1 Sid. 31, Say. 173; secus, for reasonable cause and on reasonable notice. Vansandau v. Brown, 7 Bing. 402. Where he gave notice of giving up the papers, unless supplied with funds, and did so; held, that he was

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxviii. 125. [2]Id. xxii. 314. [3]Id. iii. 243. [4]Id. xxi. 449. [5]Id. viii. 225. [6]Id. xx. 244. [7]Id. ii. 447. [8]Id. xxv. 631. [9]Id. xxiii. 91.

*The defendant may also show in defence, that the plaintiff lives at a remote place from that where the business is conducted by his clerk (x). That by agreement the work was to be done gratis (y), or was not to exceed a certain sum (z). That the plaintiff has neglected to take out his certificate (a). But he may recover in respect of business done at a time when he was uncertificated, provided he take out his certificate before the end of a year after the expiration of the time to which the former certificate extended (b).

It is no defence, under the plea of non assumpsit, that one of the plaintiffs was not admitted an attorney of such court (c): nor that no bill of costs has been delivered (d); nor where the attorney acts as agent (e).

An attorney receiving an offer of compromise, if not communicated to his client, goes on at his own risk, and cannot charge his client with subsequent costs; but as it is his duty to communicate such offer, it will be presumed he did so unless the negative be shown (f).

Proof in actions against an attorney.

In an action against an attorney for misconduct, it must be proved that he is an attorney of the particular court, as alleged in the declaration (g). The retainer of the defendant by the plaintiff must also be proved.

With respect to the misconduct of the defendant, and proof of the loss which has resulted in consequence, it is to be observed, that it is not every neglect which will subject the party to such an action. An attorney is only bound to use reasonable care and skill in managing the business of his client; if he were liable further, no one would venture to act in that capacity (h). He is not liable, unless he has been guilty of crassa negligentia (i). This, however, is usually a question of fact to be decided by a jury (k).

justified, after such notice, in refusing to go on with the cause, and might recover for the business done. Rowson v. Earle, 1 Mood. & M. C. 438.

(x) Taylor v. Glassbrooke,[1] 3 Starkie's C. 75. Hopkinson v. Smith,[2] 1 Bing. 13.

(y) Ashford v. Price, 3 Starkie's C. 145. (z) Jones v. Read,[3] 5 Ad. & Ell. 529.

(a) Pearce v. Whale,[4] 5 B. & C. 38; infra, tit. PRESUMPTIONS.

(b) Bowler v. Brown,[5] 2 Ad. & Ell. 16.

(c) Hill v. Sydney, 7 B. & C. 956; under the statute, 2 G. 2, c. 23.

(d) Lane v. Glenny,[6] 7 Ad. & Ell. 83. (e) Hill v. Sydney, 7 B. & C. 956.

(f) Sill v. Thomas,[7] 8 C. & P. 762.

(g) As to this proof, see above, 106. It is said that a bill for business done in a particular court is not evidence that the party was an attorney of that court. Green v. Jackson, Peake's C. 236. Sed qu.

(h) Per Le Blanc, J. in the case of Compton v. Chandless, cited 3 Camp. 19.

(i) 4 Burr. 2060. Per Ld. Ellenborough, Baikie v. Chandless, 3 Camp. 17; infra, note (a).

(k) Reece v. Rigby,[8] 4 B. & A. 202; Ireson v. Pearman,[9] 4 B. & C. 709; where an attorney acts for both vendor and purchaser, it seems that a small defect in title is sufficient to render him responsible. It is the duty of an attorney to examine the original securities for money to be advanced by his client, unless he be expressly absolved by his client. Wilson v. Tucker,[10] 3 Starkie's C. 154. Although a party has undertaken to procure the attendance of a witness upon the trial, it is the duty of the attorney to ascertain that the witness is in attendance when the cause is called on. Reece v. Rigby,[8] 4 B. & A. 202. Although it be no part of an attorney's duty to know the legal operation of conveyances, yet it is his duty to take care that he does not draw wrong conclusions. And, therefore, where an attorney in stating a title to counsel on behalf of an intended purchaser, instead of stating the deeds, states his own conclusions, he does so at his peril. In such a case, where the attorney erroneously stated that M. was tenant in fee, whereas another was tenant for life, and the counsel in consequence gave an opinion in favour of the title, which he would not have done had he been correctly instructed; it was held that the jury were warranted in finding for the plaintiff. Ireson v. Pearman,[11] 3 B. & C. 799. In an action against an attorney for negligence in a former action brought by him for the plaintiff, against attorneys for negligence, in which he had been nonsuited for want of proper proof of a judgment as set out in the declaration, there being an ambiguity in stating such judgment, whether it was stated as a direct allegation of a judgment on record, or only as a consequence of that negligence; held that this was not to be considered as such gross negligence as would render the defendant liable; held also, that his liability would not be altered by his showing that he had consulted others, but must depend on the nature of the mistake, in a case where the law presumes him to have the requisite knowledge himself. Godefroy v. Dalton,[12] 6 Bing. 460. Where an attorney improperly assumes to himself

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xix. 166. [2]Id. viii. 225. [3]Id. xxxi. 389. [4]Id. xi. 138. [5]Id. xxix. 47. [6]Id. xxxiv. 41. [7]Id. xxxiv. 624. [8]Id. vi. 401. [9]Id. x. 232. [10]Id. xiv. 174. [11]Id. x. 232. [12]Id. xix. 132.

Proof of negligence.

*Before the point had been fully settled that the grant of an annuity is void, unless the trusts of the annuity-deeds be recited in the memorial, it was held that such an omission did not amount to primâ facie evidence of gross negligence (l). It has been held that an action for negligence in conducting a suit against excise-officers, cannot be maintained if the seizure was lawful, since no damage can have been sustained (m).

Where a declaration against an attorney for suffering the defendant in a former suit to be superseded, alleged that she was justly indebted to the plaintiff, and it appeared that she was a married woman, the plaintiff was nonsuited (n).

In the case of Russell v. Palmer (o), the Court held that the action had been well conceived against the defendant for negligence in omitting to cause one Stewart, against whom the plaintiff had recovered a judgment, to be charged in execution within two terms next after judgment.

The evidence for the plaintiff in such cases must be regulated by the declaration which sets out the whole of the case. If he complain that he has lost the debt which was due to him from the former defendant, he must prove the existence of the debt; and if he has obtained judgment to recover it, he should prove the fact, if alleged, by an examined copy of the judgment-roll. If the former defendant has been arrested on mesne-process, the writ should be produced, or an examined copy, if it has been returned, and the actual time of commitment may be proved by the books of the prison. The grounds of the discharge will be shown by means of the supersedeas, or order for the discharge.

In such cases where the question is, whether the defendant has been guilty of gross negligence contrary to the known and usual practice, those who are conversant in the same kind of practice may be examined as witnesses on either side (p).

If the ground of action be negligence in completing a conveyance, where there is a defect in the memorial of an annuity, in consequence of which it is set aside, the plaintiff, to prove the defect, after having proved the retainer *of the defendant, his conduct of the business, and the execution of the deeds, which should be produced, should prove the rule of court ordering it to be set aside, and an examined copy of the affidavits used upon the motion. So, if the plaintiff has been evicted in consequence of a defect in title, arising from the negligence of the defendant, he should produce the deeds, and prove the execution of them and the payment of the money, and show that he has been evicted by proof of the judgment in ejectment, the execution of the writ of possession, producing the writ or an examined copy, if it has been returned.

*114

In an action against an attorney for negligence in omitting to take any step in defence, it is not necessary to show special damage, nor to show that the plaintiff had a good defence; it is for the attorney to show, if he can, that there was no defence (q).

the character of a receiver, and neglects the duty thereof, he will be responsible (in equity) for any rents lost by his neglect. Wood v. Wood, Russ. 558. So if he abandon a suit, and unnecessarily institute another, the Court will take care that the client does not suffer. Ib.

(l) 4 Burr. 2060. Per Ld. Ellenborough, Bakie v. Chandless, 3 Camp. 17.

(m) Aitcheson v. Madock, Peake's C. 162. See Alexander v. Macauley, 4 T. R. 611; also tit. SHERIFF.

(n) Lee v. Ayrton, Peake's C. 34. (o) 2 Wils. 325.

(p) 2 Wils. 238. In the case of Pitt v. Yalden, 4 Burr. 2060, Mansfield, L. C. J. said (alluding to the case of Russell v. Palmer), "L. C. J. Wilmot told me, that it came out upon the defendant's own evidence, and the verdict went upon that fact, that it was lata culpa or crassa negligentia, in Palmer the attorney; and that there appeared to be in reality no ground for the pretence of compromise, which had been made part of Mr. Palmer's excuse and defence."

(q) Godefroy v. Jay,[1] 7 Bing. 413; and see Marzetti v. Williams,[2] 1 B. & Ad. 415. It seems that an

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xx. 183. [2]Id. xx. 412.

If an attorney sue out a writ in the name of a party, without any authority express or implied, and receive the debt and costs of the writ, such costs may be recovered back as money had and received (r).

Where an arrest is made under process, afterwards set aside for irregularity, the attorney in the suit, as well as the plaintiff, is liable in trespass (s).

An action of this nature sounds in damages, and the jury are not to give a verdict for the whole original debt, but only such damages as are commensurate with the loss which has probably resulted from the defendant's negligence (t). And therefore the plaintiff should be prepared with evidence to show the probability that he should have recovered the whole or part of the debt, if the defendant's negligence had not intervened; as by evidence of the circumstances of the party indebted to him. Damages.

The solicitor under a commission is not liable to the messenger whom he nominates; but it is otherwise where he agrees with the petitioning creditor to work the commission for a sum certain (u). An attorney cannot set-off against a demand of his client for money received on account of his client as damages, in an action for services barred by the Statute of Limitations (x).

An attorney is not personally liable to a witness whom he subpœnas (y) to give evidence for his client.

Competency of.—On grounds of policy, as has already been seen, an attorney is not allowed to disclose the secrets of his client; neither can he be permitted to give parol evidence of a deed, or prove a copy of one which has been entrusted to him by his client (z).

Admissions made by an attorney on the record, with a view to the trial of the action, as of the execution of a deed or agreement, are evidence against his client (a); but mere admissions in conversation are not admissible, for they are not warranted by a presumption that they were authorized by the client (b). So an admission, proved to be in the handwriting of the attorney on the record, consenting to a verdict for the plaintiff, will be sufficient evidence of the defendant's consent. An admission by the party's *115 attorney, where there is no defence, is not justified in omitting to put in a plea, but ought to plead the general issue, and watch that the plaintiff proves his case against his client. Ib. Quære tamen.

(r) Dupen v. Keeling,[1] 4 C. & P. 102. Secus if he had such authority, although the client had no cause of action.

(s) Codrington v. Lloyd,[2] 8 Ad. & Ell. 449.

(t) 2 Wils. 328.

(u) Hartop v. Juckes, 2 M. & S. 438. See 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 14. He is personally liable on an agreement to withdraw the record, &c. tax costs, &c. and pay them. Iveson v. Conington,[3] 1 B. & C. 160; 2 D. & R. 307. See Burrell v. Jones,[4] 3 B. & A. 47. Where an attorney selects an officer to execute writs, he is personally liable to the party so employed. Foster v. Blakelock,[7] 5 B. & C. 328.

(x) Waller v. Lacy, 1 G. & M. 55.

(y) Robins v. Bridge, 3 M. & W. 115. The court will compel an attorney to pay the under-sheriff's fees on a commission of lunacy, credit having been given him in his professional character. Ex parte Bodenham, 8 Ad. & Ell. 959.

(z) Per Bayley, J. Leicester Lent Ass. 1809, Phillips, 140. And see Copeland v. Watts,[8] 1 Starkie's C. 95.

(a) Young v. Wright, 1 Camp. 139. Goldie v. Shuttleworth, 1 Camp. 70. Milward v. Temple, Ibid. Vide supra, tit. Admissions; and Index, tit. Admissions.

(b) Parkins v. Hawkshaw,[7] 2 Starkie's C. 239. But where it is proved that he is the attorney of the other party, proof of a proposal made by him on behalf of his client is admissible. Gainsford v. Grammar, 2 Camp. 9. If an attorney appear without authority, the appearance is good, and the remedy is by action. Anon. Salk. 86. An offer by the attorney of the father of the defendant, an infant, is not admissible, although the defendant afterwards employ the same attorney. Brughart v. Angerstein,[8] 6 C. & P. 690. An undertaking to appear for Messrs. T. & M., joint owners of the sloop A., given by the attorney on the record, is evidence of joint ownership. Marshall v. Cliff, 4 Camp. 133. See further as to admissions by an attorney, Truslow v. Bruton,[9] 9 Moore, 64.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xix. 295. [2]Id. xxxv. 433. [3]Id. viii. 50. [4]Id. v. 223. [5]Id. xi. 246. [6]Id. ii. 311. [7]Id. iii. 332. [8]Id. xxv. 600. [9]Id. xvii. 121.

attorney on record, in a letter written before the action, is not admissible without proof of authority (c).

ATTORNMENT. See 4 Anne, c. 16, s. 9.

AUGMENTATION.

A CURACY may be proved to have been augmented, by showing an order for the augmentation entered in a book, and signed by the governors of Queen Anne's Bounty, according to the stat. 1 Geo. 1, stat. 2, c. 10, s. 20, without proof that the money was laid out in land, and allotted by deed under the corporation seal of the governor, to be annexed to the curacy, and that such deed was enrolled within six months after its execution, according to that statute and the stat. 9 Geo. 2, c. 36 (d).

AUTERFOITS ACQUIT. Vide Supra, Vol. I. and Index.

AUTHORITY (e).

As to the authority of an agent, see tit. AGENT.
Of a partner, see tit. PARTNER.
See also TRESPASS.—REPLEVIN.
As to proof of authority to receive money, see tit. PAYMENT.
To give notice to quit, see EJECTMENT.
See also tit. POWER.

AVOIDANCE.

PROOF of, when necessary to avoid a license. See Roberts v. Davey, 4 B. & Ad. 664.

*116

*AWARD (f).

IT has been seen that an award regularly made under a submission by the parties, operates conclusively as a judgment of a Court of competent jurisdiction (g).

Proof of submission.

In an action upon an award, it is necessary to prove the authority conferred by the parties on the arbitrator, and his making the award. The authority may be by parol. If it be by deed, it must be produced, and the (c) Wagstaff v. Wilson,[1] 4 B. & Ad. 339. Secus, if the letter from defendant's attorney contains an undertaking to appear. Marshall v. Cliff, 4 Camp. 133. And see Roberts v. Gresley,[2] 3 C. & P. 380. Peyton v. Governors of St. Thomas's Hospital,[3] 3 C. & P. 363. Wilmot v. Smith,[4] 3 C. & P. 453.

(d) Doe d. Graham v. Scott, 11 East, 478.

(e) See Vin. Ab. tit. AUTHORITY; and Vernon v. Crew, Cro. C. 57.

(f) No precise form of words is necessary to constitute an award. Lock v. Vulliamy,[5] 5 B. & Ad. 600. In debt on bond conditioned for the due discharge and accounting by a clerk, to be ascertained by the inspection of A., held that a paper in the handwriting of A. showing the deficiency was in the nature of an award, and required a stamp. Jebb v. M'Kierman.[6] 1 M. & M. 340. Where, on reference of an action in which several issues were joined, the arbitrator found for the defendant on some issues, but not going to the whole cause of action, and for the plaintiff on the others, but omitted to award damages; held, that the award was insufficient, as it was impossible to say how the verdict was to be entered. Howard v. Duncan, 7 Dowl. 91. But where one plea covered the whole cause of action, which the arbitrator found in favour of the defendant, held, that he had done right in awarding no damages on those issues which he found for the plaintiff. Savage v. Ashwin, 4 M. & W. 530. See further as to the sufficiency of an award, Petch v. Conlan, 7 Dowl. P. C. 426. Petch v. Fountain,[7] 5 Bing. N. C. 442. Where the award finds a certain sum to be due, but no express order to pay it, there being no contempt, the payment cannot be enforced by an attachment, but only by action on the award. Seaward v. Howey, 7 Dowl. 318.

(g) Supra, Vol. I. Index, tit. JUDGMENTS. Doe v. Rosser, 3 East, 11. Herbert v. Cooke, Willes, 36; infra, 86, n. (c). Whitehead v. Tuttersall,[8] 1 Ad. & Ell. 491. Where the parties agreed to be bound by the opinion of a professional man upon the construction of an act of parliament, his decision was held to be final, although he recommended that the printed statute should be compared with the parliament roll; and the Court said, that if the statute was misprinted, the plaintiff (who sought to repudiate the arbitrator's decision) should have shown it. Price v. Hollis, 1 M. & S. 105.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxiv. 70. [2]Id. xiv. 258. [3]Id. xiv. 349. [4]Id. xiv. 386. [5]Id. xxvii. 135. [6]Id. xxii. 330. [7]Id. xxxv. 169. [8]Id. xxviii. 127.

execution (h) by all (i) the parties to the reference must be proved. To prove the appointment of an umpire it is not sufficient to produce the joint award of the arbitrators and umpire in which the appointment is recited (j).

Where four parties agreed to refer the co-partnership accounts, and all matters in difference between them, and any two of them, and the arbitrator awarded that a separate debt was due from A., one of the partners, to B. another partner, it was held, that in order to establish the existence of this debt it was necessary to prove the execution of the submission by A. and B., and also by the two other partners (k). The appointment of an umpire out of two persons whom two arbitrators have chosen by lot is bad, and is not cured by an acquiescence of the parties before they knew the fact (l).

A variance as to the day to which the time for making the award was alleged to be enlarged, will not be material (m).

Where the original time for making the award has been enlarged, the plaintiff must show that it was duly enlarged, either in pursuance of authority given to the arbitrator by the terms of the submission, or by subsequent consent. If the enlargement has been made under a Judge's order, consent of the parties must be shown to warrant the order (n). An irregular enlarge*ment is waived by the subsequent appearance of the parties before the *117 arbitrator (o).

Where the submission is to A. and B., and such third person as they shall appoint, in order to satisfy an allegation that A. and B. appointed C., it is not sufficient to produce an award executed by the three, reciting that A. and B. did appoint C., even although C. acted along with them in the arbitration (p) (A).

Where an award has been made on a reference by rule of court, to prove the order (in the same court) it is sufficient to produce the office-copy of the rule, making the order a rule of court (q).

Next, the execution of the award itself must be proved, by means of Of the the attesting witness, if it has been subscribed by one, or proof of his award.
handwriting, and perhaps that of the arbitrator, if the witness be dead (r) (B).

(h) See tit. Deed. (i) Farr v. Owen,[1] 7 B. & C. 427.

(j) Still & another v. Halford, 4 Camp. 17. And see Maule v. Stowell, 15 East, 99. As to the appointment of an umpire, see Bates v. Cooke,[2] 9 B. & C. 471. Soulsby v. Hodgson, 3 Burr. 1474. Such appointment must be the result of the will and judgment of the two. In re Cassell, 7 B. & C. 626.

(k) Antram v. Chace, 15 East, 209. (l) Greenwood v. Titterington,[3] 9 Ad. & Ell. 699.

(m) Swinford v. Burn,[4] 1 Gow. 5. See 2 Saund. 290, a; Gilbert v. Stanislus, 3 Price, 54.

(n)[5] 5 B. & C. 390, on Motion for an Attachment. A direction by an arbitrator, "I direct that a rule of this court shall be applied for, by counsel's hand, to enlarge the time of making my award," is of itself a sufficient enlargement. Hallett v. Hallett, 5 M. & W. 25. An irregularity as to enlarging the time is waived by attending subsequent meetings before the arbitrator. Ib.

(o) Re Hick,[6] 8 Taunt. 694. Lawrence v. Hodgson, 1 Y. & J. 16. Holden v. Glasscock, 8 D. & R. 151.

(p) Still v. Halford, 4 Camp. 17.

(q) Ibid. But if the action be brought in another court, semble, the rule itself should be produced.

(r) Where the making and publishing of an award are sworn to, but without fixing the time, the Court will presume that it was made in due time. Doe v. Stillwell,[7] 8 Ad. & Ell. 645. See Private Writing, Proof of.—Attesting Witness.

(A) (Under a submission to several, all must join in the award, unless the terms of the submission make a different provision. Towne v. Jaquith, 6 Mass. R. 46. Case of a Turnpike Road, &c. 5 Binn. 484–5. Crofoot v. Allen, 2 Wend. 494. In debt for the penalty of an arbitration bond an award must be shown conforming substantially to the submission prescribed in the condition, which cannot be changed or added to by parol. But when the action is on the award, and not for the penalty of the bond, if the declaration shows that the award is in conformity with and justified by the terms of submission (parol or written), it is sufficient. Shockey's Ad'r v. Glassford, 6 Dana, 9.)

(B) (An award must show that the arbitrators met at the time and place specified in the submission, or

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xiv. 71. [2]Id. xvii. 407. [3]Id. xxxvi. 247. [4]Id. v. 438. [5]Id. xi. 259. [6]Id. iv. 249. [7]Id. xxxv. 480.

Where a parish had continued to repair a road within it, notwithstanding an award made by commissioners under an inclosure Act sixteen years ago, which awarded that the highway was in a different parish, it was held that upon an indictment against the first parish for not repairing the road, it was incumbent on them to prove that the previous notices to the parishes to be affected by the award had been given as required by the Act (s); for the repairs subsequent to the award raised a presumption that notice had not been given. But in the absence of such a presumption, a presumption arises in such a case that the commissioners have done their duty (t). The plaintiff is entitled to recover interest from the time of demanding the sum awarded, as a liquidated sum (u). Notice of the award need not be proved, for the parties are bound to take notice of the award (v). An indorsement (unstamped) on an award is a sufficient authority to a third person to demand the sum awarded (x).

The defendant may insist that one or more of the parties to the award were minors or married women, and that they were not bound by the submission, and consequently that there was no mutuality (y) (A).

The authority of an arbitrator is revocable, and the defendant may show that the authority was in fact revoked previous to his making the award (z) (B).

(s) R. v. Haslingfield, 2 M. & S. 558.

(t) According to the general rule. See Lord Ellenborough's observations, 2 M. & S. 561; Williams v. East India Company, 3 East, 192; and tit. PRESUMPTION. As to awards under inclosure Acts, see Doe d. Sweeting v. Hellard,[1] 9 B. & C. 789; Revell v. Jodrell, 4 T. R. 424; Townley v. Gibson, 2 T. R. 701; Doe v. Davidson, 2 M. & S. 175.

(u) Johnson v. Durant,[2] 4 C. & P. 327.

(v) 2 Saund. 62; unless such notice be made necessary by the special terms of the contract or award.

(x) Langman v. Holmes, 2 W. Bl. 991.

(y) A submission, stated to be an order by the Vice-Chancellor in a suit pending before him, by consent of the attornies in the suit, where some of the parties were minors, without any averment (in a declaration on the award) to show that the next friends of the infants took the obligation on themselves, is not binding, for it is not mutual. Biddell v. Dowse,[3] 6 B. & C. 255; 1 Ch. Ca. 279.

(z) As by the death of one of the parties, unless the case be provided for by the terms of the rule or submission. See Potts v. Ward,[4] 1 Marsh. 366; Cooper v. Johnstone, 2 B. & A. 394; Edmunds v. Cox,[5] 2 Chitty's C. T. M. 432. And see In re Hare, 6 Bing. N. C. 158. Secus, where the arbitrator was merely to settle the amount of a verdict previously taken. Bower v. Taylor,[6] cited 7 Taunt. 574. Where a stranger to the suit became party to a rule by which the parties were bound to pay to him or his executors the sum awarded, it was held that his executors were entitled to an attachment, notwithstanding his death before the award made. Rogers v. Staunton,[7] 7 Taunt. 576. A party may, after submission even by deed, revoke his act previous to the award made. Milne v. Grutrix, 7 East, 608. So a party may revoke a submission by rule of Nisi Prius before it is made a rule of court. Clapham v. Higham,[8] 1 Bing. 87; 2 B. & A. 395; though he would be guilty of a contempt in revoking it after it had been made a rule of court. Ibid. But if a Judge's order direct a reference, and that either party wilfully preventing, &c. should pay such costs as the Court should think fit, though the party may revoke his own submission, he cannot revoke the latter part of the order. Asten v. George, 2 B. & A. 399. An intervening bankruptcy of one of the parties held to be no revocation. Andrews v. Palmer,[9] B. & A. 250. In an action of covenant for not performing an award, a plea that the defendant by deed revoked the authority, is good, without expressly alleging notice to the arbitrators: for the allegation imports notice. Marsh v. Bulteel,[10] 5 B. & A. 507; and see Vynior's Case, 8 Co. 162. It seems, that where power is given to an arbitrator to examine the parties, he may examine those also who ought to have been made parties. See Lloyd v. Archbowle, 2 Taunt. 324; Campbell v. Twem- it is bad. Strum v. Cunningham, 3 Ohio Rep. 287. But arbitrators may correct or amend their award, before it has been delivered to the parties. Eveleth v. Chase et al. 17 Mass. R. 458.)

---

(A) (An executor or administrator has authority to submit to referees or arbitrators a demand in favour of or against the estate he represents, and the award will be binding. Coffin v. Cottle, 4 Pick. 454. Bean v. Furnam et al. 6 Pick. 269.)

(B) (Proof that arbitrators, before making an award, resigned their authority, and that such resignation was accepted by the parties, is admissible in bar of an action on an award. Relyea v. Ramsay, 2 Wend. 602. A submission may be revoked at any time before the award; and a revocation may be presumed, from the fact that suit was brought after the submission, and before any binding award was entered. Peters' Ad'rs v. Craig, 6 Dana, 307.)

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xvii. 501. [2]Id. xix. 406. [3]Id. xiii. 164. [4]Id. iv. 341. [5]Id. xviii. 390. [6]Id. ii. 222. [7]Id. ii. 223. [8]Id. viii. 257. [9]Id. vi. 417. [10]Id. vii. 175.

*But he cannot go into any collateral evidence to impeach the award (a); as by showing that the arbitrator acted corruptly or erroneously (b) (A), or as it seems by mistake (c). But he may take any objection which is apparent on the proceedings: as that the award is bad for excess of authority in the whole or in part (d). So he may show, either by special plea or under the general issue, in an action on the award, that the submission was obtained by fraud (e); or he may object that the award is not final or certain (f). Proof in defence.

It is no defence to an action on the submission, that the defendant revoked the authority before the award made (g).

An award made under bonds of submission, that certain premises should be delivered up to the lessor of the plaintiff in ejectment, was held to be *conclusive as to his right (h). And in general, an award made under competent authority is binding and conclusive upon the parties (i). And before the new rule it was evidence under the general issue in assumpsit (B). *119

But an award, although under a submission of all matters in difference, will not be conclusive upon any matter which was not at all contested low, 1 Price, 81. And although the arbitrator may have examined a witness not legally competent, the Court will not set aside the award. Laird v. Dixon, K. B. Mich. T. 1827. Note, that the verdict had been entered on the arbitrator's certificate at the assizes, and the ground of motion was, that the arbitrator, in an action against one of the members of a joint-stock company, had admitted the evidence of other members of the company for the defendant. On motion for an attachment, the Court will not notice objections not appearing on face of award. Macarthur v. Campbell,[1] 2 Ad. & Ell. 52. The ordering a sum of money to be paid on a Sunday does not vitiate an award. Hobdell v. Miller, 6 Bing. N. C. 292.

(a) In re Cargey,[2] 2 D. & R. 222. For the plaintiff would be unprepared at the trial. The plea in that case was nil debet. The remedy in case of partiality or corruption is by application to the Court, or by an action against the arbitrators. Ibid.; and see Swinford v. Burn,[3] 1 Gow. 5. Where evidence had been taken at a meeting irregularly convened, and at which the parties did not attend, but it was afterwards struck out, and the arbitration proceeded, the Court refused to set the award aside. Kingwell v. Elliott, 7 Dowl. 423.

(b) This at all events cannot be done where application might have been made to the Court to set the award aside on that ground. Braddick v. Thompson, 8 East, 344. Wills v. Maccarmick, 2 Wils. 148.

(c) Ashton v. Poynter, 1 C. M. & R. 738. Johnson v. Durrant,[4] 2 B. & Ad. 931.

(d) Bonner v. Liddell,[5] 1 B. & B. 80. As where, according to an agreement for a lease, the term was to be for 63 years; but there was to be no payment of rent for the first three years, and the arbitrator authorised to direct a lease to be executed according to the agreement, awarded the execution of a lease for 63 years, to commence from the payment of rent.

(e) Sackett v. Owen,[6] 2 Chitty's R. 39.

(f) Wills v. Maccarmick, 2 Wils. 148. Vide supra, p. 118, note (b). See further, Ross v. Boards,[7] 8 Ad. & Ell. 290; Wykes v. Shipton,[8] 8 Ad. & Ell. 246, n; Brown v. Croydon Canal Co.,[9] 9 Ad. & Ell. 522; Taylor v. Shuttlewarth, 6 Bing. N. C. 277; Seccombe v. Babb, 6 M. & W. 129; Gisborn v. Hart, 5 M. & W. 50.

(g) Brown v. Tanner, 1 M. & Y. 464. For a revocation of authority is a breach of an agreement to perform an award. See Grazebrook v. Davis,[10] 5 B. & C. 534. And see Doe v. Horner,[11] 8 Ad. & Ell. 235.

(h) Doe v. Rosser, 3 East, 11.

(i) Campbell v. Twemlow, 1 Price, 81; 6 Ves. 282; 9 Ves. 364; 14 Ves. 271; 1 Swanst. 55. Price v. Hollis, 1 M. & S. 105. Where an action of debt, to which the general issue and a set-off were pleaded, was referred, "the costs of the reference and of the award to abide the event," and the arbitrator found that the plaintiff had no cause of action, and not entitled to recover in the action, but the award was silent as to the set-off; held that the award was final, and the defendant entitled to recover the costs; the event, being taken to mean the event as to the action, and not as to the determination of particular issues, which the arbitrator was not distinctly required to do. Duckworth v. Harrison, 4 M. & W. 432; and 7 Dowl. 71.

(A) (If arbitrators act corruptly, or exceed their authority, or if there be gross errors and mistakes in the award, and an action be brought upon it, the defendant may plead any of these matters in bar of the action. So if arbitrators take into consideration matters not submitted, or omit to take into consideration those which are submitted, the award will not be binding, and an action upon it may be avoided by pleading such matters in bar. Bean v. Farnam et al. 6 Pick. 269.

A promise by a party in whose favour an award is made, to correct any mistakes which may have been made by the arbitrators, is void for want of consideration. Efner v. Shaw. 2 Wend. 567.)

(B) (Homes v. Avery, 12 Mass. Rep. 134.)

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxix. 27. [2]Id. xvi. 80. [3]Id. v. 438. [4]Id. xxii. 211. [5]Id. v. 20. [6]Id. xviii. 246. [7]Id. xxxv. 390. [8]Id. xxxv. 385. [9]Id. xxxvi. 188. [10]Id. xii. 306. [11]Id. xxxv. 382.

before the arbitrator (k) (A). And the arbitrator may be examined in order to prove that no evidence was given upon a particular subject (l). An award made upon a parol submission, is evidence under a count on the original demand (m), or on the account stated (n). An arbitrator may demand a compensation for his trouble, and the plaintiff may compel contribution from the parties (o). An agreement by parties to refer all disputes that shall occur, does not oust the jurisdiction of the courts of law or equity (p) (C).

Property awarded to be delivered up on payment of a sum specified, in satisfaction, does not vest on tender of the money, which is refused, and therefore the party entitled to the property cannot maintain trover, but must bring an action on the award (q).

BAIL (r).

The bail of a party are incompetent, from interest, to give evidence for him (s). Where the testimony of one or both the bail is necessary, the party, on application to the Court, may substitute another in his place, and so render him competent (t).

BAIL-BOND.

Bail-bond. The plaintiff in an action on a bail-bond, whether he be the sheriff, or his assignee, under the plea of non est factum, need prove the execution only (u), in the ordinary way. If the defendant plead that the bond was taken for ease and favour, and the plaintiff reply that it was taken for the security of his prisoner, and issue be joined thereon, slight evidence will, it *120 is said, *maintain the replication (x). Upon a plea of comperuit ad diem, the appearance, being matter of record, is tried by the record (y).

When the defendant pleaded that there was no assignment of the bond by the sheriff or under-sheriff, it was held that the seal (of office) to the assignment was sufficient whoever had signed it (z).

(k) Ravee v. Farmer, 4 T. R. 146. Marten v. Thornton, 4 Esp. C. 180. But see Dunn v. Murray,[1] 9 B. & C. 780: Lord Ellenborough's observations in Smith v. Johnson, 15 East, 213; Seddon v. Tutop, 6 T. R. 610.

(l) Martin v. Thornton, 4 Esp. C. 180, cor. Ld. Alvanley. But in Johnson v. Durant,[2] 4 C. & P. 237, it is said that he cannot be asked under what impression he made his award.

(m) Kingston v. Phelps, Peake's C. 227. (n) Ibid.

(o) Swinford v. Burn,[3] 1 Gow, 5.

(p) Thompson v. Charnock, 8 T. R. 159. Kill v. Hollister, 1 Wils. 129. Wellington v. Macintosh, 2 Atk. 525.

(q) Hunter v. Rice, 15 East, 100.

(r) The refusing bail where it ought to be granted, is a misdemeanor, and the subject of an action or indictment; 2 Haw. c. 15, s. 13.

(s) 1 T. R. 164; 2 Esp. C. 606. Collett v. Jenners, Rep. temp. Hardw. 133.

(t) Tidd's Pr. 264. Collett v. Jenners, R. T. Hardw. 133. This is done by an application to the Court, on affidavit, stating that the witness is a material one, upon the terms of adding and justifying another.

(u) But if the plaintiff should inadvertently have joined issue upon the plea of nil debet, instead of having demurred, he will, it is said, be bound to prove all the averments in the declaration, the issuing the writ, the arrest, the execution of the bond, and the assignment, if the action be brought by the assignee. Qu.

(x) 1 Sid. 383. See 1 Saund. 162; 1 Lev. 254; Com. Dig. Pleader, 2 W. 25.

(y) The plea is proved by the production of the recognizance roll, containing an entry of the appearance. Whittle v. Oldaker, 9 B. & C. 478. If the issue depend on the date of the appearance, the Court of C. P. will order the date of the appearance to be entered on the filazer's book, although before the application to the Court, issue has been joined on the plea of comperuit ad diem. Austen v. Fenton, 1 Taunt. 23.

(z) Harris v. Ashley, 1 Sel. N. P. 554. cor. Lord Mansfield. And on a traverse of the assignment, it is not necessary to show that the witnesses subscribed their names in the presence of the officer executing the assignment. Phillips v. Barlow,[4] 1 Bing. N. C. 433.

(A) (It is competent to prove by the oath of arbitrators, that certain matters were not examined or acted upon by them, and that consequently they had made a mistake in their award. Roop v. Brubacker, 1 Rawle, 304. {And also the time when, and the circumstances under which, he made his award. Woodbury v. Northy, 3 Greenl. Rep. 85.})

(B) (See also Goldstone et al. v. Osborne et al. 2 Carr. & P. 550. 12 Eng. Com. Law Reps. 256.)

[1] Eng Com. Law Reps. xvi. 498. [2] Id. xix. 409. [3] Id. v. 438. [4] Id. xxvii. 446.

Where the bond is taken by the sheriff after the return of the writ, it is void; since the condition is, that the defendant in the original action shall appear at the return of the writ, which is impossible. The defendant may take advantage of the defence under the plea of non est factum, by producing the writ or relying upon the statement of the writ and return on the record (a).

The bail are estopped from saying that there was no arrest. A return of non est inventus, after the taking and before assigning the bond, may make the sheriff liable for a false return, or be the foundation for an application to the Court to set the bond aside, but cannot come in question in an action on the bond (b).

Bail are not discharged by the plaintiff's taking a cognovit from their principal, without their consent or knowledge, unless by the terms of it he is to have longer time for payment of the debt and costs than by regularly proceeding in the action (c).

BANK, JOINT STOCK. See St. 7 G. 4, c. 36, and tit. Partners.

BANKRUPTCY (A).

Under this head may be considered:—1st, Proofs in actions by the assignees.—2dly, Those in actions by creditors or others against the assignees.—3dly, Those in actions between the bankrupt and creditors.—4thly, Those on indictments against the bankrupt.—5thly, The competency of witnesses, &c.

1. Of proofs by Assignees. Assignees sue either in their representative character, or in their own right. If they claim in their character of assignees, they must (if their character be put in issue) (d), prove themselves to be such. The fact that commissioners have already declared the party a bankrupt is not even primâ facie evidence of the bankruptcy, for they act upon ex parte evidence, and have a mere authority without jurisdiction, and consequently their determination is not in the nature of a decree or judgment *by a Court of competent authority (e). But where the assignees declare upon a cause of action which accrued after the bankruptcy, without describing themselves as assignees, no evidence of title is necessary (f). Proofs by assignees. *121

To establish their title to the bankrupt's property, they must prove, 1. The commission of fiat (g). 2. The Trading. 3. The act of bankruptcy. 4. The petitioning creditor's debt. 5. The appointment of assignees.

(a) 4 M. & S. 338. For other evidence on the plea of non est factum, see tit. Deed.—Non est Factum.

(b) Taylor v. Clow,[1] 1 B. & Ad. 223. (c) Stevenson v. Roche,[2] 9 B. & C. 707.

(d) By the rule H. T. 4 W. 4, in all actions by and against assignees of a bankrupt or insolvent, or executors or administrators, or persons authorized by Act of Parliament to sue or be sued as nominal parties, the character in which the plaintiff or defendant is stated on the record to sue or be sued shall not in any case be considered as in issue unless specially denied. A plea to a declaration in trover by the assignee of a bankrupt puts in issue the petitioning creditor's debt, trading, and act of bankruptcy, as well as the plaintiff's appointment as assignee. Butler v. Hobson,[3] 4 Bing. N. C. 290. Buckton v. Frost, 1 P. & D. 102.

(e) Ld. Raym. 580. See Bonham's Case, 8 Coke, 114, Callis. 216. The act of a Judge is not traversable if he be the absolute Judge of the cause; secus, in cases for a certificate by such as be no absolute Judge of the cause, as commissioner of bankrupt. Bonham's Case, 8 Coke, 114.

(f) Evans v. Man, Cowp. 569, B. N. P. 37. Thomas v. Rideing, Wightw. 65.

(g) By the stat. 1 & 2 W. 4, c. 56, s. 12, the Lord Chancellor is empowered, on petition, and on filing such affidavit and giving such bond as the law requires, to issue his fiat under his hand, in lieu of a commission; and by sec. 13, such fiat, prosecuted in the Court of Bankruptcy, shall be filed and entered of record in the said court, and it shall thereupon be lawful for any one or more of the commissioners thereof to proceed thereon in all respects as commissioners, &c.

(A) (For the bankrupt laws of the U. S. of 1800 and 1841, together with the decisions under the acts of 1800, see the appendix.)

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xx. 378. [2]Id. xvii. 477. [3]Id. xxxiii. 358.

Fiat. First.* The commission of fiat is proved by the production of the com-

By sec. 28, the Judges of the Court of Bankruptcy are to seal all such proceedings, documents, and copies as are required to be sealed.

By sec. 29, a certificate of the appointment of assignees, purporting to be under the seal of the said court, shall be received as evidence of such appointment, without further proof.

The st. 2 & 3 W. 4, c. 114, recites that the provisions of the st. 6 G. 4, (ss. 96 and 97), had been found defective, and that no provision had been made in the 1 & 2 W. 4, for entering of record fiats and other proceedings not prosecuted in the Court of Bankruptcy; and enacts, that the records of all commissions of bankrupt, and all proceedings under the same which may have been heretofore entered of record, pursuant to or under colour of the st. 6 G. 4, c. 16, or any other Act, shall be removed into the Court of Bankruptcy, and shall be kept as records of the said court, in such place as the Judges of the said court shall from time to time direct; and it shall be lawful for the Judges of the Court of Bankruptcy to nominate the person heretofore appointed by the Lord Chancellor, to enter such proceedings of record; or in case of his refusal to accept such office, some other fit and proper person as the clerk of enrolment to the said court; and that such clerk of the enrolments, and his successors, shall have the care and custody of all the said records so removed, and shall in like manner enter of record all matters and proceedings in bankruptcy which by this Act or the said recited Acts (6 G. 4, c. 16, and 1 & 2 W. 4, c. 36), or by any order made in pursuance thereof, are or may be directed to be entered of record, upon payment of the fees thereinafter mentioned.

Sect. 2 provides that all commissions of bankruptcy issued before the 1st day of Sept. 1825, and all depositions and other proceedings relating to such commissions, directed to be enrolled, and actually entered of record upon or since that day, shall be deemed and taken to have been well and effectually entered of record.

Sect. 3. Provided nevertheless, that the certificate of such entry, purporting to be signed by the person appointed to enter such proceedings, or by his deputy, shall have the same effect as if such commission had been issued after the said 1st day of Sept. 1825, and shall be received in evidence, without proof of the appointment or handwriting of such person.

Sect. 4. Any Judge of the Court of Bankruptcy may direct such officer to enter upon the records of the court any commission of bankrupt at any time heretofore issued, and the depositions and proceedings had and taken under the same, or such part or parts thereof as such Judge shall think fit; provided, that such officer may enter of record the several matters directed by the said recited Acts, or either of them, upon the application of any party interested therein, without any special order.

Sect. 5. All fiats already issued, or to be hereafter issued, to be prosecuted elsewhere than in the said Court of Bankruptcy; and all adjudications of bankruptcy by the persons named in such fiats to act as commissioners; and all appointments of assignees, and certificates of conformity made and allowed under such fiats, may and shall be entered of record in the said Court of Bankruptcy, upon the application of any party interested therein, on the payment of the fees thereafter mentioned, without any petition; and that any one of the Judges of the said court may, upon petition, direct any deposition or other proceedings under such fiat to be entered of record as aforesaid.

Sect. 7. In the event of the death of any of the witnesses deposing to the petitioning creditor's debt, trading, or act of bankruptcy, under any commission or fiat already issued, or hereafter to be issued, it shall be lawful for the assignees appointed under such commission or fiat, and for all persons claiming through or under them, or acting by or under their authority in the cases hereafter mentioned, to produce and read in evidence in all courts of civil judicature, and in all civil proceedings in maintenance and support of such commission or fiat, any deposition of such deceased witness relative to such petitioning creditor's debt, trading, or act of bankruptcy, which shall have been duly entered of record pursuant to the provisions of the said recited Acts or of this Act; and the production or reading of such deposition, or of any copy thereof duly authenticated according to the provisions of the said recited Acts or of this Act, shall have the same effect as if the matters therein had been deposed to by the same witness in such court according to the ordinary course and practice thereof: Provided always, that the before-mentioned depositions shall be read in evidence in such cases only where the party using the same shall claim, maintain, or defend some right, title, interest, claim, or demand which the bankrupt might have claimed, maintained, or defended in case no commission of bankrupt or fiat had issued, and shall not be read in evidence in any action or proceeding now pending, by which the validity of any commission or fiat is or may be brought into question.

Sect. 8. No fiat nor any adjudication of bankruptcy or appointment of assignees, or certificate of conformity under such fiat, shall be received in evidence in any court of law or equity, unless the same shall have been first entered of record in the Court of Bankruptcy aforesaid.

Sect. 9 provides, that upon the production in evidence of any commission, fiat, adjudication, assignment, appointment of assignees, certificate, deposition, or other proceeding in bankruptcy, purporting to be sealed with the seal of the said Court of Bankruptcy, or of any writing purporting to be a copy of any such document, and purporting to be sealed as aforesaid, the same shall be received as evidence of such documents respectively, and of the same having been so entered of record as aforesaid, without any further proof thereof: Provided nevertheless, that all fiats and proceedings under the same, which may have been entered of record before the passing of this Act, shall and may, upon the production thereof, with the certificate thereon, purporting to be signed by the person so appointed to enter proceedings in bankruptcy, or by his deputy, be received as evidence of the same having been duly entered of record, anything herein contained notwithstanding.

Where an action was pending, and before the late Act, the party applying was entitled to have the proceedings produced for the purpose of their being given in evidence upon a supœna duces tecum: the assignees when called upon are bound to have the proceedings enrolled at the request of the parties interested, and if they refuse, it is at the peril of costs; but in such cases the application to the Court against them must be by petition, and not by motion. Ex parte Johnstone, 1 Mont. & M. 82. It was held that the courts of law mission or fiat itself, recorded according to the statute, or by an office-copy (h).

*It has been held that assignees under separate commissions against A. and B., who declare for goods sold and delivered by both the bankrupts, and also for goods sold and delivered by each, cannot recover in respect of the latter in addition to the former; for, suing in a representative capacity, they cannot, it was said, join rights of action in which those whom they represent could not have joined (i). And assignees under separate commissions against A. and B. cannot state themselves to be joint assignees (k); but the assignees under a joint commission against A. and B. may describe themselves as the assignees of either as well as of both, and in the same action they may recover joint as well as separate debts (l). But if they describe themselves as assignees of both, and state promises to both, they must prove the bankruptcy of both (m). Assignees under a joint commission against A. and B. and also under a separate commission against C., may recover a debt due to the three (n.) If the plaintiffs sue in trover *123 had no jurisdiction under sections 95 and 96 of the stat. 6 G. 4, c. 16. Johnson v. Gillett,[1] 5 Bing. 5, and 2 M. & P. 8. Where the title appears in the assignment from the provisional assignee and the commissioners, to the general assignee, it is not necessary to enrol the provisional assignment. Ex parte Martin, 1 Mont. 84. A commission against a minor cannot be supported. O'Brien v. Currie,[2] 3 C. & P. 383. It is not merely voidable, but void. Belton v. Hodges,[3] 9 Bing. 365. The party is described in the commission as a money-scrivener only; it was held the plaintiff, in an action to try its validity, is not precluded by the limited description in the commission from proving any species of trading. (Per Holroyd, J.) Smith v. Sandilands, 1 Gow, C. 171. Assignees under a second commission, the former one existing, and no certificate obtained, seized certain goods of the bankrupt; it was held that, to a replication stating the former bankruptcy, a rejoinder that the goods were in the order and disposition of the bankrupt by the permission of the first assignees, was bad, the second commission being void. Nelson v. Cherrell,[4] 7 Bing. 663; see Fowler v. Coster,[5] 10 B. & C. 427, and Till v. Wilson,[6] 7 B. & C. 684. A commission issuing at the instance of the bankrupt, was held, notwithstanding the 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, to be supersedable. Ex parte Gane, 1 Mont. & M. 401; overruling the former judgment by the Vice-Chancellor, 2 Gl. & J. 319. A joint commission issued against two, describing them as coal-merchants, of, &c.; it appeared they had dissolved partnership three years before, and had since been engaged on separate farms; and it was held that the description was insufficient. Ex parte Day, 1 Mont. & M. 208. Where a joint fiat was taken out against two, one an infant, the Court allowed it to be annulled, either as to him only, or generally. Watson, ex parte, 3 Mont. & A. 682; 3 Deac. 277.

(h) The stat. 6 G. 4, c. 16, s. 95, enacts, that all things done pursuant to the Act passed in the 5th G. 2, be confirmed, and that the Lord Chancellor shall have power to appoint a proper person, who shall by himself or his deputy enter of record all matters relating to commissions, and have the custody of the entries thereof. Sec. 96 enacts, that no commission of bankruptcy, adjudication of bankruptcy, or assignment of the personal estate of the bankrupt, or certificate of conformity, shall be received as evidence, unless the same shall have been entered of record (in the registry appointed by the Act, sec. 95.) The same section provides, that on the production in evidence of any instrument so directed to be entered of record, having the certificate thereon purporting to be signed by the person appointed to enter the same, or by his deputy, the same shall, without any proof of such signature, be received as evidence of such instrument having been so entered of record.—By the 97th section it is enacted, that in every action, suit, or issue, office-copies of any original instrument or writing filed in the office, or officially in the possession of the Lord Chancellor's secretary of bankrupts, shall be evidence to be received of every such original instrument or writing respectively; and if any such original instrument or writing shall be produced on any trial, the costs of producing the same shall not be allowed on taxation, unless it appears that the production of such original instrument or other writing was necessary. The same stat., s. 89, enacts, that in any commission against any one or more member or members of a firm, the Lord Chancellor may, upon petition, authorize the assignees to commence or prosecute any action at law, or suit in equity, in the names of such assignees and of the remaining partner or partners, against any debtor of the partnership, and may obtain such judgment, decree, or order therein, as if such action or suit had been instituted with the consent of such partner or partners; and if such partner or partners shall execute any release of the debt or demand for which such action or suit is instituted, such release shall be void.

(i) Hancock v. Haywood, 3 T. R. 433; but see note (l.)

(k) Ray v. Davies,[7] 2 Moore, 3.

(l) Graham v. Mulcaster,[8] 4 Bing. 115. Scott v. Franklin, 15 East, 428. Smith v. Goddard, 3 B. & P. 465. Harvey v. Morgan,[9] 2 Starkie's C. 17. Stonehouse v. De Silva, 3 Camp. 399.

(m) Hogg v. Bridges,[10] 2 Moore, 122. Note, that it was held in this case that the assignees of A. and B., under a joint commission, could not sue for the separate property of either; but see the cases note (l). Vide tit. TROVER.

(n) Streatfield v. Halliday, 3 T. R. 779, n., that this was after verdict. In Allen v. Hartley, 3 T. R. 780,

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xv. 344. [2]Id. xiv. 307. [3]Id. xxiii. 309. [4]Id. xx. 280. [5]Id. xxi. 104. [6]Id. xiv. 110. [7]Id. iv. 45. [8]Id. xiii. 367. [9]Id. iii. 222. [10]Id. iv. 70.

as the assignees of A. and B., on the joint possession of both, they cannot recover separate property (o).

The appointment of a former assignee having been vacated by the Chancellor, and a new one appointed, the latter is assignee by relation, and may sue on a contract made by the former assignee (p).

Proof where no notice has been given under the statute.

The plaintiffs, according to the usual order of proof, next proceed to prove the several requisites of bankruptcy. But under the provisions of the late statute such proof is unnecessary, unless due notice has been given of the intention to dispute those facts, and even then they may be proved in some cases by means of the depositions taken under the commission.

The statute 6 G. 4, c. 16, s. 99, enacts (q), that in any action by or against *124 any *assignee (r), or in any action against any commissioner, or person acting under the warrant of the commissioners, for anything done as such commissioner, or under such warrant, no proof shall be required at the trial of the petitioning creditor's debt or debts, or of the trading or act or acts of bankruptcy respectively, unless the other party in such action it was held, that a commission against two or three partners could not be supported. But now see the late stat. 6 G. 4, c. 16, s. 89.

(o) Cock v. Turner, London Sitt. after Hil. 41 G. 3, cor. Ld. Kcn. Sel. N. P. 1294. Vide tit. TROVER; and see 2 Saund. 47, n.

(p) Alldritt v. Kettridge,[1] 1 Bing. 355.

(q) The statute is prospective only, and applies to such commissions only as are issued after the passing of that Act. Key v. Cook,[2] 2 M. & P. 720. Kay v. Goodwin,[3] 6 Bing. 576. Where a commission against T. issued upon the petition of the assignees of K., who, after an action of trover brought by them to recover the goods of T., and a notice to dispute given, finding their debt as petitioning creditors insufficient, applied to the Lord Chancellor, under 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 18, that upon satisfactory proof of an existing debt to M., the commission might be proceeded in; upon which an order to that effect was made, and at the trial, in order to support the commission against K., the plaintiffs merely produced the proceedings under his commission; it was held, first, that as the plaintiffs sued as assignees of T., and not as assignees of K., those proceedings were not admissible, the 91st and 92d sections being confined to actions brought by the bankrupt's own assignees, for a debt or demand for which he might have sued. Secondly, that the order of the Lord Chancellor, not having found the debt judicially insufficient, and having been obtained only on the consent of M. and the assignees on the one hand, and the petitioning creditor on the other, and without notice to the defendant, who therefore was not apprised that he was to meet the substituted debt, was not a valid order. Muskett v. Drummond,[4] 10 B. & C. 153. See also as to the first point, Shaife v. Howard, 2 B. & C. 860. The depositions are made conclusive evidence in all actions in which the bankrupt might have sued, and evidence to the contrary is excluded. Evidence to show that the petitioning creditor's debt was a fraud and contrivance, is inadmissible. Young v. Timmins, 1 Cr. & J. 148, and 1 Tyr. 15. The same was held in the case of Glover v. Harrison, cor. Bayley and Littledale, Just. of the C. P., at Lancaster, January 1830. Where the defendant received goods from the bankrupt to keep until he wanted them, and he had never made any demand, but the assignees had, before bringing the action (of detinue), it was held to be immaterial whether the action were brought by the bankrupt or his assignees; and that the proceedings were conclusive of the trading, &c., under the 92d sect. of Geo. 4, c. 16. Smith v. Woodward,[5] 4 C. & P. 541. The deposition of the petitioning creditor (on bills drawn and indorsed by the bankrupt), not showing that they were indorsed to the petitioning creditor before the act of bankruptcy, is insufficient; being now made conclusive evidence of the facts therein contained, the deposition in support of such debt must show evidence of the existence of the debt upon the face of it. Key v. Cook,[6] 3 M. & P. 720. The depositions are conclusive where the bankrupt gives no notice, although the action was commenced before the time for the bankrupt giving notice had expired, if the time has expired before the trial. Earith v. Schroeder,[7] 1 Mood. & M. C. 24. Where the bankrupt might have sued in trover for goods deposited with the defendant, although the conversion took place after the act of bankruptcy, the depositions are conclusive evidence. Fox v. Mahoney, 2 Cr. & J. 325. The depositions are conclusive if the bankrupt himself might have maintained the action, although the record does not show it; as where the action is brought to recover the value of goods sold for cash by the bankrupt to a creditor, who, as was alleged, intended to retain the amount in fraud of the contract, and where the plaintiffs declared on two counts in trover upon possession by the bankrupt, and conversions before and after the bankruptcy. Kitchener v. Power,[8] 3 Ad. & Ell. 232; 4 N. & M. 710. Where the depositions were used, and not objected to on the trial, and when additional evidence, if necessary, might have been adduced; held, that it was afterwards too late to object that they were insufficient to establish the act of bankruptcy. Jacobs v. Latour,[9] 2 M. & P. 203.

(r) The statute extends to cases where other defendants besides the assignees are joined in the action. See Gilman v. Cousins and others,[10] 2 Starkie's C. 282; Smith v. Nicholson, York Ass. cor. Richards, C. B. and afterwards by the Court of Exchequer.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. viii. 346. [2]Id. xxii. 222. [3]Id. xix. 169. [4]Id. xxi. 48. [5]Id. xix. 517. [6]Id. xxii. 222. [7]Id. xxii. 237. [8]Id. xxx. 81. [9]Id. xv. 388. [10]Id. iii. 305.

shall, if the defendant, at or before pleading (s), *and if plaintiff before issue joined (t), give notice in writing to such assignee (u), commissioner or other person, that he intends to dispute some, and which (x), of such matters; and in case such notice shall have been given (y), if such assignee, commissioner or other person shall prove the matter so disputed, or the other party admit the same, the Judge before whom the cause shall be tried (z), may (if he thinks fit) grant a certificate of such proof or admission; and such assignee, commissioner or other person, shall be entitled to the costs, to be taxed by the proper officer, occasioned by such notice; and such costs shall, if such assignee, commissioner or other person shall obtain a verdict, be added to the costs; and, if the other party shall obtain a verdict, shall be deducted from the costs which such other party would otherwise be entitled to receive from such assignee, commissioner or other person. Proof by depositions.

The 92d section enacts, that if the bankrupt shall not (if he was within the United Kingdom at the issuing of the commission) within two calendar months after the adjudication, or (if he was out of the United Kingdom) within twelve calendar months after the adjudication, have given notice of his intention to dispute the commission, and have proceeded therein with due diligence, the depositions taken before the commissioners at the time of, or previous to, the adjudication of the petitioning creditor's debt or debts, and of the trading and act or acts of bankruptcy, shall be conclusive evidence (a) of the matters therein respectively contained, in all actions at law or suits in equity, brought by the assignees for any debt or demand for which the bankrupt might have sustained (b) an action or suit (c).

(s) It seems that notice given with a plea de novo would be sufficient. De Charme v. Lane, 2 Camp. 324. If no notice has been given before the delivery of the plea, the court will give the defendant leave to withdraw the plea, in order to plead again with notice. Radmore v. Gould, 1 Wightw. 80. Poole v. Bell,[1] 1 Starkie's C. 328. A defendant who has delivered his plea without notice, cannot, even before the time for pleading is expired, re-deliver his plea with notice. Ibid. Notice is necessary in an action against the assignees, (as by the bankrupt to try the question of bankruptcy,) although the defendants are not described as assignees upon the record. Simmonds v. Knight, 3 Camp. 251. Where the plea was delivered by mistake without a notice to dispute the bankruptcy, and notice of disputing on the same day was tendered and refused, although before the time for pleading had expired, it was held to be insufficient; the defendant should have moved to withdraw the plea, in order to plead de novo. Lawrence v. Crowder,[2] 3 C. & P. 229; see also Folkes v. Scudder,[3] 3 C. & P. 232.

(t) Notice by the plaintiff, served at the time when the issue is delivered with notice of trial, would, it seems, be too late. Richmond v. Heapy, 4 Camp. 207.

(u) Service of notice on a maid-servant at the dwelling-house of the assignee, was held to be insufficient, under the stat. 49 G. 3, c. 121, s. 10. Howard v. Ramsbottom, 3 Taunt. 526. Service by delivery to a clerk at the defendant's counting-house, before issue joined, was held to be sufficient, without proof that it came into the defendant's hands. Widger v. Browning,[3] M. & M. 27. Service on the attorney is sufficient. Howard v. Ramsbottom, 3 Taunt. 526. The notice must be specific; it is insufficient to give general notice of intention to dispute the bankruptcy. Trimley v. Unwin,[4] 6 B. & C. 587. A plea that F. was not duly declared a bankrupt does not operate as notice. Raphael v. Moon,[5] 7 C. & P. 115.

(x) Notice having been given to dispute the act of bankruptcy only, and the depositions having been read to prove the trading and petitioning creditor's debt, the residue of the proceedings is not considered to be in evidence, and the counsel of the party contesting the cause has no right to inspect them. Black v. Thorne, 4 Camp. 191. Stafford v. Clarke,[5] 1 C. & P. 26.

(y) Notice is no part of the defendant's evidence in the cause, but may be proved at the outset, and will put the plaintiff on strict proof. Ducharme v. Lane, 2 Camp. 323.

(z) The Judge, on a reference of the cause before trial, cannot certify. Barthorp v. Anderson,[6] 8 Bing. 268.

(a) Earith v. Schroder,[7] M. & M. 26; Eden, 370.

(b) Where part of the claim for which the bankrupt might have sustained an action, could not have been recovered by the bankrupt, the proceedings, after notice, are not sufficient proof of the trading, &c.; and if there be no other proof, the plaintiffs must elect to go only for such part of the claim as the bankrupt might have recovered. They must, in such case, abandon counts on their own possession as assignees. Gibson v. Oldfield,[8] 4 C. & P. 313. Jones v. Fort,[9] 1 M. & M. 196. Notice left at the counting-house of the party in London with his clerk is sufficient. Widger v. Browning,[10] 1 M. & M. 27. Proof that the party is an uncertificated bankrupt under a former commission still in force, is admissible without notice. Phillips v. Hopwood,[11] 1 B. & Ad. 619.

(c) An action of ejectment is within these words; per Lord Tenterden, C. J. sitt. after Easter T. 1827.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. ii. 410. [2]Id. xiv. 281. [3]Id. xxii. 394. [4]Id. xiii. 284. [5]Id. xxxii. 462. [6]Id. xxi. 299. [7]Id. xxii. 237. [8]Id. xix. 403. [9]Id. xxii. 289. [10]Id. xxii. 394. [11]Id. xx. 457.

If no notice of the intention to dispute any of the ingredients of bankruptcy has been given, according to the 90th section, the facts stand admitted as regards the validity of the commission or fiat (d).

If due notice has been given under the 90th section, the plaintiffs must *126 *prove the different steps of bankruptcy. But the depositions will be admissible evidence, and conclusive as to the matters contained in them, in all cases which fall within the scope of the 92d section; unless the defendant prove that the bankrupt has given notice of his intention to dispute the commission within the time, and has proceeded therein with due diligence. In such cases the depositions should be proved, either by the production of the documents themselves from the proper custody, i. e. of the solicitor under the commission (e), or proof of the handwriting of the commissioners, or by office-copies, according to the late Act (f).

The statute makes such depositions conclusive as to the matters therein contained; and therefore if the evidence supplied by the depositions taken as admitted be insufficient to prove any of the essentials to bankruptcy, the defect should, it seems, be supplied by extrinsic evidence (g).

The 1 and 2 W. 4, c. 56, s. 17, authorizes the bankrupt to dispute the adjudication by petitions to the Court of Review, which may grant an issue for trying the validity of the adjudication; and if the verdict or adjudication shall not be set aside such verdict or adjudication shall, as against the bankrupt, the petitioning creditor, and any assignee, and all persons claiming under the assignee, and all persons indebted to the bankrupt's estate, be conclusive evidence that the party was, or was not, a bankrupt at the date of such adjudication.

Trading. Next, as to proof of the requisites of bankruptcy (h); and first, of the trading. The trading (i) essential to bankruptcy is matter of positive statutory definition and of legal consideration; but it is a question of fact, whether the party has done such acts as constitute him a trader in point of law; and also, when the acts are of a dubious nature, whether they have been done with an intention to carry on trade (k).

The statute 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 2, enacts (l), that "all bankers (d) In an action by assignees against the sheriff, for the proceeds of a levy under a fi. fa. after an act of bankruptcy, no notice having been given by the defendant to dispute the bankruptcy, it was held (Tenterden, L. C. J. and Parke, J., contrà, Bayley and Littledale, Js.) that, by the omission to give notice, the defendant admitted everything necessary to support the commission, and that the plaintiffs were not bound to prove that a good petitioning creditor's debt existed at the time of the act of bankruptcy relied on. Norman v. Booth,[1] 10 B. & C. 703.

(e) Collinson v. Hillear, 3 Camp. 30. The bankrupt himself, having obtained his certificate and released his sureties, is a competent witness for this purpose. Morgan v. Pryor,[2] 2 B. & C. 13.

(f) 6 G. 4, c. 16, s. 97; supra, 122.

(g) Lawson v. Robinson,[3] 1 Starkie's C. 456. Cooper v. Machin,[4] 1 Bing. 426. Marsh v. Meager,[5] 1 Starkie's C. 353. In Macbeath v. Coates,[6] 4 Bing. 34, it was held that the petitioning creditor's debt had been sufficiently established, although the deposition which was read was defective on that point; and Best, C. J. intimated that the 92d section virtually excluded all other proof. In that case, however, no notice had been given, and therefore no proof of the debt was necessary. But see the report of this case, 12 B. Moore, 122; and Bevan v. Lewis, 1 Sim. 376.

(h) Where the assignees unnecessarily went into evidence of trading after notice to dispute, and failing, were nonsuited, the Court refused to set aside the nonsuit. Johnson v. Piper,[7] 2 N. & M. 672.

(i) An illegal trading will support a commission. Cobb v. Symonds, 5 B. & A. 516. But see Milliken v. Brandon,[8] 1 C. & P. 387.

(k) Wright v. Bird, 1 Price, 20. Bartholomew v. Davis, 1 T. R. 573. In Patman v. Vaughan, 1 T. R. 573, Buller, J. stated to the jury, that if the party endeavoured to make a profit of trading, and was ready to sell to any applicant, and not as a matter of favour, they ought to find him to be a trader.

(l) It was held that proof of trading, after the new Act came in force, was essential; and that a commission issued since the 1st September 1825, could not be supported on a trading previously to that time. Ex parte Batten, 1 Mont. & M. 287. Surtees v. Ellison,[9] 9 B. & C. 750. And see Hewson v. Heard; Palmer v. Moore; ib. But acts of buying before the late statute came into operation, are evidence to explain the quality of the subsequent acts. Worth and another v. Budd,[10] 2 B. & A. 172.

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxi. 151. [2] Id. ix. 8. [3] Id. ii. 468. [4] Id. viii. 367. [5] Id. ii. 423. [6] Id. xiii. 330. [7] Id. xxviii. 375. [8] Id xi. 420. [9] Id. xvii. 491. [10] Id. xxii. 53.

(m), *brokers (n), and persons (o) using the trade or profession of a scrivener (p), receiving other men's monies or estates into their trust or custody, and persons insuring ships or their freight, or other matter, against perils of the sea, warehousemen, wharfingers, packers, builders, carpenters, shipwrights, victuallers, keepers of inns, taverns, hotels (q) or coffee-houses, dyers, printers, bleachers, fullers, calenderers, cattle or sheep salesmen, and all persons using the trade of merchandize by way of bargaining, exchange, bartering, commission, consignment, or otherwise, in gross or by retail; and all persons who, either for themselves or as agents or factors for others (r), seek their living by buying and selling, or by buying and letting for hire, or by the workmanship of goods or commodities (s), shall be deemed traders liable to become bankrupt: provided that no farmer (t), grazier, common labourer, or workman for hire, receiver-general of the taxes, or member of or subscriber to any incorporated commercial or trading companies, established by charter or Act of Parliament, shall be deemed, as such, a trader liable by virtue of this act (u) to become bankrupt." What persons not liable.

(m) Where the bankrupt was not merely a shareholder, but an active manager of the business of a joint-stock banking company, it was held to be a sufficient trading. Hall, Ex parte, 3 Deac. 405.

(n) A shipbroker is a trader liable to become bankrupt, within the 6 Geo. 4, c. 16. Pott v. Turner,[1] 6 Bing. 702. So is a pawnbroker. Rawlinson v. Pearson,[2] 5 B. & A. 124. Qu. as to an insurance broker. Ex parte Stevens, 4 Madd. 256.

(o) The wife of a felon sentenced to transportation, if she becomes a trader, is liable to the bankrupt laws, although he in fact remains in this country. Ex parte Franks,[3] 7 Bing. 762.

(p) An attorney who is a depository of money to be laid out in securities at his own discretion, and receives a compensation distinct from his fees for drawing the conveyance, is a scrivener. Hutchinson v. Gascoigne,[4] Holt's C. 507. To make a man a money scrivener, it must be an occupation to which he resorts in order to gain his living. He must receive other men's monies into his hands for custody. He must carry on the business of being trusted with other people's monies, to lay out for them as occasion offers. Per Gibbs, L. C. J.; Adams v. Malkin, 3 Camp. 534. Ex parte Paterson, 1 Rose, 400.

(q) One who keeps a private lodging house, and buys provisions for the lodgers, charging a profit, is within the Act. Smith v. Scott,[5] 9 Bing. 14.

(r) So an executor carrying on trade for the benefit of the testator's children. 3 Esp. C. 88; 10 Ves. 110.

(s) Where the party, by the terms of an agreement to purchase, was in the situation of the owner in fee of the soil, from which he made bricks for sale; it was held that he was not, within 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 2, "a person seeking his living by buying and selling, or seeking his living by the workmanship of goods and commodities," which latter clause seems intended to meet the case of persons who make for others. Heane v. Rogers,[6] 9 B. & C. 577; see Ex parte Burgess, 2 Gl. & J. 182.

(t) A farmer who buys and sells, for profit, horses not used in the farming business, to the amount of five or six in two years, was held to be a trader. 1 T. R. 573; 2 N R. 78. So if he buy more horses than he wants for use, with a view to a re-sale. Newland v. Bell,[7] Holt's C. 221. Where a farmer was in the habit of purchasing more sheep than required to stock his farm, and selling immediately the excess without shearing, or any pasturing on his farm; held to amount to a trading as a sheep-salesman within the bankrupt law. Newal, ex parte, 3 Deac. 339.

Where, prior to the 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, the bankrupt, a farmer and grazier, had bought cattle, not for the purpose of his farm, but of sale, and after the passing of the Act had in some few instances bought and sold cattle in like manner, it was held that the previous acts were admissible in evidence to explain the nature of the subsequent acts. Worth v. Budd,[8] 2 B. & Ad. 172.

(u) The following, it has been held, previous to the statute 6 G. 4, are not within the scope of the bankrupt laws:—An attorney who receives and places out the monies of his clients in the usual course of business, and charges in respect of the deeds or securities, and not as commission, on the monies in his hands (Hurd v. Brydges,[9] Holt's C. 654); a schoolmaster who buys books and shoes, and retails them to his pupils (Valentine v. Vaughan, Peake, 76); one who erects public baths on land granted to him for the purpose (Williams v. Stevens, 2 Camp. 300); who builds a theatre to be held in shares, for which he is to be paid according to measure and value, he being a shareholder (Ibid); who buys timber which he uses for building of houses which he sells (Clark v. Wilson, 5 Esp. C. 273); one who keeping hounds buys dead horses, and sells the skin and bones (Summersett v. James,[10] 3 B. & B. 2); or buying more of an article than he wants, sells the surplus (Newland v. Bell,[11] Holt's C. 222); a livery stable keeper who buys provender, and sells it to his customers and others (Cannon v. Denew,[12] 10 Bing. 292); a cowkeeper who sells cows unfit for use (Carter v. Drew, 1 Swanst. 64); a farmer who buys and sells articles incidental to the occupation of his farm, as where he buys pigs, feeds them on his stubbles, and resells them from time to time (Patten v. Brown[13], 7 Taunt. 409.) (But where a farmer bought horses, which were not fit for farming, and sold them again, avowing

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xix. 211. [2]Id. vii. 46. [3]Id. xx. 323. [4]Id. iii. 173. [5]Id. xxiii. 246. [6]Id. xvii. 449. [7]Id. iii. 81. [8]Id. xxii. 53. [9]Id. iii. 212. [10]Id. vii. 322. [11]Id. iii. 81. [12]Id. xxv. 139. [13]Id. ii. 157.

The intention to trade may be inferred from a single act of buying and selling.

*128 *The purchase of a single lot of timber, if made with intent to trade, will make a man a trader (y).

Proof of trading.

After proof that he has once traded, it is not necessary to prove continued acts of trading up to the very time of the bankruptcy; it is sufficient to prove acts from which it can be inferred that he intended to continue the trade (z). Thus the soliciting orders for business is evidence of the party's intention to continue the trade, although he has not actually transacted business for some time previous to the bankruptcy (a).

Where a fisherman has occasionally bought and sold fish, it is to be presumed that whilst he remains a fisherman he carries on business in the same way (b).

*129 *And where business had been carried on by the party in partnership with another, which partnership had been dissolved some years before, and no act of trading had been done for two or three years before the time when the petitioning creditor's debt accrued, but the concerns had not been ultimately wound up, and part of the stock still remained in the warehouse of the parties undisposed of, the jury found, under the direction of the Court, that the trading continued (c).

It is a question for the jury whether there has been an entire cessation of trading, or merely an interruption, with intent to resume it, should an opportunity offer (d). An admission of a party that he is in partnership his intention to become a horsedealer, the facts were held to be evidence of trading. Wright v. Bird, 1 Price, 20.) So although where brickmaking is carried on as a mode of enjoying the profits of a real estate, it will not make the party liable to the bankrupt law, whether he be a termor, or entitled in fee; it is otherwise where the business is carried on independently and substantively as a trade. (Sutton v. Weely, 7 East, 442. Ex parte Gullimore, 2 Rose, 424; Eden, 4.) The owner of land who uses the clay for making bricks, and buys chalk for the more convenient burning of the bricks, is not a trader. (Paul v. Dowling, M. & M. 263. Ex parte Burgess, 2 G. & J. 183. Heane v. Rogers,[1] 9 B. & C. 577.) An executor disposing of his testator's stock is not a trader, although he purchase other articles to make it marketable; secus, if he increase the stock, and continue to sell. (Ex parte Nutt, 1 Atk. 102. Ex parte Garland, 10 Ves. 120.) Where a testator directs the trade to be carried on after his death with part of his property, that part only will be liable in case of bankruptcy. (Thompson v. Andrews, 1 Mylne & K. 116.) Buying and selling land does not constitute a trading. (Port v. Turton, 2 Wils. 169.) The following persons also were liable:—A clerk in a custom-house, employed by merchants to receive money on debentures, with which he discounts bills on his own account (2 Esp. C. 555); a person who occasionally buys and sells hay, corn, and horses, with a view to profit, but without making them the means of seeking his living (Stewart v. Ball, 2 N. R. 78. Bolton v. Sowerby, 11 East, 274); a colonel of a regiment, who occasionally sells horses at Tattersall's (Ex parte Blackmore, 6 Ves. 3;) receivers of taxes (5 Geo. 2, c. 30, s. 40); graziers (ibid); drovers (ibid); farmers (ibid); contractors for victualling the navy (1 Vent. 270); innkeepers (2 Burr. 2064); one who draws bills for the purpose of improving his estate, and borrows accommodation bills, in lieu of which he gives his own (Hankey v. Jones, Cowp. 745.) Secus, if there be a continuation with a view to gain profit by the exchange, ibid. Richardson v. Bradshaw, 1 Atk. 128); a builder who buys timber for building houses, and sells the houses (5 Esp. C. 147. Secus, Dyer v. Hudson, cor. Abbott, L. C. J. sittings after T. T. 1825); holders of stock in different trading companies by various statutes (3 Esp. C. 88; 10 Ves. 110.)

(y) Holroyd v. Gwynne, 2 Taunt. 176. See also Newland v. Bell,[2] Holt's C. 221; Stewart v. Ball, 2 N. R. 79. Where it appeared that a party had ordered goods for the purpose, as he stated, of sending them abroad, saying, that he would give other goods in exchange for them; Abbott, C. J., on the objection being taken that there was no evidence of selling, said, "I cannot say that if a man buys, and represents himself as a dealer, and offers goods in exchange, he does not buy to sell again; at least I must leave it to the jury, I cannot nonsuit upon it." The quantum of trading is immaterial. Newland v. Bell, Holt's C. 221. Cale v. Halfknight,[3] 3 Starkie's C. 56. Patmore v. Vaughan, 1 T. R. 572.

(z) 5 Esp. C. 235.

(a) Wharam v. Routledge, 5 Esp. C. 235. Whether a trader who has ceased to buy, but who is selling off his stock, is liable to a commission depends upon the existence of intention to exercise or resume the trading, and this is a question for the jury. Ex parte Paterson, 1 Rose, 402.

(b) Heanny v. Birch, 3 Camp. 233. Paul v. Dowling, M. & M. 268.

(c) The Executors of Backhouse v. Turleton, cor. Ld. Ellenborough, Guildhall, on an issue from the Lord Chancellor to try the fact.

(d) Per Ld. Eldon, Ex parte Patterson, 1 Rose, 402. Heanny v. Birch, 1 Rose, 356.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xvii. 449. [2]Id. iii. 81. [3]Id. xiv. 162.

with a trader, is evidence of his being a trader, without proof of actual trading (e). Although the trader be described as a money-scrivener, and the general words dealer and chapman, be omitted, it is sufficient, semble, to prove any species of trading (f).

Any species of trading is admissible in evidence to satisfy the general averment that the bankrupt got his living by buying and selling (g).

Thirdly. The several acts which constitute bankruptcy are matter of positive statutory definition; and whether a particular act, when proved, falls within the definition, is a question of law; but whether the act itself has been committed, and particularly whether it has been done with that intention which in the particular instance is essential to bankruptcy, is usually pure matter of fact for the consideration of the jury. Act of bankruptcy.

By the stat. several of the acts of bankruptcy there specified (h) must be (e) Parker v. Barker,[1] 1 B. & B. 9. But such declarations are not generally evidence in actions by assignees against third persons. Bromley v. King, R. & M. 228. Declarations, however, made at the time of purchasing goods are evidence to show the intention of the trader as to the mode in which he intended to dispose of them. Gale v. Halfknight,[2] 3 Starkie's C. 56.

(f) Smith v. Sandilands, Gloster Summ. Ass. 1819, 1 Gow; and per Wood, B., Winch. Sp. Ass. 1820, Mann. Ind. 371. Hale v. Small,[3] 2 B. & B. 25.

(g) Hale v. Small, 2 B. & B. 25. The bankrupts being described as bankers, being traders according to the statute, it was held that the word bankers might be considered merely as a designatio personarum. Bernasconi v. Farebrother,[4] 10 B. & C. 549.

(h) The stat. 6 G. 4, c. 15, s. 3, enacts, that if any such trader shall depart this realm, or being out of this realm shall remain abroad, or depart from his dwelling-house; or otherwise absent himself, or begin to keep his house, or suffer himself to be arrested for any debt not due, or yield himself to prison, or suffer himself to be outlawed, or procure himself to be arrested, or his goods, money or chattels to be attached, sequestered or taken in execution, or make or cause to be made, either within this realm or elsewhere, any fraudulent grant or conveyance of any of his lands, tenements, goods or chattels, or make or cause to be made any fraudulent surrender of any of his copyhold lands or tenements, or make or cause to be made any fraudulent gift, delivery, or transfer of any of his goods or chattels, every such trader doing, suffering, procuring, executing, permitting, making, or causing to be made any of the acts, deeds, or matters aforesaid, with intent to defeat or delay his creditors, shall be deemed to have thereby committed an act of bankruptcy.

The 4th sect. enacts, that where any such trader shall execute any conveyance or assignment by deed to a trustee or trustees, of all his estate and effects for the benefit of all the creditors of such trader, the execution of such deed shall not be deemed an act of bankruptcy, unless a commission issue against such trader within six calendar months from the execution thereof by such trader: provided that such deed shall be executed by every such trustee within fifteen days after the execution thereof by the said trader, and that the execution by such trader and by every such trustee be attested by an attorney or solicitor, and that notice be given within two months after the execution thereof by such trader, in case such trader reside in London, or within 40 miles thereof, in the London Gazette, and also in two London daily newspapers; and in case such trader does not reside within 40 miles of London, then in the London Gazette, and also in one London daily newspaper, and one provincial newspaper published near to such trader's residence; and such notice shall contain the date and execution of such deed, and the name and place of abode respectively of every such trustee, and of such attorney or solicitor.

Previous to this statute it was held that an assignment for the benefit of creditors was not an act of bankruptcy, if all (Eckhardt v. Wilson, 8 T. R. 140) or the generality assented. Inglis v. Grant, 5 T. R. 530.

The 5th sect. enacts, that if any such trader, having been arrested or committed to prison for debt, or on any attachment for nonpayment of money, shall, upon such or any other arrest or commitment for debt or nonpayment of money, or upon any detention for debt, lie in prison for 21 days, or having been arrested or committed to prison for any other cause, shall lie in prison for 21 days after any detainer for debt lodged against him and not discharged, every such trader shall be thereby deemed to have committed an act of bankruptcy; or if any such trader, having been arrested, committed or detained for debt, shall escape out of prison or custody, every such trader shall be deemed to have thereby committed an act of bankruptcy from the time of such arrest, commitment, or detention: provided, that if any such trader shall be in prison at the time of the commencement of this Act, such trader shall not be deemed to have committed an act of bankruptcy by lying in prison, until he shall have lain in prison for the period of two months.

By the 6th sect. a declaration of insolvency filed by the trader, and afterwards advertised in the London Gazette (according to the provisions of the statute), shall be an act of bankruptcy from the time of the advertisement; but no commission shall issue unless it be sued out within two calendar months from the time of insertion of such advertisement, and unless the advertisement be inserted within eight days after the filing of the declaration with the secretary of bankrupts; and no docket shall be struck on such act of bankruptcy before the expiration of four days next after the insertion of such advertisement, where the commission is to be executed in London, or before the expiration of eight days where it is to be executed in the country; and the Gazette containing such declaration shall be evidence of such declaration having been filed.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. v. 4. [2]Id. xiv. 162. [3]Id. vi. 9. [4]Id. xxi. 128.

*done with intent to defeat or delay creditors. Under these words it is sufficient to prove an intention to defeat or delay creditors, without proof of *131 *any actual delay of a creditor (i). And it is not sufficient to prove delay, if the intention be wanting (k).

Intention. It seems to have been held under the stat. 21 J. 1, c. 15, s. 2, that the departing the realm would constitute an act of bankruptcy, provided it was proved that a creditor was in consequence delayed, independently of any proof of an intention on the part of the bankrupt to do so; that is, the latter branch of the clause was considered to be entirely independent of the intent mentioned in the former part: the effect was to render the mere delaying of the creditor, provided it was the consequence of one of the acts specified, an act of bankruptcy. As in Woodier's Case, who departed the realm because he had killed his wife (l); and in that of Raikes v. Pereau (m), where the primary reason for the bankrupt's going abroad was, that a young woman had refused to live with him as his mistress unless he took her abroad. In both these cases creditors were delayed, and for that reason the question of intention was considered to be immaterial.

In the subsequent case of Robertson v. Liddell (n), this stat. (21 J. 1) was much discussed, and it was held that the words were to be read, "to the intent his creditors shall, or that thereby they may be defeated;" making the intent to govern the whole clause. Still those cases might probably have been decided as they were, consistently with the latter construction: since, although the primary object of the bankrupt in going abroad might not be to delay his creditors, yet if the delaying his creditors

The 7th sect. enacts, that an adjudication founded on such an act of bankruptcy shall be valid, although concerted between the trader and any other person.

By the 8th sect., if any such trader shall, after a docket struck against him, pay to the person or persons who struck the same, or any of them, money, or give or deliver to any such person any satisfaction or security for his debt, or any part thereof, whereby such person may receive more in the pound in respect of his debts than the other creditors, such payment, gift, delivery, satisfaction or security shall be an act of bankruptcy; and if any commission shall have issued upon the docket so struck as aforesaid, the Lord Chancellor may either declare such commission to be valid, and direct the same to be proceeded in, or may order it to be superseded, and a new commission may issue, and such commission may be supported either by proof of such last-mentioned or of any other act of bankruptcy; and every person so receiving such money, gift, delivery, satisfaction, or security as aforesaid, shall forfeit his whole debt.

By sect. 10, if a trader, having privilege of parliament, shall not, within one calendar month after personal service of a copy of a summons sued out by his creditor, pay, secure or compound for such debt to the satisfaction of such creditor, or enter into a bond in such sum, and with two sufficient sureties, as any Judge of the court out of which the summons issued shall approve of, to pay such sum as shall be recovered, together with costs, and within one calendar month next after personal service of such summons cause an appearance to be entered to such action in the proper court, every such trader shall be deemed a bankrupt from the time of the service of such summons.

By sect. 11, if such trader, having privilege, &c. neglect, after personal service of the order, to pay money ordered to be paid by any Court of Equity, on a peremptory day fixed by that Court for such payment, he shall be deemed to have committed an act of bankruptcy from that day. An act of bankruptcy was committed on the 6th of March, prior to 5 Geo. 4, c. 98, coming into force, by which all former Bankrupt Acts were repealed, but which was itself repealed by the 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, after which the commission issued; held, that it was to be considered as if the 5 Geo. 4 had never existed, and that the commission was well supported by that act of bankruptcy. Phillips v. Hopwood,[1] 10 B. & C. 39.

(i) It was so held under the now repealed stat. 1 J. 1, c. 15, s. 9, where the words were "to the intent or whereby creditors may be defeated or delayed." Robertson v. Liddell, 9 East, 487, in which the case of Fowler v. Padgett, 7 T. R. 509, was overruled, where it had been held that the word or in the statute meant and. See Hammond v. Hicks, 5 Esp. 139; 1 Taunt. 273, 370; 3 Smith, 349. Wilson v. Norman, 1 Esp. C. 334; Holroyd v. Gwynn, 2 Taunt. 176; Ramsbottom v. Lewis, 1 Camp. 279; Holroyd v. Whitehead, 3 Camp. 530; infra, 132, 133; [14 Ves. 80.]

(k) Windham v. Paterson,[2] 1 Starkie's C. 145. Warner v. Barber,[3] Holt's C. 175.

(l) B. N. P. 39.

(m) Co. B. L. 5th edit. 73; and see Vernon v. Hankey, Co. B. L., where Buller, J. approved of the decision in Woodier's Case, and said that it had always been considered and acted upon as good law.

(n) 9 East, 487. Holroyd v. Gwynn, 2 Taunt. 176.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxi. 25. [2]Id. ii. 331. [3]Id. iii. 66.

was the immediate and necessary consequence of his act, it might be considered as evidence of such an intention (o). And it seems to be probable that under the present statute (6 Geo. 4, c. 16), which makes the intention to delay essential to the act of bankruptcy, it would be held that where the delaying of creditors was the natural, immediate and necessary consequence of the trader's act, the very act itself would supply strong evidence of intention; for in law as well as morals, every one must be considered to contemplate the natural and immediate consequence of his act (p).

Declarations.

In order to prove the intention of the bankrupt to delay a creditor, declarations made by him, which were cotemporary with the act itself, are admissible. Accordingly, what the party said on requesting his servant or clerk to deny him to creditors (q), or when he departed from his dwelling-house, or even upon his return home again, is evidence to show with what intention he secluded or withdrew himself from his creditors (r).

*132

Intent to delay creditors.

*The bankrupt was arrested and taken twelve miles from home on the 5th, was discharged at one o'clock in the afternoon of the 6th, and returned home at ten o'clock on the night of the 7th; it was held, that what he said to a witness (who inquired where he had been), as to the reason of his absence, was admissible, in explanation of his act (s). So what the bankrupt said on removing his books is evidence (t). Where, in trespass for taking goods, the question was as to the bankruptcy of the plaintiff, it was held that letters found in his possession after the bankruptcy, with post-marks of a date previous thereto, must be taken to show that he received them before, and were evidence to show, in explanation of his conduct, that he had received intimation of the facts mentioned in the letters having taken place, although they were not evidence that the facts stated really did so happen (u). But declarations or admissions by the bankrupt, which are subsequent to the act are not admissible (x).

Where the proceedings were read in evidence (under the stat. 49 G. 3, c. 121), a deposition stated that the bankrupt had absented himself, and that he had admitted that he had absented himself for the purpose of avoiding his creditors, but did not specify the time of such admission, and (o) See the observations of Lawrence, J. in Fowler v. Padgett, 7 T. R. 516.

(p) See tit. INTENTION—MALICE; and see the observations of Abbot, L. C. J. in Pulling v. Tucker,[1] 4 B. & A. 385. Ramsbottom v. Lewis, 1 Camp. 280. Where the bankrupt, on going abroad, left with his clerk a power to act, but without making any provision for bills becoming due, and the inevitable consequences must be to delay his creditors, it was held to be an act of bankruptcy. Kilner, ex parte, 3 Mont. & Ayr. 722.

(q) Jamieson v. Eamer, 1 Esp. C. 381.

(r) Bateman v. Bailey, 5 T. R. 512; B. N. P. 41. Ambrose v. Clendon, Ca. T. H. 267; 4 Esp. C. 233. Wilson v. Norman, 1 Esp. C. 334. Robertson v. Liddell, 9 East, 487. Holroyd v. Gwynne, 2 Taunt. 176. Declarations made by the bankrupt at the time of his return, that he had quitted to avoid the service of a writ against him, are admissible and sufficient evidence of an act of bankruptcy, without further proof of the existence of the writ or of the debt, or of there being any creditor. Newman v. Stretch,[2] 1 M. & M. 338. A creditor called at the house of the bankrupt by appointment for payment of his debt, and saw the bankrupt, who shortly after left the room, and did not return; the wife afterwards informed the creditor he was gone out; it is for the jury to say, whether he left his house to avoid or delay a creditor, and the wife's answer is admissible as part of the res gestæ. Charrington v. Brown,[3] 11 More, 341. The admissibility of such declarations cannot be decided by any positive rule as to time, but must depend on the nature and strength of their connection with the disputed act. Where the question was, whether giving a security by the trader to G. on the 25th of October, amounted to an act of bankruptcy, it was held that a conversation which the trader had with L., to whom he had on the 25th of October promised to give a security on the following day, and in which he falsely professed a total ignorance of the security, was admissible evidence to show the real nature of the transaction. Ridley v. Gyde,[4] 9 Bing. 349. See Rawson v. Haigh,[5] 2 Bing. 99.

(s) Bateman v. Bailey, 5 T. R. 512.

(t) Ambrose v Clendon, Ca. T. H. 267.

(u) Cotton v. James, 1 M. & M. 276, and 3 C. & P. 505.

(x) Robson v. Kemp, 4 Esp. C. 233.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. vi. 455. [2]Id. xxii. 330. [3]Id. xxii. 410. [4]Id. xxiii. 304. [5]Id. ix. 335.

it was held that there was not even primâ facie evidence to prove the act of bankruptcy (y).

Departing the realm. Intention.

Where the act to be proved, is the departing the realm with intent to delay creditors, the intention of the party is a question of fact for the determination of the jury; to be collected either from the contemporary declarations of the trader, or to be presumed from circumstances, considering the mode and reason of the departure, the state of his affairs at the time, and other circumstances likely to operate as motives. The case is subject to the general presumption of law, that a man contemplates that result which is the natural and obvious consequence of his act, although he may have had another primary and immediate object in view (z). A letter written by the trader during his absence is evidence to explain its nature (a); for the departing the realm is a continuing act (b).

*133 *If the delay of creditors be the necessary consequence of the departure, the intention to delay may be inferred, although the party had another and more immediate object in departing; as on account of domestic dissensions (c), to avoid a prosecution for felony (d), or in order to live with a mistress (e); and so in other cases where the purpose of departure is aliene from that of trade, for the party must be supposed to contemplate and intend that which is the immediate and necessary consequence of his act (f).

But it is not enough to show that the party left England and proceeded to Ireland, where he also carried on trade, without leaving funds behind him for the payment of his debts, for non constat that he did not go for the very purpose of providing funds; and this case differs essentially from that of Holroyd v. Whitehead, since there the intention of the departure was aliene from that of trade (g).

If a subject, domiciled in Ireland, leave his family there and come to England to settle his affairs, and return to Ireland abruptly to avoid an arrest, he commits an act of bankruptcy (h).

Departure from the dwelling-house.

To prove an act of bankruptcy by a departure from the dwelling-house, the act of departing must be proved; and secondly, the intent to delay creditors, &c. (i); and on the other hand, any facts are admissible which tend to disprove the intention, and to show that the trader departed without (y) Marsh. v. Meager,[1] 1 Starkie's C. 353.

(z) Vide supra, 131.

(a) Windham v. Paterson,[2] 1 Starkie's C. 146.

(b) Rawson v. Haigh,[3] 2 Bing. 99. Lees v. Marton, 2 Mo. & R. 211. Maylin v. Eyloe, 2 Str. 809.

(c) Holroyd v. Whitehead, 3 Camp. 530.

(d) Woodier's Case, B. N. P. 39.

(e) Raikes v. Pereau, Co. B. L. 73.

(f) See Mr. J. Lawrence's observations in Fowler v. Padgett, 7 T. R. 516. In the case of Holroyd v. Whitehead, (3 Camp. 530, subsequently approved of by Lord Ellenborough, Windham v. Paterson,[2] 1 Starkie's C. 146,) the bankrupt left his dwelling-house on account of domestic dissensions with his wife, and left a letter stating that there would be 20*s*. in the pound for creditors, but that, be it less or more, he had done with trade, desiring that no one should be allowed to take goods out of the warehouse in preference, and giving no directions for the continuance of his business; during his absence a creditor called for money, who went away unsatisfied. And it was left to the jury, whether, under the circumstances, the party had not left his house with an intention to delay his creditors, and whether a creditor had not been delayed; and the jury found both these facts. See also Ramsbottom v. Lewis, 1 Camp. 279.

(g) Windham v. Paterson,[2] 1 Starkie's C. 144. See Warner v. Barber,[3] Holt's C. 175.

(h) Williams v. Nunn, 1 Camp. 152, cor. Chambre, J. 1 Taunt. 270; where it is stated that the family resided in England, and the Court adverted to that circumstance.

(i) See the cases above cited, p. 132–3; also Wilson v. Norman, 1 Esp. C. 334; Robertson v. Liddell, 9 East, 487. As has already been seen, proof of actual delay is unnecessary, although the contrary was once held. Barnard v. Vaughan, 8 T. R. 149. Where the trader departed under the false notion that the officer who had called had a writ for him, it was held to be an act of bankruptcy. See also Ex parte, Bamford, 15 Ves. 449. Aldridge v. Ireland, 1 Taunt. 273; Holroyd v. Whitehead, 3 Camp. 530; Williams v. Nunn, 1 Taunt. 273; Hammond v. Hickes, 5 Esp. C. 139. Under the words of the stat. 21 J. 1, "Whereby the creditors may be defeated or delayed for the recovery of their just and true debts," it was held, that an absconding to avoid an attachment for the non-delivery of goods pursuant to an award, being a mere duty and not a debt, was not within the statute. Lingwood v. Eade, 1 Atk. 196.

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxii. 305. [2] Id. ii. 423. [3] Id. ii. 331. [4] Id. iii. 66.

any intention to delay his creditors (k). The intention of the trader in a doubtful case, is one of fact for the jury (l).

*What the trader said on quitting his dwelling house is admissible evi- *134 dence to show his intent (m).

Such declaration to be admissible must be made at the time of the act, or so near to it as to form part of the same transaction, either whilst the trader is absenting himself or immediately after his return (n).

A trader who has no settled house or counting-house, but takes up his residence at a public-house in the place to which his business carries him, may commit an act of bankruptcy by a departure from that house (o).

A trader on absenting himself stated that writs were out against him; it was held to be unnecessary to prove that fact (p), for the intention is the same, whether the assertion was true or false.

Otherwise absent himself.—It is sufficient to prove an absenting of himself by the trader from his usual place of business; as from a counting-house, where he has a dwelling-house in the country, with intent to delay his creditors (q); and in general, any absence from his dwelling-house, for however short a period, is sufficient. As where a trader, on being called upon by several creditors for money, leaves his house under pretence of getting money for them, and spends the evening at a billiard-table, or at a tavern (r). So where a trader apprehending an arrest concealed himself in a back room in another person's house, until a sheriff's officer, who he Absenting himself.

(k) See Lord Mansfield's observations in Worseley v. Demattos, 1 Burr. 467. A., a publican, leaves his dwelling-house at seven in the morning, intending to complete a sale of his stock in the public-house, and having received the money, to abscond to Ireland; he completes the contract, and receives the purchase-money at another house in Manchester, and immediately proceeds to Ireland without returning to his house. Lord Abinger held, that if the purchase and payment of the money was bonâ fide, it was no act of bankruptcy, from the original departure to affect the subsequent sale the same morning. Bardsley v. Harrison, Liverpool Summer Assizes, 1835.

(l) Deffle v. Desanges,[1] 8 Taunt. 671; Aldridge v. Ireland, cited, 1 Taunt. 273.

(m) See the general principle, Vol. I. p. 351, Ambrose v. Clendon, C. T. H. 267.

(n) A deposition, stating an admission by the trader, of an absenting to avoid creditors, but not stating the time of such admission, is not receivable. Marsh v. Meager,[2] 1 Starkie's C. 353. The authorities somewhat differ as to the admitting of declarations made after a return. See the cases of Bateman v. Bayley, 5 T. R. 512, where such evidence was held to be admissible; and Newman v. Stretch,[3] M. & M. 338, where such evidence was admitted by Parke, B.; but the correct rule seems to have been laid down by that learned Judge in Lees v. Marton, 1 Mo. & R. 211, that such a declaration is inadmissible, unless it be made by the trader whilst he is absenting himself, or immediately after his return. See further, 2 Evans's Pothier, 285; Maylin v. Eyloe, 2 Str. 809; Rawson v. Haigh,[4] 2 Bing. 104; Ridley v. Gyde,[5] 9 Bing. 349; Ex parte, Palmer, 1 D. & C. 373; Smallcombe v. Bruges, M'Cleland, 45. In the Case of Smith v. Cramer,[6] 1 Bing. N. C. 585, the trader having absented himself on the 16th of February, two letters written by him on the 16th of January, in which he asked for time upon two bills of exchange, were admitted to show the motives of his absence. Here, however, the letters showed that the trader was in difficulties not long before his departure, and they were admissible to prove that fact, as acts done in the management of his affairs, and therefore tending to show the state of those affairs.

(o) Holroyd v. Gwynne, 2 Taunt. 176. See Com. Dig. Bankrupt [C.] 1.

(p) Wilson v. Norman, 1 Esp. C. 334. See Robertson v. Liddell, 9 East, 487; Holroyd v. Gwynne, 2 Taunt. 176; M. & M. 338.

(q) Judine v. Da Cossen, 1 N. R. 234, where the trader quitted his counting-house in town, taking his books with him, without the animus revertendi, and went to his dwelling-house in the country, where he slept a few nights, and then finally quitted it. If one who has no constant dwelling absent himself from his usual place of abode, with intent, &c. it is an act of bankruptcy. Com. Dig. Bankrupt, [C.] 1. The bankrupt, on being applied to for a debt, said, he could not pay then, but promised to meet the creditor at an inn in the evening, but failed to do so; it is for the jury to say, whether he broke such appointment with any other than the intent to delay the creditor with whom he made it. Widger v. Browning,[7] 9 D. & R. 306. The absenting, to constitute an act of bankruptcy, must be from a place of business where, from the ordinary course of his life and business, he would be expected to be present. Bernasconi v. Fairbrother,[8] 10 B. & C. 549.

(r) Bigg v. Spooner, 2 Esp. C. 651.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. iv. 244. [2]Id. ii. 423. [3]Id. xxii. 330. [4]Id. ix. 335. [5]Id. xxiii. 304. [6]Id. xxvii. 498. [7]Id. xxii. 394. [8]Id. xxi. 128.

was informed was going towards his house, had left the street (s), and then returned home. So where being arrested he fled from the officer to the house of another person (t).

*135 *So the riding out of town in order to avoid a writ, and get the term of the plaintiff (u), is an act of bankruptcy. So where a debtor in the habit of frequenting the Royal Exchange appointed a creditor to meet him there, and directed a friend, in case the creditor inquired for him, to say that he was not there (x).

Where one of three bankers who resided at the place where the business was carried on, the other two living at a distance, shut up the house and stopped payment, it was held that this was not evidence of a joint bankruptcy by the three (y).

It is not essential to prove that any creditor was actually delayed (z).

Intention. The question of intention in this, as in other cases, is usually for the jury; and if evidence be offered in explanation of the absence, and in order to rebut the presumption to delay creditors, as that he did it to avoid irritation and harsh language, the case is for their consideration (a). If a person who has no settled dwelling absent himself from his usual abode with intent to delay creditors, it is an act of bankruptcy (b).

Beginning to keep house. Beginning to keep house.—This act of bankruptcy must be evidenced by some act by which the party secludes himself (c) from the solicitation of his creditors, with the intention of doing so. The most usual proof consists of an actual denial to a creditor, by a clerk or servant authorized to (s) Vincent v. Prater, 4 Taunt. 603. Chenoweth v. Hay, 1 M. & S. 676. See also, Bayly v. Schofield, 1 M. & S. 338.

(t) Bayly v. Schofield, 1 M. & S. 338; and see Wilson v. Norman, 1 Esp. C. 334. So where one of two partners lived in London, the other in Manchester, and the London partner having left his house with intent to delay his creditors, and having been a few days at Manchester, both of them left their country house there to avoid an arrest, carrying with them their books of accounts. Spencer v. Billing, 3 Camp. 312. Where a trader abstained from going to a place to make inquiry as to an execution against him, to which he would have gone but for fear of an arrest, it was held to be an absenting himself. Robson v. Rolls,[1] 9 Bing. 648.

(u) Maylin v. Eyloe, Stra. 809. Qu. whether if a trader leave the realm without any intention to delay his creditors, but whilst absent he deliberately forms that intention, and announces it, he commits an act of bankruptcy. See Windham v. Paterson,[2] 1 Starkie's C. 144; and 1 Christian's B. L. 178.

(x) Gimmingham v. Laing,[3] 6 Taunt. 532. Gibbs, C. J., in that case intimated that the words "otherwise absenting himself," meant from creditors, and not from any particular place. And see Robson v. Rolls, 9 Bing. 648; and Robinson v. Carrington, 1 Mont. & A. 12, where the Master of the Rolls held that a mere failure to keep an appointment with a creditor was a sufficient absenting. But in Bernasconi v. Fairbrother,[4] 10 B. & C. 556, the Court held that an absenting (according to the decisions) was to be confined to an absenting himself from his own particular place of business at which a man might be expected to be; or from one or more particular creditors at some other place; and per Parke, B., in Lees v. Marton, 1 M. & R. 212; no case has gone the length of deciding, that where the appointment is to meet the creditor at his (the creditor's) place of residence, and the debtor breaks that appointment, such conduct amounts to an act of bankruptcy; and where a trader, who, on being arrested, had obtained his liberty on a promise to attend and execute a bail bond, but did not attend, it was held to be no act of bankruptcy. Schooling v. Lee,[5] 3 Starkie's C. 149; and in the case of Tucker v. Jones,[6] 2 Bing. 2, the Court of Common Pleas held that the failure to keep an appointment with a creditor was not an absenting within the statute. Where the trader, upon the advice of the attorney of the petitioning creditor, went into his office in order to avoid a public arrest at the suit of the petitioning creditor, it was held to be no act of bankruptcy. Mills v. Elton, 3 Price, 142.

(y) Mills v. Bennet, 2 M. & S. 566.

(z) Hammond v. Hickes, 5 Esp. C. 139. Robertson v. Liddell, 9 East, 487. Supra, 130.

(a) Vincent v. Prater, 4 Taunt. 603. A trader left at his house a message for a creditor, who had in his absence called for a debt, that he could spare no money and would not pay him that day, and would go out of the way and not return home till dinner-time; and it was held that it was for the jury to consider whether he absented himself in order to delay the creditor, and that they were warranted in finding that he did not.

(b) Com. Dig. BANKRUPT, [C.] 1.

(c) It is sufficient if the trader secrete himself in the house of a friend where he is lodging, and where persons are in the habit of calling upon him. Curteis v. Willis, 1 R. & M. 58.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxiii. 409. [2]Id. ii. 331. [3]Id. i. 476. [4]Id. xxi. 128. [5]Id. xiv. 173. [6]Id. ix. 291.

do so by *the trader, who is in the house. But although this is the usual medium of proof, it is not the only one; for if a trader seclude himself in a private part of the house, in order to avoid his creditors, who are by this means deprived of access to him, he begins to keep house, and commits an act of bankruptcy (d). As where a trader removes from a part of the house where his creditors usually have free access to him, to a more retired part of it, by means of which his creditors are prevented from importuning him (e).

Under the stat. 21 J. 1, c. 15, where the evidence of the act of bankruptcy consisted in the denial to a creditor by order of the trader (f), it was necessary to prove an actual denial (g) to a creditor (h); and it was held to be insufficient to prove a denial to an agent of the creditor (i), without proof that the trader knew him to be such agent, having a pressing demand against the trader (k); or that the trader gave orders to be denied to the creditor; but if he gave a general order to be denied to all, and was denied to a creditor, it was sufficient, although he wished to avoid a different creditor (l). Proof that the trader was in distressed circumstances, and that he was by his own order denied to several persons, some of whom called more than once, was held to be evidence to go to a jury of a denial to a creditor (m). *But under the late statute the actual delay- *137

Denial.

(d) 1 Camp. 271; Com Dig. Bankrupt, [C.] 1. Dickinson v. Foord, Barnes, 160; Robertson v. Liddell, 9 East, 487.

(e) Dudley v. Vaughan, 1 Camp. 271. See also Chenoweth v. Hay, 1 M. & S. 677; 1 Taunt. 270, 479. R. v. Bebb, cited 1 M. & S. 354. Key v. Shaw,[1] 8 Bing. 321. Partners reside in the place in which they carry on business as bankers, and close the windows and shutters of the bank; this is a beginning to keep house. Cumming v. Bayley, 6 Bing. 363. But is no act of bankruptcy by a partner who does not reside there. Mills v. Bennett, 2 M. & S. 556. Hawkins v. Whitten,[2] 10 B. & C. 217. Ex parte Manor, 19 Ves. 543. An order to be denied to creditors, is but evidence of an intention to delay. Lazarus v. Waithman,[3] 5 Moore, 513. A general order to deny with that intent, or a general order to admit no one whom the servants did not know, for fear of a second arrest, followed up by their admitting no person, without its being ascertained from the window who he was, is sufficient. Harvey v. Ramsbottom,[4] 1 B. & C. 55. Or a general order to deny, and a beginning to keep house, is sufficient. Lloyd v. Heathcote,[5] 2 B. & B. 388. Note, in the latter case there was a denial to the collector of church and highway-rates. See Gimmingham v. Laing,[6] 6 Taunt. 532; and see Bayley v. Schofield, 1 M. & S. 338.

(f) Dudley v. Vaughan, 1 Camp. 271. Ex parte Foster, 17 Ves. 416.

(g) Garret v. Moule, 5 T. R. 575. Hawker v. Saunders, Co. B. L. 79. Dudley v. Vaughan, 1 Camp. 271.

(h) Per Lee, C. J., B. N. P. 40. A denial to a tax-gatherer is sufficient. Jeffs v. Smith, 2 Taunt. 401.

(i) B. N. P. 39, 40; 1 Montague, 87; Barrow v. Foster, Green, 44. A denial to the clerk of a holder of a bill is sufficient. 2 T. R. 59.

(k) 7 Vin. Abr. 61, pl. 14, Ex parte Levi; but a denial to the holder of a bill on the morning of the day when it becomes due is sufficient. Colkett v. Freeman, 2 T. R. 59.

(l) Mucklow v. May, 1 Taunt. 479; and see Colkett v. Freeman, 2 T. R. 59.

(m) Jamieson v. Eamer, 1 Esp. 381. But in the case of Garret v. Moule, (5 T. R. 595), the trader being in expectation that several bills would be presented to him for payment, was advised by his friends to keep out of the way of his creditors, and he accordingly gave orders to his clerk to be denied to every person; he retired up stairs with his account books, where he remained several days, and was denied to several persons, but it did not appear that they were creditors. A creditor on two bills of exchange to the amount of 100*l.* called, but did not ask for the bankrupt, understanding he was from home. The Court of K. B. held, that these circumstances did not constitute an act of bankruptcy; and Ld. Kenyon observed, that the question on trials of that kind had always been asked, whether or not the debtor was denied the creditor, which showed in what light the statute was considered. See also Hawkes v. Saunders, Co. B L. 79; B. N. P. 40. Notwithstanding this authority, it is probable that such a case would have met a different decision, even before the late statute. For according to the principle established in Robertson v. Liddell, (9 East, 487,) it is not material whether the intention was carried into effect by an actual delay of any creditor. A denial is the mere medium of proof. A trader may have no servant or agent to deny him; and then this medium of proof becomes inapplicable. The fact of intention is perfectly independent of any actual delay. The beginning to keep house must no doubt be manifested by some overt act of seclusion on the part of the trader, and although he does not at all remove from the room or part of the house which he usually occupies, a denial to a creditor, through a servant, is as much an act of seclusion as if he had barred or nailed up the door; and a denial in such case seems to be almost the only act by which the beginning to keep house can be manifested; but where the trader actually removes from a more public part of his house, which he usually occupies, to a more private one, and there secludes himself with the intention to delay his creditors, the act ing of a creditor seems to be immaterial, except as a mean of proving the intent to delay, provided he be actually denied or conceal himself, or do some other act which evidences the beginning to keep house. A mere direction to be denied, without more, is insufficient (n). But if a trader in his own house hear himself denied to a creditor, and, with intent to delay his creditors, does not come forward, it is an act of bankruptcy, although he gave no direction to be denied (o).

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps, xxi. 305. [2]Id. xxi. 60. [3]Id. xvi. 401. [4]Id. viii. 25. [5]Id. vi. 166. [6]Id. i. 476.

A concerted denial is not evidence of bankruptcy, except as against one who was privy to the concert (p).

Intention. The presumption of an intention to delay a creditor, arising from denial, may be rebutted by any evidence which proves the denial to have proceeded from a different motive. As by evidence that the trader was sick at the time, or engaged in company, or that it was at the house where he does not transact business, and that he referred the creditor to his shop (q). So a refusal to see a creditor because it was the trader's dinner hour, is not an act of bankruptcy (r), or on a Sunday (s). As the bankruptcy consists in the act of seclusion by the trader with intent to delay his creditors, the intention with which the creditors call is immaterial (t).

Yield himself to prison. If a person upon being arrested choose rather (u) to go to prison than pay the debt, although he has money sufficient, declaring that he does it in order to force his creditors to come to a composition, this is evidence of an act of bankruptcy, under the clause, or yield himself to prison (x).

*138 Fraudulent conveyance. *In order to prove an act of bankruptcy under the words of the late statute, "make or cause to be made any fraudulent grant, or conveyance of any of his lands, tenements, goods or chattels, or any fraudulent surrender of his copyhold, &c., or make any fraudulent gift, delivery (y), or transfer (z) of bankruptcy seems to be as complete without proof of actual delay, as in the case of a departure from the dwelling-house or realm with that intent; and it was so held in the case of Dickenson v. Foord, Barnes, 160. And see Bayly v. Schofield, 1 M. & S. 338; Bignold v. Waterhouse, Ibid. 255; Dudley v. Vaughan, 1 Camp. 271;[1] Harvey v. Ramsbottom, 1 B. & C. 55; Lloyd v. Heathcote,[2] 2 B. & B. 388; Lazarus v. Waithman,[3] 5 Moore, 313. Where the fact to be established was a mere denial of the defendant being at home when the officers came to his house, it was held, that it being made by the wife did not prevent its being received, the answer being part of the res gestæ. Att.-gen. v. Goode, 1 M. & Y. 286.

(n) Fisher v. Boucher, 10 B. & B. 705. See Lloyd v. Heathcote,[2] 2 B. & B. 388.

(o) Smith v. Moon,[4] M. & M. 458.

(p) B. N. P. 39, 40. Cawley v. Hopkins, Co. B. L. 81. And see Lord Mansfield's observations in Hooper v. Smith, 1 Bl. R. 442, and Bamford v. Baron, 2 T. R. 595, n. In an action by assignees for money had and received in respect of parcels of bills and cash handed over by the bankrupts in contemplation of bankruptcy, and by way of undue preference, it is no objection to the act of bankruptcy (the execution of a conveyance of all their effects to trustees for the benefit of their creditors) that it was made for the very purpose. Simpson v. Symes, 6 M. & S. 205. Note, that the trustees were not privy to the transfer.

(q) Per Ld. Mansfield, Round v. Hope, Co. B. L. 94, 5th edit. Field v. Bellamy, B. N. P. 39. But where the trader being ill, directed his servant to say that he was not at home, it was held that it was a question for the jury whether it was an act of bankruptcy. Lazarus v. Waithman,[3] 5 Moore, 313.

(r) Smith v. Currie, 3 Camp. 349; B. N. P. 39. And see Shew v. Thompson, Holt's C. 159, where the direction was to deny the trader to any one who called whilst he was at dinner or engaged in business. See also Loyd v. Heathcote,[2] 2. B & B. 392.

(s) Ex parte Preston, 2 V. & B. 312.

(t) Ex parte White, 3 V. & B. 129.

(u) This must be for debt in order to constitute an act of bankruptcy. Ex parte Bowes, 16 Ves. 168; and see 7 Price, 616.

(x) Ex parte Barton, 7 Vin. Ab. tit. Creditor and Bankrupt, 61, 62, pl. 15.

(y) The word "delivery," connected with the words "gift or transfer," is to be confined in meaning to transactions of the same nature; where therefore goods were removed with intent to delay a creditor, and delivered to a party having no claim over them, held that it was not an act of bankruptcy; and at all events, a delivery of the goods by the party's agent generally conducting his business cannot be so; a man cannot commit an act of bankruptcy by the conduct of his agent. Cotton v. James,[5] 1 Mood. & M. C. 277.

(z) A warrant of attorney given for the purpose of entering up judgment in four days, and seizing the property of an insolvent party, to the detriment of his general creditors, was held to be a charge, or a transfer of it, within the 7 Geo. 4, c. 57, s. 32, and void. Cumming v. Bailey,[6] 6 Bing. 363. Sharpe v. Thomas,[7] 6 Bing. 416. And see Doe v. Carter, 8 T. R. 300.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. viii. 25. [2]Id. vi. 166. [3]Id. xvi. 401. [4]Id. xxii. 356. [5]Id. xxii. 305. [6]Id. xix. 104. [7]Id. xix. 120.

of any (a) of his goods or chattels," (b) it is necessary, in the first place, to prove an actual conveyance, gift, or delivery; and 2dly, to prove that such conveyance or gift or delivery was fraudulent, and with intent to defeat or delay creditors.

Proof of the conveyance.

1st. A conveyance, when it is by deed or other instrument, must be proved (c) in the regular way by means of the subscribing witnesses. But as against a defendant, in an action for the value of goods attempted to be conveyed, his admission of the execution of the deed, on his examination before the commissioners, supersedes the necessity of proving the deed in the usual way by the subscribing witness (d). The deed or other instrument must be properly stamped (e). The conveyance will enure as an act of bankruptcy, although it is void through fraud; as where an insolvent trader conveys to an infant son (f).

That the conveyance, &c., was fraudulent.

2dly. That the conveyance, gift or delivery was fraudulent, and made with intent to defeat or delay creditors. It is fraudulent in point of law where the necessary effect is to prevent a fair distribution amongst creditors, contrary to the spirit of the bankrupt laws (g). As where the trader transfers the whole of his effects to particular creditors (h), to the exclusion of *any other (i), although the transfer be on trust for the benefit of all his creditors (k). *139

(a) It was sufficient even under the stat. of 21 Jac. 1, c. 15, that part was conveyed. See Ex parte Foord, cited 1 Burr. 477; B. N. P. 40; Linton v. Bartlett, 3 Wils. 47; Morgan v. Horseman, 3 Taunt. 243. But it was necessary to prove a conveyance by deed.

(b) The fraudulent transfer of a bill of exchange to a creditor is a fraudulent transfer of a chattel within the meaning of the 3d section of 5 Geo. 4, c. 16, and an act of bankruptcy. Sharpe v. Thomas,[1] 6 Bing. 416. A sale of goods may be a fraudulent transfer within section 3 of 4 Geo. 4, c. 16, but the jury must be satisfied that the purchaser must have known that under the circumstances of the sale it was done with intent to obtain the price in order to defraud his creditors. Cook v. Caldecott, 1 C. & P. C. 315.

(c) See Rust v. Cooper, Cowp. 635, per Ld. Mansfield, C. J.; and Aston, J. in Martin v. Pewtress, 4 Burr. 2478; 1 Esp. C. 68. Where A. and B. are partners, a fraudulent assignment by A. to B. is not an act of bankruptcy by B. For proof of the deed, see Ind. tit. DEED.

(d) Bowles v. Langworthy, 5 T. R. 366. (e) Whitwell v. Dimsdale, Peake's C. 168.

(f) Whitwell v. Thomson, 1 Esp. C. 68.

(g) Per Le Blanc, J. in Newton v. Chantler, 7 East, 145. See Linton v. Bartlett, 3 Wils. 47. Wilson v. Day, 2 Burr. 827. Compton v. Bedford, 1 Bl. R. 362; 1 Burr. 484. See Lord Eldon's observations in Dutton v. Morrison, 17 Ves. 199; and see Ex parte Foord, Burr. 477; Hooper v. Smith, 1 Blacks. 441; Kettle v. Hammond, Cooke, 86; Harman v. Fisher, Cowp. 617, 629; Kaye v. Bolton, 6 T. R. 134. So also is a conveyance of all, with the exception of a small part. Ibid.

(h) Newton v. Chantler, 7 East, 145. Note, that the trader, when he gave the bill of sale was under arrest at the suit of the creditor to whom the bill of sale was given; but the Court held that this made no difference, and that the case was not distinguishable from that of Butcher v. Easto, Doug. 294. But the Court held that the case of a partial transfer might be open to a very different consideration. In Thornton v. Hargreaves, 7 East, 549, Lawrence, J. observed, "If the bill of sale swept away, as it is said, the whole of the bankrupt's property, it would be difficult to say that it was not made in contemplation of bankruptcy, because it would be in itself an act of bankruptcy; and if so made in contemplation of bankruptcy, he must have intended to give a preference to the particular creditor. And see Worsely v. Demattos, 1 Burr. 467. The transfer of all the bankrupt's property to one of his creditors is an act of bankruptcy, although the deed be executed by the bankrupt only, and not proved to have been acted on. Botcherby v. Lancaster,[2] 1 Ad. & Ell. 77. Siebert v. Spooner, 1 M. & W. 714. See Pulling v. Tucker,[3] 4 B. & A. 382. An assignment, bona fide, and for value, so far as the vendee is concerned, is not an act of bankruptcy, although the trader meditated an absconding to defraud his creditors. Baxter v. Pritchard,[4] 1 Ad. & Ell. 456. The sale of the whole of a trader's property is not of itself an act of bankruptcy, and some fact must be shown from which fraud may be inferred. An assignment for benefit of creditors is not an act of bankruptcy, except in cases within the 4th section. See Rose v. Haycock, 1 Ad. & El. 461, Lord Tenterden's judgment. An assignment of part of the trader's property in trust to sell and dispose of the proceeds as he shall direct, is not of itself an act of bankruptcy. Robinson v. Carrington, 1 Mont. & Ayr. 1. And see Carr v. Burdiss, 1 C. M. & R. 443; Abbott v. Burbage,[5] 2 Bing. N. C. 444; Greenwood v. Churchill, 1 M. & K. 546; Belcher v. Prittie,[6] 10 Bing. 408.

(i) It is an act of bankruptcy if all the creditors do not concur. Eckhardt v. Wilson, 8 T. R. 140, vide infra, note (l). And if one only be excluded. Ex parte Foord, 1 Burr. 477.

(k) Dutton v. Morrison, 17 Ves. 199. And such an assignment is an act of bankruptcy, although none

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. xix. 120. [2] Id. xxviii. 45. [3] Id. vi. 455. [4] Id. xxviii. 124. [5] Id. xxix. 391. [6] Id. xxv. 184.

ing of a creditor seems to be immaterial, except as a mean of proving the intent to delay, provided he be actually denied or conceal himself, or do some other act which evidences the beginning to keep house. A mere direction to be denied, without more, is insufficient (n). But if a trader in his own house hear himself denied to a creditor, and, with intent to delay his creditors, does not come forward, it is an act of bankruptcy, although he gave no direction to be denied (o).

A concerted denial is not evidence of bankruptcy, except as against one who was privy to the concert (p).

Intention. The presumption of an intention to delay a creditor, arising from denial, may be rebutted by any evidence which proves the denial to have proceeded from a different motive. As by evidence that the trader was sick at the time, or engaged in company, or that it was at the house where he does not transact business, and that he referred the creditor to his shop (q). So a refusal to see a creditor because it was the trader's dinner hour, is not an act of bankruptcy (r), or on a Sunday (s). As the bankruptcy consists in the act of seclusion by the trader with intent to delay his creditors, the intention with which the creditors call is immaterial (t).

Yield himself to prison. If a person upon being arrested choose rather (u) to go to prison than pay the debt, although he has money sufficient, declaring that he does it in order to force his creditors to come to a composition, this is evidence of an act of bankruptcy, under the clause, or yield himself to prison (x).

*138 Fraudulent conveyance. *In order to prove an act of bankruptcy under the words of the late statute, "make or cause to be made any fraudulent grant, or conveyance of any of his lands, tenements, goods or chattels, or any fraudulent surrender of his copyhold, &c., or make any fraudulent gift, delivery (y), or transfer (z) of bankruptcy seems to be as complete without proof of actual delay, as in the case of a departure from the dwelling-house or realm with that intent; and it was so held in the case of Dickenson v. Foord, Barnes, 160. And see Bayly v. Schofield, 1 M. & S. 338; Bignold v. Waterhouse, Ibid. 255; Dudley v. Vaughan, 1 Camp. 271;[1] Harvey v. Ramsbottom, 1 B. & C. 55; Lloyd v. Heathcote,[2] 2 B. & B. 388; Lazarus v. Waithman,[3] 5 Moore, 313. Where the fact to be established was a mere denial of the defendant being at home when the officers came to his house, it was held, that it being made by the wife did not prevent its being received, the answer being part of the res gestæ. Att.-gen. v. Goode, 1 M. & Y. 286.

(n) Fisher v. Boucher, 10 B. & B. 705. See Lloyd v. Heathcote,[2] 2 B. & B. 388.

(o) Smith v. Moon,[4] M. & M. 458.

(p) B. N. P. 39, 40. Cawley v. Hopkins, Co. B. L. 81. And see Lord Mansfield's observations in Hooper v. Smith, 1 Bl. R. 442, and Bamford v. Baron, 2 T. R. 595, n. In an action by assignees for money had and received in respect of parcels of bills and cash handed over by the bankrupts in contemplation of bankruptcy, and by way of undue preference, it is no objection to the act of bankruptcy (the execution of a conveyance of all their effects to trustees for the benefit of their creditors) that it was made for the very purpose. Simpson v. Symes, 6 M. & S. 205. Note, that the trustees were not privy to the transfer.

(q) Per Ld. Mansfield, Round v. Hope, Co. B. L. 94, 5th edit. Field v. Bellamy, B. N. P. 39. But where the trader being ill, directed his servant to say that he was not at home, it was held that it was a question for the jury whether it was an act of bankruptcy. Lazarus v. Waithman,[3] 5 Moore, 313.

(r) Smith v. Currie, 3 Camp. 349; B. N. P. 39. And see Shew v. Thompson, Holt's C. 159, where the direction was to deny the trader to any one who called whilst he was at dinner or engaged in business. See also Loyd v. Heathcote,[2] 2. B & B. 392.

(s) Ex parte Preston, 2 V. & B. 312. (t) Ex parte White, 3 V. & B. 129.

(u) This must be for debt in order to constitute an act of bankruptcy. Ex parte Bowes, 16 Ves. 168; and see 7 Price, 616.

(x) Ex parte Barton, 7 Vin. Ab. tit. Creditor and Bankrupt, 61, 62, pl. 15.

(y) The word "delivery," connected with the words "gift or transfer," is to be confined in meaning to transactions of the same nature; where therefore goods were removed with intent to delay a creditor, and delivered to a party having no claim over them, held that it was not an act of bankruptcy; and at all events, a delivery of the goods by the party's agent generally conducting his business cannot be so; a man cannot commit an act of bankruptcy by the conduct of his agent. Cotton v. James,[5] 1 Mood. & M. C. 277.

(z) A warrant of attorney given for the purpose of entering up judgment in four days, and seizing the property of an insolvent party, to the detriment of his general creditors, was held to be a charge, or a transfer of it, within the 7 Geo. 4, c. 57, s. 32, and void. Cumming v. Bailey,[6] 6 Bing. 363. Sharpe v. Thomas,[7] 6 Bing. 416. And see Doe v. Carter, 8 T. R. 300.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. viii. 25. [2]Id. vi. 166. [3]Id. xvi. 401. [4]Id. xxii. 356. [5]Id. xxii. 305. [6]Id. xix. 104. [7]Id. xix. 120.

of any (a) of his goods or chattels," (b) it is necessary, in the first place, to prove an actual conveyance, gift, or delivery; and 2dly, to prove that such conveyance or gift or delivery was fraudulent, and with intent to defeat or delay creditors.

Proof of the conveyance.

1st. A conveyance, when it is by deed or other instrument, must be proved (c) in the regular way by means of the subscribing witnesses. But as against a defendant, in an action for the value of goods attempted to be conveyed, his admission of the execution of the deed, on his examination before the commissioners, supersedes the necessity of proving the deed in the usual way by the subscribing witness (d). The deed or other instrument must be properly stamped (e). The conveyance will enure as an act of bankruptcy, although it is void through fraud; as where an insolvent trader conveys to an infant son (f).

That the conveyance, &c., was fraudulent.

2dly. That the conveyance, gift or delivery was fraudulent, and made with intent to defeat or delay creditors. It is fraudulent in point of law where the necessary effect is to prevent a fair distribution amongst creditors, contrary to the spirit of the bankrupt laws (g). As where the trader transfers the whole of his effects to particular creditors (h), to the exclusion of *any other (i), although the transfer be on trust for the benefit of all his creditors (k). *139

(a) It was sufficient even under the stat. of 21 Jac. 1, c. 15, that part was conveyed. See Ex parte Foord, cited 1 Burr. 477; B. N. P. 40; Linton v. Bartlett, 3 Wils. 47; Morgan v. Horseman, 3 Taunt. 243. But it was necessary to prove a conveyance by deed.

(b) The fraudulent transfer of a bill of exchange to a creditor is a fraudulent transfer of a chattel within the meaning of the 3d section of 5 Geo. 4, c. 16, and an act of bankruptcy. Sharpe v. Thomas,[1] 6 Bing. 416. A sale of goods may be a fraudulent transfer within section 3 of 4 Geo. 4, c. 16, but the jury must be satisfied that the purchaser must have known that under the circumstances of the sale it was done with intent to obtain the price in order to defraud his creditors. Cook v. Caldecott, 1 C. & P. C. 315.

(c) See Rust v. Cooper, Cowp. 635, per Ld. Mansfield, C. J.; and Aston, J. in Martin v. Pewtress, 4 Burr. 2478; 1 Esp. C. 68. Where A. and B. are partners, a fraudulent assignment by A. to B. is not an act of bankruptcy by B. For proof of the deed, see Ind. tit. DEED.

(d) Bowles v. Langworthy, 5 T. R. 366. (e) Whitwell v. Dimsdale, Peake's C. 168.

(f) Whitwell v. Thomson, 1 Esp. C. 68.

(g) Per Le Blanc, J. in Newton v. Chantler, 7 East, 145. See Linton v. Bartlett, 3 Wils. 47. Wilson v. Day, 2 Burr. 827. Compton v. Bedford, 1 Bl. R. 362; 1 Burr. 484. See Lord Eldon's observations in Dutton v. Morrison, 17 Ves. 199; and see Ex parte Foord, Burr. 477; Hooper v. Smith, 1 Blacks. 441; Kettle v. Hammond, Cooke, 86; Harman v. Fisher, Cowp. 617, 629; Kaye v. Bolton, 6 T. R. 134. So also is a conveyance of all, with the exception of a small part. Ibid.

(h) Newton v. Chantler, 7 East, 145. Note, that the trader, when he gave the bill of sale was under arrest at the suit of the creditor to whom the bill of sale was given; but the Court held that this made no difference, and that the case was not distinguishable from that of Butcher v. Easto, Doug. 294. But the Court held that the case of a partial transfer might be open to a very different consideration. In Thornton v. Hargreaves, 7 East, 549, Lawrence, J. observed, "If the bill of sale swept away, as it is said, the whole of the bankrupt's property, it would be difficult to say that it was not made in contemplation of bankruptcy, because it would be in itself an act of bankruptcy; and if so made in contemplation of bankruptcy, he must have intended to give a preference to the particular creditor. And see Worsely v. Demattos, 1 Burr. 467. The transfer of all the bankrupt's property to one of his creditors is an act of bankruptcy, although the deed be executed by the bankrupt only, and not proved to have been acted on. Botcherby v. Lancaster,[2] 1 Ad. & Ell. 77. Siebert v. Spooner, 1 M. & W. 714. See Pulling v. Tucker,[3] 4 B. & A. 382. An assignment, bona fide, and for value, so far as the vendee is concerned, is not an act of bankruptcy, although the trader meditated an absconding to defraud his creditors. Baxter v. Pritchard,[4] 1 Ad. & Ell. 456. The sale of the whole of a trader's property is not of itself an act of bankruptcy, and some fact must be shown from which fraud may be inferred. An assignment for benefit of creditors is not an act of bankruptcy, except in cases within the 4th section. See Rose v. Haycock, 1 Ad. & El. 461, Lord Tenterden's judgment. An assignment of part of the trader's property in trust to sell and dispose of the proceeds as he shall direct, is not of itself an act of bankruptcy. Robinson v. Carrington, 1 Mont. & Ayr. 1. And see Carr v. Burdiss, 1 C. M. & R. 443; Abbott v. Burbage,[5] 2 Bing. N. C. 444; Greenwood v. Churchill, 1 M. & K. 546; Belcher v. Prittie,[6] 10 Bing. 408.

(i) It is an act of bankruptcy if all the creditors do not concur. Eckhardt v. Wilson, 8 T. R. 140, vide infra, note (l). And if one only be excluded. Ex parte Foord, 1 Burr. 477.

(k) Dutton v. Morrison, 17 Ves. 199. And such an assignment is an act of bankruptcy, although none

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xix. 120. [2]Id. xxviii. 45. [3]Id. vi. 455. [4]Id. xxviii. 124. [5]Id. xxix. 391. [6]Id. xxv. 184.

So if it be of such part as when actually transferred would disable him from trading (l).

*140 Fraudulent preference.

*In such case it makes no difference whether the transfer resulted from the threats and importunity of the creditor, or was voluntary (m). But in such cases it is necessary to prove that the assignment will have the effect of preventing the trader from carrying on his business; as by evidence of the general state of his affairs at the time. It is not sufficient to show that under pecuniary pressure he parted with articles essential to his business (n). Where the transfer to a creditor is partial, the question is whether it was voluntary on the part of the trader, and made with intent to give him a preference over the other creditors. If it was made voluntarily, and in contemplation of bankruptcy, it necessarily follows that it was intended to give a fraudulent preference, and therefore constitutes an act of bankruptcy (o).

of the creditors have executed it, and though it has never been acted on, or out of the trader's possession. Botcherby v. Lancaster,[1] 1 Ad. & Ell. 77; 3 N. & M. 383, S. C.

(l) In Hooper v. Smith, 1 Bl. 441, Lord Mansfield says, "If a man makes over so much of his stock in trade as to disable himself from being a trader, this would be fraudulent; it would be, as I said in Compton v. Bedford (1 Blacks. 362), an assignment of his solvency." In Hassell v. Simpson, 2 Montague's B. L. 253; Doug. 88, Ld. Mansfield observed, "A man may be insolvent without being a bankrupt, and a man may become a bankrupt and yet be able to pay 25*s.* in the pound: the reason why a man becomes a bankrupt who conveys away all his property is, that he thereby becomes incapable of trading." Where the trader transferred one-third part of all his effects in consideration of a loan of 120*l.*, and, being in insolvent circumstances, absconded two days after, it was held to be an act of bankruptcy. Linton v. Bartlett, 3 Wils. 47; and see Devon v. Watts, 1 Noy, 86. It must be of so much of his property as to incapacitate him from carrying on business by the insolvency which would ensue. Wedge v. Newlyn,[2] 4 B. & Ad. 831. And semble, even the transfer of property essential to the carrying on the business is not sufficient, without showing incapacity to replace the property. Ib. A transfer to bankers of a trader's leasehold property, with all his stock in trade, and also a policy of insurance, as a security for monies advanced and to be advanced, with a power of sale, and a proviso that the trader should retain possession till default, but not including all the trader's property, being made bona fide, is not an act of bankruptcy. Carr v. Burdiss, 1 C. M. & R. 443. In the case of Balme v. Hutton, 2 Y. & J. 101; 1 C. M. & R. 448, an assignment of machinery to a creditor, the trader having other property besides that assigned, does not on the face of it amount to an act of bankruptcy, and is not an act of bankruptcy, although the parties would, if possession had been taken, have been unable to carry on their trade. But in the case of Balme v. Jewison, K. B. Nov. 21, 1829, the same deed was held to be an act of bankruptcy, it being conceded on the trial that the question which the jury had before decided in reference to that deed, was not again to be submitted to the consideration of the jury, but that if the court should be of opinion that on the face of it the deed was not an act of bankruptcy, the counsel for the defendant should be at liberty to move, it being admitted that if the deed was to operate immediately, so as to put the property in the possession of the person in whose favour that deed was made, it would be impossible to carry on the business, and would therefore be an act of bankruptcy. The counsel for the defendant accordingly moved, but the Court was of opinion that the deed operated immediately, and that as its effect would be, that on possession taken, it would be impossible to carry on the business, it was an act of bankruptcy; and that it was an act of bankruptcy by the party executing, although the other partner did not execute, there being no proviso, as in the case 17 Ves., for being void in case the other party did not execute. But an assignment for the general benefit of creditors, assented to by all or by the generality (Inglis v. Grant, 5 T. R. 530,) is not an act of bankruptcy. So where one of two partners conveyed all his freehold and copyhold estate in trust to raise money to facilitate a settlement with his creditors, the pecuniary assets of the firm not being sufficient to liquidate the debts of the firm. Berney v. Davidson,[3] 1 B. & B. 408. Berney v. Vyner,[4] Ibid. 482.

(m) Newton v. Chantler, 7 East, 145. Thornton v. Hargreaves, Ibid. 544. Butcher v. Easto, Doug. 294. Stewart v. Moody, 1 C. M. & R. 777.

(n) Wedge v. Nemlyn,[5] 4 B. & Ad. 381. As that a miller transferred his wagons and horses to a creditor, who arrested him. Ib. A mere colourable exception has of course no operation. Ex parte Foord, cited 1 Burr. 477. Compton v. Bedford, 1 W. Bl. 362. Low v. Skinner, 2 W. Bl. 996. Berney v. Davidson,[3] 1 B. & B. 408. Berney v. Vyner,[4] Ibid. 482.

(o) Ibid. And see Thornton v. Hargreaves, 7 East, 544. In that case the trader being pressed by a creditor for payment, or for a security, executed a bill of sale of goods, apparently the whole of his stock, and immediately left off business and became a bankrupt; and it was held that as the bankrupt did not by the execution of the bill of sale redeem himself from any present difficulty, the presumption was, that he acted not under the pressure of a threat of process, but with intent to give a fraudulent preference. See also Fidgeon v. Sharpe,[6] 5 Taunt. 539; Smith v. Payne, 6 T. R. 152; Harman v. Fisher, Cowp. 117. And a voluntary payment under circumstances which might reasonably lead the trader to suppose bankruptcy to be probable, though not inevitable, is fraudulent. Poland v. Glynn,[7] 2 D. & R. 310.

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxviii. 45. [2] Id. xxiv. 173. [3] Id. v. 134. [4] Id. v. 156. [5] Id. xxiv. 173. [6] Id. i. 183. [7] Id. xvi. 88.

The question, however, in such cases of partial transfer is, whether the trader did in fact intend to give a preference to particular persons, to the prejudice of his general creditors (p), and in contemplation of bankruptcy. *A fraudulent intention, in the ordinary sense of the word, is not essential *141 to a fraudulent preference; neither is any privity on the part of the creditor necessary (q).

It has been held that, although the fact that the trader at the time of the transfer contemplated bankruptcy be strong, if not absolutely conclusive evidence of fraudulent preference, it is not essential to such proof. Where a trader conveyed an equity of redemption, to which he was entitled, to particular persons, and it was found by the jury that the conveyance was fraudulent, and made with intent to give a preference to those persons to the prejudice of the general creditors, it was held to be an act of bankruptcy, although the trader continued to carry on his trade, and no commission issued till three years after (r).

(p) Pulling v. Tucker,[1] 4 B. & A. 382. It is always a question of quo animo: Did he transfer to obtain relief or to favour the particular creditor? Did he contemplate bankruptcy? Did he yield to pressure? Was the act capable of affording present relief? The bankrupts (country bankers) having suspended payments, and being in failing circumstances, the delivery of cash and notes by one of the partners to the town agent, with the view of reducing the balance, although no undue preference be intended by such partner, is to be taken as such, the insolvency of the house being necessarily consequent; and cash delivered over by the other partners to the agent, in the expectation and on condition of receiving support, which is not rendered, cannot be retained by the defendant. See Mont. B. L.—The bankrupt, in the habit of advancing sums to his son, the defendant, for maintenance and discharge of his bills, gives him a sum of money on the day when he stops payment, knowing himself at the time insolvent, but not expecting to become bankrupt; the question is whether it was paid in the ordinary course in which he maintained him, in which case the assignees cannot recover it back, or whether it was for the purpose of securing him an advantage over, and to give him a benefit at the expense of the creditors. Abell v. Daniell,[2] 1 Mood. & M. C. 370. The cases, observes Lord Kenyon (Whitwell v. Thompson, 1 Esp. C. 78), where the assignment by a trader of his property has been deemed fraudulent and an act of bankruptcy, have been where it has been made for a by-gone and before contracted debt; but that it never could be taken to be law that a trader could not sell his property when his affairs became embarrassed, or assign them to a person who could assist him in his difficulties, as a security for advances. The bankrupt before any act of bankruptcy, having a large order to execute for the East India Company, obtained from the defendants advances to enable him to execute it, upon an agreement that they should receive the amount of the order from the Company and repay themselves, which they accordingly did; held that it amounted to an equitable assignment of that particular fund, and was not a fraudulent preference, to which there must be both an insolvency in the trader, and a voluntary payment or transfer by him. Hunt v. Mortimer,[3] 10 B. & C. 42. And it seems that a payment made in pursuance of a previous contract, cannot be deemed the result of a preference. Vacher v. Cocks,[4] 1 B. & Ad. 145. A sale by a trader of goods for ready money, under circumstances which ought to have led the buyer as a man of business to entertain suspicions of an intention to defraud creditors, is an act of bankruptcy, if the jury so find it. Cook v. Caldecott,[5] 1 Mood. & M. C. 522.

(q) Per Bayley, J. Poland v. Glynn,[6] 2 D. & R. 310. Harman v. Fisher, Cowp. 117. If a man's circumstances be such as to fairly lead him to believe bankruptcy inevitable, and he voluntarily makes a payment to one creditor to the exclusion of the rest, it is a fraud within the statute. Per Gibbs, C. J., Fidgeon v. Sharp,[7] 5 Taunt. 539. The bonâ fide payment of a just debt fraudulently and in contemplation of bankruptcy, is an act of bankruptcy. Bevan v. Nunn,[8] 9 Bing. 107. Although the transaction took place four months before the commission issued. Ibid.

(r) Pulling v. Tucker,[9] 4 B. & A. 382. In Smith v. Payne, 6 T. R. Ld. Kenyon, C. J. laid great stress on the circumstance that the trader did not contemplate bankruptcy at the time. In Pulling v. Tucker, the deed recited that three persons mentioned, had agreed to advance to the trader specified sums of money, payment of which was admitted to have been made at the time of the execution of the deed, a receipt being indorsed on the back, signed by the trader (the defendant) and witnessed by his clerks. It was proved that no money passed when the deed was executed, that two of the parties stated to have advanced the money were the defendant's brothers, and the third proved that he knew nothing of the transaction. The Court held that the question, as above stated, had been properly left to the jury, on the authority of Morgan v. Horseman, 3 Taunt. 241. In that case, it was held that a deed whereby a debtor being pressed conveyed estates in trust to sell, and to pay the pressing creditor, with a further trust to pay his debts to certain relatives, in order to give them an undue preference, was an act of bankruptcy. In that case (Abbott, L. C. J. observes), it was, it is true, expressly stated that the deed was executed in contemplation of bankruptcy; but Mansfield, C. J. lays no stress on that conveyance, for he expressly says, "a conveyance either of all or of part of a man's property in favour of fewer than all his creditors is an act of bankruptcy, because it is the means whereby the creditors may be defeated or delayed." Abbott, C. J. further observed, that if it were material that the [1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. vi. 455. [2]Id. xxii. 337. [3]Id. xxi. 26. [4]Id. xx. 364. [5]Id. xix. 403. [6]Id. xvi. 88. [7]Id. i. 183. [8]Id. xxiii. 272. [9]Id. vi. 455.

But according to later authorities, it seems that in case of a partial transfer, it is necessary to show, not only that the preference was voluntary, but that it was given in contemplation of bankruptcy (s).

*142 *In such instances, however, that is where the transfer is partial, it is usually a question to be decided by the aid of extrinsic evidence, under all the circumstances, whether it was done in order to give a fraudulent preference to the individual to the prejudice of the creditors in general, and in contemplation of bankruptcy. And for this purpose it may be material to show the situation of the trader and his affairs at the time, that he was insolvent at the time, and knew that he was so (t); it is necessary to show that he contemplated bankruptcy. So it is material to prove circumstances which show a motive for undue preference; such as the relationship of the trader to the transferee, or acts or declarations of the trader at the time of the transfer, manifesting an intention to show favour; suspicious circumstances attending the transfer itself; that it was made on the proposal of the trader (u), at an unseasonable hour (x); that it was executed in secret (y); that the conveyance, &c. is falsely dated (z); that its terms are general, where in an ordinary case they are usually specific (a); that it was made to secure a sum not due (b), or a larger sum than was due (c); that the trader suppressed evidence by which the real nature of the transaction might be elucidated (d); that the property conveyed constituted the whole or a considerable part of the trader's effects (e); that the bankrupt soon afterwards ceased to trade, or absconded.

deed should have been executed in contemplation of bankruptcy, there was strong evidence of the fact. For the bankrupt being in insolvent circumstances, conveys his real estate to certain persons as a security for debts then due, or any other debts which might become due. Such a deed given under such circumstances would make bankruptcy inevitable, and a man must be supposed to contemplate the consequence of his own act.

(s) Morgan v. Brundrett,[1] 5 B. & Ad. 289. Gibbins v. Phillips,[2] 7 B. & C. 529. Poland v. Glyn, 4 Bing. 22. And this is a question of fact under all the circumstances of the case. Poland v. Glyn, 4 Bing. 22. Flook v. Jones,[3] 4 Bing. 20; Doug. 85. Atkinson v. Brindall,[4] 2 Bing. N. C. 225. See Devon v. Watts, Doug. 85. An assignment by an insolvent is void if made with the intention of petitioning the Court for his discharge, although it be made more than three months before the commencement of his imprisonment. Becke v. Smith, 2 M. & W. 191.

(t) Newton v. Chantler, 7 East, 138. The question, as regards contemplation of bankruptcy is not what was the real state of the trader's affairs, but what was the state of his affairs in his own judgment. Belcher v. Prittie,[5] 10 Bing. 408.

(u) See Crosby v. Crouch, 11 East, 256. Smith v. Payne, 6 T. R. 152; Myleton v. Butler, 2 B. & P. 283; infra, note (z). It is not necessary to show that the bankrupt took the first step. Morgan v. Brundrett,[6] 2 B. & Ad. 289. It has been held, that it is not sufficient to show an intent to favour third persons. Abbott v. Pomfret,[7] 1 Bing. N. C. 462; but qu.

(x) Compton v. Bedford, 1 Blacks. 362, where the assignment was at midnight. Harman v. Fisher, Cowp. 117, where the transfer was at five in the morning, after sitting up all night. Hartshorn v. Slodden, 1 B. & P. 582. See below, note (f).

(y) Wilson v. Day, 2 Burr. 827. Jacob v. Shepherd, Burr. 478; and see Twine's Case, 3 Co. 8.

(z) Ingleton v. Buller, 2 B. & P. 283. The acceptor of a bill of exchange, two days before the bill became due, called on the indorser and stated that he was insolvent; the indorsee insisting on payment, the acceptor paid it, and four days afterwards became bankrupt; the bill had been altered so as to fall due before the transaction, but without the indorser's (the defendant's) knowledge; the jury were directed that there was strong ground to infer fraud, and that the inference, as far as related to the bankrupt, was strengthened by the alteration. Lord Eldon, C. J. distinguished the case from that of Smith v. Payne, 6 T. R. 152, on the ground that there the creditor came to the debtor, and the security was taken for a debt actually due.

(a) The generality of the gift, without any exception, was one of the indicia in Twine's Case; 3 Co. 81; the maxim being dolus versatur in generalibus. In Jacob v. Shepherd, Burr. 478, Ld. Mansfield, C. J. in assigning reasons for the validity of the instrument, observes that the deed was of specific goods. See also Wilson v. Day, 2 Burr. 827; Alderson v. Temple, 4 Burr. 2235; and see also Montague's B. L. vol i. p. 66; Deason, B. L. vol. i. p. 442.

(b) See note (z); and Pulling v. Tacker,[8] 4 B. & A. 382.

(c) Wilson v. Day, 2 Burr. 827.

(d) Alderson v. Temple, 4 Burr. 2235. Worsely v. Demattos, Burr. 467. Devon v. Watts, Doug. 86.

(e) Thornton v. Hargreaves, 7 East, 549.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxvii. 79. [2]Id. xiv. 97. [3]Id. xiii. 328. [4]Id. xxix. 316. [5]Id. xxv. 184. [6]Id. xxvii. 79. [7]Id. xxvii. 459. [8]Id. vi. 455.

Evidence in answer to a case of voluntary or fraudulent preference, where the facts are not conclusive, consists of circumstances tending to show that the transaction was not voluntary on the part of the trader, but was the result of importunity or compulsion (f). It is not voluntary if it be made *under the apprehension that a degree of force, civil or criminal, *143 is about to be applied (g). It is not necessary to show that any threat was used; it is sufficient if the act be the result of pressure and importunity on the part of the creditor (h). If urgency be used it rebuts the presumption of voluntary preference (i). A. having in September discounted three bills for B., afterwards suspecting his credit, required a security to be put into his hands, and B. accordingly, at different times between November and February, deposited books to the amount of 300*l.* with him, to be sold by him for his own benefit, in case the bills should not be paid by the acceptors; the books were chiefly brought by B. in a hackney-coach, in the evening; B. committed an act of bankruptcy in March, and A. had then the bills unpaid in his hands. Upon an action brought by the assignees, they were nonsuited on the ground that there was no voluntary preference, since the bankrupt parted with the books upon the defendant's importunity; and although the bills were not due, the defendant was liable upon them, and had a right to a further security (k).

Where B. had property to a large amount at the Custom-house, which stood in his own name, but which he had purchased with A.'s money, and there was evidence to show that he had been induced to transfer the whole to A., under the apprehension that A. would prosecute him for the forgery of a bill which he had deposited with A. as a security, it was left to the jury to say whether the transfer was voluntary, or was made under the apprehension that a degree of force, civil or criminal, was about to be applied; and Lord Ellenborough informed them, that everything which might overcome the free-will of the party was sufficient to exclude a voluntary preference (l). So payment to an obligee, who importunes for payment before the forfeiture of the bond, is good (m).

Where a trader, in contemplation of bankruptcy, voluntarily sent his clerk to pay the amount, but before the payment the creditor applied for payment, it was held to be good (n). This was on the principle that the preference intended was not communicated; but the authority of this case has been questioned (o).

(f) Either a demand of payment of a debt due, or a demand of further security, repels the presumption of voluntary preference. See Ld. Ellenborough's observations in Crosby v. Crouch, 11 East, 256. And secrecy in the mode of delivery will not make it fraudulent where it is not otherwise fraudulent; as where a creditor demands a security for a running debt. See Lord Ellenborough's observations, 11 East, 261.

(g) De Tastet v. Carroll,[1] 1 Starkie's C. 88; and see Atkins v. Seward, cor. Holroyd, J. Winchester Spring Ass. 1819, Manning's Index, 2d edit. 63. The bankrupt stated that he paid the money after a threat of arrest, partly with a view of relieving his father from liability; it is for the jury to consider the motives and intention of the bankrupt, in order to ascertain whether the payment was in fact made in consequence of the threats. Cook v. Rogers,[2] 7 Bing. 438. Harman v. Fisher, Cowp. 117; but see Bayley v. Ballard, 1 Camp. 416.

(h) See Smith v. Payne, 6 T. R. 152.

(i) Per Ld. Ellenborough, in Crosby v. Crouch, 2 Camp. C. 166. 11 East, 256. In Hartshorn v. Slodden, 2 B. & P. 582. Ld. Alvanley was of opinion, that if the creditor pressed for payment, the intention of the bankrupt was not material. See Belcher v. Prittie,[3] 10 Bing. 407.

(k) Crosby v. Crouch, 2 Camp. C. 166; 11 East, 226.

(l) De Tastet v. Carroll,[1] 1 Starkie's C. 88.

(m) Hartshorn and others v. Slodden, 4 Esp. C. 60; 2 B. & P. 582. Thompson v. Freeman, 1 T. R. 155. Thornton v. Hargreaves, 7 East, 544. Crosby v. Crouch, 11 East, 256. Belcher v. Jones, 2 M. & W. 258.

(n) Bayley v. Ballard, 1 Camp. C. 416.

(o) Singleton v. Butler, 2 B. & P. 283. And see Cooke v. Rogers,[2] 7 Bing. 446. The real question seems to be as to the ultimate motive of the trader; whether he yielded to the demand, or availed himself of the opportunity offered to give a fraudulent preference.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. ii. 308. [2]Id. xx. 194. [3]Id. xxv. 184.

Where the holder of a bill promised the acceptor, whom he knew to be insolvent, that if the bill was paid he would effect a composition with his creditors, the preference was held to be fraudulent (p).

*144 *Where a trader purchased goods on the 8th of October, for the purpose of exportation, but finding that he must stop payment, and that he could not export them, returned them on the 16th of October to B., the vendor, and stopt payment on the 17th; and his creditors refusing him time, he became a bankrupt on the 2d of November: it was held that the jury were warranted in finding that the delivery of the goods to B. was not in contemplation of bankruptcy (q).

Where a creditor obtained a preference not fraudulent, with a view to an intended composition with creditors, but without any view to a bankruptcy, and the composition never took place, but the trader afterwards became bankrupt, it was held that the creditor was entitled to retain his securities (r).

Where a sale has been completed by the actual delivery of goods to a trader, before payment, he cannot give the vendor a preference by rescinding the contract and returning the goods (s). But where goods in transitu are given up by the trader, it is a question for the jury whether they were given up bonâ fide, and without any motive of undue and voluntary preference, although the trader was on the verge of bankruptcy (t).

Goods were sent to a trader in February, with an option, according to the course of trade, of returning them; he having done no act to determine his option, on the 4th and 5th of March returned the goods, requesting a written approbation of this act, being then insolvent; such approbation was not given till after the bankruptcy, and it was held that the property passed to the assignees (u).

Continuance of possession.

The fact that the property conveyed remained after the transfer in the possession of the trader, is strong, and being unanswered, is conclusive evidence of fraud (x). For the trader thereby obtains false credit to the deception or prejudice of his creditors (y). But this fact is not conclusive evidence of fraud; it may be explained by circumstances (z) which show that such possession was given as the nature of the case will admit of.

The engineer of a canal company borrowed money from the company, in order to pay his creditors, and executed a bill of sale of timber, and other articles of his property, deposited on the premises of the company, (which he had bought with money advanced by them,) and delivered them to the company by the delivery of a copper halfpenny; and the Court held that since such possession had been delivered to the company at the time of executing the deed, as the case admitted of, the deed was not fraudulent (a).

(p) Singleton v. Butler, 3 Esp. C. 215; 2 B. & P. 283. Smith v. Payne, 6 T. R. 152.

(q) Fidgeon v. Sharp,[1] 1 Marsh. 196. And see Moore v. Barthrop,[2] 1 B. & C. 5.

(r) Wheelwright v. Jackson,[3] 5 Taunt. 109.

(s) Barnes v. Freeland, 6 T. R. 80. See Haswell v. Hunt, 5 T. R. 221; Neate v. Ball, 2 East, 117.

(t) Dixon v. Baldwin, 5 East, 175.

(u) Neate v. Ball, 2 East, 117; infra, 111, note (y).

(x) A conveyance of goods without deed is fraudulent, unless possession be given; if it be by deed, it is fraudulent, and an act of bankruptcy. Per Ld. Kenyon, C. J. in Manton v. Moore, 7 T. R. 71.

(y) Manton v. Moore, 7 T. R. 67. Worseley v. Demattos, 1 Burr. 467. A trader being in distressed circumstances, assigns all his estate to a creditor as a security for an unliquidated sum, without delivering any kind of possession, except by giving a letter of attorney to his own clerk to collect debts. The assignment was held to be fraudulent, on the ground of undue preference, and because there had been no alteration of possession. Wilson v. Day, 2 Burr. 827.

(z) Per Ld. Mansfield, 1 Burr. 484.

(a) Manton v. Moore, 7 T. R. 67; and see below, REPUTED OWNERSHIP.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. i. 183. [2]Id. viii. 5. [3]Id. i. 30.

In general, one privy to a fraudulent deed, cannot set it up as an act of bankruptcy (b); and it would be a fatal objection to show that the petitioning *creditor was a party, or privy to the fraudulent deed; but if he was not privy, it is no objection that the co-plaintiffs being co-assignees with him, were privy (c); and it is no objection that the petitioning creditor was party to a deed of trust, by which the bankrupt assigned certain property for the benefit of his creditors, in consideration of which they released their debts, it having been afterwards discovered by the petitioning creditor that the bankrupt had previously committed a secret act of bankruptcy (d). Proof of privity to a fraudulent deed. *145

Or having been arrested or committed to prison for debt, &c. (e) shall on such arrest, or on any detention for debt, lie in prison for twenty-one days, &c. Lying in prison, &c.

To establish an act of bankruptcy by lying in prison (f), it must be shown that the trader lay in prison twenty-one days before the issuing the commission; a subsequent lying in prison will not give effect to a previous commission (g).

It was held under the stat. 21 J. 1, c. 1, that a commission issued fifty-six days inclusively after the arrest was good (h).

A trader being arrested on the 4th, was at large till the 8th, when he returned into custody; on the 10th he was removed by habeas corpus into the King's Bench, where he remained more than two months; and it was held that the act of bankruptcy related to the 8th (i), since there must be a continuous imprisonment of two lunar months.

A trader being arrested put in bail, and afterwards surrendered in discharge of his bail; it was held that the imprisonment was to be computed from the surrender, and not from the arrest (k). But where a trader was sick at the time of the arrest, and could not be removed, but continued in the custody of a follower, the imprisonment was reckoned from the arrest (l); so where he has had the benefit of the rules during the period (m); and so it was where mere formal bail were put in before a Judge, to get the trader turned over to the prison of the court, upon which he was surrendered, and sent there, for there was an entire continuous imprisonment from the time of the arrest (n).

A commission issuing before the time has expired cannot be supported, but it is otherwise as to a commission which issues after the docket is struck (o).

Or having been arrested, shall escape, &c. Escape.

A prisoner having been arrested in Kent, and brought up by habeas corpus to be bailed, was permitted by the sheriff to call at a house in London, and it was held that the passing through another county, by the permission of the sheriff, did not amount to an act of bankruptcy (p).

(b) Jackson v. Irwin, 2 Camp. 49. Bamford v. Baron, 2 T. R. 594, n. Tappenden v. Burgess, 4 East, 230. Tope v. Hockin,[1] 7 B. & C. 101. Back v. Gooch,[2] Holt's C. 13.
(c) Tappenden v. Burgess,[3] 4 East, 230. Dutton v. Morrison, 14 Ves. 193.
(d) Doe v. Anderson,[3] 1 Starkie's C. 262.
(e) A penalty due to the Crown for smuggling is within this statute. Cobb v. Symonds,[4] 5 B. & A. 516.
(f) Supra.
(g) Moser v. Newman,[5] 6 Bing. 556; See Higgins v. M'Adam, 3 Y. & J. 1. The trading must be before the imprisonment. Ex parte Lynch, 1 Mont. & Bl. 453. Glassington v. Rawlins, 3 East, 407; 4 Esp. 221. Gordon v. Wilkinson, 8 T. R. 507. But see 2 Show. 512; 14 Ves. 80, 83. Wydown's Case, Ibid.
(h) 3 East, 407. See Com. Dig. tit. Temps. Lacon v. Hooper, 6 T. R. 224.
(i) Barnard v. Palmer, 1 Camp. 509.
(k) Tribe v. Webber, Willes, 464; 1 Burr. 438.
(l) Stevens v. Jackson, 4 Camp. 164.
(m) Soames v. Watts,[6] 1 C. & P. 400.
(n) Rose v. Green, 1 Burr. 437.
(o) Gordon v. Wilkinson, 8 T. R. 507. Ex parte Dufresne, 1 V. & B. 51.
(p) Rose v. Green, Burr. 437.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xiv. 22. [2]Id. iii. 9. [3]Id. ii. 382. [4]Id. vii. 179. [5]Id. xix. 165. [6]Id. xi. 436.

The arrest or detention for debt in these cases should be proved by an *146 *examined copy of the writ (if returned), and return of cepi corpus, the warrant, and arrest, or by the habeas corpus and commitment (q); and the fact of lying in prison twenty-one days, may be proved either by any person acquainted with the fact, or by the books of the prison (r).

The act of bankruptcy has relation to the time of the arrest or going to prison (s), and the property vests in the assignees from that time.

By the Insolvent Act, 7 G. 4, c. 57, the filing a petition to take the benefit of the Insolvent Act is, in some cases, an act of bankruptcy, provided the party be declared bankrupt before the time advertised in the Gazette for hearing the petition, or within two calendar months from the filing of it. An office copy of the petition is made evidence of the act. The filing is not complete till it reaches its destination in the proper office (t).

In order to establish an act of bankruptcy against a Member of Parliament, for not paying or securing his creditor a debt of 100*l.*, after the suing out the writ of summons, &c., under the stat. 4 G. 4, c. 33, it is not absolutely necessary that such creditor should be called (u).

The assignees may rely on any act of bankruptcy previous to the issuing of the commission, and are not limited to that on which the commission was founded (x).

Where the sheriff took possession under an execution, and afterwards on the same day the bankrupt surrendered; and it was held that the assignees were not entitled to recover against the execution creditor (y). The property vests in the assignees by relation only from the moment of the surrender or arrest (z).

Petitioning creditor's debt.

Fourthly. It is necessary to prove that the petitioning creditor's debt (a) *147 *existed at the time of the act of bankruptcy (b), and also that it existed whilst the party was a trader (c).

(q) Salte v. Thomas, 3 B. & P. 188. The prison books are not evidence of the cause of commitment.

(r) Salte v. Thomas, 3 B. & P. 188.

(s) King v. Leith, 2 T. R. 141. And see the provision of the stat. 6 G. 4, c. 16, supra, 130.

(t) Garlick v. Sangster,[1] 9 Bing. 46.

(u) Burton v. Green,[2] 3 Car. & P. C. 306.

(x) Reed v. James,[3] 1 Starkie's C. 134. Hopper v. Richmond,[4] Ibid. 507.

(y) Thomas v. Desanges, 2 B. & A. 686. See also Sadler v. Leigh, 4 Camp. 197. And see tit. TIME; and the stat. 6 G. 4, c. 16, s. 108.

(z) Gordon v. Wilkinson, 8 T. R. 507. King v. Leith, 2 T. R. 141.

(a) By the stat. 6 G. 4, c. 16, s. 15, no commission shall be issued unless the single debt of such creditor, or of two or more persons being partners, petitioning for the same, shall amount to 100*l.* or upwards, or unless the debt of two creditors so petitioning shall amount to 150*l.*, &c. or unless the debt of three or more creditors so petitioning shall amount to 200*l.* &c. And that every person who has given credit to any trader upon valuable consideration for any sum payable at a certain time, which time shall not have arrived when such trader committed an act of bankruptcy, may so petition or join in petitioning as aforesaid, whether he shall have any security in writing or otherwise for such sum or not. A commission on the petition of four creditors is good, although it does not appear on the face of the affidavit that the debts amounted to 200*l.*; proof being given at the trial that they amounted to that sum. Hill v. Heale, 2 N. R. 196. 100*l.* in notes bought at 10*s.* each is sufficient. Ex parte Lee, 1 P. W. 782. The 7 Geo. 4, c. 46, s. 9, and 1 & 2 Vict. c. 96, are to be taken together; and held that the public officer thereby authorized to sue any member of a joint-stock banking company may sue out a fiat in bankruptcy against such member. Hall, ex parte, 3 Deac. (B. C.) 405. The debt must be a legal one—a promissory note made in violation of a statute cannot be proved, and consequently cannot form a good petitioning creditor's debt, Ex parte Randleson, Mo. & M. 86. See further as to the petitioning creditor's debt, Ex parte Birch,[5] 4 B. & C. 880; Bleasby v. Crossly,[6] 3 Bing. 430; Flook v. Jones,[7] 4 Bing. 20; Shaw v. Hervey,[8] 1 M. & M. 526. Sect. 8 provides that payment to the petitioning creditor after the docket struck shall be an act of bankruptcy. See Rose v. Maine,[9] 1 Bing. N. C. 357. Ex parte Vernon, 2 Cox, 61. Ex parte Paxton, 15 Ves. 463.

(b) Moss v. Smith, 1 Camp. 489; 46 G. 3. c. 145; 14 Ves. 80–3. And where the proceedings under the commission merely showed that the debt existed at the date of the commission, and not that it existed at the time of the act of bankruptcy, it was held to be insufficient (Clarke v. Askew, 1 Starkie's C. 428; 14 East, 197; infra, 149). In Wright v. Lainson, 2 M. & W. 739, it was held that an I. O. U. bearing date before the bankruptcy was insufficient without proof that it was in existence before the bankruptcy. See the observations of Lord Abinger and Alderson, B. on this case, in Goodtitle v. Milburn, Ib. 859, 860. But if the note

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxiii. 259. [2]Id. xiv. 320. [3]Id. ii. 327. [4]Id. ii. 488. [5]Id. x. 464. [6]Id. xiii. 36. [7]Id. xiii. 328. [8]Id. xxii. 374. [9]Id. xxvii. 419.

*The debt is insufficient if one of the petitioning creditors be an infant (d); but the husband alone may sue out a commission on a promissosy note to the wife before coverture (e). A debt due from a partnership will support a separate commission (f); but where a debt is due to a partnership, all must concur in the petition (g). Where, in the case of a partnership, an account has been rendered and a balance struck, it will support a commission (h). An executor may sue out a commission before probate, provided he obtain probate previous to the adjudication (i); though the probate be not properly stamped till after the adjudication (k). A debt due to an attorney for costs is sufficient, although he has not delivered a bill according to the statute (l).

The late statute provides that a debt shall be sufficient to support a com-be proved to be in existence before the docket struck, the date previous to the bankruptcy is evidence of its previous existence. Obbard v. Betham,[1] M. & M. 486. And its continued existence up to the time of the act will be presumed. Jackson v. Irwin, 2 Camp. 50; unless other transactions have intervened. Gresley v. Price,[2] 2 C. & P. 48. Such previous existence may be evidenced by circumstances; as if it can be shown that about the date of the bill, goods were sold of corresponding amount. Cowie v. Harris,[3] M. & M. 141. As to the effect of an act of bankruptcy prior to the petitioning creditor's debt, vide infra.

(c) Dawe v. Holdsworth, Peake, S. C. 64; Meggott v. Mills, 12 Mod. 157; 1 Ld. Raym. 286; 1 Montague's B. L. 33. Butcher v. Easto, Doug. 282; Heanney v. Birch, 3 Camp. 234. Where the party before he became a trader became indebted to the petitioning creditor in a sum exceeding 100*l*, and afterwards became a trader, but ceased to be such at the time of committing an act of bankruptcy, it was held, that the commission might be supported upon such debt and act of bankruptcy. Bailie v. Grant,[4] 9 Bing. 121. Where there existed at the time of the act of bankruptcy a sufficient debt on which a commission might have issued, and also at the time of its issuing, and the balance throughout continuing sufficient for that purpose, it is not material that payments had in the interim been made more than sufficient to discharge the balance due at the time of the act of bankruptcy, Shaw v. Harvey,[5] 1 M. & M. 526. Taxed costs upon a judgment, as in case of nonsuit, being only recoverable by attachment, do not constitute a sufficient petitioning creditor's debt. Ex parte Stevenson, 1 M. & M. 262. Where the petitioning creditor had sworn to a debt for money advanced, it being only part of the amount of purchase money of premises which were surrendered to him by way of mortgage, held, that it being only an equitable debt, it would not support a commission. Ex parte Hawthorne, 1 Mont. 132. Notes of the bankrupts given for a pre-existing debt, payable at S. on demand, are a sufficient debt to support the commission, although no demand has been previously made at S. 6 M. & S. 295. A trader by deed conveyed all his personal estate to four persons, in trust to pay and discharge his debts, &c., containing a proviso that the said parties, trustees and creditors, should, on or before —— next, make such proof (of debts) if required, and execute these presents, with a covenant not to sue, operating as a release by the creditors signing it; two only of the said trustees executed the deed, and not the others; held, that the effect of the words of such proviso was not to avoid the deed if the parties therein named should not execute it, but merely to take away from such parties the right to recover a dividend; the debt therefore of a party executing it was extinguished, and would not constitute a petitioning creditor's debt to found a commission. Small v. Marwood,[6] 9 B. & C. 300. Where the debt was for money lent on a mortgage, payable after six months' notice, but not to expire before a day stated, it was held sufficient to support a commission sued out before that day. Hill v. Harris,[7] 1 M. & M. 448. Partners, upon being appointed treasurers to a company, executed a joint and several bond, conditioned amongst other things, when thereunto required, to pay over balances, &c.; held, that upon their bankruptcy before any request made to pay, &c., it was not a sufficient breach to constitute an existing debt, proveable against their separate estates. Ex parte Lancaster Can. Co., 1 Mont. 27. Held also, that it could not be considered a contingent debt, within the 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 56, to give a right of proof, under which there must be an actual debt dependent on a contingency. Ib. Three parties jointly indebted, covenanted jointly and severally on demand to pay: and the deed also contained a stipulation that any debt existing previous to such demand should remain a debt, in like manner as if no covenant had been entered into, it being intended only as an additional security; held, that until actual demand the debt remained joint only, and was proveable against the joint estate only, and not against the separate estates. Ex parte Fairlie, 1 Mont. 17. Upon a petition on a bill of exchange accepted by the defendant, which, after examination by the commissioners, has been lost, such loss may be proved in an action by the assignees on notice to dispute the debt; for though the legal remedy may be gone, the debt remains. Pooley v. Millard, 1 Cr. & J. 411; 1 Tyr. 331. Where the act of bankruptcy consists of lying in prison, the trading must be before the imprisonment. Ex parte Lynch, 1 Mont. & B. 453; 6 M. & S. 295; Higgin v. Macadam, 3 Y. & J. 1.

(d) Ex parte Morton, Buck. 42.
(e) Ex parte Barber, 1 G. & J. 1. M'Neilage v. Holloway, 1 B. & A. 218.
(f) Ex parte Crisp, 1 Atk. 134.
(g) Buckland v. Newsam, 1 Taunt. 477.
(h) Ex parte Nosey, 1 Mont. & A. 46.
(i) Ex parte Puddy, Buck. 235; 3 Madd. 241.
(k) Rogers v. James,[8] 7 Taunt. 147.
(l) Ex parte Sutton, 11 Ves. 164. Ex parte Howell, 1 Rose, 112.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxii. 363. [2]Id. xii. 22. [3]Id. xxii. 270. [4]Id. xxiii. 276. [5]Id. xxii. 374. [6]Id. xvii. 385. [7]Id. xii. 356. [8]Id. ii. 52.

mission, although the time of credit had not elapsed at the time of the act of bankruptcy (m).

A creditor who receives a sum of money after notice of the act of bankruptcy, sufficient, if taken in payment, to reduce his debt below the sum of 100*l.*, may still sue out a commission (n); and it is no objection that the debt has since merged in a security of a higher nature (o), or that the debtor has become insolvent, and included the debt in his schedule (p). But where a bankrupt contracts a further debt, after he leaves off trade, and pays money without directing the application, the payment will be set against the old debt, and consequently if it reduce the old debt to less than 100*l.* it will not support a commission (q). A creditor who has taken in *149 *part payment the bill of the trader on a drawee, who had no effects of the trader's in his hands, may petition although he gave no notice of the dishonour of the bill (r). A judgment-creditor who has taken his debtor in execution cannot afterwards sue out a commission of bankrupt (s) on the same debt. Damages for breach of promise of marriage, the verdict being before, but the judgment after an act of bankruptcy, will not support a commission (t).

It has been decided, that a debt barred by the Statute of Limitations is insufficient (u), even though it has been kept alive by the suing out of process, and entering of continuances (x).

A warrant of attorney given as a security against running acceptances is a debitum in præsenti, which will support a commission (y).

The evidence to prove the debt is the same as if the action had been brought against the bankrupt (z). Therefore an admission of the debt by (m) Stat. 6 G. 4, c. 16, s. supra, note (a). A bill of exchange or promissory note operates as a debt from the date, and therefore an indorsee may petition on a bill or note dated before the act of bankruptcy, though not due till after. Bingley v. Maddison, 1 Co. B. L. 20. Glaister v. Hewer, 7 T. R. 498. Brett v. Levett, 13 East, 213. Ex parte Thomas, 1 Atk. 73. Macarty v. Barrow, 2 Str. 949; Eden, 47; 2 Wils. 135. But it must appear that the indorsement to the petitioner was previous to the commission. Rose v. Rowcroft, 4 Camp. 245. Ex parte Botter, 1 Mont. & B. 412. And where a bill was drawn by the bankrupt in favour of a creditor, and he became bankrupt before the bill became due or was presented, it was held to be a good debt, although after the suing out of the commission the amount was paid by the acceptor Ex parte Douthat,[1] 4 B. & A. 67. See Macarty v. Barrow, Str. 949. Chilton v. Wiffin, 3 Wils. 17. Starey v Barns, 7 East, 435. Abraham v. George, 11 Price, 423. Where the bill drawn by the bankrupt has become due before the bankruptcy, proof must be given of presentment and notice of dishonour. Cooper v. Machin,[2] 1 Bing. 426. If two exchange acceptances, and one before the bills become due commits an act of bankruptcy, the other cannot sue out a commission. Sarratt v. Austin, 4 Taunt. 200; and see Bleasby v. Crossley,[3] 3 Bing. 438. Neither can the acceptor of a bill for the accommodation of the bankrupt who does not pay it till after the bankruptcy, for till payment he is a mere surety. Ex parte Holding, 1 G. & J. 97. Interest, where it is not expressed in the body of the bill, cannot be added to make up the amount. Ex parte Burgess,[4] 2 Moore, 745; Cameron v. Smith, 2 B. & A. 305; and see Brett v. Levett, 13 East, 213.

(n) Mann v. Shepherd, 6 T. R. 79. Buck. 283.

(o) Ambrose v. Clendon, Ca. T. H. 267; 2 Str. 1042. Or that the creditor has obtained judgment for it. Bryant v. Withers, 2 M. & S. 123.

(p) Jellis v. Mountford,[5] 4 B. & A. 256; Ex parte Shuttleworth, 2 G. & J. 68.

(q) Meggott v. Mills, Ld. Raym. 286; Comb. 463.

(r) Bickerdike v. Bollman, 1 T. R. 405.

(s) Cohen v. Cunningham, 8 T. R. 123.

(t) Ex parte Charles, 14 East, 197.

(u) Gregory v. Hurrill, Eden's B. L. 46, 2d edit.[6] 5 B. & C. 341;[7] 1 Bing. 324; reversing the judgment of the Court of C. P.[8] 3 B. & B. 212. But note that the writs were not returned, nor were the continuances entered until after the issuing the commission. See Taylor v. Hipkins,[9] 5 B. & A. 489. Ex parte Roffey, 2 Rose, 245. Where the debt arose on a joint note made in 1825, with a party who, in 1835, executed an assignment for the benefit of his creditors, under which a dividend was afterwards received in respect of the note and interest; held, that such payment by a co-contractor did not revive the debt against the bankrupt so as to make it proveable. Woodward ex parte, 3 Mont. & Ayr. 609; and 3 Deac. 290, 294; Jackson v. Fairbank, 2 H. Bl. 340.

(x) See the last note.

(y) Miles v. Rawlyns, 4 Esp. C. 194.

(z) B. N. P. 37. Abbott v. Plumbe, Doug. 216. Koopes v. Chapman, Peake, 19.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. vi. 354. [2]Id. viii. 367. [3]Id. xiii. 36. [4]Id. iv. 241. [5]Id. vi. 420. [6]Id. xi. 251. [7]Id. viii. 335. [8]Id. vii. 415. [9]Id. vii. 169.

the bankrupt before his bankruptcy is evidence (a). So are entries in the bankrupt's books (b), or declarations of the bankrupt before the bankruptcy; declarations by the bankrupt as to the debt, made after the act of bankruptcy, but before the commission, have been received in evidence (c). But it has since been decided, after a consideration of all the authorities, that an admission made by the bankrupt after an act of bankruptcy, though before the commission, is not admissible to establish the petitioning creditor's debt (d). An acknowledgment by a trader of a debt by bond does not supersede the necessity of proving it by the attesting witness (e).

The date upon a promissory note is not even primâ facie evidence to show that it had existence prior to the act of bankruptcy (f). If the creditor petition as the indorsee of a bill, the time of indorsement must be proved (g).

Proof that the bankrupt and petitioning creditor attended before the commissioners, and discussed the amount of the debt, and that the commissioners *struck off items objected to, and struck a balance in favour of the petitioning creditor, is presumptive evidence, from the conduct and demeanor of the bankrupt (the plaintiff in the action), of a balance to that amount; but it is not evidence in the nature of an adjudication or award (h). Where the creditor petitions as the assignee of a bankrupt, it is necessary to prove all the steps of the former bankruptcy (i). But parties to the record may prove title as assignees, by means of depositions under the statute, although they be not described as such on the record (k). *150

Where a new petitioning creditor's debt has been substituted, under the statute 6 Geo. 4, c. 10, s. 18, it is sufficient to prove the petition to the Chancellor for the substitution, the Chancellor's order referring the sufficiency of the debt to the commissioner, and the finding of the commissioner thereon; it is not necessary to produce the Chancellor's order confirming such finding (l).

By the statute 2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 114, provision is made as to proof of the ingredients of bankruptcy in case of the death of any witness.

Where a defendant, whether the bankrupt himself, or any other person, has done any act by which he acknowledges the bankruptcy, the proof of that act, as against that person, supersedes the necessity of the regular detailed proof (m). Where an auctioneer, in a catalogue of goods for sale, Superseding evidence.

(a) Brett v. Levett, 13 East, 213; 2 H. B. 279. Dowton v. Cross, 1 Esp. C. 168. Hoare v. Coryton, 4 Taunt. 560. Bobson v. Kemp, 4 Esp. C. 234.

(b) Jackson v. Irwin, 2 Camp. 50. Watts v. Thorpe, 1 Camp. 376.

(c) Brett v. Levett, 13 East, 213, where the declaration of a bankrupt made after the act of bankruptcy, but before the commission, was admitted, in order to supply proof of notice to him of the dishonour of the bill of exchange; and see Dowton v. Cross, 1 Esp. C. 168. But see Watts v. Thorpe, 1 Camp. 376; 2 Camp. 49; Hoare v. Coryton, 4 Taunt. 560; Robson v. Kemp, 4 Esp. C. 233.

(d) Smallcombe v. Burges, 13 Price, 136; Sanderson v. Laforest,[1] 1 C. & P. 46.

(e) Abbott v. Plumbe, Doug. 216.

(f) The contrary was held in Taylor v. Kinloch,[2] 1 Starkie's C. 175, upon a mistaken report of a case (cited from memory) which had been tried on the northern circuit. This case was mentioned by Bayley, J.; and it appears that further evidence was held to be necessary to prove the existence previous to the bankruptcy.

(g) Rose v. Rowcroft, 2 Camp. 245. (h) Jarrett v. Leonard, 2 M. & S. 265.

(i) Doe v. Liston, 4 Taunt. 741. See Antram v. Chace, 15 East, 209. Previous to the stat. 6 G. 4, c. 16.

(k) Doe v. Liston, 4 Taunt. 741; Simmons v. Knight, 3 Camp. 251; Newport v. Hollings,[3] 3 C. & P. 223; Rowe v. Lant, Gow. 24.

(l) Bachelor v. Vyse, 1 M. & R. 331.

(m) Trover by the assignees of a bankrupt; amongst other admissions, one was by the defendant's attorney, that a commission had issued against the party under which he was duly declared bankrupt, and the plaintiffs chosen assignees; such admission dispenses with the necessity of producing the proceedings, and no notice having been given to dispute any of the proceedings, the commission is conclusive. Perring v. Tucker, 3 M. & P. 557; Pole v. March, 1 B. & Ad. 558. In an action by an assignee the defendant con-

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. xi. 309. [2] Id. ii. 344. [3] Id. xiv. 279.

describes them to be "the property of the bankrupt" (n), it is primâ facie evidence of the fact. So where a debtor to the bankrupt, for goods sold by the latter, stated an account to the plaintiff as assignee, and paid him part (o). But a trader declared to be a bankrupt does not, by surrendering under it, preclude himself from disputing the legality of the commission, for he is bound by law to surrender himself (p) (1); neither is a creditor who has received part of the debt before the commission, and proves the rest under it, estopped from disputing it in an action brought by the assignees to recover the first payment (q). The proving a debt under a commission *151 *is not even primâ facie evidence of the bankruptcy in an action by the assignees against the creditor (r).

Proof of the assignment.

An assignment under the statute 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, was proved by its production, bearing the registrar's certificate of its having been entered of record according to the statute (s), or by an office copy (t). It has been held that if the assignment be produced, it is (u) necessary to prove the execution by the commissioners.

And where the title of the assignees to the lands, tenements, and hereditaments of the bankrupt came in question, the assignees, in cases where an actual assignment under that statute is necessary, proved their title by the conveyance from the commissioners, that is, by deed indented and enrolled (x) in one of the courts of record at Westminster (y).

The deed had no relation to the bankruptcy, so as to vest such property in the assignees from that time, and therefore they could not recover for a trespass, or on a demise in ejectment anterior to the bargain and sale, although subsequent to the bankruptcy (z).

Where there had been a provisional assignment it was necessary that it should be proved in the manner already stated (a), and the assign-sented, provided the plaintiff would waive holding him to bail, to admit every fact except as to merits, as the only question he wished to try was, whether he was liable on a certain agreement, and a common appearance was accordingly entered; having received the benefit, he cannot afterwards recede, and insist upon proof of the bankruptcy and title of the assignees. Davis v. Burton,[1] 4 C. & P. 166. The defendant, on being applied to by the assigneess, said he would call and pay the money, held to be sufficient. Pope v. Monk,[2] 2 C. & P. 112. An affidavit, that a party is indebted to the deponent in the sum of 100*l*., and has become bankrupt, is conclusive evidence of the bankruptcy. Ledbetter v. Salt,[3] 4 Bing. 623; 1 M. & P. 597. Proof by an admission is sufficient, although title is expressly denied by the plea. Inglis v. Spence, 1 C. M. & R. 432. And see Munk v. Clarke,[4] 2 Bing. N. C. 299, supra.

(n) Maltby v. Christie, 1 Esp. 340; 1 B. and A. 677; 16 East, 193.

(o) Dickinson v. Coward, 1 B. & A. 677. See Pope v. Monk, 2 C. & P. 112.

(p) 9 East, 21; Taunt. 80, 84, 96. Ex parte Jones, 11 Ves. 409. Nor do the formal words of the petition for enlarging the time of his surrender amount to such an admission.

(q) Stewart v. Rickman, 1 Esp. C. 108. Hope v. Fletcher, Sel. N. P. 238. Collins v. Forbes, 3 T. R. 322. But see Walker v. Burnell, Doug. 305; where it was held that the assignees under a former commission, after proving a debt under the second commission, could not dispute it.

(r) Rankin v. Horner, 16 East, 191; Watson v. Wace,[5] 5 B. & C. 153. Vide tit. Admissions.

(s) By the stat. 6 G. 4, c. 16, supra, 129. (t) Ibid.

(u) Gomersall v. Serle, 2 Y. & J. 5. But Lord Tenterden in Tucker v. Barrow, sitt. after Mich. 1827, held the contrary: and see the 97th sect. which makes office copies evidence, and imposes a restraint on the production of the originals.

(x) The indorsement of enrolment, or an examined copy, is conclusive evidence of enrolment. See Vol. I. and Index, tit. Bargain and Sale.—Enrolment. R. v. Hopper, 3 Price, 495; 1 Doug. 56.

(y) 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 64. The clause excepts copyhold and customary land; it also directs the assignment and registration of colonial lands, and of all deeds, papers, and writings respecting the same.

(z) Doe v. Mitchell, 2 M. & S. 466. See Elliott v. Danby, 12 Mod. 3; Perry v. Bowes, 1 Ventr. 260.

(a) Supra 151. See 2 Christian's B. L. 448. If the action be brought by the provisional assignee, who sues out a latitat, it is no defence under the general issue that other assignees were appointed between the issuing the writ and the declaration. Page v. Bauer,[6] 4 B. & A. 345. The assignment was directed to be made by the provisional assignees to the creditors' assignees, an assignment by the former to the comment by the provisional assignee to the second assignee was also to be proved (b).

(1) [See cases under the U. S. bankrupt law, collected in Mr. Day's note to Donovan v. Duff, 9 East, 25.]

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xix. 324. [2]Id. xii. 50. [3]Id. xv. 91. [4]Id. xxix. 345. [5]Id. xi. 187. [6]Id. vi. 449.

Under the late statute, 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 56, it is sufficient to prove the appointment of the assignees under the seal of the Court of Bankruptcy (c).

*When the assignees have proved their title to sue in that character, *152 they proceed to prove the cause by action (1). In some instances, the proof and grounds of defence are (d) just the same as if the action had missioners, and by them to the creditors' assignees, was held to be insufficient. Moult v. Massey,[1] 1 B. & Ad. 636.

(b) By the 45th section of the stat. 6 G. 4, c. 16, s. 45, provisional assignees may be removed at the meeting of creditors for the choice of assignees, if they think fit, and such assignees so appointed shall deliver up and assign all the estate of the bankrupt come to their possession; and all estate of the bankrupt so delivered up and assigned shall be as effectually and legally vested in the assignees so chosen, as if the first assignment had been made to them.

(c) By that stat., s. 25, when any person shall have been adjudged a bankrupt, all his personal estate and effects, present and future, which by the laws now in force may be assigned by commissioners acting in the execution of a commission against such bankrupt shall become absolutely vested in and transferred to the assignee or assignees for the time being, by virtue of their appointment, without any deed of assignment for that purpose. And as often as any such assignee shall die or be lawfully removed, and a new assignee duly appointed, all such personal estate as was then vested in such deceased or removed assignee, shall, by virtue of such appointment, vest in the new assignee, either alone or jointly with the existing assignee, as the case may require.

By sec. 26, similar provision is made for the vesting of the real estate.

By sec. 27, where a conveyance of the property of a bankrupt would require to be registered, the certificate of the appointment of the assignee shall be registered.

By sec. 29, it is enacted that a certificate of the appointment of such assignees, purporting to be under the seal of the court of bankruptcy, shall be received in evidence without further proof. The stat. 6 G. 4, c. 16, s. 91, exempts all commissions, conveyances and instruments, relating to the estates of bankrupts, from stamp duty, from Sept. 1, 1825.

(d) The assignees of A. & B. cannot recover where A. & B. by reason of the fraud of A., could not have recovered had not the bankruptcy taken place. Jones v. Yeates,[2] 9 B. & C. 532; and see Kymer v. Larkin,[3] 5 Bing. 71. An admission by a defendant before commissioners of bankrupt, that he had received a sum of money on account of the bankrupt, will not support a count on an account stated with the assignees, for he does not admit that the money remains in his hands. Tucker v. Barrow,[4] 7 B. & C. 623. The petitioning creditor's debt accrued on the 4th April, previous to which, as well as subsequently, acts of bankruptcy had been committed, and goods had been sold in three parcels, two before the 4th of April, and the third on the 9th; held, in trover by the assignees, that they could only recover in cases where the bankrupt himself might impeach the transaction, unless the delivery were subsequent to the act of bankruptcy after the petitioning creditor's debt accrued, and that they were entitled only to recover in respect of the third parcel. Ward v. Clarke,[5] 1 M. & M. 497. The defendant claiming a lien on the deeds of a bankrupt, had extorted a mortgage of other premises belonging to the bankrupt's brother, as a consideration for giving them up; held, that the assignees could not maintain any action against the defendant, as for a payment extorted from the bankrupt. Noble v. Kersey,[6] 4 C. & P. 90. By the contract of sale of several pipes of wine lying in a bonded warehouse, the vendee was bound to pay the duty, and he was only entitled to receive them by the delivery order, on payment thereof; the obligees to the Crown were called upon to pay the duty, and were repaid by the vendors; held, that the assignees of the vendee were precluded from demanding the wine before they had repaid those sums, and that the fact of the bankrupt having been charged with the warehouse rent did not make the possession of the warehouseman the possession of the bankrupt. Winks v. Hassall,[7] 9 B. & C. 372. A creditor, in order to relieve the goods of a party become bankrupt, taken in execution, paid the amount directed to be levied to the sheriff, with notice of a docket having been struck, directing him to retain the money in his hands; the assignees afterwards repaid him the amount, and sued the sheriff for money had and received; held, that as the assignees did not exist at the time, and as the money paid was not their money, they could not maintain the action. Semble the rule omnis ratihabitio, &c. cannot be carried so far as to give effect to acts done when the ratifying parties did not exist. Bucker v. Booth,[8] 1 M. & M. 518. Where bankers were, by the terms agreed upon, to discount only such indorsed bills remitted to them as should be necessary to cover acceptances becoming due, held that they could not, after having dishonoured acceptances, discount a bill which had been so remitted, as they had no right to discount it without also executing the trust reposed in them, and that their assignees could not retain such bill against the petitioners. Ex parte Frere, 1 Mont. & M. 263. The defendant in April, upon an advance of money, received the title-deeds of an estate about to be purchased by the mortgagor, untainted with any usurious consideration, and previous to the conveyance of the estate insisted upon the mortgagor purchasing goods at a price above their value as a bonus, or otherwise he would not continue

(1) [The assignees, and not individual creditors, have the right to sue for property fraudulently conveyed by the bankrupt, and withheld from the list of the estate given in. Edwards v. Coleman, 2 Bibb, 204.]

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xx. 461. [2]Id. xvii. 436. [3]Id. xv. 371. [4]Id. xiv. 133. [5]Id. xxii. 369. [6]Id. xix. 290. [7]Id. xvii. 397. [8]Id. xxii. 372.

Evidence by assignees in particular actions.

been brought *by the trader himself (e); and there is nothing in the evidence which is peculiar to bankruptcy, except, indeed, that the bankrupt himself, after having obtained his certificate and released the assignees, is a competent witness (f).

Trover.

Where trover is brought by the assignees on a conversion after the bankruptcy, though before the commission, it is unnecessary to prove an actual demand, since the property vests in the assignees by relation so as to avoid all mesne acts (g).

But by the bankruptcy an immediate and premature end is put to all transactions between the bankrupt and those with whom he dealt, and a new interest arises on the part of the creditors, by which the rights of the parties are much varied.

Evidence peculiar to bankruptcy.

Evidence on the part of the assignees, peculiar to cases of bankruptcy, is frequently necessary.

1st. To show that the trader, at the time of the bankruptcy, was in possession, &c. as reputed owner.

2dly. That the right to particular property vested in the bankrupt by delivery, &c., so as to pass to his assignees.

the mortgage; held, that the original possession of the title-deeds being good, gave a right to the estate whenever it should be conveyed to the mortgagor, and that the assignees of the latter could not maintain trover, even for the latter conveyance. Wood v. Grimwood,[1] 10 B. & C. 679. Assignees do not claim in strictness under the bankrupt, but adversely to him, and by operation of law. Gould v. Shoyer,[2] 6 Bing. 738. See[3] 8 B. & C. 448. App. Vol. II. tit. APPROPRIATION. Where the bankrupt became tenant to the defendant under an agreement for a lease, and was distrained on by the superior landlord in consequence of the defendant's neglect to satisfy the rent, held that the assignees were entitled to sue in an action on the case for damages sustained by the bankrupt in consequence of such distress, as upon a breach of an implied agreement for quiet enjoyment; and that they might sue in case or assumpsit. Hancock v. Caffyn,[4] 8 Bing. 358. Where the bankrupt had borrowed of a third party a carriage, and lent it to the defendant, by whom it was broken and damaged, and the owner proved the amount of the damage under the bankruptcy, although no dividend was ever paid, held that the assignees were entitled to maintain the action for damages, but only to recover nominal damages. Porter v. Varley,[5] 9 Bing. 93. Where one of the defendants, having become possessed of shares in a mining company, by the regulations of which it was necessary for him to sign the deed of association and receive a certificate before a certain day; and he residing in the country, directed his son, the other defendant, to sign the deed in his own name and receive the certificate, which he accordingly did, and after his father's bankruptcy sold them and paid over the whole proceeds to his father, before any demand by the assignees; held, that as after the execution of the deed the father never had any legal property in the shares, and if the assignees had obtained possession of the certificate they could only have compelled an assignment by the son in equity, they could not maintain trover for the certificate. Dawson v. Rishworth,[6] 1 B. & Ad. 574. The plaintiffs put up the bankrupt's goods to sale, and amongst them, some stereotype plates, which were at the time in the defendant's hands, the defendant claiming a lien thereon, were included by him in the sale, but the assignees refused to authorize it: they however afterwards signed the catalogue, to exempt them from the auction duty; held, that this was not to be deemed an adoption of the sale, so as to defeat their right to maintain trover against the defendant for the goods; held also, that in respect of a modern trade, like that of stereotype printing, there could be no general usage to support the claims of a general lien on the plates, not being manufactured by him, but only sent to print from. Bleaden v. Hancock,[7] 1 M. & M 465. Money had and received to the use of the assignees, where the proper form of action; see Simpson v. Sykes, 6 M. & S. 295. Assignees under the 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, may maintain an action for unliquidated damages which have accrued before the bankruptcy, by non-performance of a contract. Wright v. Fairfield and others,[8] 2 B. & Ad. 727. Where bills were delivered to the defendant by a bankrupt, with the view of giving a fraudulent preference, and the amount was received after the bankruptcy, held that the assignees could not recover in trover without proving a previous demand and refusal; the receipt of the money was not in itself a conversion. Jones v. Fort,[9] 9 B & C. 764.

(e) They may adopt and rely upon a contract made by the bankrupt subsequently to his bankruptcy. Butler v. Carver and others,[10] 2 Starkie's C. 434. The assignees may either enforce or reject such a contract at pleasure. If a bankrupt after his bankruptcy sell goods, the assignees may bring either trover or assumpsit for the value. Hassey v. Feddall, 3 Salk. 59; Holt, 95; 12 Mod. 324.

(f) Vide infra, 192.

(g) Kiggill v. Player, 1 Salk. 111; B. N. P. 41;[11] 2 Starkie's C. 306. Before the late statute, where the assignees sought to impeach a delivery by the bankrupt, as made in contemplation of bankruptcy, it was necessary to prove an actual demand. Nixon v. Jenkins, 2 H. B. 135; but as such a delivery is now void, being an act of bankruptcy, a demand seems now to be unnecessary.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxi. 148. [2]Id. xix. 219. [3]Id. xv. 261. [4]Id. xxii. 318. [5]Id. xxiii. 272. [6]Id. xx. 442. [7]Id. xix. 317. [8]Id. xxii. 175. [9]Id. xvii. 493. [10]Id. iii. 417. [11]Id. iii. 357.

3dly. To show the right of the assignees in disaffirmance of some act of disposition by the bankrupt.

1. That the bankrupt, at the time of the bankruptcy, had the possession, &c. of the goods as reputed owner. Reputed ownership.

By the statute 5 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 72, it is enacted, that if any bankrupt (h), *at the time (i) he becomes bankrupt, shall, by the consent and permission of the true owner (j) thereof, have in his possession (k), order, or disposition (l), any goods or chattels (m), whereof he was reputed *154

(h) The statute does not apply to property which comes into the bankrupt's possession after the act of bankruptcy. Lyon v. Weldon,[1] 2 Bing. 334.

(i) Goods which have subsequently come into his possession are not within the statute. Lyon v. Weldon,[1] 2 Bing. 334. So if taken out of the bankrupt's possession before the act of bankruptcy. Jones v. Dyer, 15 East, 21. Arbouin v. Williams, M. & M. 72. It has been held at Nisi Prius, that a removal on the same day with the act of bankruptcy would not take the case out of the statute. Arbouin v. Williams, 72, sed. qu. It has been held that a demand of the goods before bankruptcy was sufficient. Smith v. Topping,[2] 5 B. & Ad. 674.

(j) The consent of a person who was permitted by the true owner to deal with the goods as his own is not sufficient, Fraser v. Swansea Canal Company,[3] 1 Ad. & Ell. 355.

(k) On a loan, the dock tickets of tallow in the docks were deposited by the borrower; these had been taken originally not in his own name, but in that of another, as a trustee (for secrecy in the trade), whose name was indorsed on the tickets without his knowledge or interference, and the goods remained in his name at the dock; held, upon his becoming bankrupt, that never having had possession of the tickets, without the production of which the tallow would not have been delivered to him or to his order, they were not in his reputed ownership within the statute. Ridout v. Alder, 1 Mont. 103. After the death of one partner, the survivors accepted, by way of a compromise, securities for a debt due to the original firm, and afterwards became bankrupt; held, that such securities were property in their order and disposition, within the 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 72, for the benefit of the creditors of the surviving partners, but that goods purchased by the original firm jointly with other firms, and remaining in the possession of the latter, were not within the statute. So of goods shipped in the life-time of the partner, but returned after his death; and of a bill of lading sent to the holder of a bill not paid, and in his hands at the time of the bankruptcy. So goods sent by a debtor to the partnership after the death of the partner, and at the time of the bankruptcy in the possession of an agent of the partnership, who claimed a lien thereon for freight. So a plantation estate mortgaged to the partnership, but not conveyed until after the death of the partner, and at the time of the bankruptcy in the possession of the survivors; except as between the partners, the real estate of a partnership retains its original character. Ex parte Taylor, 1 Mont. 240. Upon a party being admitted as a dormant partner, it was agreed that the stock, debts, &c. should form the new partnership stock, that he should receive a certain per-centage on his capital, but should not interfere, and the firm was carried on as before; upon their bankruptcy, held that the creditors of the old firm were entitled to have the stock, &c. considered as within the order and disposition of the two original partners, to be administered as their separate estate, although some of the creditors had notice of the dormant partner. Ex parte Jennings, 1 Mont. 45.

(l) As to the effect of these words, see below.

(m) Under the statute 21 J. 1, c. 19, book debts, bills of exchange, and choses in action, are within this description. 1 Wilson, 260. Ryall v. Rolle, 1 Ves. 348; 1 Atk. 165. Hornblower v. Proud, 5 B. & A. 327. The assignee of a simple contract debt is deemed to have the order and disposition of the debt, with the consent of the true owner, until the debtor has notice of the assignment. Buck v. Lee,[4] 1 A. & E. 804. So a freight assigned, and notice having been given to the party who is to pay it, is no longer in the order and disposition of the assignor. Douglas v. Russell, 4 Sim. 524; 1 M. & K. 488. An Act made canal shares personal property, and transmissible according to printed forms in the form of a conveyance; held, per V. C. Shadwell, that they were not to be considered as goods and chattels generally, but merely for the purposes mentioned in the Act, viz. to representatives, and were not within the clause of reputed ownership. But the judgment was reversed on appeal. Ex parte Lancaster Can. Co. 1 Mont. 116. And see Vauxhall Br. Co. 1 Gl. & J. 101. Nelson v. London Assurance Co., 2 S. & S. 282. Shares in a newspaper, Longman v. Tripp, 2 B. and R. 67. The bankrupt, previous to his bankruptcy, effected policies of insurance on his life, which he assigned, and delivered over the policies; the assignee gave no notice of the assignment to the office until after the bankruptcy; it was held, that the policies remained in the order and dispositon of the bankrupt, and passed to his assignees. Ex parte Colvill, 1 Mont. 110.

The wife being possessed of gas shares, the bankrupt pledges the certificates as a security for advances; no notice having been given to the company until after the act of bankruptcy, the shares are within his order and disposition. Spencer, ex parte, 3 Mont. & Ayr. 697. The bankrupt had deposited with A. B. as a security for a loan, shares in a foreign mining company, accompanied with an agreement to complete the transaction when required, and he communicated such deposit to one of the directors, who communicated it to the board before the act of bankruptcy committed; A. B. afterwards sealed up the shares, and entrusted them to the bankrupt to keep in his iron safe for better custody, where they remained until three weeks before the bankruptcy, when they were delivered back; held, not to be within the order and disposition of the bankrupt at the time of his bankruptcy; semble, shares of a company, possessing lands abroad for the purposes of trade, are not to be deemed real property. Ex parte Richardson, 3 Deac. 496; and 1 Mont. & Ch. 43.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. ix. 424. [2]Id. xxvii. 152. [3]Id. xxviii. 105. [4]Id. xxviii. 220.

*owner (n), or whereof he had taken upon him the sale, alteration, or disposition as owner, the commissioners shall have power to sell and dispose of the same for the benefit of the creditors under the commission; provided,
*156 that *nothing herein contained shall invalidate or affect any transfer or assignment of any ship or vessel, or any share thereof, made as a security for any debt or debts, either by way of mortgage or assignment, duly registered according to the provisions of an Act of Parliament made in the fourth year of his present Majesty, intituled, An Act for the Registering of Vessels (o).

The obvious intention of this provision (p) is to prevent a trader from acquiring a false and delusive credit to the deception of others, by an apparent property in goods which do not belong to him.

Where railway shares were deposited by the bankrupt's partner with bankers, as security for acceptances by a third party, and for whom the bankers had discounted them, and who, being managing director of the company; was informed at the time of renewing the bill that the certificates of the shares had been so deposited; held, that as the bankrupt had parted with the possession of them, and that, as transfer could be made without the authority of the party for whose use they had been so deposited, the bankrupt was not to be deemed the reputed owner, and the shares were not in his order and disposition. Ex parte Harrison, 3 Deac. 185; and 3 Mont. & Ayr. 596. Where the same party was secretary to two offices, with one of which shares were deposited; held not sufficient notice of the transfer of the bankrupt's interest to prevent the claim of reputed ownership. Bignold, ex parte, 3 Deac. 151; and 3 Mont. & Ayr. 477. Where certificates of shares of a foreign bank were transmitted to the bankrupts on a contract for joint purchase of them, and clothed with a trust to apply the proceeds, when disposed of, to retire bills drawn for the purchase; held, that they were not within the order and disposition as the property of the bankrupt, and did not therefore pass to the assignees. Brown, ex parte, 3 Deac. 91; 3 Mont. & Ayr. 472. Where on a joint commission against G. and L., the latter obtained his certificate, and in consideration of undertaking to pay his creditors in full within a certain time, obtained a deed poll to enable him to supersede, and they also executed a power of attorney to enable F. to receive the dividends for the use of L. and do what was requisite to enable L. to supersede. The consideration was never performed, and afterwards a second commission issued against L.; held, that the creditors, and not F., were entitled to receive the dividends, and that the reputed ownership and order and disposition of them was not in the bankrupt. Smithers, ex parte, 3 Mont. & Ayr. 693. So are mortgages and sales upon condition of goods and chattels as well as absolute sales. Hornblower v. Proud, 2 B. & A. 327. And so is a mortgage by one partner to another of his moiety of his stock in trade, if the partner so mortgaging remain in possession as the visible proprietor of the moiety. Ibid. A., the owner of lease of house and fixtures, mortgages both and becomes bankrupt; the fixtures do not pass to assignees as goods and chattels. Boydell v. M'Michael, 1 C. M. & R. 77. All goods and chattels are within the statute. Ships ex parte Burn, 1 J. & W. 378. Stephens v. Sale, cited 1 Ves. 352. Although the decisions are not uniform on the subject, the general rule seems to be that fixtures are not within the words goods and chattels. In the cases of Coombs v. Beaumont, Clarke v. Crownshaw,[1] 3 B. & Ad. 804, Park, J. intimated that the distinction with respect to fixtures as between landlord and tenant, did not prevail under the statute. In Trapps v. Harper, the Court of Exchequer held that fixtures might pass to the assignees as personal property. This seems, however, to have been overruled by the case of Boydell v. M'Michael, 1 C. M. & R. 177, and is opposed to the current of authorities, in which it has been held that steam engines, boilers (Hubbard v. Bagshaw, 4 Simons, 326), vats, stills and utensils (Horne v. Baker, 9 East, 215; Clarke v. Crownshaw,[1] 3 B. & Ad. 804), if fixed to the freehold, do not pass to the assignees. And see Ex parte Lloyd, 1 Mont. & Ayr. 494. Ex parte Belcher, 2 Mont. & Ayr. 160. Ex parte Wilson, Ibid. 60. In Hubbard v. Bagshaw, the plate of a steam engine (which formed no part of the working apparatus), was fixed to the freehold; every other part was secured by bolts and screws, and might be removed without injury to the building; but it was held that the steam engine did not pass.

(n) As to reputed ownership, see the cases cited below. Where household furniture and stock, in pursuance of an agreement of sale of a house and furniture, were left in the possession of the seller three months after the sale, it was held that they did not pass to his assignees, the sale being notorious in the neighbourhood. Muller v. Moss, 1 M. & S. 335. Where, on the contrary, a house was let on a lease containing a covenant for its determination on the lessee's committing an act of bankruptcy, and by another deed the furniture was demised subject to a similar covenant, and the jury found that the lessee was the reputed owner of the furniture, it was held that it passed to his assignees. Hickenbotham v. Groves,[2] 2 C. & P. 492.

(o) See the stat. 4 Geo. 4, c. 41. If a vendee of a ship neglect to take possession after the arrival in an English port, and notice thereof, the property passes to the assignees. Mair v. Glennie, 4 M. & S. 240. Richardson v. Campbell,[3] 5 B. & A. 196. An alteration in the register is no notice to the world. Kirkley v. Hodgson,[4] 1 B. & C. 588. And it gives no validity to a transfer otherwise invalid. Robinson v. Macdonnell, 5 M. & S. 236; and Monkhouse v. Hay, 4 Moore, 549; and Hay v. Fairbairn, 2 B. & A. 193. But if a vendee of ship registered in his name take possession before an act of bankruptcy committed by the vendor, the property is in the vendee. Robinson v. Macdonnell, 2 B. & A. 134.

(p) The language is nearly the same with that of the stat. 21 Geo. 1, c. 19, s. 11.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxiii. 190. [2]Id. xii. 229. [3]Id. vii. 66. [4]Id. viii. 154.

Whether particular property was in the possession of the bankrupt at the time of his bankruptcy, as the reputed owner, is usually a question of fact under the particular circumstances of the case (q).

*Where the assignees bring the action to recover the amount of the goods which the defendant claims as his own property, either by virtue of a sale to him by the bankrupt, or as being originally his own, it is incumbent on the assignees to prove that the goods remained in the possession of the bankrupt, he being still a trader (r) up to the time of the bankruptcy (s), and that he was the reputed owner, and appeared to have the order and disposition of the goods. The mere possession of goods in a shop, in the ordinary course of business, at the time of the act of bankruptcy, is primâ facie evidence for the assignees under the statute (t). Where, according to the course and usage of dealing, in respect of a particular subject of occupation (e. g. a colliery), articles used may either be the property of the owner or lessee; mere possession is not, it seems, a *157

(q) In Walker v. Burnell, Doug. 303, Lord Mansfield, C. J. left it as a question for the jury, whether Biner, the bankrupt, was in possession at the time of his bankruptcy. And per Buller, J. questions of this kind have more of fact in them than of law. The sort of possession, disposition, &c. are facts to be proved, and are for the consideration of the jury. Ibid. And Eyre, C. J. in Lingham v. Biggs, 1 B. & P. 82, approved of Mr. J. Buller's observation, and he added, that where once it is ascertained whether the bankrupt was the reputed owner or not, there is little difficulty in deciding. From that reputed ownership false credit arises, from that false credit arises the mischief, and to that mischief the remedy of the statute applies. But it may be a question of law. A tenant had the possession of machinery and implements for working a colliery, under a demise of the colliery, and had merely a qualified property in them, subject to the terms of the lease. And although the jury found that the tenant at the time of his bankruptcy was the reputed owner, and found for the plaintiffs (the assignees), the court directed a verdict to be entered for the defendant, on the ground that in point of law the tenant never had a possession, order, and disposition, &c. within the stat. 21 J. 1, c. 19. Note, that the implements and machinery were to be valued when the lessee yielded up the premises, and the difference between that and a former valuation to be paid by the landlord and tenant, according as the second valuation was greater or less than the first. The lease was determined by forfeitures, and it was held that the landlord was entitled to the whole without valuation. Storer v. Hunter,[1] 3 B. & C. 468. Note, that this case was distinguished from those of Lingard v. Messiter,[2] 1 B. & C. 308, and Kirkley v. Hodgson,[3] 1 B. & C. 588, on the ground that in those cases the bankrupt had at one time been the owner of the property. In the above case of Walker v. Burnell, Buller, J. observes: possession of goods for sale in a shop may be within the statute, but the possession of furniture in a house is no more evidence of a right to that furniture than of a right to the house.—Where goods are sold, but remain in the possession of the vendor, they will pass to his assignees on his bankruptcy, unless something be done to render the change notorious to the public at large. In Knowles v. Horsefall,[4] 5 B. & A. 134, where A., a spirit-merchant, sold to B. several casks of brandy, some of which were in his own vaults, and others in the vaults of a regular warehouse-keeper, and the casks were to remain there till the vendee could conveniently remove them; and A. became bankrupt before any removal or notice to the warehouse-keeper; it was held that they passed to the assignees. Although it was notorious the parties carried on the wine trade at the place where the parties resided, that such sale had taken place, and although the purchaser had put a mark upon them; secus, where the goods were left in the possession of the bankrupt only till they could be conveniently shipped, 1 Atk. 185. In Thackwaite v. Cock, 3 Taunt. 487, it was held, that hops which were sold, but remained in the vendor's possession till his bankruptcy, the vendee paying rent, passed to the assignees, although it was according to the custom of the particular trade that they should so remain. But where wine sold by the bankrupt was, for the purchaser's convenience, bottled and deposited in the bankrupt's cellar, set apart in a particular bin marked with the purchaser's seal, and entered in the bankrupt's books as belonging to the purchaser, it was held not to be within the statute. Ex parte Marrable, 1 G. & J. 402. Carruthers v. Payne,[5] 5 Bing. 270. Where goods in the possession of an agent or company are transferable by means of warrants, a transfer by delivery of the warrant usually amounts to a complete transfer of the possession. See Lucas v. Dorrien,[6] 1 Moore, 29; and infra, tit. VENDOR AND VENDEE. So as to wines in the London Docks. Ex parte Davenport, M. & B. 165. As to machinery and utensils annexed to the freehold, see further Trappes v. Harter, 3 Tyr. 603. Boydell v. M'Michael, 1 C. M. & R. 77. Where a trader gave a creditor an order to receive money in the hands of A., and directed A. to transmit it to the creditor, and whilst it was in the hands of the carrier the trader became bankrupt, Ld. Ellenborough held that the case was within the statute. Hervey v. Liddiard,[7] 1 Starkie's C. 123. The possession of a pawnee is not the possession of a bankrupt pawner. Greening v. Clarke,[8] 4 B. & C. 316.

(r) Gordon v. East India Company, 7 T. R. 228. (s) 15 East, 21.

(t) See the observation of Buller, J. in Walker v. Burnell, Doug. 303, secus, (semble,) as to the possession of furniture in a house. Ibid.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. x. 115. [2]Id. viii. 83. [3]Id. viii. 154. [4]Id. vii. 46. [5]Id. xv. 447. [6]Id. ii. 105. [7]Id. ii. 323. [8]Id. x. 341.

sufficient foundation for presuming ownership in the occupier (u); in such a case, possession ought not to raise such an inference in the mind of any cautious person. And where the bankrupt has been once proved to be the owner of goods, and to be in possession at the time of the bankruptcy, the onus of proving a change of possession lies on the party who claims against the assignees (x).

Proof that the former owner of a ship had the possession, order, and disposition of the vessel, up to the time of his bankruptcy, was held to be sufficient to vest the property in the assignees, although he had assigned his interest, and the transfer had been duly registered, according to the register acts (y). So (before the late statute) in the case of a joint interest in a ship, mortgaged by the bankrupt, where he continued in the management of her, together with the part-owners, and acted as a visible part-owner till he became a bankrupt (z).

Where the property consists of household furniture, stock in trade, or utensils in trade, it is sufficient that the bankrupt remained in possession of the house, and carried on the trade as the apparent owner of the stock and utensils, up to the time of the bankruptcy. As, where a creditor took the household furniture, and the articles belonging to a coffee-house, under an execution against B., and then let them to B., who covenanted not to remove them without the owner's consent, and permitted B. to remain in *158 *possession as before (a). After the seizure of B.'s stock in trade upon a fi. fa. by the trader's shopmen, under a warrant on a Saturday, they carried away the key, but opened the shop again on Monday morning, and although B. did not interfere, business was carried on, apparently, as usual, and in the evening of the Monday B. committed an act of bankruptcy; it was held that the goods passed to the assignees, notwithstanding the execution, since the possession of the servants was the possession of the master (b).

So where B. a brewer, being in partnership with A., mortgaged a moiety of the stock in trade, utensils, debts, &c. to C. in trust for A., but continued in possession, and acted as A.'s partner till he, B., became bankrupt; for being in possession, and acting as partner, receiving debts, &c. B. was as much the reputed owner as A. (c). So where A. sold a dyer's plant to B., and at the end of a year B. covenanted to deliver up the plant, in consideration of A.'s cancelling B.'s unpaid notes, which he had given to A.

(u) Per Abbott, C. J. in Storer v. Hunter,[1] 3 B. & C. 376. And see Thackwaite v. Cock, 3 Taunt. 487.

(x) Lingard v. Messiter,[2] 1 B. & C. 308. Clark v. Crownshaw,[3] 3 B. & Ad. 804.

(y) Hay v. Fairbairn, 2 B. & A. 134. Robinson v. M'Donnell, 2 B. & A. 134.

(z) Hall v. Gurney, Co. B. L. 5th edit. 342. See the stat. 6 Geo. 2, c. 5, s. 72. It seems to be now settled that the share of a dormant partner goes to the assignees. Ex parte Enderby,[4] 2 B. & C. 389. And see Ex parte Dyster, 2 Rose, 256. Contra, Coldwell v. Gregory, 1 Price, 119. So a ship registered in the name of one owner, but suffered to be in the possession, order, and disposition of the partnership, passes to the assignees. Ex parte Burn, 1 J. & W. 378.

(a) Lingham v. Biggs, 1 B. & P. 82. Where a landlord distrained upon the goods of his tenant, which he took at the appraisement, and left the goods in the possession of the wife of the tenant, who shortly after became bankrupt, after which the landlord again distrained as for the former rent; held, that the goods were in the order and disposition of the bankrupt, and passed to the assignees, and that the rent having been satisfied, the goods could not be again distrained. Ex parte Shuttleworth, 1 D. & Ch. 223. And see Toussaint v. Hartop,[5] Holt's C. 335. Doker v. Hasler, 4 Bing. 479. See Longman v. Tripp, 2 N. R. 67, as to the publisher's right to a newspaper.

(b) Per Ld. Ellenborough, C. J. Jackson v. Irwin, 2 Camp. 49. And see Horne v. Baker, 9 East, 215; Thackwaite v. Cock, 3 Taunt. 487. But see Coldwell v. Gregory, 1 Price, 119. So in Yates v. Powell, cor. Abbott, L. C. J. sittings after T. T. 1823, the goods had been taken in execution twelve months before at the suit of the trader's brother; but the sheriff remained in possession one day only, and then the bankrupt's son took possession, and carried on the business, bought goods, &c.

(c) Ryall v. Rolle, 1 Ves. 248; 1 Wils. 268; 1 Atk. 165. Toussaint v. Hartop,[5] Holt's C. 335.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. x. 115. [2]Id. viii. 83. [3]Id. xxiii. 190. [4]Id. ix. 122. [5]Id. iii. 122.

in payment for the plant; and it was stipulated that A. should let the plant to B. for a term, with a proviso that B. should deliver up the plant, and that A. might take possession of it upon the failure in payment of rent. There was a memorandum that B. had given possession to A. by the delivery of a single winch; B. remained in possession till his bankruptcy, and it was held that the property vested in the assignees (d).

A., a trader and an officer in the East India Company's service, assigned his privilege of shipping goods to England to B., but (such an assignment being prohibited), the goods were shipped, entered, warchoused, and sold in A.'s name, and the proceeds were carried to his account; but before he received them from the company he became a bankrupt; it was held that the assignees were entitled to such proceeds (e). So where A., a distiller, leased to B. (his former partner,) and C. a distill-house, with the stills, vats and utensils, which had before been used by A. and B., and after this B. and C. carried on business as partners, in possession of the premises and utensils, till they became bankrupt; the court were of opinion that the bankrupts had, at the time of the bankruptcy, acquired the reputed ownership of the vats and utensils (which were moveable), and had thereby acquired the real ownership for their creditors (f).

Where A. who kept a public-house, asserted that she was married to P., and entered his name at the Excise Office, with a note in the margin *"" married," and P. afterwards had the license, and continued in possession of the house and goods till he became a bankrupt, the court held that A. could not, after asserting that P. was her husband, claim them as her sole property (g). So where the trustees for the wife of B. and her children by a former husband, permitted B. to remain in possession of the goods (on condition that he should pay to them certain sums for the use of the children,) until the evening before he committed an act of bankruptcy, the case was held to be within the statute (h). *159

Evidence of reputation is admissible to prove the defendant to be the reputed owner, where the reputation is supported by facts; but bare reputation, unsupported by facts, although perhaps admissible, is insufficient evidence to prove an apparent ownership under the statute (i).

Proof in answer.

The presumption arising from the bankrupt's possession of property at the time of the bankruptcy is frequently capable of being answered and explained away by evidence which shows that possession was given up by the bankrupt, as far as the nature of the case admitted; or that there was not such a permissive possession as is contemplated by the statute. For the mere possession of the property by the bankrupt is not in itself sufficient to entitle the assignees to claim it for the creditors.

Where there is a possession, without any wilful permission on the part of the owner which may delude creditors, the case is not within the statute; as where, first, such possession is delivered as the circumstances of the case will permit; or, secondly, where the bankrupt has possession as executor (k) or administrator; or where the husband has possession of the separate property of the wife (l); or has a mere temporary custody of it; or (d) Bryson v. Wylie, 1 B. & P. 83, n. (e) Gordon v. The East India Company, 7 T. R. 228.

(f) Horne v. Baker, 9 East, 215.
(g) Mace v. Cadell, Cowp. 232. (h) Darby and others v. Smith, 8 T. R. 82.
(i) Oliver v. Bartlett,[1] 1 B. & B. 269. So evidence of a contrary reputation is evidence for the defendant, Gurr v. Britton,[2] Holt's C. 327. And see Muller v. Moss, 1 M. & S. 335; Lingham v. Biggs, 1 B. & P. 82; Horne v. Baker, 9 East, 215.
(k) Ex parte Marsh, 1 Atk. 159; 3 P. Wms. 187; 3 Burr. 1366.
(l) Jarman v. Wooloton, 3 T. R. 618.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. v. 81. [2]Id. iii. 121.

has the possession for such a purpose as excludes the presumption of ownership, and consequently where no delusion can arise; as where the bankrupt has possession as factor (m), or as bailee, or as a banker for a specific purpose. Thirdly, the owner may show that in point of fact the bankrupt was not the reputed owner. Lastly, the defendant may show that the possession was adverse (n).

That actual possession cannot be given.

1st. Where a ship or cargo is sold whilst the ship is at sea, then, since actual possession cannot be taken before her return, it is sufficient if in the meantime the grand bill of sale and bill of lading be transferred, for there was no other way of delivering possession (o). So where a trader, as a security for money lent, assigned the bills of lading and policies of insurance of the cargo of a ship at sea, and the policies were indorsed to the lender, the trader became bankrupt, and Lord Hardwicke, C. held, that since everything which could show a right to the cargo had been delivered over to the defendant (against whom the assignees had filed a bill) the bankrupt could no longer be said to have the order and disposition of it (p). So where a trader, as a security for a debt due to the defendant, agreed to assign the cargo of a ship homeward bound, and to deposit the policy of insurance on the goods with the defendant, and to indorse and
*160 deliver the bills of lading *to him as soon as they arrived; the policy and letters of advice were accordingly deposited with the defendant, and the bill of lading was indorsed to him as soon as it arrived, but after an act of bankruptcy committed by the trader. The defendant obtained possession of the cargo, and on trover brought by the assignees, the court held that the case of Brown v. Heathcote strongly applied; since, although in that case there was an assignment of the bill of lading, and in this, only an agreement to assign, this circumstance made no difference, since in both cases the title was merely an equitable one (q).

Where the ship was in an Irish port at the time when the owner mortgaged her, and delivered all the deeds, &c. to the mortgagee, and during the space of a month the mortgagee might have taken possession of her in the Irish port, it was held, that the delivery of the muniments constituted a sufficient possession, and that the mortgagee was not bound to take possession of her in a foreign port (r).

Where A., a trader, deposited with B. a bill of sale, of a sixteenth part of a ship not at sea, and there was no evidence that the trader had acted as owner after the deposit, Lord Thurlow, C. held, that B. was entitled to the produce of the bill of sale against the assignees of A., who had become bankrupt; since in the case of assignments of shares of ships this seemed to be the only way of delivering possession (s).

Possession as executor, &c.

2dly. It has been held, that where the bankrupt has possession of the goods as an executor or administrator, or under a trust (t), the case is not

(m) Ex parte Chion, 3 P. Will. 187, n. Cullen's B. L. 225.

(n) Smith v. Topping,[1] 5 B. & Ad. 674.

(o) Brown v. Heathcote, 1 Atk. 160. Atkinson v. Maling, 2 T. R. 462. Lempriere v. Pasley, 2 T. R. 485; supra 15, note (s), 156, note (o).

(p) Brown v. Heathcote, 1 Atk. 160.

(q) Lempriere v. Pasley, 2 T. R. 485.

(r) Ex parte Batson, 3 Bro. C. C. 362. See also Atkinson v. Maling, 2 T. R. 462.

(s) Ex parte Stadgroom, 1 Ves. jun. 163. See also Manton v. Moore, 7 T. R. 67.

(t) Shaftesbury, Earl of, v. Russell,[2] 1 B. & C. 666, where the Duke of Marlborough, as the owner of an estate, had the use of furniture which was settled in trustees in trust to permit the owner of the estate to use it, and it was held, that on the bankruptcy of the duke the furniture would not have passed to his assignees. So where a testator directed that, in case his son should carry on his trade, his house and furniture should not be sold, but that his trustees should permit his widow and children to reside in the dwelling-house, and have the use of the furniture, it was held that the furniture did not pass to the assignees of the within the statute (u); so that where an executor becomes bankrupt, the commissioners cannot seize even money which belonged to the testator, if it can be specifically distinguished from the property of the bankrupt himself (x). Neither does it extend to a possession by the bankrupt as a trustee for another; as, where a trader bought South Sea stock for I. S. in his own name, but entered it in his book as bought for I. S., after which he became bankrupt, it was held that I. S. was entitled to the stock (y). So where the husband has possession of the separate property of the wife, settled in *trustees upon her before marriage (z). So where the bankrupt *161 has possession as a mere factor or agent for sale (a). As where a carpenter receives timber to convert into a waggon (b): or a tailor cloth to work up into clothes (c). It was agreed between F. and K., that K. should contract with the commissioners of the Victualling-office to do certain work in his own name; that he should have a guinea per week, and one-fourth of the clear profits, and that F. should supply timber for the purpose. Timber was accordingly supplied by F., and was received by the King's officers in the yard where the work was to be done. F. was one of K.'s sureties, which, according to the practice as to government contracts, would not mother and son. Ex parte Martin, 2 Rose, 331. Stock transferred by the accountant-general into the name of the mortgagee without the privity of the mortgagor, does not pass. Ex parte Richardson, Buck. 480. But by true owner is meant legal owner; and where a trustee sold, and let the purchaser into possession before payment, the property was held to pass. Ex parte Dale, Buck. 365. In general, property which the bankrupt holds as trustee only, does not pass to his assignees. Winch v. Keeley, 1 T. R. 619. Taylor v. Plumer, 3 M. & S. 576. Smith v. Pickering, Peake, 50. Ex parte Watkins, 1 Mont. & Ayr. 689.

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxvii. 152. [2] Id. viii. 178.

(u) Ex parte Ellis, 1 Atk. 101; 4 T. R. 629. Ex parte Marsh, 1 Atk. 159. But if a person entitled to take out administration neglect to do so, and he becomes bankrupt, the goods pass to the assignees, although he takes out administration after the bankruptcy. Fox v. Fisher,[1] 3 B. & A. 135.

(x) Per Lord Mansfield, 3 Burr. 1366, 1 Atk. 101.

(y) By Lord Parker, C. Ex parte Chion, 3 P. Wms. 187. And see Lord Mansfield's observations in Mace v. Cadell, Cowp. 233.

(z) Jarman v. Wooloton, 3. T. R. 618. But if property be settled on the wife to enable her to carry on a separate trade, and the husband intermeddle, the property will be liable to his debts. Ibid. So if the bankrupt have the possession of goods which come to his wife as administratrix, where some of the next of kin are infants, they do not pass to his assignees (Viner v. Cadell, 3 Esp. 388); but if she takes a beneficial interest in the property, her own share passes to the assignees who become tenants in common with her in her representative capacity. Ibid. The goods of a woman married to, and living with an insolvent, and being ignorant that he had a former wife living, do not pass to the assignees. Secus, if she allow him to continue in possession after discovering the former marriage. Miller v. Demetz, 1 Mo. & R. 479. See also Dean v. Brown, 3 B. & C. 336.

(a) Per Lord King, C. in Godfrey v. Furzo, 3 P. Wms. 186. Per Ld. Mansfield, in Mace v. Cadell, Cowp. 233. And see the observations of Lawrence, J. in Horne v. Baker, 9 East, 215. See Atkins v. Barwick, 1 Str. 165; Fort. 353; 10 Mod. 431. Harman v. Fisher, Cowp. 125. So if the factor take notes in payment, or exchanges the goods for other goods, the notes or property do not pass to the assignees. Whitcomb v. Jacob, 1 Salk. 160. And see Taylor v. Plumer, 3 M. & S. 562. Otherwise, if the factor sells and receives the price before the bankruptcy, the principal must come in with the rest of the creditors. Scott v. Surman, Willes, 490. But if the price be not paid before the bankruptcy, but is afterwards received by the assignees, the principal may sue them. Ib. Goods sent on sale and return are within the statute, if the party retain them after a reasonable time for making his election has expired. Livesay v. Hood, 2 Camp. 83. Gibson v. Bray,[2] 1 Moore, 519; 8 Taunt. 76. Neate v. Ball, 2 East, 117. Aliter, if a reasonable time has not elapsed, as if the goods were not received till the evening before the bankruptcy.[2] 1 Moore 519; 8 Taunt. 76. Where there was a custom that the purchaser of hops should leave them in the vendor's warehouse for the purpose of sale, it was held that they passed to his assignee. Thackwaite v. Cock, 3 Taunt. 487. Where foreign merchants, through their agents, procured consignments and remitted bills to the consignees for the amount, and informed the consignors of having so done, but before payment the agents became bankrupt; held, that the latter were to be deemed agents through the whole transaction, and that, notwithstanding the claim of the agents or the consignees, the consignors were entitled to recover the bills from such agents. In re Douglass, 1 Mont. & Ch. (B) 1. Where foreign merchants remitted bills to factors, who sold them and entered the amount of the price in their books to the credit of the principals, who had the right of drawing on them to the amount; held, that upon the bankruptcy of the factors the principals were entitled to the proceeds of the bills, and that the bankrupts having indorsed them in their own names, were not to be deemed the owners of them. Ex parte Pauli, 3 Dcac. 169. And see Scott v. Surman, Willes, 405.

(b) Collins v. Forbes, 3 T. R. 316. (c) Ibid.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. v. 243. [2]Id. iv. 23.

have been allowed, had it been known that he was concerned in the contract. K. became bankrupt, and F. took possession of the timber; and upon an action brought by the assignees of K., it was held that the case did not fall within the statute, since there was never any sale of the timber to K., nor any general delivery, so as to give him the absolute disposition of it; and the storekeepers would not have permitted K. himself to have sold the timber to any other person, since they considered it as delivered solely for the purpose of the contract (d).

*162 Possession as banker.

*So the owner may show that a banker, at the time he became bankrupt, had possession of specific money or bills of his in his hands, not upon a general or running account between them, but for some specific purpose. The decision, however, of questions between the assignees of bankers at the time of the bankruptcy seldom, if ever, turns upon the question of reputed ownership: for it seems to be clear, that the mere possession of bills of exchange by a banker at the time of his bankruptcy, where the property and ownership remain in the customer, does not give the banker the order and disposition of them within the terms of the statute (e). So the mere custody by a bailee, for a specific purpose, is not within the statute (f).

Reputation and usage.

3dly. Notwithstanding the actual possession by the bankrupt at the time of the bankruptcy, since the fact of reputed ownership is usually a question for the jury (g), the defendant may show that the bankrupt was not in fact the reputed owner: as for instance, that there is a known usage in the bankrupt's trade to rent on hire the utensils and articles used in the trade, since there the possession and use of such utensils and articles would raise no presumption of ownership (h).

Where, by an agreement between the vendor and vendee of a house, it was agreed that formal possession should be given to the vendee, but that the vendor should remain in possession for three months, and the agreement was notorious in the neighbourhood, and formal possession was given, and the purchase-money paid, and during the three months whilst the vendor continued in the house he became bankrupt, the court held that the case was not within the statute; for during the three months the bankrupt was in of his own right as owner, and not by permission of the true owner; and because the transfer being notorious, no person was deceived; and that the fact of reputed ownership ought to have been found to raise the question (i). The defendant may also rebut the evidence to prove that the bankrupt was the reputed owner, by evidence of a contrary reputation of ownership in himself.

(d) Ibid. See the observations of Lawrence, J. in Gordon v. East India Company (7 T. R. 237), that the court proceeded on the ground that the bankrupt had possession of the property for a special purpose only.

(e) The mere custody of such bills, in order that the banker may receive money upon them when due, does not give him the order and disposition of them within the statute. See the observations of Holroyd, J. in Thompson v. Giles,[1] 2 B. & C. 422.

(f) The plaintiff ordered a chariot, and paid for it, and afterwards sent it back for alteration, which being delayed, he sent for it six or seven times, and afterwards ordered it to be sold; whilst standing in the builder's warehouse, the latter became bankrupt; it was held, first, that it was not to be deemed within this clause of the Act, and that the assignees were not protected from an action of trover after three months from the conversion, by the stat. 6 G. 4, c. 16, s. 44; the words "any act done" not applying to the pecuniary arrangement or disposition of the bankrupt's property by the assignees, but to acts done for the purpose of taking possession thereof by the commissioners or others acting under their warrant. Carruthers v. Payne,[2] 5 Bing. 270.

(g) See Mullar v. Moss, 1 M. & S. 335.

(h) See the observations in Horne v. Baker, 9 East, 215.

(i) Mullar v. Moss, 1 M. & S. 335. And see Eastwood v. Brown,[3] 1 R. & M. 312; and Latimer v. Batson,[4] 4 B. & C. 652; and supra.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. ix. 127. [2]Id. xv. 447. [3]Id. xxi. 447. [4]Id. x. 432.

2ndly. That the right to particular property vested in the bankrupt by delivery, &c., and passed to his assignees.

The peculiar privilege which the law has conceded to the vendor of goods to a bankrupt, of stopping them in transitu before they come, in technical language, to the very touch of the consignee (k), frequently imposes upon the *assignees the necessity of proving, not only that there was such a delivery of goods to an agent of the trader as would in ordinary cases vest the property in him absolutely, as by a delivery to a carrier; but also, that the transitus of the goods was actually completed. Stoppage in transitu. *163

Whether the stoppage was in transitu, or was completely determined, is ordinarily a question of law (l). In order to raise that question, it is usually material to prove on whose risk and account the goods were sent; the character and situation of the agent in whose actual possession the goods were at the time of stoppage (m); by whom employed, and by whom to be paid; the possession, indorsement, &c. of the bill of lading (n); the place and object of destination (o), and the nature of the acts exercised upon them in their progress (p), with a view to take possession of them. Proof of title in the trader.

In order to show a termination of the transitus, it is essential to prove either an actual or constructive delivery (q) to the vendee or his representative. Termination of transitus.

(k) If a party contract for the purchase of goods on specific credit, and nothing be said as to the time of delivery, both right of property and possession vest in the vendee; but his right is not absolute, but liable to be defeated by his previous insolvency, before actual possession. Bloxam v. Sanders,[1] 4 B. & C. 941. Tooke v. Hollingsworth, 5 T. & R. 215; and this is on the ground of fraud upon the vendor; per Lord Kenyon. In such cases, therefore, the assignees cannot maintain trover. Qu. Whether default in payment at the time when the credit expires destroys the right of possession. Per Bayley, J.[1] 4 B. & C. 948. Semble not, for the payment in such case is not either a precedent or concurrent consideration.

(l) See Feise v. Wray, 3 East, 93; Mills v. Ball, 2 B. & P. 457: 3 B. & P. 119, 469; 5 East, 175; 14 East, 308; 2 H. B. 504. Part payment does not take away the right of stoppage. (Hodgson v. Loy, 7 T. R. 440. Feise v. Wray, 3 East, 93.) Nor does the usage of carriers to insist on a lien on goods for a general balance of account between them and the consignees, at all affect the right. Oppenheim v. Russel, 3 B. & P. 42.

(m) If he was the mere agent of the consignor, at whose risk the goods were sent, the delivery to him would not vest any property in the consignee; and the question, whether the property was divested by a stoppage in transitu would not arise. See Coxe v. Harden, 4 East, 211. Walley v. Montgomery, 3 East, 585. See, as to the delivery of plate by a silversmith to an engraver, who was to be paid by the vendor, to get the vendee's arms engraved thereon. Owenson v. Morse, 7 T. R. 64. As to goods delivered by the consignor on board a ship chartered by the consignee, see Bohtlingk v. Inglis, 3 East, 381; Inglis v. Usherwood, 1 East, 515; Coxe v. Harden, 4 East, 211. To a wharfinger, Mills v. Ball, 2 B. & P. 457.

(n) In general, the indorsement by the consignee of the bill of lading for a valuable consideration, will devest the right of stoppage. Lickbarrow v. Mason, 2 T. R. 63; 2 H. B. 211; 5 T. R. 367. Feise v. Wray, 3 East, 93. Otherwise, where there is no consideration. Newsom v. Thornton, 6 East, 17.

(o) Dixon v. Baldwin, 5 East, 175. Leeds v. Wright, 3 B. & P. 320. Scott v. Petit, 3 B. & P. 469. The general rule seems to be, that if by appointment, as between the consignor and consignee, the goods are to be sent to a particular place where they are to wait the orders of the vendee as to any further destination, the transitus is completed when they arrive there. Vide infra, note (q).

(p) The putting a mark on the goods by the assignee of the consignee, at the inn whither they were sent for the latter, held to divest the consignor's right of stoppage in transitu. Ellis v. Hunt, 3 T. R. 464. And see Coxe v. Harden, 4 East, 211.

(q) As by the delivery of the key of the warehouse in which the goods are deposited. Ellis v. Hunt, 3 T. R. 464. Copeland v. Stein, 8 T. R. 199. By payment of rent for the warehouse. Hurry v. Mangles, 1 Camp. 452; Harman v. Anderson, 2 Camp. 243. The lodgment of a delivery-note with the wharfinger. (Ibid.) By a part delivery, where there is no intention to separate part from the rest (Slubey v. Heyward, 2 H. B. 505; Hammond v. Anderson. 1 N. R. 69; Ex parte Gwynne, 12 Ves. jun. 379; Stoveld v. Hughes, 14 East, 308); by delivery at the warehouse of the vendee's agent, where no ulterior or more complete delivery is contemplated. Leeds v. Wright, 3 B. & P. 320. And see 3 B & P. 127; Scott v. Pettit, 3. B. & P. 469. As where they are sent to an agent who, under general orders from the vendor, sends them to a packer (Ibid); or by an act of ownership, exercised by the vendee whilst the goods are in the hands of his agent, although they have not reached the place of ultimate destination (Wright v. Lawes, 4 Esp. C. 282); by delivery on board a ship chartered and fitted out by the vendee (Fowler v. Kymer, cited 7 T. R. 442; 1 East, 552; 3 East, 396); by reaching an expeditor, who holds them till he receives orders for their further destination (Dixon v. Baldwin, 5 East, 175); by being sent by the vendor to the ultimate place of destination, mentioned by the vendee. Rowe v. Pickford,[2] 1 Moore, 526. The vendee usually allowed goods

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. x. 477. [2]Id. iv. 27.

Property in banker.

*Another class in which proof of the bankrupt's title, by a change of property, belongs to the assignees, consists of cases which arise between the assignees of a banker and his customers. For the ordinary rule is, that bills and securities sent to a banker are deposited for a specific purpose, in which case they do not pass to the assignees, and consequently it lies on the assignees to prove a change of property. The general principle of law as between the banker and a customer is, that the banker stands in the situation of a factor; that he holds the bills of a customer transmitted before they are due, as the agent of such customer, for the purpose of obtaining payment, and with a right of lien for advances made on the credit of such bills (r); consequently, if a customer send bills to a banker, and they remain in specie in the hands of such banker till the bankruptcy, they continue to be the property of the customer, notwithstanding the bankruptcy (s).

brought by the defendant, a carrier, to remain at his warehouse until distributed by his orders to his customers, and the jury found that the warehouse was the final destination, held that the transitus was at an end, and that the vendor's right of stoppage was also gone. Allan v. Gripper, 2 C. & J. 218. The plaintiff being previously indebted to the defendants, purchased a butt of sherry of the defendants, which was to remain in the docks undelivered and upon becoming embarrassed he had offered the defendants to take it back, which was refused, and an arrangement for a composition was afterwards entered into with the creditors, the defendants being parties, and a sum set opposite their names including the sherry, and they received the first and largest instalment, but upon demand refused to deliver the wine, or sign the release, although they admitted it to have been included in the composition; held, that having obtained by the agreement security for the whole of their debt, the right of stoppage in transitu was gone. Nichols v. Hart,[1] 5 C. & P. 179.

But such a delivery as would be sufficient in the absence of insolvency to vest the property in the vendee, is frequently insufficient to divest the right of stoppage in transitu. It seems to be a general rule, that so long as the goods are in the possession of one who is a mere agent, to forward them, in order to give a more complete possession to the vendee, the transitus continues: as where they are delivered to a wharfinger, to be forwarded to the vendee (Hodgson v. Loy, 7 T. R. 440; Mills v. Ball, 2 B. & P. 457; Smith v. Goss, 1 Camp. 282); although the wharfinger be employed by the vendee (Smith v. Goss, 1 Camp. 282; Oppenheim v. Russel, 3 B. & P. 42; and see Snee v. Prescott, 1 Atk. 245; Lickbarrow v. Mason, 1 H. B. 364; Hunt v. Ward, cited 3 T. R. 467; Feise v. Wray, 3 East, 93); or to an agent who purchases for a principal abroad, and informs the vendor, at the time of the purchase, that the goods are to be sent abroad (to Lisbon). (Coates v. Railton,[2] 6 B. & C. 422); or to a packer, by order of the vendee (Hunt v. Ward, 3 T. R. 467); provided the vendee does not use the wharfinger's or packer's warehouse as his own, and that he contemplates an ulterior place of delivery (Wright v. Lawes, 4 Esp. C. 82; per Chambre, J. Richardson v. Goss, 3 B. & P. 127). So a delivery of plate to an engraver employed by the vendor (Owenson v. Morse, 7 T. R. 64); of goods to a common carrier (Stokes v. La Riviere, cited 3 T. R. 466; Hunter v. Beal, Ibid), so long as the lien of the carrier remains (Crawshaw v. Eades, 1 B. & C. 181); or on board a general ship (Ibid. and 3 East, 397; 7 T. R. 440; Mills v. Ball, 2 B. & P. 457); though at the risk and expense, and in the name and by the appointment of the vendee, will not divest the right of stoppage in transitu. And see Ruck v. Hatfield,[3] 5 B. & A. 632.

(r) Giles v. Perkins, 9 East, 12. A customer paid bills, not due, into his bankers in the country, whose custom it was to credit their customers with the amount of such bills if approved in cash, charging interest; it was held that the customer was entitled to recover back those bills in specie from the assignees of the bankers, on their bankruptcy; and per Lord Ellenborough, C. J., every man who pays bills, not then due, into the hands of his banker, places them there as in the hands of his agent, to obtain money for them when due. If the banker discount the bill, or advance money on the credit of it, that alters the case; he then acquires the entire property in it, or has a lien pro tanto for his advance. The only difference between the practice stated as to London and country bankers in this respect, is, that the former, if overdrawn, has a lien on the bill deposited with him, though not indorsed; the country banker, who always takes the bill indorsed, has not only a lien on it if his account be overdrawn, but also a legal remedy upon the bill by the indorsement.

(s) Scott v. Surman, Willes, 400. Bolton v. Puller, 1 B. & P. 539. Thompson v. Giles,[4] 2 B. & C. 422. Ex parte Hippings, 2 Gl. & J. 93. Where a customer was in the habit of paying in bills on account, which, if approved of, were carried to his account, but entered as bills to his credit to the full amount, and then he was at liberty to draw to that amount by cheques on the bank; it was held that in the absence of proof of any agreement that the bills when they reached the bankers should become their property, the bills remaining in specie in the hands of the bankers at the time of the bankruptcy might be recovered by the customer, the cash balance being in his favour. Thompson v. Giles, 2 B. & C. 422. And see Ex parte Armistead, 2 G. & J. 371; M. & M. 108. The decision of questions between the assignees of bankers and customers, in respect of bills of exchange which remain in possession of the bankers at the time of the bankruptcy, seldom if ever turns upon the clause of the stat. 21 J. 1 (now 6 G. 4, c. 16, s. 72), but upon the question whether the property has passed; or if not, whether the bankers were entitled to a lien.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxiv. 265. [2]Id. xiii. 223. [3]Id. vii. 216. [4]Id. ix. 127.

*And though a customer who pays bills into a banker's hands has a right to expect that his drafts will be honoured to the amount of the bills paid in, yet the property in the bills is not altered (t).

Such being the general rule, it follows that if it be contended that the banker was more than a mere depositary, with a right of lien, it lies on the assignees to prove it (u).

Evidence on the part of the assignees, in such cases, consists in any facts which show that the owner of the bills parted with the property by a sale or discount to the bankers, or that they were the depositaries, subject to a lien (x).

It is not sufficient to show that the bankers had a limited authority to discount to a certain amount, or that they had authority to discount to an uncertain amount, where the object is a special one; as to honour the drafts or bills of the customer, or to reduce the cash balance when the bankers should be in advance (y).

The best and most direct evidence on this head, consists in the authority or directions given by the customer, especially if they be in writing (z).

Proof that the bills were in the hands of the banker, indorsed by the customer, is primâ facie evidence of a discount, but not conclusive; for they may have been indorsed merely to enable the banker the more effectually to receive payment on behalf of the customer from other parties (a).

The mode in which the bills were entered in the banker's books will not affect the question, without proof of assent on the part of the owner (b).

*On the other hand, the writing the bills short is merely evidence of the nature of the remittance. If it be accompanied by a letter which directs its application, that cannot be got rid of by the unauthorized act of the banker (c). *166

Where the bills are entered short, if it appears from the habits of dealing (t) Ib. and per Holroyd, J. 2 B. & C. 431. (u) Per Lord Eldon, C. Ex parte Sargeant, 1 Rose, 153.

(x) Although the customer, when he has deposited bills as a collateral security for the bankrupt's acceptance, has a right to have them returned, on exonerating the estate, yet the holders of those acceptances have no such right; for being strangers to the contract between the banker and his customer, they can claim no lien. If the customer in such case also become bankrupt, as the banker's estate cannot be exonerated without discharging such bills, it seems that the Lord Chancellor will order such an arrangement as will make such bills available. Ex parte Waring and Ex parte Inglis, 2 Rose, 282. Yet qu. whether in principle the owners of the bills ought to receive more from such securities, in proportion to their debt, than the other creditors receive from the banker's estate? had the customer remained solvent, the banker's assignees could not, it seems, have claimed more on the securities than they paid to those creditors rateably with the rest; the holders of the bills would have been entitled to have resorted to the customer (being the drawer, &c.) for the remainder of the debt, and he having become bankrupt, they ought not, as it seems, on that account, to receive more from the banker's estate, but to be paid their proportion of the remainder rateably with the customer's creditors.

(y) Ex parte Wakefield Bank, 1 Rose, 243. Ex parte Leeds Bank, Ib. 254. Qu. Whether a general authority be sufficient, &c. Lord Eldon, C., in the cases arising on Boldero's bankruptcy, seems to have been of opinion that it would.

(z) Ex parte Dumas, 1 Atk. 232.

(a) Ex parte Towgood, 19 Ves. 229. Thompson v. Giles,[1] 2 B. & C. 422.

(b) Bills not due and entered short in the banker's books, are considered the property of the customer. "The fact that bills were not written short, amounts to nothing, unless there be a concurrence manifested at the time, or to be inferred from the habits of dealing between the parties that they were to be considered as cash. If they were there, with the owner's knowledge, as cash, and he draws, or is entitled to draw on them, as having that credit in cash, he is precluded from recurring to them specifically, but it lies on the assignees to prove that to be the case; the owner is entitled unless the bills have been carried to his credit with his knowledge or consent. Per Lord Eldon, in Ex parte Sargeant, 1 Rose, 153. Bills of exchange having been paid by a customer to his account with a banker, were entered as cash, with a distinct interest account; the customer had credit to the amount of the bills so entered, but did not overdraw the account; there was a custom in the country to circulate short bills, but no express authority was given to circulate the bills in question. The Ld. Chancellor, reversing the decree of the Vice Chancellor, held that the bills did not pass to the assignees. Ex parte Benson, 1 Mont. & Bligh, 120.

(c) See Ex parte Damas, 1 Atk. 232; 1 Rose, 243.

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. ix. 127.

between the parties that they were considered as cash, they will pass to the assignees (d).

In general, where bills have been deposited by the plaintiff to answer a specific purpose, which has not been answered, and they remain in the hands of the assignees after the bankruptcy, the owner is entitled to recover them from the assignees (e), or to hold them against the assignees.

*167 *Where bills are not remitted for a particular purpose, but to be discounted, and are discounted (f), or by one trader to another on a running account (g), or on an exchange of bills for bills, they pass to the assignees (h).

Where it was agreed between four partners as bankers, and a customer, that the latter should indorse bills, and take the notes of the bankers in exchange, and this was done after three of the four had become bankrupt, it was held after the fourth also became bankrupt, that as the consideration for indorsing the bills had failed, the assignees could not retain them (i).

Disaffirmance of bankrupt's acts.

3dly. So evidence may be necessary to show the right of the assignees in disaffirmance of some disposition of the property by the bankrupt. As to show that a conveyance in favour of his children was fraudulent (k).

(d) Ex parte Thompson, Mo. & M. 102.

(e) As where A. remitted bills to B., a banker, for the express purpose of answering other bills drawn by A. on the banker, on a particular account, which latter bills had been dishonoured by the banker, and paid by A. before the bankruptcy of B. Lord Eldon, C. observed, it is clearly settled, that where bills are remitted on a general account, and there is no evidence to the contrary, they cannot be followed in case of bankruptcy; if remitted for a particular purpose, they may. Ex parte Pease, 1 Rose, 241. Where A. and B. had a general running account, consisting of bills drawn by B. on C. in favour of A, and of bills and other securities deposited by A. with B., and upon the failure of B. and C., A. was obliged to take up the bills received by him from B., whereby the balance of accounts was in favour of A., it was held that he could not maintain trover for the bills deposited with B. unless they had been specifically appropriated to answer B.'s drafts on C. in favour of A., and deposited for that purpose expressly. Bent v. Puller, 5 T. R. 494. Where A. sent certain bills of long dates to B., a banker, requesting permission to draw bills of shorter dates without renewals, and sent the long bills indorsed to B. in the letter of request, and B. answered, that agreeable to A.'s request he had discounted the bills, and then specified the amount to be drawn for; it was held that the transaction did not amount to a sale or exchange of bills upon discount, but to a deposit of the long bills, on condition of being allowed to draw shorter bills, and therefore, that B. having become bankrupt, whereby A.'s bills were dishonoured, the long bills which remained in B.'s possession at the time of the bankruptcy did not pass to the assignees. Parke v. Eliason, 1 East, 544. Collins v. Martin, 1 B. & P. 649. So where A. had transmitted to B. his banker, bills to answer outstanding acceptances by B. on account of A., upon an agreement by A. to make remittances to answer such acceptances when due; and the acceptances were not paid by B., but by A. after the bankruptcy of B.; it was held, that the bills remitted for the purpose of answering these acceptances were in the nature of goods in the possession of a factor, and that they belonged to A., subject to B.'s lien for the balance due at the time of the bankruptcy; and that having been deposited by B. with another banker, who had set them short in the bankrupt's book, they were the same as if still in possession of the bankrupt. Zincke v. Walker, Bl. R. 1154. A. and B. agreed that A. should sell to B. light guineas from time to time, and that A. should draw upon B. from time to time for the money due upon such sales; and that B. should accept other bills drawn by A. for his own convenience, for which A. was to remit value. B. being under acceptances to a large amount became bankrupt, and A. being ignorant of the bankruptcy, sent light gold and bills to enable B. to discharge such acceptances; and it was held that A., who had since paid B.'s acceptances, was entitled to the gold and bills so sent against the assignees. Tooke v. Hollingworth, 5 T. R. 215, affirmed in the Exchcq. Cham. 2 H. B. 501. A. B. C. & D. being partners as brokers at Liverpool, and C. & D. being partners as merchants at London, J. S. having accepted bills payable at the house of C. & D., employed A. B. C. & D. to get them paid, and agreed to deposit good bills with them, indorsed by him, to enable them so to do. A. B. C. & D. debited J. S. in account for his acceptances, and credited him with all the bills which he had deposited; some of the bills so deposited were remitted by A. B. C. & D., to C. & D., upon the general account between the two houses; and before any of the acceptances of J. S. became due, both houses failed, and J. S. was obliged to pay all his acceptances; and it was held, that the assignees of C. & D. were entitled to retain against J. S. all the bills which had been remitted by A. B. C. & D.; also, that it made no difference that one of the bills remitted did not arrive till after the bankruptcy of C. & D. Bolton v. Puller, 1 B. & P. 539. And see Collins v. Martin, 1 B. & P. 648.

(f) Carstairs v. Bates, 3 Camp. C. 301; 2 B. & C. 432.

(g) Burt v. Puller, 5 T. R. 494.

(h) Hornblower v. Proud, 2 B. & A. 327; and vide supra, Clarke v. Eliason, 1 East, 554.

(i) Ex parte M'Gae, 2 Rose, 376.

(k) Where the only evidence of insolvency at the time of a bankrupt's executing a voluntary deed in favour of his children, was that he had given two bills which had never been paid, except by renewals, and

The general effect of bankruptcy is to avoid all acts of the bankrupt subsequent to the bankruptcy, by making the right of the assignees to relate to the act of bankruptcy; and therefore the assignees may usually avoid and disaffirm such a transaction by the bankrupt by evidence of a previous act of bankruptcy and petitioning creditor's debt. The very purchasing of goods from a trader, after such an act of bankruptcy, is a conversion (l)

Dispositions by process of law stand on the same footing with dispositions by the bankrupt; to be valid, they must be complete before the bankruptcy (m).

Evidence in disaffirmance of bankrupt's acts.

If a sheriff seize and sell goods under an execution, after an act of bankruptcy, even without notice, and before the commission, he is liable in trover (n), and the assignees are not bound to prove any demand, since the execution was tortious (o). Or the assignees may treat the *sale as valid (p). And if the creditor assisted in the levying the execution, trover will lie against him, although the money remain in the hands of the sheriff (q). But where the sheriff takes goods in execution before an act of bankruptcy, he is not liable for a conversion in selling them afterwards (r). Where the sheriff seized the goods in execution, and afterwards, but on the same day, the trader surrendered himself in discharge of his bail, and committed an act of bankruptcy by lying in prison for two months, it was held that the assignees were not entitled to recover (s). *168

The assignees cannot recover in trover the amount of a cheque paid by the bankrupt's bankers after the bankruptcy, against a creditor to whom the cheque had been delivered and the money paid (t); neither can they recover in trover for bills fraudulently obtained from the bankrupt, after his bankruptcy, for the bankrupt never could have any property in them; but if the party obtaining them receive the proceeds, the assignees may recover for money had and received (u).

which, at the time of his bankruptcy, four years after, were still unsatisfied, held to be insufficient to establish a case of insolvency at the time of executing the deed, within the 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 73. Notice of a difficulty to meet particular demands is not notice of insolvency, but it must be of a more general and extensive description, as of a general composition, or paying creditors portions only of their demands, and not in the usual way. Cutten v. Sanger, 2 Y. & S. 459. And see Reader v. Knatchbull, 5 T. R. 228. Bayly v. Schofield, 1 M. & S. 338; Anon. 1 Camp. 135; and Abraham v. George, 11 Price, 423.

(l) Hurst v. Gwennap,[1] 2 Starkie's C. 306; even although the assignees have demanded payment, Ibid. See the late st. infra, 172, 173.

(m) Per Lord Mansfield, Burr. 32; see 2 B. & A. 38.

(n) This has been so decided upon argument in the court of Exchequer. Assignees of Potter v. Starkie. See Smith v. Mills, 1 T. R. 475; Bailey v. Bunning, 1 Lev. 172; Cole v. Davis, Ld. Raym. 124; Cooper v. Chitty, 1 Burr. 20; and the cases collected, 1 Montague's B. L. 474. The single question determined in Bailey v. Bunning, and reserved by the special verdict, was, whether the taking was lawful; and upon that the court determined. B. N. P. 41. And now see Garland v. Carlisle,[2] 10 Bing. 452;[3] 4 Bing. N. C. 7; Balme v. Hutton, 2 Y. & J. 101.

(o) Rush v. Baker, B. N. P. 41.

(p) Where after notice of bankruptcy the sheriff seized and sold goods to the execution creditor, who afterwards sold them to F., who subsequently became an assignee, held, that though they might have treated the sale as invalid and disposed of the goods, yet that they might suffer F. to continue the possession, and claim the value as against the sheriff. Vaughan v. Wilkins,[4] 1 B. & Ad. 370.

(q) Menkam v. Edmonson, 1 B. & P. 369.

(r) Thomas v. Desanges,[5] 2 B. & A. 586. Cole v. Davis, Ld. Raym. 124. Sadler v. Leigh, 4 Camp. 197. And now see the stat. 6 G. 4, c. 16, s. 81, infra, 170. If the money be in the hands of the sheriff, and before the return of the writ, the debtor becomes bankrupt, the execution creditor is entitled. Wymer v. Kemble, 9 D. & R. 511. Fox v. Burbidge, in K. B.

(s) Thomas and others v. Desanges and others, 2 B. & A. 586; Sup. 102. See TIMES.

(t) Mathew v. Sherwell, 2 Taunt. 439.

(u) Walker v. Laing,[6] 1 Moore, 281. A debtor deposited the title-deeds of houses with his creditor as a security, and afterwards executed an assignment of his interest in the houses to the same party, but this instrument was never registered pursuant to the statute 7 Anne, c. 20. The debtor afterwards became

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. iii. 357. [2]Id. xxv. 192. [3]Id. xxxiii. 264. [4]Id. xx. 400. [5]Id. xiii. 238. [6]Id. ii. 221.

They cannot affirm a transaction as to part and disaffirm it as to the rest, nor disaffirm a transaction after having once affirmed it (x). A person after the bankruptcy buys bonds with the bankrupt's money and delivers them to the wife, the assignees cannot seize the bonds as part of the estate, and maintain trover for the money (y); so after recovering from a banker money which he paid to a holder of a draft of the bankrupt's after the bankruptcy, they cannot recover from the creditor to whom the money was paid (z).

Money had and received.

It has been held, that the assignees may recover from a creditor in England money which he has attached abroad, after the assignment, as money had and received to their use (a). So they may recover, in the same form of action, money paid by a trader for the carriage of goods after a secret act of bankruptcy (b): money which is the produce of goods pledged by the trader's direction, after being arrested at the defendant's 169 suit, but without his privity, after a secret act of bankruptcy, and paid over to the defendant, although not the identical money raised by the pledge (c); money received by the banker of the bankrupt, and paid over to a creditor with knowledge of the bankruptcy (d), or to the bankrupt. Money paid by way of voluntary preference (e). So where the sheriff, after an act of bankruptcy, seized the bankrupt's goods under a fieri facias, and executed a bill of sale of them to the execution creditor, it was held that the assignees might recover the amount (f). Where a creditor, knowing the bankrupt's insolvency, induced him to draw bills, and induced the drawees to accept them, it was held, that though neither the bankrupt nor his assignees had any property in the bills, so that the latter could not maintain trover, yet that they might maintain an action for money had and received when the bills were paid (g).

Where a trader in prison employed an auctioneer to sell his goods, who returned him the proceeds by the hands of the defendant, who was the mere bearer, it was held that the assignees could not recover the money from him (h).

Where a debtor to the bankrupt on policies of insurance, which have bankrupt, and the assignment of his effects under the commission was duly registered. The assignees brought an action against the creditor for the rents of the houses which he had received from the time of the assignment made to him by the bankrupt. Held, that although this instrument was void, the rents which the defendant had received as equitable mortgagee, could not be be taken out of his hands by virtue of the registered assignment under the commission. Sumpter and others v. Cooper,[1] 2 B. & Ad. 223.

(x) Brewer v. Sparrow,[2] 7 B. & C. 310. (y) Wilson v. Poulter, 2 Str. 859.

(z) Vernon v. Hanson, 2 T. R. 287. Even as trustees for the banker, who had no other means of recovering the money.

(a) Hunter v. Potts, 4 T. R. 182. See also Sill v. Worswick, 1 H. B. 665; Phillips v. Hunter, 2 H. B. 402.

(b) Bradley v. Clark, 5 T. R. 197.

(c) Allanson v. Atkinson, 1 M. & S. 583.

(d) Vernon v. Hankey, 2 T. R. 115. But they cannot afterwards recover from the creditor. Vernon v. Hanson, 2 T. R. 287.

(e) Poland v. Glyn,[3] 2 D. & R. 310. In assumpsit by assignees for money received to the use of the bankrupt before the bankruptcy, plea, that the money, although in the defendant's possession after the bankruptcy, was in fact received before, and that the bankrupt was indebted to the defendant in a large sum, which he claimed to set off, held bad, as confessing, but not avoiding; as, if received before the bankruptcy, the assignees could only claim it as received under a fraudulent preference, in which case the general issue would be the proper plea. Wood v. Smith, 4 M. & W. 522; and 7 Dowl. (P. C.) 214.

(f) Reed v. James,[4] 1 Starkie's C. 134; and see Butler v. Carver,[5] 2 Starkie's C. 433.

(g) Walker v. Laing,[6] 7 Taunt. 568. But where A. after his bankruptcy, and to procure his discharge from an arrest at the suit of B., drew and indorsed bills of exchange, which C. accepted, under the expectation of receiving goods of A.'s, and after receiving and selling the goods, paid the amount to B.; it was held that the assignees could not recover the amount from B. Waller v. Drakeford,[7] 1 Starkie's C. 481, tamen quære.

(h) Coles v. Wright, 1 Taunt. 498.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxii. 61. [2]Id. xiv. 50. [3]Id. xvi. 88. [4]Id. ii. 327. [5]Id. iii. 417. [6]Id. ii. 221. [7]Id. ii. 476.

been deposited by the bankrupt with a creditor as a collateral security after a secret act of bankruptcy, gives his acceptance, which he afterwards pays to the creditor, the assignees cannot recover the amount from the creditor, although the broker who paid the money retained the amount so paid by him on settlement with the assignees, for it was the money of the broker, and not of the bankrupt (i).

Where the trader has sold goods at prices very inferior to their value, the assignees cannot recover the difference (k).

Proof of disaffirmance of acts by the bankrupt.

Where a bill of exchange was indorsed by the bankrupt after his bankruptcy, and the indorsee received the amount, it was held that the assignees could not recover for money had and received, but must resort to the action of trover for the bill (l).

Proof of notice when necessary.

The general relation of the title of the assignees to the act of bankruptcy, is in several instances restricted, in order to relieve those who have dealt bonâ fide with a bankrupt without knowing him to be such. In cases within some of the provisions of the statute, it is incumbent on the assignees to prove that the defendant had notice of the prior act of bankruptcy.

*170 *The stat. 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 81, enacts, that all conveyances by, and all contracts and other dealings and transactions (m) by and with any bankrupt bonâ fide made and entered into more than two calendar months before the date and issuing of the commission against him, and all executions and attachments against the lands and tenements or goods and chattels of such bankrupt, bonâ fide executed or levied (n) more than two calendar months (o) before the issuing of such commission, shall be valid, notwithstanding any prior act of bankruptcy by him committed; provided the person or persons so dealing with such bankrupt, or at whose suit or

(i) Hovil v. Pack, 7 East, 163; and see Willis v. Freeman, 12 East, 656.

(k) Hogg v. Mitchell,[1] 1 Starkie's C. 241. (l) Waller v. Drakeford,[2] 1 Starkie's C. 481.

(m) Under the stat. 46 G. 3, c. 138, s. 1, it was held, that by transactions are meant such as occur between parties in the usual course of business, and not such as are carried on through the medium of legal process (Blogg v. Phillips, 2 Camp. 129); and therefore that the terms did not extend to the levying under an execution by a creditor after a secret act of bankruptcy, more than two months before the commission. Ib. Where a bill was delivered by the trader, with intent to transfer the property, more than two months before the commission, but was not actually indorsed till within the two months, it was held, that the indorsement had relation to the delivery. 1 Camp. 492. Where the bankrupts had transferred wines more than two months before the issuing of the commission, by mistake, into the names of A. & Co., instead of A. & Son, being different firms, but the mistake was corrected within two months; held, that the mistake did not defeat the right of A. & Son, as at all events A. & Co. would be trustees for them; held also, that a prior commission having issued, though not acted upon nor gazetted, was sufficient within the proviso of 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 81, to deprive the defendant of the protection of the statute as to a subsequent transfer. Peckham v. Lashmoor,[3] 1 M. & M. 251.

(n) The seizure is a levying within the Act. Godson v. Sanctuary,[4] 4 B. & Ad. 255. See Wray v. Lord Egremont,[5] Ib. 122. Where the execution is on a judgment obtained by default, confession, or nil dicit, sec. 108 enacts, that the creditor shall not avail himself of such execution to the prejudice of other fair creditors, but shall be paid rateably. An execution on a final judgment, after a judgment by default, was held to be within the provisions of the 6 G. 4, c. 16, s. 108, although obtained before the Act came into operation. Cuming v. Welsford,[6] 6 Bing. 502. This section applies where, in such a case, the goods have been seized, but the execution is not completed; where the execution has been completed, the case falls within the 81st sect. Wymer v. Kemble,[7] 6 B. & C. 479, and see Thomas v. Desanges, 2 B. & A. 586. Sadler v. Leigh, 4 Camp. 197. This clause, it is held, does not avoid an execution levied by seizure before bankruptcy on a judgment by nil dicit, but only provides that the execution creditor shall share rateably with the rest. Taylor v. Taylor,[8] 5 B. & C. 392; 8 D. & R. 159. By the stat. 1 W. 4, c. 7, s. 7, no judgment signed or execution issued upon cognovit, signed after declaration filed or delivered, or judgment by default, confession, or nil dicit, according to the practice of the Court, in any action commenced adversely, and not by collusion, for the purpose of fraudulent preference, to be deemed within the 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 108.

(o) On a commission issuing May 14th, a dealing March 14th is valid, Cowie v. Harris,[9] M. & M. 141. The execution of a fi. fa. at 11 o'clock on the 13th of August, is a levying more than two months before the 13th of October. Godson v. Sanctuary,[4] 4 B. & Ad. 256; 1 N. & M. 52.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. ii. 373. [2]Id. ii. 476. [3]Id. xxii. 302. [4]Id. xxiv. 53. [5]Id. xxiv. 37. [6]Id. xix. 149. [7]Id. xiii. 238. [8]Id xi. 259. [9]Id. xxii. 270.

on whose account such execution or attachment shall have issued, had not at the time of such conveyance, contract, dealing, or transaction, or at the time of executing or levying such execution or attachment, notice (p) of any prior act of bankruptcy by him committed: provided also, that where a commission has been superseded, if any other commission shall issue against any person or persons comprised in such first commission, within two calendar months next after it shall have been superseded, no such conveyance, contract, dealing or transaction, execution or attachment, *171 shall be valid, unless made, *entered into, executed, or levied more than two calendar months before the issuing the first commission.

Sec. 82 enacts, that all payments (q) really and bonâ fide (r) made, or (p) The issuing of a commission is not in itself notice, and therefore payment after commission issued, but without actual knowledge, &c. is protected. Sowerby v. Brooks,[1] 4 B. & A. 523. A trader, after an act of bankruptcy, sells goods to B., who pays for them, without knowledge of the bankruptcy; the assignees cannot maintain trover for the goods without tendering the money. Cash v. Young,[2] 2 B. & C. 416; but see Harst v. Gwennap,[3] 2 Starkie's C. 306. Note, in the latter case the goods had not been paid for.

(q) A delivery of goods bona fide in part payment of a previous debt, after a secret act of bankruptcy, is protected. Cannan v. Wood, 2 M. & W. 465. So if cash be given for a bank-post bill, Willis v. Bank of England,[4] 4 Ad. & Ell. 21. So where a party, within two months before the fiat, pledged goods on an advance of money. Wright v. Fremley,[5] 5 Bing. N. C. 89. See also Mayer v. Nias,[6] 1 Bing. 311; and tit. PAYMENT. An assignment as a security for money lent in trust to permit the assignee at the expiration of a time specified to sell them in discharge of the debt, is not protected. A fiat issuing within two months after the assignment on a secret act of bankruptcy, previous to the assignment. Cannan v. Denew,[7] 10 Bing. 292.

(r) This clause is substituted for the provision of the stat. 19 G. 2, c. 32, s. 1, which protects payments to real and bona fide creditors of any bankrupt, for or in respect of goods really and bona fide sold to such bankrupt, or for or in respect of any bills of exchange really and bona fide drawn, negotiated, or accepted by such bankrupt, in the usual or ordinary course of trade and dealing. A payment under an arrest of the bankrupt, as the acceptor of a bill of exchange, has been held to be within the Act. Cox v. Morgan, 2 B. & P. 398, Chambre, J. diss. See also Holmes v. Wennington, 2 B. & P. 398. Ex parte Farr, 9 Ves. 515. That payments on bills not yet due were not within the act (semble). Tamplin v. Diggins, 2 Camp. 312. Nor on accommodation bills. Holroyd v. Whitehead,[8] 3 Camp. 530; 2 Camp. 315; 1 Marsh, 128; 2 H. B. 334; 11 East, 127. An advance of money upon a deposit of goods amounts to no more than a loan, and not a payment protected within the statute, although bona fide, and without notice of an act of bankruptcy. Wright v. Fearnley, 5 Bing. N. C. 89; 6 Sc. 813; and 7 Dowl. (P. C.) 129. And see Cannan v. Denew, 10 Bing. 292. A payment of a debt by weekly instalments after an act of bankruptcy was held not to be within the statute. Bolton v. Jager,[9] 1 Ry. & M. 265. Where a factor accepted a bill in favour of his principal, after a secret act of bankruptcy, and after notice the factor paid the amount to the holder, it was held that the payment was within the protection of the statute. Wilkins v. Casey, 7 T. R. 711. Coles v. Robins, 3 Camp. 183. Where a banker, on whom a bill of exchange had been drawn, requested, when it became due, that it might remain in his hands, and promised to pay interest, and afterwards, upon application by the holder, who had no notice of a previous act of bankruptcy, paid the amount, it was held that the transaction amounted to a loan, and was not within the statute. Vernon and others v. Hall, 2 T. R. 648. Where A. having obtained a verdict against B., who afterwards committed a secret act of bankruptcy, instead of entering up judgment and taking out execution, took a bill drawn by B. on C., which was paid when due, it was held that the payment was not within the statute. Pinkerton v. Marshall, 2 H. Bl. 334.

The statute did not extend to a payment by the debtor of the bankrupt upon a judgment against him on a foreign attachment, since it mentions payments by the bankrupt only. Hovil v. Browning, 7 East, 154. Where a factor accepted and paid bills on the strength of goods consigned to him by his principal, after a secret act of bankruptcy, and after a commission, sold the goods and received the money; it was held that he was not protected either by the stat. 1 Jac. 1, c. 15, s. 14, or 19 Geo. 1, c. 32, s. 1. A bona fide payment eight days before the commission issued, is protected by 6 G. 4, c. 16, s. 82. The creditor having met the party at an office where he knew he was going to receive money, obtains payment of his debt, not knowing either that his debtor was insolvent or a prisoner; the jury negativing any fraud, such payment is not a fraudulent preference. Churchill v. Crease,[10] 5 Bing. 177; 2 M. & P. 415. Where the defendant, after an act of bankruptcy unknown to him, and within two months of the issuing of the commission, purchased a lot of books from the bankrupt, a hop-merchant, and paid him for them; held, that such payment was valid, and that the assignees could not rescind the contract and maintain trover for the books, without an offer to return the money; and that the same construction was to be applied in all cases of bona fide sales, whether the goods were or not such as the bankrupt usually dealt in. Hill v. Farnell,[11] 9 B. & C. 45. Where the defendant, after a secret act of bankruptcy, sells goods at so low a price as not to be in the usual course of business, with the knowledge of the purchaser, the transaction is not within the protection of the statute. Ward v. Clarke,[12] 1 M. & M. C. 497. The defendant, at the request of the bankrupt, after a secret act of bankruptcy, lent him his acceptance for 98*l.*, and at a later period of the same day, in a conversation as to security, the

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. vi. 506. [2]Id. ix. 127. [3]Id. iii. 357. [4]Id. xxxi. 19. [5]Id. xxxv. 43. [6]Id. viii. 330. [7]Id. xxv. 139. [8]Id. i. 151. [9]Id. xxi. 435. [10]Id. xv. 409. [11]Id. xvii. 330. [12]Id. xxii. 369.

*which shall hereafter be made (s) by any bankrupt, or by any person on his behalf, before the date and issuing of the commission against such bankrupt, to any creditor of such bankrupt (such payment not being a fraudulent preference of such creditor), shall be deemed valid, notwithstanding any prior act of bankruptcy by such bankrupt committed; and all payments really and bonâ fide made, or which shall hereafter be made to any bankrupt, before the date and issuing of the commission against such bankrupt, shall be deemed valid, notwithstanding any prior act of bankruptcy by such bankrupt committed; and such creditor shall not be liable to refund the same to the assignees of such bankrupt, provided the person so dealing with the said bankrupt had not, at the time of such payment by or to such bankrupt, notice of (t) any act of bankruptcy by such bankrupt committed.

Sec. 83 enacts, that the issuing of a commission (u) shall be deemed notice of a prior act of bankruptcy (if an act of bankruptcy had been actually committed before the issuing the commission,) if the adjudication of the person or persons against whom such commission has issued shall have been notified in the London Gazette, and the person or persons to be affected by such notice may reasonably be presumed to have seen the same.

Sec. 84 enacts, that no person or body corporate, or public company having in his or their possession or custody any money, goods, wares, merchandizes or effects, belonging to any bankrupt, shall be endangered by reason of the payment or delivery thereof to the bankrupt or his order, provided such person or company had not at the time of such delivery or payment notice that such bankrupt had committed an act of bankruptcy.

Sec. 85 enacts, that if any accredited agent of any body corporate or public company shall have had notice of any act of bankruptcy, such body corporate or company shall be thereby deemed to have had such notice.

Sec. 86 enacts, that no purchase from any bankrupt bonâ fide, and for valuable consideration, where the purchaser had notice at the time of such bankrupt agreed to sell horses to the defendant for 70*l*., which were subsequently delivered; held, that the latter transaction was not protected by sect. 82 of 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, it not being a sale of goods with payment of the price, but a sale of goods with an agreement to set off the price against a liability on the part of the bankrupt. Carter v. Breton,[1] 6 Bing. 617. Where, after an act of bankruptcy by one of two partners, he paid a partnership debt to a creditor who had knowledge of the act of bankruptcy; held, that such payment was not protected by the 82d sect. of 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, as he had himself ceased to have any interest in the partnership funds, and his authority to make any payment for his partner was dissolved. Craven v. Edmondson,[2] 6 Bing. 734. And see Hawkins v. Penfold, 2 Ves. 550. Mont. & B. 311. Carter v. Picton, 6 Bing. 617. Goods delivered in payment of a bill of exchange then overdue, is not a payment within this clause, Smith v. Moon,[3] 1 M. & M. 458. Shaw v. Batley,[4] 4 B. & Ad. 801. Bradbury v. Anderton, 1 C. M. & R. 486. See Green v. White,[5] 3 Bing. N. C. 59.

(s) The expression "payments made," contrasted with the following, "henceforth to be made," clearly renders the provisions retrospective, and comprehends payments made at the time, and therefore before the passing of the Act. Terrington v. Hargreaves,[6] 5 Bing. 489. And see Churchill v. Crease, 5 Bing. 180.

(t) These words are to be construed "notice of an act of bankruptcy by any of the bankrupts" committed. Hawkins v. Whitten,[7] 10 B. & C. 217. A payment by one partner, who has committed an act of bankruptcy, of a partnership debt due before the bankruptcy to a creditor who has notice of the act of bankruptcy, is not protected. Craven v. Edmondson,[8] 6 Bing. 734. A payment for goods purchased from a bankrupt just before his bankruptcy is not protected if the purchaser knew, or had the means of knowing, the bankrupt's circumstances. Devas v. Venables,[9] 3 Bing. N. C. 400; and see Green v. White,[10] 1b. 591. Although notice of a docket struck be not of itself evidence of an act of bankruptcy, yet being connected with the fact of the defendant's requiring security before payment made, a jury may infer notice. Spratt v. Hobhouse,[11] 4 Bing. 181.

(u) By the issuing of a commission is meant its passing under the great seal, whether it be opened, or acted upon, or not. Watkins v. Maund, 3 Camp. 308.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xix. 180. [2]Id. xix. 219. [3]Id. xxii. 356. [4]Id. xxiv. 168. [5]Id. xxxii. 40. [6]Id. xv. 515. [7]Id. xxi. 60. [8]Id. xix. 219. [9]Id. xxxii. 176. [10]Id. xxxii. 40. [11]Id. xiii. 395.

purchase of an act of bankruptcy by such bankrupt committed, shall be *173 *impeached by reason thereof, unless the commission against such bankrupt shall have been sued out within twelve calendar months after such act of bankruptcy.

Insolvency. Again, in cases within the stat. 6 G. 4, c. 16, s. 73, it would be necessary that the assignees should prove the insolvency of the bankrupt at the time of the transaction which they seek to impeach.

This section enacts, that if any bankrupt, being at the time insolvent (x), shall (except upon the marriage of any of his children, or for some valuable consideration,) have conveyed, assigned, or transferred to any of his children, or any other person, any hereditaments, offices, fees, annuities, leases, goods or chattels, or have delivered or made over to any such person any bills, bonds, notes, or other securities, or have transferred his debts to any other person or persons, or into any other person's name, the commissioners shall have power to sell and dispose of the same as aforesaid; and every such sale shall be valid against the bankrupt, and such children and persons as aforesaid, and against all persons claiming under him.

By 2 & 3 Vict., c. 29, all contracts made bonâ fide with any bankrupt previous to the date and issuing any fiat against him, are valid, provided the party had no notice of any prior act of bankruptcy.

Action by assignees. Defence. The defence consists, either, 1st, in the denial of the plaintiff's right to sue in the character of assignees (y), or supposing them to be assignees, 2dly, of their particular cause of action against the defendant. Under the first head the defendant may, it has been seen in some instances, dispute and controvert all the facts upon which the bankruptcy is attempted to be supported (z). Under the second he may not only controvert the claim of the plaintiff's resting on the proofs already announced (a), as by showing that the bankrupt himself could not have supported the action, (in cases where the assignees affirm the acts of the bankrupt, and claim solely through his merits,) but he may also show, that in point of law the interest which the bankrupt had did not pass to the assignees; or he may rely upon a set-off, or discharge by the assignees.

*174 Non-joinder. *In the first place, he may controvert the title of the plaintiffs to sue in the character of assignees (b). He may object that there is another as-

(x) Compounding with creditors is evidence of insolvency. Reader v. Knatchbull, 5 T. R. 218. But insolvency means a general inability to answer engagements. And in order to invalidate a payment made by the bankrupt two months before the commission, it has been held to be insufficient to show that the creditor has renewed bills for the debtor, in consequence of the inability of the latter to provide for them, 1 Camp. 492. Notice to a creditor that there has been a meeting of the bankrupt's creditors, and that the state of his affairs was such that the demands of creditors could not be paid, except by instalments, although the creditor was assured by the bankrupt's agent that they would come round, was held to be notice of insolvency, (under the stat. 46 G. 3, c. 135, s. 1,) so as to defeat a subsequent payment by the bankrupt to the creditor. Bayly v. Schofield, 1 M. & S. 330. The plaintiffs to prove an execution creditor's knowledge of the trader's insolvency, proved a letter written by his attorney to the attorney of the execution creditor, stating that he had been embarrassed by the failure of another house, and strongly pressing for time, and offering to pay by instalments; it was held that it did not amount to the kind of insolvency meant by the statute, which being a term used in connection with that of bankruptcy was not to be considered as used in its common acceptation, but as meaning insolvency of so decided and unequivocal a character as to be immediately followed by bankruptcy or stopping payment, as a necessary consequence. Abraham v. George, 11 Price, 423.

(y) In trover by assignees, a plea denying that the plaintiffs were assignees, puts in issue the petitioning creditor's debt and act of bankruptcy. Buckton v. Frost, 1 Perr. & D. 102. And see Butler v. Hobson,[1] 4 Bing. N. C. 290.

(z) Except as to facts proved by the depositions, where they are given in evidence under the stat. 6 G. 4, c. 16, s. 92, for they are made conclusive evidence of those facts.

(a) Vide supra, 121.

(b) An assignment to assignees after an action, well commenced by the provisional assignee, does not defeat the action. Page v. Bauer,[2] 4 B. & A. 345.

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxxiii. 358. [2] Id. vi. 449.

signee still living, who ought to have been joined (c), for this is a ground of nonsuit.

In an action by the assignees under a joint commission against A. and B., against the sheriff for levying an execution on the goods of A. and B., it appeared that the levy was made after the bankruptcy of A. but before that of B.; and it was held that the action was not maintainable, since, although the bankruptcy of A. was a severance of the joint-tenancy, yet under a joint commission they could not sue for the separate property of one (d).

Prior act of bankruptcy.

Although no notice has been given of intention to dispute the commission, it may be shown that it is void, as by reason of infancy (e). At one time a defendant might disprove the title of the assignees by proof of an act of bankruptcy committed anterior to the petitioning creditor's debt, and of a sufficient debt to have supported a commission (f), although neither the bankrupt himself, nor any one claiming by assignment from him, could have sustained such an objection (g). But by the stat. 6 G. 4, c. 16, s. 19, no commission shall be deemed invalid by reason of any act or acts of bankruptcy prior to the debt or debts of the petitioning creditor or creditors, or any of them, provided there be a sufficient act of bankruptcy subsequent to such debt or debts (h).

Where the bankrupt was uncertificated under a former commission, and it was proved that all his effects were assigned under it; held, that in an action of trover by the subsequent assignees, the defendant might avail himself of the former commission, without notice to dispute having been given; for although the 94th section dispenses with proof of the facts enumerated, yet the commission must be put in evidence, and its validity in law is still open to examination (i).

Petitioning creditor's debt.

Payment of money to the petitioning creditor after the suing out of the commission renders the commission supersedable, but not ipso facto void (k). The defendant may impeach the petitioning creditor's debt, as by showing that it was due to the petitioning creditor and another, jointly, the latter not concurring in the petition (l); or that the petitioning creditors could not have sued upon the bill accepted by the trader upon which the debt is claimed, one of them having engaged to provide for the bill when due (m); that one *of the petitioning creditors is resident and carrying on trade in an enemy's country (n). *175

The petitioning creditor cannot in an action against him by the assignees dispute the amount of the petitioning creditor's debt (o). But it seems (c) Snelgrove v. Hunt,[1] 2 Starkie's C. 424; 1 Chitty's R. 71. Note that the action was in assumpsit.

(d) Hogg v. Bridges,[2] 2 Moore, 122. See Stonehouse and another v. De Silva,[3] 3 Camp. 399; and 2 Starkie's C. 17. Note they were not the goods of A. and B. as alleged.

(e) Belton v. Hodges,[4] 9 Bing. 365.

(f) R. v. Bullock, 1 Taunt. 72, 88; 14 Ves. 67, 452. Beardmore v. Shaw, 1 N. R. 263. But an act of bankruptcy alone was insufficient. Parker v. Manning, 2 Esp. 598; 4 Esp. 594; 9 East, 21.

(g) Mercer v. Wise, 3 Esp. 219; 1 Taunt. 80, 86, 94. Donnovan v. Duff, 9 East, 24. See Doe v. Boulcott, 2 Esp. C. 595, Eyre, C. J. Bryant v. Withers, 2 M. & S. 123.

(h) The corresponding clause in the stat. 46 G. 3, c. 135, s. 5, contains an exception which is omitted in the late Act, viz. "if such petitioning creditor had not any notice of such act of bankruptcy at the time when the debt was contracted."

(i) Phillips v. Hopwood,[5] 1 B. & Ad. 619.

(k) Garratt v. Theophilus Biddulph, 4 Esp. C. 104.

(l) Brickland v. Newsom, 1 Camp. 474. 1 Taunt. 477.

(m) Richmond v. Heapy,[6] 1 Starkie's C. 102.

(n) M'Connell v. Hector, 3 B. & P. 113. So, semble, that one of them is an infant. Ex parte Morton, 1 Buck's B. C. 42. Ex parte Barrow, 3 Ves. 554.

(o) Harmer v. Davis,[7] 1 Moore, 300.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. iii. 414. [2]Id. iv. 70. [3]Id. ii. 222. [4]Id. xxiii. 309. [5]Id. xx. 457. [6]Id. ii. 356. [7]Id. ii. 223.

that another defendant may show that the debt was merely colourable and conclusive, although the bankrupt himself might have been estopped by the security which he had given from disputing it (p).

Act of bankruptcy.

A defendant who was not privy to the transaction may show that the act of bankruptcy which is relied upon was a concerted one (q). But neither the bankrupt, nor any one privy to the concert, can insist upon such an objection (r). It is no objection that the commission fiat or adjudication was concerted (s).

Declarations by the bankrupt before his bankruptcy, with a view to a fraudulent commission, are admissible in evidence to show collusion between the bankrupt and the petitioning creditor (t).

To impeach the cause of action.

2dly. The defendant may show that in point of law the right of action did not pass to the assignees. Whether a particular interest does or does not pass to the assignees, is of course a pure question of law; but it is incumbent on the defendant to give in evidence such facts as raise the question of law, where the plaintiff has made out a primâ facie case (u).

(p) See Christian's B. L. 442, 2d edit.

(q) See Lord Mansfield's observations, in Hooper v. Smith, 1 Bl. 441; and see Bamford v. Baron, 2 T. R. 595, n. Stewart v. Richman, 1 Esp, C. 108. Field v. Bellamy, B. N. P. 39. Cowley v. Hopkins, Co. B. L. 84, 95. Ex parte Bourne, 16 Ves. 145. Ex parte Edmundson, 7 Ves. 303. But see Bromley v. Mundee, B. N. P. 39. Ex parte Milner, 1 Buck's B. C. 104. Secus, where the act of bankruptcy consists in a declaration of insolvency, under the stat. 6 G. 4, c. 16. See sec. 7.

(r) Roberts and others v. Teasdale, Peake, 27; B. N. P. 39, 40. Cowley v. Hopkins, Co. B. L. 84, 95. Ex parte Bourne, 16 Ves. 145. See also Wilson v. Poulton, 2 Str. 859; Billon v. Hyde & Mitchell, 1 Atk. 126; Tuppenden v. Burgess, 4 East, 235.

(s) 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 56, s. 42. See also Shaw v. Williams,[1] 1 Ry. & M. C. 19. Ex parte Binmer, 1 Madd. 250; 1 Mont. & M. 438; 1 Rose, 87. The stat. does not make a concerted act good, to sustain a fiat. As where assignment is made for the benefit of all creditors, to which the petitioning creditor is a party. Marshall v. Barkworth, 4 B. & C. 508. A creditor assenting to an act of bankruptcy, cannot avail himself of it to support a fiat. Ex parte Hall, 3 Deacon, B. C. 405. A petitioning creditor, party to a deed of assignment for the benefit of creditors, cannot set up the deed as an act of bankruptcy, Bunn, ex parte, 3 Deac. (B. C.) 119. But it is no defence to show that the commission issued by the desire and at the request of the bankrupt. Shaw v. Williams, M. & M. 19. This was otherwise before the stat. Ex parte Grant, 1 C. & J. 17.

(t) Thomson v. Bridges,[2] 2 Moore, 376. But declarations by the petitioning creditor after suing out the commission, that the commission was concerted, were held to be inadmissible. Harwood v. Keys, 1 Mo. & R. 204.

(u) Bills of exchange obtained by false pretences do not pass. (Gladstone v. Hadwen, 1 M. & S. 517); nor trust property (Webster v. Scales, 25 G. 3, B. R. Winch v. Keely, 1 T. R. 619); nor property equitably assigned before the bankruptcy. Tibbits v. George,[3] 5 Ad. & Ell. 107. Carvalho v. Burn,[4] 4 B. & Ad. 382. And see, as to cases under the Insolvent Act, Best v. Angles, 2 C. & M. 394; 4 Tyr. 256. A. agrees to assign to B. certain specific goods by way of security for money advanced by B. for the purchase of them, and afterwards assigns them under circumstances which would have made the assignment void under the Insolvent Act; the assignees of A. under the Insolvent Act are not entitled to the goods, although it would be otherwise if the goods were not ascertained at the time of the agreement. Mogg v. Baker, 3 M. & W. 195. Nor the property of the bankrupt's wife to her separate use (Vandernanker v. Desborough, 2 Vernon, 95). Aliter, where stock stands in the name of a married woman (Pringle v. Hodgson, 3 Ves. 617); and the wife can have no assistance in equity where there is no trust created for her benefit (Ibid.; and see Christian's B. L. 483, 2d edit.) The assignment passes future personal property (Kitchen v. Bartsch, 7 East, 53); but a fresh assignment of real property was held to be necessary (Ex parte Proudfoot, 1 Atk. 253). The assignment passes contingent interests (Higden v. Williams, 3 P. Wms. 132); but not a possibility of taking by descent as heir (Moth v. Frome, Amb. 394. Carleton v. Leighton, 3 Mer. 667). Particular proceedings are made for the transfer of copyhold property by the stat. 2 G. 4, c. 16, s. 86. All saleable offices pass by assignment (1 Atk. 210); secus, of offices which concern the administration of justice, 5 & 6 Ed. 6, c. 16. (See Ex parte Butler, 1 Atk. 210, 215. Amb. 73, 89, 112. Cooke's B. L. 283). So an officer's pay does not pass. Lidderdale v. Duke of Montrose, 4 T. R. 248. An advowson passes, but the bankrupt must present, if a lapse occur before conveyance to a purchaser. See Charman v. Charman, 14 Ves. 580. The assignment passes the bankrupt's right to recover what he has paid as a gaming debt. Brandon v. Pate, 2 H. B. 308. A lease, notwithstanding a covenant not to assign without consent. Philpot v. Horne, 2 Atk. 219; Amb. 480. Doe v. Carter, 8 T. R. 7. Aliter, where there is a proviso for re-entry in case of the lessee's bankruptcy. Roe v. Galliers, 2 T. R. 133. An annuity demised to the bankrupt, and payable to him only, ceases upon the assignment. Dommett v. Bedford, 6 T. R. 684; 3 Ves. 150. A debt due to the wife dum sola, passes (Miles v. Williams, 1 P. Wms. 249); so does a debt on mortgage (Bosvil v. Brandon, 1 P. Wms. 459); but the wife's right of survivorship is good against the assignees, if the husband dies before they obtain possession. Mitford v. Mitford, 9 Ves. 87. As to the wife's remainder in chattel interest,

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxi. 372. [2] Id. iv. 121. [3] Id. xxxi. 293. [4] Id. xxiv. 82.

*The assignees being only entitled derivatively from or through the bankrupt, as he could not have maintained an action against the East India *Company for the arrears of his pension, his assignees cannot (x). By bringing an action in the form ex contractu, where it might have been laid in tort, they affirm the act of the bankrupt, and the defendant is entitled to the benefit of a set-off (y). For the assignees cannot affirm the same transaction in part, and disaffirm it for the rest. And therefore, where the bankrupt, after a secret act of bankruptcy, had transactions with the defendants, and the assignees brought an action of assumpsit to recover what the bankrupt had paid; Lord Hardwicke, C. held that the defendants were entitled to set-off money which they had paid for the bankrupt (z); for by bringing an action of assumpsit the assignees had elected to consider the bankrupt as their factor, and affirmed his contract, and having done so, must take him as their factor in all things done fairly and without deceit. Set-off. *177

Upon an action by the assignees, the defendant was before, and is now, see Doe v. Steward,[1] 1 Ad. & Ell. 300. Goods delivered to the bankrupt on a contract of sale pass to the assignees, although the bankrupt intended to defraud the vendor. Milword v. Forbes, 4 Esp. C. 171; but see Gladstone v. Hadwen, 1 M. & S. 517. So does the interest of a tenant for life in his redemption of the land-tax. Emley v. Grey, 3 Mer. App. 702. Money advanced to the bankrupt, being in prison (the act of bankruptcy), for the special purpose of settling with his creditors, which object fails, may be repaid by the bankrupt to the party advancing the money, and does not pass to the assignees. Toovey v. Milne, 2 B. & A. 683. Where the defendant delivered a cheque on his banker to two persons, for a specific purpose, and they returned it to him after their bankruptcy, not having used it; held that the assignees were not entitled to recover it in trover. Moore v. Barthrop,[2] 1 B. & C. 5. Money received by an overseer of the poor, and set apart from the rest of his property, does not pass to the assignees. R. v. Eggington, 1 T. & R. 370. In general, the product of a substitute for the original follows the thing itself, as long as it can be ascertained to be such, and the right only ceases when the means of ascertainment fail, which is the case where the subject is turned into money, and mixed and confounded in a general mass of the same description. Per Lord Ellenborough, Taylor v. Plumer, 3 M. & S. 563. See Scott v. Surman, Willes, 400; Whitcomb v. Jacob, Salk. 650; Copeman v. Callant, 1 P. Wms. 320. A draft is intrusted to a broker to buy exchequer bills; the broker receives the money and misapplies it, by purchasing American stock and bullion, and absconds, but is apprehended. The principal, who receives the American stock and bullion, is not amenable to the assignees under a commission against the broker, on an act of bankruptcy committed on the day on which he misapplied the money. Taylor v. Plumer, 3 M. & S. 563. Property passes to the assignees when received by a factor after the act of bankruptcy, although purchased with monies advanced by the factor for the purpose of purchasing the goods to be sold by him to repay himself out of the proceeds. Copeland v. Stein, 8 T. R. 199; and see Carter v. Barcklay,[3] 3 Starkie's C. 43. By the stat. 6 G. 4, c. 16, s. 63, the commissioners are to assign all the present and future personal estate of such bankrupt, wheresoever, &c. and all property which he may purchase, or which may revert, descend, be devised or bequeathed, or come to him, before he shall have obtained his certificate; and the commissioners shall also assign, as aforesaid, all debts due, or to be due to the bankrupt, wheresoever, &c. to such assignees; and after such assignment, neither the bankrupt nor any other person claiming through or under him shall have power to recover the same, nor to make any release or discharge thereof; neither shall the same be attached, &c., but such assignees shall have like remedy to recover the same in their own names as the bankrupt himself might have had if he had not been adjudged bankrupt. A valid appropriation or equitable assignment of a trader's funds is not revoked by his bankruptcy. Hatchinson v. Heyworth,[4] 9 Ad. & Ell. 375. A money bond assigned by the trader to secure a debt to a larger amount, does not pass to the assignees. Dangerfield v. Thomas,[5] 9 Ad. & Ell. 292. Where a sum was bequeathed, subject to forfeiture if the legatee should "mortgage, charge, sell, assign, or incumber;" held, that bankruptcy being an act of law, and not a voluntary assignment by the legatee, which was alone contemplated by the will, the assignees were entitled. Whitfield v. Prickett, 2 Keene, 608. Where a grantor settled estates on two in succession for life, on condition that the party entitled for the time being should reside in the mansion-house and bear the name and arms of the grantor, the latter becoming bankrupt; held, that having a vested right in remainder in the property at the time of his bankruptcy, it passed, under the bargain and sale, to his assignees, although liable to be defeated by the default of the party to fulfil the condition. Ex parte Goldney, 4 Deacon, B. C. 570; 1 Mont. & Ch. 75.

(x) Gibson v. East India Company, 5 Bing. N. C. 262.

(y) Smith v. Hodgson,[6] 4 T. R. 211. In assumpsit by assignees on an agreement by the bankrupt for the sale of goods, to be paid for by an acceptance, alleging the refusal to accept, and damage by loss of the benefit of such acceptance, and injury to his estate thereby; held, that the damage resulting in pecuniary loss only, it did not amount to such an allegation of unliquidated damages as to preclude the debtor's right of set-off. Groom v. West, 1 Perr. & D. 19. And see Gibson v. Bell,[7] 1 Bing. N. C. 743.

(z) Billon v. Hyde & Mitchell, 1 Atk. 120.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxviii. 89. [2]Id. viii 5. [3]Id. xiv. 156. [4]Id. xxxvi. 162. [5]Id. xxxvi. 143. [6]Id. xxxv. 112. [7]Id. xxvii. 562.

under the stat. 6 G. 4, c. 16, s. 50, where there have been mutual credits between the parties, entitled to set off a debt due from the bankrupt to him before the bankruptcy, without giving any notice of set-off; and he may either plead the set-off, or give it in evidence under the general issue (a).

Mutual credit.

By the stat. 6 G. 4, c. 16, s. 50, where there has been mutual (b) credit given by the bankrupt and any other person, or where there are mutual debts (c) between the bankrupt and any other person, the commissioners *shall state the account between them, and one debt or demand (d) may be set against another, notwithstanding any prior act of bankruptcy committed by such bankrupt before the credit given to or the debt contracted by him, and what shall appear due on either side on the balance of such account, and no more, shall be claimed or paid on either side respectively, and every debt or demand hereby made proveable against the estate of the bankrupt, may also be set off in manner aforesaid against such estate (e); provided that the person claiming the benefit of such set-off had not, when such credit was given, notice (f) of an act of bankruptcy by such bankrupt committed.

*178

The defendant, before this, must have showed that the debt which he proposed to set off, accrued before the act of bankruptcy (g); he could not set off cash notes payable to J. S. or bearer, although they were dated before the bankruptcy, without showing that they came to his hands before the

(a) Grove v. Dubois, 1 T. R. 112. Ryall v. Larkin, 1 Wils. 155; see also Edmeads v. Newman,[1] 1 B. & C. 418, as to mutual securities held by country bankers. And see, as to the advance of money on the strength of consignments, Easum v. Cato,[2] 5 B. & A. 861; Ex parte Deere, 1 Atk. 228. As to mutual accounts between an insurance broker and underwriter, see 19 Geo. 2, c. 32. Graham v. Russell, 5 M. & S. 498.

(b) These words are not confined to pecuniary demands, but extend to confidential deliveries of goods, likely, under the circumstances, to become productive. Easum v. Cato,[2] 5 B. & A. 861. So if bankers discount bills yet running, and give credit to the bankrupt, in his account with them, for the amount minus the discount. Arbouin v. Tritton,[3] 1 Holt's C. 408. Secus, if the trader deposit a bill with another for a specific purpose, as to raise money upon it, in such case the assignees, after tendering the amount advanced on the bill, are entitled to recover in trover. Key v. Flint,[4] 1 Moore, 451; Buchanan v. Findlay,[5] 9 B. & C. 738. This clause extends to mutual dealings up to the time of the commission, and therefore extends the protection of the stat. 46 G. 3, c. 135, s. 3. See Kinder v. Butterworth,[6] 6 B. & C. 42; Tamplin v. Diggins, 2 Camp. 312. A mutual credit may be constituted although the parties did not mean particularly to trust each other, as where A. accepts a bill which gets into the hands of B., who buys goods of A. Hankey v. Smith, 3 T. R. 507. A partner in the house of M. & Co. drew bills for the accommodation of A., a customer with the firm, who discount the bill for A. and indorse it to N. & Co. The bill becoming due after the bankruptcy of M. & Co., N. & Co. pay themselves out of the funds of M. & Co. in their hands. The assignees of M. & Co. sue A.; the latter is entitled to set off a debt from M. & Co. Bolland v. Nash, 8 B. & C. 105.

(c) The debt due from the creditor to the bankrupt, or the credit given by the latter to the bankrupt, must have existed at the time of the bankruptcy. See Hankey v. Smith, 3 T. R. 507 (n). A. bought of B. goods to the amount of 430*l.*, at six months' credit, and afterwards to the amount of 230*l.* at the like credit, and at the expiration of the first six months gave B. two bills of exchange on third persons for —l., on an undertaking by the latter to pay the balance when the bills were paid. A. having become bankrupt before the credit for the second parcel expired, it was held that B. might set off the 170*l.* against the price of the second parcel. Atkinson v. Elliott, 7 T. R. 378. See Key v. Flint,[7] 8 Taunt. 21.

(d) Notwithstanding these terms, a more extensive sense is given to the terms mutual credit, in the earlier part of the clause. See Eden on the Bankruptcy Laws, 194. Ex parte Marshall, 1 Mont. & Ayr. 139.

(e) And therefore debts may now be set off which could not formerly have been set off as depending upon a contingency. See Eden B. L. 203. The terms are more extensive than mutual debts. But they are confined to such credits as must in their nature terminate in debts. Rose v. Hart,[8] 8 Taunt. 499. Rose v. Sims,[9] 1 B. & Ad. 521. Easum v. Cato,[10] 5 B. & A. 861. Young v. Bank of England, 1 Deac. Bankruptcy Cases, 622. A mere guarantee against contingent damages, which cannot terminate in a debt, is not the subject of mutual credit. Sampson v. Burton,[11] 2 B. & B. 89. Where a creditor employed his debtor to repair his carriage on a contract to pay ready money for the repairs, it was held that the assignees of the latter had a lien till payment. Clarke v. Fell,[12] 4 B. & Ad. 404.

(f) As to the construction of these words, vide supra, 172.

(g) Marsh v. Chambers, Str. 1234.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. viii. 116. [2]Id. vii. 282. [3]Id. iii. 145. [4]Id. iv. 3. [5]Id. xvii. 486. [6]Id. xiii. 105. [7]Id. iv. 3. [8]Id. iv. 185. [9]Id. xx. 437. [10]Id. vii. 282. [11]Id. vi. 28. [12]Id. xxiv. 87.

bankruptcy (h). So where the defendant insisted on acceptances of the bankrupt in his hands, by way of set-off to an action by the assignees, on his own acceptance, he was bound to show either that his obligation to pay the bills subsisted before the bankruptcy, or that the bills originated in mutual credit (i).

*Where B. agreed to indemnify A. his surety, by allowing him to retain out of any debt which he should owe to B., in respect of mutual dealings in trade, as much as he should pay on the bond, and B. sold goods to A., and after B.'s bankruptcy A. paid more than the price of the goods on the bond, it was held that the assignees could not recover for the goods, there being nothing due to the bankrupt's estate on the original contract (k). *179

Where B., a broker, was intrusted by A., a merchant, with policies on goods, effected by B. for A., and after A.'s bankruptcy B. received for losses under such policies; and A. had before his bankruptcy employed B. to sell goods for him as a broker, and B. had advanced money to A. upon a pledge of such goods and upon A.'s general credit; it was held that this was a mutual credit, and that B. might retain the sum received for the loss, in liquidation of his advances, and of the money due for premiums (l). The defendant having accepted bills for the accommodation of a trader, received money from him after an act of bankruptcy, but before the commission, to take up the bills which became due after the commission, and were then paid by the defendant: held that the defendant was bound to refund; for the statute is confined to mutual debts at any time before such person became bankrupt, and it was not the money of the bankrupt, but of the assignees (m). It is not sufficient for the defendant to show that the subject of his set-off was allowed as a debt by the commissioners (n). The defendant cannot, in an action by the assignees, set off a debt on a bill drawn by the bankrupt, of which he is the holder, after having set it off against a prior indorser (o). The debt must be due in the same right (p).

(h) Dickson v. Evans, 6 T. R. 57. Lawrence, J. observed, that if the notes had been payable to the defendant himself, he should have thought it reasonable evidence that they came into his hands at the time hey bore date. Where to an action by the assignees of a bankrupt, for a debt due to the bankrupt's estate, the defendant set off notes in his possession issued by the bankrupt before the bankruptcy; proof that notes to the amount of the set-off came into his hands three or four weeks before the bankruptcy, was held sufficient evidence from which the jury might infer that he was in possession of them at the time of the bankruptcy, without identifying them with the notes produced. Moore v. Wright,[1] 6 Taunt. 517. Under the above clause, a party who has industriously obtained notes of bankers after they had stopped payment, but who had no notice of any act of bankruptcy committed, is entitled to set them off. Hawkins v. Whitten,[2] 10 B. & C. 217. See also Dickson v. Cass,[3] 1 B. & Ad. 343. Bills were drawn by one partner and accepted by the defendant, and discounted by the firm for his convenience, having money in their hands of his at the time; held, that between the parties it constituted a mutual credit, and that the firm could not, by paying away the bills, which were afterwards returned to them, put an end to that mutual credit, so as to deprive the defendant of his right to set off any debt due from the firm to him against the sum claimed by them or their assignees from him, as such acceptor. Bolland v. Nash,[4] 8 B. & C. 105. The defendant, in consideration of the bankrupt's delivering to him a bill accepted by him, promised to deliver to the bankrupt a bill accepted by E., and indorsed by the defendant, and the latter afterwards proved the former bill under the commission, but refused to indorse the bill of E.; held, that it did not constitute a case of mutual credit between the bankrupt and defendant, but was a cause of action, from the non-performance of a contract, for which the assigness might sue. Rose v. Sims,[5] 1 B. & Ad. 521.

(i) Oughterlony v. Easterby, 4 Taunt. 888. Southwood v. Taylor, 1 B. & A. 471. And see Sheldon v. Rothschild,[6] 2 Moore, 43. The bankrupt accepted a bill for 488*l.* for the accommodation of A., but becoming indebted to A. for part, drew a bill on A. for the balance, and became bankrupt. The latter bill was accepted and paid by A. without knowledge of the intervening bankruptcy; and it was held to be a case of mutual credit, although the principal sum was not due at the time of the bankruptcy; it was also held, that an action for money had and received did not lie against the purchaser of the bill, to whom A. had paid the amount.

(k) Dobson v. Lockhart, 5 T. R. 133.

(l) Olive v. Smith,[7] 5 Taunt. 56. And see Arbouin v. Tritton,[8] Holt, 408.

(m) Tamplin v. Diggins, 2 Camp. 312.

(n) Pirie v. Mennett, 3 Camp. 279.

(o) Belcher v. Lloyd,[9] 10 Bing. 310.

(p) See tit. SET-OFF. Fair v. M'Iver, 16 East, (B. C.) 130.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. i. 469. [2]Id. xxi. 60. [3]Id. xx. 397. [4]Id. xv. 157. [5]Id. xx. 437. [6]Id. iv. 55. [7]Id. i. 16. [8]Id. iii. 145. [9]Id. xxv. 145.

Where a party struck a docket, and afterwards became a trustee under an assignment of all the bankrupt's property in trust for creditors, and after he had incurred some expenses in executing the trust, another creditor issued a fiat, and the assignee seized the property; held, that the assignment being of itself notice of an act of bankruptcy, he could acquire no lien on the property as against the assignees (q).

Discharge. A discharge by one assignee, on receiving monies due to the estate, will bind the rest (r); but a discharge by one assignee will not be effectual where the others have expressly dissented (s). So a release executed by one assignee in the presence of another will bind both (t): but if the co-assignee be absent, an express authority by him under seal must be proved (u).

Actions against assignees, &c. II. Actions against Commissioners, Assignees, &c.—In an action against a commissioner the plaintiff must prove notice of action, according to the stat. 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 41 (x). And any plaintiff who sues in respect of anything *done in pursuance of the stat. 6 G. 4, c. 16, must (by sec. 44), show that his action was commenced within three calendar months next after the fact committed. In order to compel the defendant to prove the requisites of bankruptcy, the plaintiff must prove notice of his intention to dispute them under the stat. 6 G. 4, c. 16, s. 90 (y).

*180

Evidence that the commissioners made out their warrant of commitment without showing any actual restraint, in consequence of such warrant, the party being previously, and still remaining, in custody for another cause, is not sufficient to support an action of imprisonment against them (z).

Where the assignees authorize the bankrupt to carry on the business for the benefit of creditors, they are liable for goods supplied to him, although (q) Ex parte Swinburne, 3 Deac. 396; and 1 Mont. & Ch. 119.

(r) Smith v. Jameson, 1 Esp. C. 114. Contra, Carr v. Read, 3 Atk. 695.

(s) Bristow and others v. Eastman, 1 Esp. C. 172, where one assignee had taken 20*l.* in discharge of various sums embezzled by defendant, against the consent of a co-assignee.

(t) Williams v. Walsby, 4 Esp. C. 220. Lord Lovelace's Case, W. Jones, 208. Ball v. Dunsterville, 4 T. R. 313.

(u) 4 T. R. 313. Harrison v. Jackson, 7 T. R. 207.

(x) Which enacts, that no writ shall be sued out against, nor copy of any process served on any commissioner, for anything by him done as such commissioner, unless notice in writing of such intended writ or process shall have been delivered to him, or left at his usual place of abode, by the attorney or agent for the party intending to sue or cause the same to be sued out or served, at least one calendar month before the suing out or serving the same; and such notice shall set forth the cause of action which such party has or claims to have, &c., and on the back of such notice shall be indorsed the name of such attorney or agent, together with the place of his abode.

Sec. 42 enacts, that no such plaintiff shall recover any verdict against such commissioner, in any case where the action shall be grounded on any act of the defendant as commissioner, unless it is proved, upon the trial of such action, that such notice was given, as aforesaid; but in default thereof, such commissioner shall recover a verdict and costs, as hereinafter mentioned; and no evidence shall be permitted to be given by the plaintiff on the trial of any such action, of any cause of action, except such as is contained in the notice.

Sec. 43 enacts, that every such commissioner may, at any time within one calendar month after such notice, tender amends to the party complaining, or to his agent or attorney; and if the same is not accepted, may plead such tender in bar to any action brought against him, grounded on such writ or process, together with the plea of not guilty, and any other plea, with leave of the court; and if, upon issue joined thereon, the jury shall find the amends so tendered to have been sufficient, they shall give a verdict for the defendant; and if the plaintiff shall become nonsuit, or shall discontinue his action, or if judgment shall be given for such defendant upon demurrer, such commissioner shall be entitled to the like costs as he would have been entitled to in case he had pleaded the general issue only; and if, upon issue so joined, the jury shall find that no amends were tendered, or that the same were not sufficient, and also against the defendant, on such other plea or pleas, they shall give a verdict for the plaintiff, and such damages as they shall think proper, which he shall recover, together with costs of suit; provided that, if any such commissioner shall neglect to tender any amends, or shall have tendered insufficient amends before the action brought, he may, by leave of the court where such action shall depend, at any time before issue joined, pay into court such sum of money as he shall think fit, whereupon such proceedings shall be had in court as in other actions where the defendant is allowed to pay money into court.

(y) Supra, 89.

(z) Crowley v. Impey,[1] 2 Starkie's C. 261.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. iii. 341.

ordered in his own name (a), and to pay him for his trouble. Where they enter and keep possession of the premises, although for the purpose of disposing of the bankrupt's estate, they become liable on the covenants (b).

Where a bankrupt had a lease of premises, and also a reversionary interest in them, and the assignees executed an assignment of all the bankrupt's estate and reversionary interest, it was held that they must be taken to have assigned the lease, and consequently to have accepted it (c).

Where premises, with fixtures, were mortgaged, but the mortgagor continued in possession, and, becoming bankrupt, his assignees removed the fixtures; it was held, that the mortgagee, as against the defendants as strangers, was entitled to consider the mortgagor as his tenant at will, and maintain an action for the injury to his reversionary interest; and also, *that having the same right to the fixtures as his tenant, he might maintain trover for the fixtures so severed, and that they did not pass to the assignees as goods within the bankrupt's order and disposition (d). *181

Defence by Commissioners, Assignees, &c. (e).—By the stat. 6 G. 4, c. 16, s. 44, commissioners and others may in all cases justify what they have done under the act under the general issue. In default of notice, under the 90th clause, no evidence need be given of the requisites of bankruptcy (f). Where the action is brought in respect of a commitment of the bankrupt or any other under the statute, the whole of the examination of that person shall be read and considered, and the defendant shall have the same benefit from it as if the whole had been recited in the warrant (g). Defence by assignees.

(a) Kinder v. Howarth,[1] 2 Starkie's C. 354.

(b) In order to protect themselves, they should enter with a protest, that it is not for the purpose of possessing themselves of the premises as assignees. Hanson v. Stevenson, 1 B. & A. 303. See Turner v. Richardson, 7 East, 335; Wheeler v. Bramah, 3 Camp. 340.

(c) Page v. Godden,[2] 2 Starkie's C. 309. See tit. COVENANT.

(d) Hitchman v. Walton, 4 M. & W. 409. And see Partridge v. Bere,[3] 5 B. & Ald. 604.

(e) Upon an application for payment of a dividend against a surviving assignee after a great lapse of time, held that the onus of proving payment lay on the assignee, and that the statute of limitations did not attach to a debt once proved under the commission. Ex parte Healey, 1 D. & Ch. 331.

(f) The power given by the above clause to persons appointed by the commissioners to break open any house, &c., of the bankrupt, and seize upon the body or goods of such bankrupt, is confined to the house of the bankrupt, and does not extend to those of other persons where such party or property may be; the 29th sec., giving the power to search the houses of third persons, requires also the warrant of a justice to be obtained by the party appointed by the commissioners; and therefore, where the assignees entered the premises of the plaintiff to seize goods of the bankrupt, it is not an act done in puruance of the stat., and the plaintiff is not limited to his action within three months after the act committed. Edge v. Parker,[4] 8 B. & C. 697.

Doing an act "in pursuance of" a stat., is applicable only to cases where the party can be considered as founding his act upon the power given him by the legislature. Ib. And see Carruthers v. Payne,[5] 5 Bing. 270; Worth v. Budd,[6] 2 B. & Ad. 177. The official assignee is not within the protection of the 44th clause. Knight v. Turquant, 2 M. & W. 101.

In order to justify the commissioners in issuing their warrant to apprehend a party summoned to attend before them as a witness under s. 33 of 6 G. 4, c. 16, there should be a reasonable interval between the service of the summons and the time appointed for his attendance, and it is for a jury to say whether under the circumstances such service be reasonable or not; but in order to justify them in issuing their warrant, it is not necessary they should have before them information on oath of the service of the summons. Groocock v. Cooper,[7] 8 B. & C. 211.

Where no objection was made by the bankrupt to the course of the examination, but he objected to sign it afterwards, it is not necessary that the examination should be set out in the warrant. In re Leak, 3 Y. & J. 46.

Upon a like application in the court of K. B., the court also held it to be unnecessary to set out the examination, but that the bankrupt was entitled to be discharged, the warrant having concluded that "he should be committed until he should sign, and true answer make."[8] 9 B. & C. 234.

Where a return to a habeas corpus set forth only a part of the warrant, omitting the questions which had been put to the bankrupt, the Court ordered that the gaoler should amend his return, and annex the warrant itself, or that a copy thereof, or the whole, should be set forth in the affidavit of the party opposing the discharge. In re Power, 2 Russ. 583.

(g) By sec. 40.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. iii. 379. [2]Id. iii. 358. [3]Id. vii. 204. [4]Id. xv. 328. [5]Id. xv. 447. [6]Id. xxii. 53. [7]Id. xv. 198. [8]Id. xvii. 366.

Where the action is brought by the bankrupt (h) to try the question of bankruptcy, and due notice has been given according to the stat. 6 G. 4, c. 16, s. 90, the defendants must either prove the different requisites of bankruptcy, or some direct or collateral admission by the plaintiff of his *182 bankruptcy (i); as that he obtained his discharge under a Judge's *order (k), or solicited votes in the choice of assignees: proof that he surrendered is insufficient, since a surrender is compulsory (l).

Assignees, under a plea in trover, denying the property in the plaintiffs, are entitled to show that the goods were in the order and disposition of the bankrupt as the true owner, and that the defendants, as assignees, sold the goods (m).

Actions by a bankrupt.

III. Actions by and against Bankrupts.—It is no defence, that the debtor has notice of the insolvency of the plaintiff, and that he may be afterwards called upon by the assignees to pay the debt; for payments enforced by coercion of law are valid against the assignees (n). In general, it seems to be no defence to prove that the plaintiff is an uncertificated bankrupt, for a cause of action, as goods sold and delivered (o); or money lent (p); or a contract for the delivery of goods, subsequent to the bankruptcy (q), unless the assignees interpose (r). He may maintain trover for goods acquired by him after the bankruptcy, against all but his assignees (s).

Where the bankrupt was tenant from year to year, and a trespass was committed prior to his bankruptcy, it was held that he might maintain an action of trespass subsequently to his bankruptcy (t).

By the stat. 6 G. 4, c. 16, s. 126 (u), it is enacted, that any bankrupt

(h) When a commission is superseded, all acts done under it are void, and an action lies against the assignees for taking the goods. Ex parte King, 2 Ves. J. 40. Perkins v. Proctor, 2 Wils. 382. Mont. B. L. 613, n., the titles of purchasers are defeated. Ibid.

(i) See tit. Admission, and Crafton v. Poole,[1] 1 B. & Ad 568. In order to prove a bankrupt to have been a trader, proof of his having acknowledged that he was in partnership with a trader, and that he spoke of partnership property being their joint property, is evidence of the fact as against him. Parker v. Barker,[2] 1 B. & B. 9; 1 B. & A. 568. Shortly before the sale of the bankrupt's goods, he consulted with his assignees and the auctioneer as to the best means of disposing of them, and had also, in a notice to his landlord, in which he styled himself "a bankrupt," offered to surrender his lease, which was accepted; held, that the first did not amount to a consent to the sale, so as to estop him from questioning the validity of the commission, being referable to an intention to take care of and see that the most was made of the property, and with respect to his admission of being bankrupt to his landlord, and availing himself of the commission to surrender the lease, that although, as against his landlord, he might be precluded by his admission from denying it, yet that he was not, as against third persons, and that as against the defendants he was at liberty to prove such admissions to be mistaken or untrue. Heane v. Rogers,[3] 9 B. & C. 586.

(k) Supra, tit. Admissions, 19. (l) Ibid.

(m) Isaac v. Belcher, 5 M. & W. (ex.) 139; and 7 Dowl. 516.

(n) Prickett v. Down, 3 Camp. 131; 14 Ves. 557.

(o) Foster v. Allanson, 2 T. R. 479. Silk v. Osborn, 1 Esp. C. 140. Chippendale v. Tomlinson, Co. B. L. 446. Coles v. Barrow, 4 Taunt. 754.

(p) Evans v. Brown, 1 Esp. C. 170. But see Kitchen v. Bartsch, 7 East, 53.

(q) Cumming v. Roebuck,[4] Holt's C. 172.

(r) Where the plaintiff, whilst he was an uncertificated bankrupt, acted as a furniture broker, hiring vans, and employing men, and providing goods, it was held that it was such after-acquired property as the assignees intervening were entitled to recover, and that a payment by the defendant to them, between the writ and the declaration, might be given in evidence under the general issue, and was a good answer to the plaintiff's action. Crofton v. Poole,[1] 1 B. & Ad. 568.

(s) Webb v. Fox, 7 T. R. 391. Fowler v. Down, 1 B. & P. 44. See also Drayton v. Dale,[5] 2 B. & C. 293, as to his right to transfer a note made payable to him since his bankruptcy. Also Ashley v. Kell, Stra. 1207. Or where he is but a trustee for another. Fowler v. Down, 1 B. & P. 44. Coles v. Barrow, 4 Taunt. 754.

(t) Clarke v. Calvert,[6] 3 Moore, 96; and qu. whether the assignees could have maintained the action. See Webb v. Fox, 7 T. R. 391; Fowler v. Down, 1 B. & P. 44. Smith v. Eustace, 2 H. B. 444. Cumming v. Roebuck,[4] 1 Holt's C. 172.

(u) The effect of 6 G. 4, c. 16, s. 121, discharging the bankrupt from all debts due by him before the bankruptcy, is to afford relief, not only to the person but to his subsequently acquired property; the Court who shall, after his certificate (x) shall have been allowed, be arrested, or have *any action brought against him for any debt, claim or demand *183 thereby made proveable under the commission against such bankrupt, shall Actions against a bankrupt.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xx. 441. [2]Id. v. 4. [3]Id. xvii. 449. [4]Id. iii. 64. [5]Id. ix. 91. [6]Id. vi. 266.

be discharged upon common bail, and may plead in general that the cause Plea of certificate.
of action accrued before he became bankrupt, and may give this Act and the special matter in evidence (y), and such bankrupt's certificate, and the allowance thereof, shall be sufficient evidence of the trading, bankruptcy, commission, and other proceedings precedent to the obtaining such certificate.

A certificate obtained after the commencement of the action is not evidence under the general issue, since it operates merely as a special discharge under the statute, and therefore must be made available, as the statute directs (z); but if the defendant plead such certificate it will be evidence (a), although obtained after the commencement of the action.

The effect of the certificate in evidence will be to bar all demands which Effect of certificate.
were due at the time of the act of bankruptcy, and which could have been proved under the commission (b).

therefore set aside an execution issued against such property, founded on a judgment obtained before his bankruptcy. Davis v. Shapley,[1] 1 B. & Ad. 54.

The provisions of 6 G. 4, c. 16, s. 127, do not prevent the bankruptcy and certificate being a bar to an action against the bankrupt. Eicke v. Nokes,[2] 1 M. & M. 303.

(x) By the stat. 6 G. 4, c. 16, s. 121, a certificate discharges the bankrupt from all claims proveable under the commission, but does not discharge any partner or other person jointly bound. Sec. 125 avoids all securities given for securing the payment of any money due from the bankrupt, as a consideration, or with intent to persuade a creditor to sign the certificate, and the party sued may give the matter in evidence under the general issue. A certificate obtained after the statute on a commission issued before it is proved by the production of the certificate duly allowed. Taylor v. Welsford,[3] M. & M. 503. A certificate of conformity under a fiat, must be proved to have been entered of record in the court of bankruptcy. See the 2 & 3 W. 4, c. 114, s. 8, and supra.

(y) Where the general plea of bankruptcy is pleaded, it concludes to the country, and the plaintiff can reply the similiter only. Wilson v. Kemp, 2 M. & C. 459, 1 B. & A. 22, which admits evidence of all matters which under the st. 6 G. 4, c. 16, s. 130, render the certificate void.

(z) Gowland v. Warren, 1 Camp. 363. Stedman v. Martinnant, 12 East, 664. Joseph v. Orme, 2 N. R. 180. A certificate allowed after plea pleaded should be pleaded puis darrein continuance. Langmead v. Beard, cited 9 East, 85. It seems that the Court will take judicial cognizance of the Chancellor's signature of allowance, Eden, 426. Assumpsit against two defendants for goods sold, plea non-assumpserunt, and on the 15th June one of the defendants pleaded his bankruptcy puis darrein continuance, to which the plaintiff demurred, but the latter proceedings were entered on the nisi prius record. The cause was tried on the 29th of June, and a general verdict found against both the defendants. The Court set aside this verdict for irregularity, on the ground that the plaintiffs were not entitled to have an absolute verdict against both the defendants, but contingent only against the one who pleaded his bankruptcy. Thompson and another v. J. Percival and C. Percival,[4] 2 B. & Ad. 967.

(a) Harris v. James, 9 East, 82.

(b) Bamford v. Burrell, 2 B. & P. 1 P. C. As to what is proveable under the commission, see above, p. 176. The defendant contracted for the purchase of goods to be delivered at stated times, and at prices of the then market day, and became bankrupt and obtained his certificate before the first delivery was to be made; the goods were afterwards tendered and refused; held, that the action was maintainable, notwithstanding the bankruptcy, the contract not being rescinded, as the assignees might have affirmed it if they thought fit, and the amount of damage being incapable of being ascertained until the market price known, was not proveable; held also, that the amount of damage was to be ascertained by the difference between the price contracted to be paid, and that which might have been obtained for the goods on the day when the contract ought to have been completed. Boorman v. Nash,[5] 9 B. & C. 145. Upon agreement for the purchase of premises, the price was to be paid on a given day, or when a good title should be tendered, and if the purchaser should be desirous, it might remain as a charge on the premises, so as that upon completion of the conveyances, the vendor should have a proper security for the price, with interest, and the purchaser covenanted to pay interest so long as the price remained unpaid, with a proviso, that if the interest were in arrear for thirty days, the purchaser should be considered as a tenant to the vendor, at a stated rent, payable half yearly, and the latter should have power to distrain. The purchaser did require the purchase-money, to remain so charged for five years, was let into possession, and subsequently became bankrupt; the vendor distrained for the stipulated rent, and it was paid by the assignees; upon further arrears becoming due after the bankrupt had obtained his certificate, and an action of covenant brought, to which he pleaded his bankruptcy generally, held that the agreement was in substance an agreement of sale, and could not be deemed to be a lease by reason of the default in paying the interest, but that the unpaid vendor being entitled to have the premises resold, and to prove for the residue, the claim for interest was proveable under the commission and the certificate therefore a bar. Hope v. Booth,[1] 1 B. & Ad. 498.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xx. 344. [2]Id. xxii. 314. [3]Id. xxii. 369. [4]Id. xxii. 225. [5]Id. xvii. 344.

*Where a verdict is obtained against the bankrupt in an action for damages before an act of bankruptcy, but judgment is not signed till after, the debt is not barred by the certificate (c). If an action be commenced against a bankrupt after the bankruptcy, for a debt due before, and after a verdict for the plaintiff the bankrupt obtain his certificate, the costs of the action, as well as the debt, are proveable under the commission (d), for the costs bear relation to the original debt.

A defendant compromised an action for libel, by agreeing to apologize and pay the plaintiff's costs. The apology was made, and a rule of court obtained to pay the costs, amounting to 67*l*. On default made an attachment was issued, and the defendant was committed; while in custody he became bankrupt, and obtained his certificate; held, that the sum named in the rule of court was a debt which might have been proved under the commission, and that the defendant was entitled to be discharged out of custody. Riley v. Burne,[2] 2 B. & Ad. 779.

A commission of bankruptcy and certificate does not bar a clerk's claim for wages, where the commission issued in middle of year, and service down to time of commission, when clerk, for want of business, ceased to attend. For the bankruptcy does not dissolve the contract of service. The provision in the 48th section of the Bankrupt Act, in favour of clerks and servants, makes no difference in this respect. Thomas v. Williams,[3] 1 Ad. & Ell. 685.

The plaintiff accepted a bill for a third party, a lessee of the defendant; the latter, on the bankruptcy of his tenant, and with a view of obtaining possession of the premises, undertook to satisfy the balance due on the bill, and deliver it up to the plaintiff, or indemnify him against it; the defendant failed to do either, and became bankrupt; the breach of promise is not proveable either as a debt due at the time of the bankruptcy, or as a contingent debt, or by the plaintiff in the character of a surety, within 6 G. 4, c. 16, s. 56, and the certificate therefore is no discharge. The relation of a party to a bill as principal cannot be converted into that of a surety, by any subsequent agreement to which the payee is no party. Yallop v. Ebers,[4] 1 B. & Ad. 698; Laxton v. Peat, 2 Camp. 185, overruled. In an action in tort against a broker for a fraudulent sale of stock, it was held that the bankrupt's certificate of the defendant was no bar to the action. Parker v. Crole,[5] 5 Bing. 63; and 2 M. & P. 150. And see Parker v. Norton, 6 T. R. 695. A bankrupt may plead a certificate under a second commission, to an action for a debt proveable under that commission, although he has not paid 15*s.* in the pound under that commission. Robertson v. Score,[6] 3 B. & Ad. 338. Upon the question whether a debt is barred by the certificate, see further p. 176. Debts proveable under the commission, and debts discharged by the certificate, are convertible terms; and see Goddard v. Vanderheyden, 2 B. & P. 8, n. A debt is not discharged which accrued after the bankruptcy, but before the commission. Ibid.

(c) As in trespass on the case for seduction, judgment not being signed until after the bankruptcy, although the verdict was before it. Buss v. Gilbert, 2 M. & S. 70. Ex parte Charles, 14 East, 197; and see Parker v. Crole,[5] 5 Bing. 63; Atwood v. Partridge,[7] 4 Bing. 209.

(d) Willet v. Pringle, 2 N. R. 190. See also Scott v. Ambrose,[8] 3 M. & S. 326; 5 B. & A. 453. In Jameson v. Campbell,[9] 5 B. & A. 250, it was held, that although a right of action on a bill, and the costs of the action, were discharged by a commission and certificate, yet that the bond of the defendant to secure the payment of the damages and costs under the stat. 4 G. 3, c. 33, s. 1, given after the bankruptcy, but before the certificate, was not discharged.

Some demands, not proveable under the commission, are barred by the certificate, e. g. the costs of an action of contract, where there is no verdict before the bankruptcy, are not proveable under the commission, but are barred by the certificate. Ex parte Poucher, 1 G. & J. 386. Ex parte Hill, 11 Ves. 646. So where the party becomes bankrupt before costs taxed, on an award against him. Haswell v. Thorogood,[10] 7 B. & C. 705. Where interlocutory costs ordered to be paid by a bankrupt are taxed before the bankruptcy, the certificate is a discharge. Jacobs v. Phillips, 1 C. M. & R. 195; 4 Tyr. 652. See further Parslow v. Dearlove, 5 Esp. 78; 4 East, 438; 1 Camp. 428; 6 Esp. 98; 4 Taunt. 90; 2 M. & S. 551. For cases of mutual acceptances and exchanges of securities. Rolfe v. Caslon, 2 H. B. 570. Sarratt v. Austin, 4 Taunt. 200. Buckler v. Buttivant, 3 East, 172. Houle v. Baxter, 3 East, 177. Forster v. Surtees, 12 East, 605. Cowley v. Dunlop, 7 T. R. 565. Of sureties. Martin v. Court, 2 T. R. 640. Brookes v. Lloyd, 1 T. R. 17. Toussaint v. Martinnant, 2 T. R. 100. Paul v. Jones, 1 T. R. 599. Hodgson v. Bell, 7 T. R. 97. Stedman v. Martinnant, 13 East, 427. Unliquidated damages. Hammond v. Toulmin, 7 T. R. 612. Overseers of St. Martin v. Warren, 1 B. & A. 491; 3 Wils. 270; 6 East, 110. Covenant for rent. Auriol v. Mills, 1 H. B. 433; 4 T. R. 94. And see Hornby v. Houlditch, 1 T. R. 92, 93. Debt for rent. Wadham v. Marlowe, 1 H. B. 437; 1 T. R. 91. Gill v. Scrivens, 7 T. R. 27. In case of a cognovit given. Wyborne v. Ross, 2 Taunt. 68. In cases of tort. Parker v. Norton, 6 T. R. 695. Of verdicts obtained before the bankruptcy. Buss v. Gilbert, 2 M. & S. 70. Bills of exchange. Howis v. Wiggins, 4 T. R. 114. Brooks v. Rogers, 1 H. B. 640. Joseph v. Orme, 2 N. R. 180. Starey v. Barnes, 7 East, 435. Pottek v. Brown, 5 East, 124; stat. 7 G. 1, c. 31. Of a bond given after bankruptcy to secure a previous debt. Birch v. Sharland, 1 T. R. 715. See also Ex parte Douthat,[11] 4 B. & A. 671. Macarty v. Barlow, Str. 949. As to bonds, stat. 7 G. 1, c. 31. Callowell v. Clutterbuck, cited 2 Str. 867. Ex parte Barber, 9 Ves. jun. 110. Cotterell v. Hooke, Doug. 97. Ex parte Granger, 10 Ves. jun. 351. Cockerill v. Owston, 1 Burr. 436. Boutflower v. Coats, Cowp. 95. Dimsdale v. Eames,[12] 2 B. & B. 8.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xx. 433. [2]Id. xxii. 183. [3]Id. xxviii. 180. [4]Id. xx. 475. [5]Id. xv. 371. [6]Id. xxiii. 89. [7]Id. xiii. 403. [8]Id. vii. 157. [9]Id. vii. 87. [10]Id. xiv. 111. [11]Id. vi. 354. [12]Id. vi. 3.

Where a bankrupt acceptor pleaded his certificate, and it appeared that the commission was sued out after the day of the date of the bill, but before it became due, it was held to be incumbent on the plaintiff, an indorsee, to *show that an act of bankruptcy was committed before the *185 date of the bill (e). But that an antecedent act of bankruptcy might be proved by the proceedings under the commission, stating a previous act of bankruptcy (f).

If B. plead his bankruptcy and certificate, and prove a commission against A., and a certificate under it, he may prove that he was formerly known by the name of A., and that the commission was issued against him, although at the time of the trial he was known by the name of B. only (g).

If upon the trial it appear that the bankruptcy was subsequent to the commencement of the action, the plea will not be available (h).

If a surety for the bankrupt, at the time of the act of bankruptcy, was compelled to pay money as such surety, after the act of bankruptcy, by the stat. 49 G. 3, c. 121, "he was entitled to a dividend under the commission, unless he had notice, when he became surety, of the bankruptcy or insolvency of the trader, of which the issuing a commission, although afterwards superseded, was to be deemed notice."

The plaintiff accepted a bill for the accommodation of the defendant, who became bankrupt before the bill was due, and a commission of bankrupt was *issued, and afterwards superseded; the plaintiff afterwards *186 accepted another bill to take up the former dishonoured bill, and afterwards an effectual commission was sued out on the former act of bankruptcy, under which the bankrupt obtained his certificate, and the plaintiff afterwards paid the second bill; it was held, that the payment by the plaintiff was, in effect, a surety for the defendant upon the first bill, and therefore within the above statute; and that the case was not within the proviso as to notice, since the suretyship commenced before the issuing of the commission, which was afterwards superseded.(i).

By the late stat. s. 51, any person who shall have given credit to the bankrupt upon valuable consideration, for any money or thing whatsoever, which shall not have become payable when such bankrupt committed an act of bankruptcy, whether such credit shall have been given upon any bill, bond, note, or other negotiable security or not, shall be entitled to prove, as if the same was payable presently, &c. deducting only thereout a rebate of interest.

By s. 52, sureties, and others, however liable for any debt of the bankrupt, at the issuing of the commission, having paid the whole or part in discharge of the whole debt, though after the commission issued, shall be entitled to stand in the place of the creditor, if he has proved or may prove the debt under the commission, provided he had no notice of any act of bankruptcy when he became liable. See tit. SURETY. One of three co-sureties for the payment of an annuity, who has paid money on account of the annuity, after the bankruptcy of another, may sue the latter for contribution, notwithstanding the certificate, for he could not prove the debt under the commission; but he cannot recover more than one-third. Brown v. Lee,[1] 6 B. & C. 689.

The 56th section enacts, that if a bankrupt shall, before the issuing the commission, have contracted any debt, payable on a contingency, &c., the person with whom the debt is contracted may apply to the commissioners to value the debt, and he may prove for the amount.

The 58th section enacts, that any person who shall have obtained a judgment, &c. for a debt, or demand, in respect of which he shall prove, may also prove for the costs, though they shall not have been taxed at the time of the bankruptcy. The costs of an action brought by the bankrupt are not a debt contracted within the former clause. Birè v. Moreau,[2] 4 Bing. 57; and see Walker v. Barnes, 2 Taunt. 778; Scott v. Ambrose, 3 M. & S. 326. So a covenant by the defendant for the due payment of a premium of insurance by another is not within that clause; the breach necessarily gives a claim for unliquidated damages. Atwood v. Partridge,[3] 4 Bing. 209. See Ex parte Adney, Cowp. 463.

(e) Pearson v. Fletcher, 5 Esp. C. 90. And see Macartney v. Barrow, where the court said they would not intend that the defendant was a bankrupt before the suing out of the commission, 7 East, 437, n.

(f) Ibid. (g) Stevens v. Elisee, 3 Camp. 256.

(h) Tower v. Cameron, 6 East, 413. For by the stat. 5 G. 2, c. 30, s. 7, the plea is given in case any bankrupt who has conformed to the law shall afterwards be arrested or impleaded for any debt due before such time as he became a bankrupt, and now see the stat. 6 G. 4, c. 16, s. 126, supra, 182.

(i) Stedman v. Martinant, 13 East, 427.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xiii. 294. [2]Id. xiii. 340. [3]Id. xiii. 403.

Under a joint commission.

A certificate under a joint commission will be evidence in bar of a separate debt (k), and vice versâ, a certificate under a separate commission in bar of a joint debt (l).

Unliquidated damages.

The certificate is no bar where the plaintiff's claim rests in unliquidated damages; as in an action of trespass or trover, although the conversion was before the bankruptcy (m).

In assumpsit, on a promise to pay a certain sum weekly for the support of an illegitimate child, which the plaintiff had by the defendant, upon plea of a certificate, it was held that the defendant was liable for the arrears which has accrued since the bankruptcy (n).

Foreign certificate.

The defendant in an action of assumpsit may prove that he obtained his certificate in the country where the debt was contracted, and that by the law of that country the debt was discharged (o). Where the defendant in America, gave to the plaintiff also residing there, a bill of exchange on England, which was dishonoured for non-acceptance, and the defendant afterwards, and whilst he resided abroad, became a bankrupt, and obtained his certificate, such certificate was held to be a bar to an action here on the bill; for the bill having been dishonoured here, the implied promise to pay it arose in America, by the law of which country the defendant had been discharged (p), such a certificate is no bar where the debt is contracted in this country (q).

Proof in answer.

In answer to evidence of a certificate, the plaintiff may show that it was obtained unfairly, and by fraud, and that it is void under the stat. 6 G. 4, c. 16, s. 130, which enacts, that no bankrupt shall be entitled to his certificate, and that any certificate, if obtained, shall be void, if such bankrupt shall have lost, by any sort of gaming or wagering (r) in one day twenty *187 *pounds, or within one year next preceding his bankruptcy two hundred pounds; or if he shall, within one year next preceding his bankruptcy have lost two hundred pounds by any contract for the purchase or sale of any government or other stock, where such contract was not to be performed within one week after the contract, or where the stock bought or sold was not actually transferred or delivered in pursuance of such contract, or shall after an act of bankruptcy committed, or in contemplation of bankruptcy, have destroyed, altered, mutilated or falsified, or caused to be destroyed, altered, mutilated, or falsified, any of his books, papers, writings or securities, or made, or been privy to the making of any false or fraudulent entries in any book of account or other document, with intent to defraud his creditors, or shall have concealed property to the value of ten pounds or upwards; or if any person having proved a false debt under the (k) Horsey's Case, 3 P. Wms. 23; Howard v. Poole, Str. 995, 1157.

(l) Ex parte Yale, 3 P. Wms. 24, n. But such discharge is personal, and will not relieve the joint-debtor from his liability. See 10 Anne, c. 15, s. 3.

(m) Parker v. Norton, 6 T. R. 695.

(n) Per Lord Ellenborough, Millen v. Whettenbury, 1 Camp. C. 428.

(o) Hunter v. Potts, 4 T. R. 182. Ballantine v. Golding. Co. B. L. 499, 5th edit. A certificate in England bars creditor in Calcutta, although creditor had no notice. Edwards v. Ronald, Knapp's C. 259. Secus, where the remedy only is barred. Williams v. Jones, 11 East, 439.

(p) Potter v. Brown, 5 East, 124. It seems that a certificate under a bankruptcy in England is so far a judgment in respect of foreign states, that it may be pleaded in bar to the action of foreign creditors. In re Odwin v. Forbes, 1 Buck's B. C. 57; in the Cock-pit. And see in re Stein & Co. 1 Rose's B. C. 402.

(q) Smith v. Buchanan, 1 East, 6. Shallcross v. Dysart, 2 Gl. & J. 87. Lewis v. Owen,[1] 4 B. & A. 654.

(r) See the repealed provision, 5 G. 2, c. 30, s. 12, under which it was held that insuring in the lottery is not within that act (Lewis v. Piercy, 1 H. B. 29); nor the keeping a lottery-office. Ex parte Richardson, Co. B. L. 463, 5th edit. Sel. N. P. 238. It was also held that the plaintiff must elect whether he would give evidence of one loss to the amount of 5*l.*, or of several, to the amount of 100*l.* Hughes v. Morley,[2] Holt's C. 520. A loss by gaming defeats a certificate although the bankrupt on the same day wins more than he loses. Ex parte Newman, 3 Glynn. & J. 329.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. vi. 555. [2]Id. iii. 173.

commission, such bankrupt being privy thereto (s), or afterwards knowing the same, shall not have disclosed the same to his assignees within one month after such knowledge.

So the plaintiff may show that it was obtained from one of the creditors under a promise from the bankrupt to pay him his whole debt (t). If the plaintiff adduce evidence to prove concealment to the value of 10*l*., the defendant may show that the concealment was not wilful (u). By the stat. 6 G. 4, c. 16, s. 127, by a certificate under a second commission the person only of the bankrupt is protected if his effects are not sufficient to make a dividend of 15*s*. in the pound. But this clause, when applicable, does not entitle a creditor to proceed against the bankrupt after a second certificate for a debt which he might have proved under the commission (x).

Proof to defeat the certificate.

Previous to that statute it was sufficient in order to defeat a defence by a certificate under a second commission, to produce the former commission, certified as of record, and the proceedings under it, to show that the bankrupt submitted to it without proving the steps of the former bankruptcy in detail (y): where there had been no notice to produce the certificate, proof of the affidavit of conformity was held to be insufficient (a); but after proof of such notice, it was held (before the late statute) to be sufficient to prove, by the solicitor under the commission, that he was employed by the defendant to obtain his certificate, and had no doubt, from the entries in his books, that it had been obtained (b).

The person who had the possession of the former commission and proceedings was served with a subpœnâ duces tecum to produce them (c). After such proof by the plaintiff, it lay on the defendant affirmatively to prove *that he has paid 15*s*. in the pound under the second commission (d); *188 proof that it would probably produce so much was insufficient (e).

Where the action was brought before a dividend had been made under the second commission, or the period had elapsed under the stat. 5 Geo. 2, c. 30, s. 37, it was held that the certificate would be no bar, if it were shown that it was not probable that the bankrupt would be able to pay 15*s*. in the pound.

Compounding with creditors, &c.

So the plaintiff, under the stat. 6 G. 4, c. 16, s. 127, may show that the defendant has compounded with his creditors (f), or delivered to them his estate and effects, and been released by them (g). Where the defendant had compounded with his creditors, but afterwards, and before he became bankrupt, paid them the whole of their debt, and did not pay 15*s*. in the (s) In order to prove this, the person who proved the false debt may be called as a witness, or the fact may be proved by presumptive or collateral evidence. Edmonstone v. Webb, 3 Esp. C. 264.

(t) Phillips v. Dicas, 15 East, 248, under the stat. 5 G. 2, c. 30, s. 11, and now under the stat. 6 G. 4, c. 16, s. 132.

(u) Cathcart v. Blackwood, in Dom. Pro. 1765.

(x) Robertson v. Score,[1] 3 B. & Ad. 338. The stat. does not apply to a bankrupt who has obtained his certificate under a subsequent commission after the statute had passed. Carew v. Edwards,[2] 4 B. & Ad. 351.

(y) Haviland v. Cooke, 5 T. R. 665. 3 Esp. C. 195.

(a) Graham v. Grill, 4 Camp. 282. (b) Henry v. Leigh, 3 Camp. 499.

(c) It seems that the book at the Bankrupt office, in which entries are made of the allowance of certificates by the Chancellor, is not secondary evidence of the allowance of the certificate; for it is not seen or referred to by the Chancellor, and the entries are not made by any officer of the court appointed for that purpose. Henry v. Leigh, 3 Camp. 499. See the late statute.

(d) Gregory v. Merton, 3 Esp. C. 195.

(e) Coverley v. Morley, 16 East, 225; and qu. whether the actual payment of 15*s*. in the pound be not a condition precedent. See the judgment of Bayley, J.; and see Jelfs v. Ballard, 1 B. & P. 467.

(f) Such a clause, it has been held, under the stat. 5 G. 2, c. 30, s. 37, does not contemplate limited compositions with part of a trader's creditors, but general ones only, such as would admit all creditors, of whatsoever description. Norton v. Shakespeare, 15 East, 619. See Slaughter v. Cheyne, 1 M. & S. 182.

(g) Jelfs v. Ballard, 1 B. & P. 467.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxiii. 89. [2]Id. xxiv. 71.

pound under a subsequent commission, his certificate under it was held to be a bar (h) to a subsequent action. Under the same section the plaintiff may also show that the bankrupt has been discharged under an act for the relief of insolvent debtors.

The certificate is void if any one of the creditors, although without the privity of the bankrupt, was induced by money to sign the certificate (i).

Subsequent promise.

The plaintiff may also reply to the certificate by evidence of an express promise by the bankrupt to pay the debt, and is not bound to declare especially on such subsequent promise (k). But it seems that if the promise be special to pay when he is able, the plaintiff should prove his ability at the time of the action brought (l); and the promise is not binding unless it be precise and positive (m), and in writing (n).

A promise made by a bankrupt before he has obtained his certificate will revive the debt, although the certificate be obtained afterwards (o). A mere admission of the debt is insufficient (p), though accompanied by an unaccepted offer to pay the debt by instalments (q).

*189 *A bankrupt sued by his surety, who paid the debt subsequently to the bankruptcy, cannot avail himself of his certificate without having specially pleaded it (r).

By the stat. 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 59, the proving by a creditor under the commission is an election by him not to sue at law; but it seems that such an election cannot either be pleaded or given in evidence in bar of the action (s).

(h) Read v. Sowerby, 3 M. & S. 78.

(i) Holland v. Palmer, 1 B. & P. 95.

(k) Williams v. Dyde, Peake's C. 68. Trueman v. Fenton, Cowp. 548; but see Penn v. Bennett, 4 Camp. 206. Leaper v. Tatton, 16 East, 420.

(l) Besford v. Saunders, 2 H. B. 116. [2 Serg. & R. 208, Kingston v. Wharton.] Qu. whether payment of interest after bankruptcy, on a bond for the payment of money forfeited before bankruptcy, will render the bankrupt liable on the bond. Alsop v. Brown, Doug. 191. Semble, not.

(m) Lynbury v. Weightman, 5 Esp. C. 198, where the bankrupt said that his effects would pay 20*s.* in the pound, and that he would pay every body, it was held that he was not bound.

(n) By the stat. 6 G. 4, c. 16, s. 131, no bankrupt after being discharged by a certificate shall be liable to pay any debt, &c., discharged by such certificate upon any promise made after the suing out of the commission, unless it be in writing, signed by the bankrupt, or by some person authorized by him.—But the plaintiff in such case need not declare specially. Williams v. Dyde, Peake's C. 68. Russell v. Hardman, Ibid. The initial of the defendant's surname is not a signature within the statute. Hubert v. Moreau,[1] 2 C. & P. 528.

(o) Roberts v. Morgan, 2 Esp. C. 736. And see Ernst v. Sciaccaluga, Cowp. 527.

(p) Fleming v. Hayne,[2] 1 Starkie's C. 370. Bailey v. Dillon, 2 Burr. 736. Besford v. Saunders, 2 H. B. 116. Alsop v. Brown, Doug. 182.

(q) Ibid.

(r) Under the stat. 49 Geo. 3, c. 121, s. 8; for that statute discharged the bankrupt, having his certificate, of all such demands, at the suit of every such person, in like manner to all intents and purposes as if such person had been a creditor before the bankruptcy. Stedman v. Martinnant, 12 East, 664. The stat. 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 121, discharges a certificated bankrupt from all claims proveable under the commission.

(s) The proving a debt under the commission is no defence to an action at law for the same debt; and the election of the creditor under the stat. 49 Geo. 3, c. 121, s. 14, is confined to the debt actually proved, and does not extend to distinct debts, though ejusdem generis, and due at the same time. Harley v. Greenwood,[3] 5 B. & A. 95. Watson v. Medex, 1 B. & A. 121; and see Bridget v. Mills,[4] 4 Bing. 19. But see Reed v. Sowerby, 3 M. & S. 78. So it was held that the statute did not exclude a creditor who had proved a joint debt under a commission against one from suing the rest. Heath v. Hall, 4 Taunt. 326. See also Young v. Glass, 16 East, 252. So it was held that the drawer of a bill of exchange, who had paid the amount to the holder, after a commission of bankruptcy against the acceptor, might sue the acceptor before he had obtained his certificate, and arrest him on the bill, although the holder had proved the bill under the commission. Mead v. Braham, 3 M. & S. 91. A bankrupt lessee is discharged by the statute, not only from the lease, but from all covenants to be performed as lessee. Kearsey v. Carstairs,[5] 2 B. & Ad. 716. But the statute does not put an end to the lease, but merely discharges the bankrupt from payment of rent or observance of the covenants. Manning v. Flight,[6] 3 B. & Ad. 211. The bankruptcy of the lessee does not discharge a surety on a bond for the performance of covenants in a lease. Inglis v. M'Dougall,[7] 1 Moore, 196. Lease of a mill, with covenants that on the determination of the lease, the machinery should be again

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. xii. 248. [2] Id. ii. 430. [3] Id. xii. 38. [4] Id. xiii. 327. [5] Id. xxii. 175. [6] Id. xxiii. 58. [7] Id. iv. 396.

The stat. 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 75, enacts, that where any bankrupt is entitled to any lease or agreement for a lease, if the assignees accept the same, he shall not be liable to pay any rent accruing after the date of the commission, or to be sued in respect of any subsequent non-observance of the conditions, covenants, and agreements therein contained; and if the assignees decline the same, shall not be liable in case he deliver up such lease or agreement to the lessor or person agreeing to grant such lease, within fourteen days after notice that the assignees have declined (t). Discharge from lease accepted by assignees.

*IV. Upon an indictment against a bankrupt for a felonious embezzlement of his effects, &c., the steps of his bankruptcy must be strictly proved (u). *190 Indictment against a bankrupt.

Where the petitioning creditor's debt was alleged to be due to A. B. and C., surviving executors of the last will and testament of D., after proof that A. B. and C. were the executors, and were directed by the will to carry on the business, it was held to be necessary to prove that they all acted in discharge of the trust (x).

An allegation, that the commission issued under the great seal of Great Britain, is proved by evidence of an instrument issued under the great seal of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland (y).

Upon an indictment against a bankrupt for perjury, alleged to have been committed in his examination before the commissioners, it was held to be necessary to prove the bankruptcy in strict detail, and that the declaration of his bankruptcy by the commissioners was not sufficient (z); for if he was not a bankrupt at the time, the commissioners had no jurisdiction to administer an oath and examine him. The case of a person who makes a deposition, on which the judgment of the commissioners is to be founded, as to the bankruptcy itself, falls under a different consideration; the perjury may consist in the falsely swearing that the party was a bankrupt, so that if it were necessary to prove the bankruptcy, the perjured party could not be punished at all. In such a case the offence of perjury seems to be complete, independently of the question of bankruptcy, for a false oath is taken before commissioners duly authorized to administer the oath (a).

valued, and the difference between that and the former valuation paid by the lessor or lessee, as it was greater or less than the former, the lessee becoming bankrupt, his assignees repudiate the lease, and the lessor declines to pay the difference, the assignees may (after demand and refusal), recover the value in trover. Fairburn v. Eastwood, 6 M. & W. 679; and see Kearsey v. Carstairs,[1] 2 B. & Ad. 716.

(t) The statute does not apply to a lessee and his assignees of a lease. Taylor v. Young,[2] 3 B. & A. 521, under the statute 49 G. 3, c. 121. By the clause 6 G. 4, c. 16, s. 75, assignees may be compelled to elect and deliver up the lease if they decline to accept it. Where the lessee covenanted not to assign, became bankrupt, and after acceptance of the lease he came in again as assignee, it was held that he was discharged. See Doe v. Smith,[3] 5 Taunt, 795, as to proof of acceptance, vide supra, 131. The chancellor has no authority to decide whether the assignees have elected or not; it is a question of fact for a jury. Ex parte Quantock, Buck. 189. It has been held, that the mere advertising a lease for sale, without taking possession, and without stating themselves to be the owners or possessors, did not amount to an assent. Turner v. Richardson, 7 East, 335. But if a bidder had been accepted, and a deposit received, it would have been evidence of an acceptance. Hastings v. Wilson,[4] 1 Holt's C. 290. Where they allowed the bankrupt's goods to remain on the premises nearly a twelvemonth, and then to avoid a distress paid the rent, but informed the landlord that they did not mean to take the lease unless it could be advantageously disposed of, and afterwards put it up to sale, when there was no bidder, and omitted to return the key for near four months afterwards, but never took possession, Lord Ellenborough held that they were not liable. Wheeler v. Bramah, 3 Camp. 340. So though they have released an under-tenant of the lessees. Hill v. Dobie,[5] 8 Taunt. 325.

(u) See the form of the indictment, and the necessary allegations, Criminal Pleadings; and see the stat. 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 112.

(x) R. v. Barnes,[6] 1 Starkie's C. 243. (y) R. v. Bullock, 1 Taunt. 71.

(z) R. v. Punshon, 3 Camp. 96, cor. Ellenborough, C. J.

(a) See R. v Raphael, cor. Abbott, J. Devon Spring Assize. 1818, Manning's Index, 2d edit. 232; where it is stated to have been ruled, that on an indictment against a third person examined before the commissioners, their declaration that the party is a bankrupt is sufficient. It is not stated whether the examination in this case was preparatory or subsequent to the adjudication.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxii. 175. [2]Id. v. 364. [3]Id. i. 270. [4]Id. iii. 107. [5]Id. iv. 116. [6]Id. ii. 374.

The indictment against a bankrupt, on 5 Geo. 2, c. 30, for not making a full and true disclosure, &c., stated a notice requiring him personally to appear, &c., according to the several statutes then in force concerning bankrupts, and particularly the statute passed in the 5th Geo. 2, stating its title, but upon the notice being produced it set forth the title of the 49th Geo. 3; held that the variance was fatal. It seems also, that the averment of personal service of the notice should state whether the party was at large or in prison, the statute pointing out modes of service in each case (b).

Competency of witnesses.

V. It is an inveterate and universal rule, that the bankrupt himself (c) is not a competent witness to prove any fact to support or impeach the commission, either on an issue to try the bankruptcy, or in an action by the assignees to recover a debt due to the estate, even though he shall have obtained his certificate, and have released the assignees, for he is interested *in the certificate which is founded upon the bankruptcy (d). And it makes no difference whether the question be asked upon an examination in chief, or upon his cross examination (e); neither can he be asked questions with a view to establish an antecedent act of bankruptcy (f), or to explain an act relied on by the adversary as an act of bankruptcy (g). Accordingly, upon the trial of issues out of Chancery, to try whether Herbert and Ryton were bankrupts, and whether they owed the petitioning creditor 100*l.*, Ryton, who had obtained his certificate, was produced to prove the debt; but Ryder, C. J. was of opinion that he was not competent to prove that he and Herbert were jointly indebted to the petitioning creditor, or that they were partners, or that Herbert was a bankrupt, since each of those facts tended to support the commission; and if that were not good the certificate would become bad (h). Neither can he be examined to explain an equivocal act of bankruptcy (i). But the rule is restricted to evidence affirming or disaffirming the bankruptcy. He is competent, in an action by the assignees against a creditor who has levied under an execution, to prove the defendant's knowledge of his insolvency (j).

*191

Competency of bankrupt.

An uncertificated bankrupt is not a competent witness in actions by the assignees, for he is interested in procuring funds (k) for the discharge of his (b) R. v. Barraston, 1 Gow. C. 210. Where the bankrupt did not surrender, being detained in prison, it was held, that he was not bound to apply to the commissioners to be brought up to surrender, nor to the chancellor to enlarge the time, although he was privileged so to do, and the omitting to take those steps could not make him guilty of felony, under the 6 G. 4, c. 16, ss. 113, 119. R. v. Mitchell,[1] 4 C. & P. 251.

(c) Neither can his wife be examined for that purpose. Ex parte James, 1 P. Wms. 611; 12 Vin. Ab. 11, pl. 28.

(d) Field v. Curtis, 2 Str. 829. Flower v. Herbert, 2 H. & B. 279. Chapman v. Gardiner, 2 H. B. 279, n. Ewens v. Gold, B. N. P. 41. In Oxlade v. Perchard, 1 Esp. C. 287, it was held that the bankrupt was competent to explain a doubtful act of bankruptcy. But this was overruled in Rabbett v. Gurney, 1 Montague, 489, and is contrary to Chapman v. Gardiner, 2 H. B. 279. Qu. whether this rule is not to be regarded, in some, instances at least, as a rule of policy rather than as a rule founded on the ordinary principle of exclusion on the score of interest; where, for instance, the bankrupt has obtained his certificate, and released his assignees, he has no immediate interest in the event of an action brought by the assignees, for the result would not affect his certificate. See Christian's B. L. 444, 2 edit. Binns v. Tetley, 1 M'Clell. & Y. 397. Raymond, C. J. admitted a bankrupt to give evidence as to the time of an act of bankruptcy, although he refused him as a witness to prove the act, 12 Vin. Ab. 11, pl. 28.

(e) Elsom v. Bailey, Sitt. after Mich. T. 50 Geo. 3, cor. Lawrence, J. 1 Sel. N. P. 271. Binns v. Tetley, 1 M'Clell. & Y. 397.

(f) Wyatt v. Wilkinson, 5 Esp. C. 187.

(g) Sayer v. Garnett,[2] 7 Bing. 103.

(h) Flower v. Herbert, cited 2 H. B. 276; and see Cross v. Fox, Ibid.

(i) Hoffman v. Pitt, 5 Esp. C. 22. Sayer v. Garnett, 7 Bing. 103.

(j) Reed v. James,[3] 1 Starkie's C. 134. It is necessary, however, that he should have obtained his certificate, and released his assignees.

(k) Kennet v. Greenwollers, Peake's C. 3. Evans v. Gold, B. N. P. 41. Langden v. Walker, Cowp. 70. Butler v. Cooke, Ibid. In an action to recover money paid to a creditor out of voluntary preference, it was held that the wife of the bankrupt was a competent witness for the assignees, on the ground of indifference, since, if the assignees recovered, the defendants would recover to the same amount under the commission.

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. xix. 370. [2] Id. xx. 63. [3] Id. ii. 327.

debts; but he is a competent witness against the assignees to diminish the *fund (l). Neither would he be a competent witness for his surety in a joint bond to prove payment, whether the obligees had made their election to prove under the commission (m), for the plaintiffs, if defeated, could no longer sue him; but if they succeeded, he would be liable to his surety. *192

But he is a competent witness for a defendant, his surety (the acceptor of an accommodation bill), who has released him in the usual form, for the defendant cannot prove against his estate (n).

Upon an action against the assignee of a bankrupt to recover the penalty upon an usurious loan of money to the bankrupt, it was held that the latter, who had not obtained his certificate, or repaid the money, was not a competent witness to prove the offence, although he was ready to release to the assignee all benefit which might arise from the discharge of that debt in particular, and also all claim to surplus and allowance (o) (1), and although the defendant had proved under the commission; because (as it was said) the creditor might still bring an action at law, and arrest the bankrupt for the whole of the debt. But now, by the stat. 6 G. 4, c. 16, s. 59, the creditor after proving the debt could not afterwards in such a case sue the bankrupt; and even if he could, yet, as the verdict would not be evidence for the bankrupt in an action afterwards brought by the assignee, it seems that he would not be an incompetent witness on that ground (p).

A certificated bankrupt having released his surplus and allowance to the assignees, or executed a general release to them, is a competent witness in actions by the assignees to increase the divisible fund, for he is no longer interested in the amount (q). In such case he is competent to identify the proceedings under the commission, to establish them in evidence for the Certificated bankrupt.

Jourdaine v. Lefevre, 1 Esp. C. 66, cor. Ld. Kenyon. But see infra, 134 (p). In an action by the assignees of a bankrupt for money had and received to their use, the wife of the bankrupt is not competent to prove the payment of a sum of money to the defendant by the bankrupt, after the bankruptcy, for malt supplied before the bankruptcy, although the bankrupt has released his assignees, he not having obtained his certificate. The objection, however, is not that if the plaintiff failed the costs of the suit would be paid out of the estate, and so diminish the general fund; because that is not a certain necessary legal consequence, but is to depend on the judgment of the commissioners; the main ground of objection is, that the bankrupt has an interest in the assignees recovering the amount claimed, and that there not being yet a definite surplus, it is not a releasable interest. And although it was suggested, that if the assignees recovered the amount claimed, the creditor would recover for his demand against the uncertificated bankrupt, yet this is not a countervailing interest; for the liability of the bankrupt is not the result of the present action; a verdict for the plaintiff would not create or forward his liability to the creditor, nor would the verdict be evidence of it. Neither, as it seems, would a verdict against the assignees relieve him from liability to the creditor; it would be no answer to say, that he had been already paid; the answer would be, that it was the money of the assignees. Williams v. Williams, 6 M. & W. 170.

(l) Langden v. Walker, cited Cowp. 70. Butler v. Cooke, Ibid.

(m) Townsend v. Downing, 14 East, 565.

(n) Cartwright v. Williams,[1] 2 Starkie's C. 340. See Vol. I. tit. Interest, and below, tit. Bill of Exchange. The drawer and acceptor of a bill having had mutual dealings, were in ignorance of the state of the account, which was in fact in favour of the acceptor (the defendant); and before the bill became due, the drawer had become insolvent, and whilst avoiding other creditors, upon being pressed by the plaintiff, a creditor, indorsed the bill to him after an act of bankruptcy, upon which a commission was afterwards sued out; the bankrupt having been called, and the judge having directed the jury to say whether, under the circumstance, the transfer was a bona fide transfer, they found for the defendant; it was held, that such a bill could not be considered an accommodation bill, and therefore there was no implied undertaking to indemnify the acceptor, and the bankrupt, therefore, was a competent witness for him. Bagnall v. Andrews,[2] 7 Bing. 217.

(o) Masters v. Drayton, 2 T. R. 497.

(p) See tit. Interest.

(q) Nares v. Saxby, cited 2 T. R. 497. See Carlisle v. Eady,[3] 1 C. & P. 234. He may, it seems, show his certificate, and release by oral evidence on the voir dire. Carlisle v. Eady, 1 C. & P. 284. Wandless v. Cawthorne,[4] M. & M. 321. But see Goodhay v. Henry,[5] M. & M. 319; ib. 121.

(1) [Sed vide Smith v. Prager, 7 T. R. 60.]

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. iii. 374. [2] Id. xx. 107. [3] Id. xi. 378. [4] Id. xxii. 322. [5] Id. xxii. 321.

assignees (r); yet it has been held that he is not in such case a competent witness for his assignees against the Crown (s). But a certificated bankrupt under a second commission is not competent for the assignees, unless he has paid 15*s.* in the pound under that commission (t).

A certificated bankrupt who has released his assignees is still incompetent to be a witness for the assignees, if it appear that he has done any *193 *act which avoids the certificate, for then his future effects remain liable. And therefore, in an action by an assignee to recover money lost by the Competency. bankrupt at play, he is not a competent witness for the plaintiff (u). But even in such a case he may be rendered competent by releases from all his creditors and his assignees (x). And where such a release was executed a year after the issuing the commission, by all the creditors who had proved under the commission, it was held that the release was sufficient.

Though he has pleaded his certificate he is not, it is said, a competent witness for a co-defendant (y). Otherwise if as to him a nolle prosequi has been entered (z).

It has been said, that if in an action by assignees the defendant calls the bankrupt as a witness, he waives all objections to his competency, and he may then be cross-examined as to the requisites of bankruptcy (a).

Where the assignees sought to recover money paid to a creditor by way of voluntary preference, it was held that the wife of the bankrupt was a competent witness for the plaintiffs, on the ground that she stood indifferent in point of interest (b); since, if the assignees recovered the amount, it would be proved under the commission by the creditor. This decision, however, seems to be questionable, since it is obvious that unless the estate be sufficient to pay 20*s.* in the pound, the dividend to the rest would be diminished by allowing any one creditor his whole debt; and so would the allowance to the bankrupt.

Creditors. A petitioning creditor is in general incompetent to support the commission (c), since he enters into a bond to the Chancellor, conditioned to establish the facts on which the commission depends, and to cause it to be effectually executed; but he is competent to cut it down (d).

A creditor is in general an incompetent witness to increase the estate (e). It has been doubted whether he is not competent where he has not proved his debt under the commission (f). But it seems to be now held that he (r) Morgan v. Pryor,[1] 2 B. & C. 14. (s) Craufurd v. The Attorney-General, Price, 5.

(t) Kennet v. Greenwollers, Peake's C. 3. A bankrupt who, having obtained his certificate, takes the benefit of an Insolvent Act, and then releases his assignees under the commission, is not a competent witness for those assignees, for he could not bind the assignees of his estate under the Insolvent Act. Per Bayley, J., York Lent Ass. 1826.

(u) Carter v. Abbott,[2] 1 B. & C. 444. (x) Ibid.

(y) Raven v. Dunning, 3 Esp. C. 25. Emmett v. Bradley,[3] 1 Moore, 332; Peake's L. E. Append. 87. Currie v. Child, 3 Camp. 283.

(z) M'Iver v. Humble, 16 East, 171. (a) Fletcher and another v. Woodmass, Sel. N. P. 253.

(b) Jourdaine v. Lefevre, 1 Esp. C. 66.

(c) Green v. Jones, 2 Camp. 411. Reed v. James,[4] 1 Starkie's C. 136.

(d) Per Lord Ellenborough, 2 Camp. R. 411. Lloyd v. Stretton,[5] 1 Starkie's C. 40. In an action against a sheriff, for a false return to a fi. fa., the defence being the bankruptcy of the debtor, the petitioning creditor is, it seems, a competent witness. Wright v. Lainson, 2 M. & W. 739.

(e) Egglesham v. Haines, 12 Vin. 11. Ambrose v. Clendon, C. T. Hardw. 267. Koopes v. Chapman, Peake's C. 19. Adams v. Malkin, 3 Camp. 534. Crooke v. Edwards,[6] 2 Starkie's C. 302. Ex parte Osborn, 1 Rose, 287. 392. So if being a creditor under a first commission, the bankrupt, before his certificate, promises full payment, he is not competent to support a second commission. Roberts v. Morgan, 2 Esp. C. 736. But now see the stat. 6 G. 4, c. 165, as to promises made by the bankrupt. Where parties claiming debts were summoned to attend for examination before commissioners, held that they were not to be deemed "witnesses" within the 6 G. 4, c. 16, s. 20, to entitle them to an auxiliary commission for their examination. Ex parte Kirby, 1 Mont. & M. 440.

(f) Williams v. Stevens, 2 Camp. 300.

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. ix. 8. [2] Id. xiii. 124. [3] Id. iv. 397. [4] Id. ii. 327. [5] Id. ii. 286. [6] Id. iii. 355.

is incompetent in all cases, so long as he remains a creditor, whether he has or has not proved his debt, and whether an action be brought by the assignees to recover a debt, or the question be tried on an issue, for a creditor has an interest in the preferable remedy for recovering his debt under the commission (g). But he is a competent witness for the assignees after *he has assigned his debt (h). He is not a competent witness upon an *194 issue to try whether the bankrupt has lost more than 5*l.* at one sitting by gaming (i); he would be entitled to a share of the bankrupt's allowance forfeited by the gaming. A creditor who has assigned his debt, although by parol only, is competent (k). It was held that he was ex necessitate competent to prove an act of bankruptcy under the stat. 4 Geo. 3, c. 33 (l).

In an action by a creditor against the defendant for inducing him by misrepresentations to trust a bankrupt, another creditor of the bankrupt is a competent witness for the plaintiff, for a recovery by the plaintiff would not discharge his claim on the bankrupt's estate (m). A release by a creditor to the assignees is sufficient, without a release to the bankrupt (n).

A creditor is competent to negative the petitioning creditor's debt (o).

Assignee. An assignee is a competent witness in actions relating to the bankrupt's estate, where he is not a party, for as assignee he is a mere trustee (p).

A commissioner called to support the commission under which he had acted was allowed to be examined (q).

Production of documents. Where the act of bankruptcy consists in the execution of a deed by the bankrupt, the Chancellor will order the person who has the possession of it to attend before the commissioners (r). If the petitioning creditor be called by the assignees, merely for the purpose of producing a promissory note on which the debt is founded, he is not liable to be cross-examined by the defendant (s). After the death of a witness his examination entered of record is evidence under the stat. 5 Geo. 2, c. 30, s. 41 (t). A deposition (g) Ex parte Malkin, in re Adams, cor. Gibbs, C. J. Sitt. after Hil. Term, 1814, 2 Christian's B. L. 453. 3 Camp. 515. See Ex parte Osborn, 2 Ves. Beames, 177; 1 Rose, 377. 392; Crooke v. Edwards,[1] 2 Starkie's C. 302; In re Gould, 2 Schoales & Lefroy, 116, per Lord Redesdale; contra, Williams v. Stevens, 2 Camp. 301. Where the adjudication was founded upon the examination of a party, a creditor, who at the time stated he did not consider himself a creditor, and should make no claim, the court refused to supersede the commission. Ex parte Hills, 1 Mont. & M. 272. And see King v. Hullock, 1 Taunt. 78.

(h) Granger v. Tudor, Bl. 1272. Where a creditor had sold his debt, held that he was a competent witness to support the fiat. Pulling v. Meredith,[2] 8 C. & P. 763.

(i) Shuttleworth v. Bravo, Str. 507.

(k) Heath v. Hall, 4 Taunt. 326. Granger v. Furlong, 2 Bl. R. 1273.

(l) Which adjudges a member of parliament to be a bankrupt who does not pay or secure the debt, as prescribed by the statute, within two months after personal service of summons. Per Ld. Eldon, C. Ex parte Harcourt, 1 Rose's B. C. 203, and now see the stat. 6 G. 4, c. 14, s. 10.

(m) Burton v. Lloyd, 3 Esp. C. 207.

(n) Ambrose v. Clendon, C. T. H. 267. Koopes v. Chapman, per Ld. Kenyon, Peake's C. 19; and he is competent to prove the act of bankruptcy, although the bankrupt be plaintiff in the action. Ibid. And see Sinclair v. Stevenson,[3] 1 C. & P. 582.

(o) In re Cadd, 2 Sch. & Lef. 116.

(p) In an action by an execution creditor of the bankrupt against a sheriff for a false return to a writ of fieri facias, it was held, that an assignee who had released his claims on the bankrupt's estate, was a competent witness to establish an antecedent bankruptcy. Tomlison v. Wilkes,[4] 2 B. & B. 397.

(q) Crooke v. Edwards, 2 Starkie's C. 302, the objections were that he had received fees and would be liable to an action of trespass in case the commissioners were to be questioned. Ld. Ellenborough observed, that he would not be called on to return the fees, but said that he would not then pronounce upon the question. It has been observed on this case, that the interest of the witness in future fees was not noticed.

(r) Ex parte Treacher, 1 Buck's B. C. 17; and now see the stat. 6 G. 4, c. 16, s. 24.

(s) Reed v. James,[5] 1 Starkie's C. 136. Qu. whether he is compellable by a court of law to produce the document. Ib.

(t) See Jansen v. Wilson, Dougl. 257. The statute directs that the Chancellor shall appoint a proper person to enter the proceedings of record. An examined copy of a record so made would therefore be evidence. The provisions of this statute, as to recording proceedings, are confirmed by the stat. 6 G. 4, c. 16, s. 95. See further as to Enrolment, Ex parte Robson, Ambler, 180. The commissioners have no estate given them

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. iii. 355. [2] Id. xxxiv. 625. [3] Id. xi. 480. [4] Id. vi. 168. [5] Id. ii. 327.

*formerly made by a very old witness may be read to him in order to refresh his memory (u.)

Declarations.

A declaration by a petitioning creditor since deceased, made after the commission, is not evidence against the assignees upon an issue to try whether the commission was concerted between the petitioning creditor, the bankrupt, and the attorney (x).

In an action on a promissory note against three partners, one of whom pleaded his bankruptcy, and proved it on the trial, the court would not allow a verdict to be taken for him pending the trial, to enable him to prove an alteration in the note to defeat the action (y).

The examination of a party before the commissioners is evidence against him, although the whole of it was not taken down, having been signed by him after it had been read over to him (z).

A declaration by a bankrupt before his bankruptcy as to his acts or property is evidence against his assignees (a), and such evidence is adducible although the bankrupt himself has been called and examined (b).

Where the defence was that goods had been delivered in payment of an antecedent debt, and that the payment was protected by the 82d clause in the Bankrupt Act, and it was contended by the plaintiffs that such delivery was by way of fraudulent preference, and was not a bonâ fide payment under that clause, Lord Denman admitted evidence of declarations by the trader on his arrest at the suit of the defendants after the delivery of the goods, and after primâ facie evidence of an act of bankruptcy committed previous to the delivery, in order to show that the delivery was under pressure. The plaintiff had a verdict (c).

For the evidence in an action of covenant by or against the assignee of a bankrupt, see tit. COVENANT.

BARGAIN AND SALE. Vide INDEX, VOL. I.

BARON AND FEME. See HUSBAND AND WIFE.

BARRATRY. See POLICY OF INSURANCE.

BARRATRY.

UPON an indictment for this offence, the prosecutor must give the defendant notice before the trial of the particular instances of barratry intended to be proved (d).

BARRISTER. See CONFIDENTIAL COMMUNICATION.

*196

*BASTARDY (e).

THE law, in its anxiety to protect the rights of children born of women in the bankrupt's real property, but only a power to be executed by deed indented and enrolled. Perry v. Bowers, T. Jones, 196. The enrolment has no relation to the date of the deed. Elliott v. Danby, 12 Mad. 3. Bennett v. Gaudy, Carth. 178; 1 Vent. 360. A writ of supersedeas is evidence that a commission issued on the day mentioned in the writ. Gervis v. Grand Western Canal Company, 5 M. & S. 76.

(u) Vaughan v. Martin, 1 Esp. C. 440.

(x) Harwood v. Keys, 1 R. & M. 204. In answer to the cases of Dowden v. Fowle, 4 Camp. 38, Young v. Smith, 6 Esp. C. 121, Patteson, J. observed, that the latter were loosely stated, and that the declarations must have been made before the commission, and that the former was probably decided by Mr. J. Dampier on the principle of the petitioning creditor's having indemnified the sheriff.

(y) Currie v. Child, 3 Camp. 283. (z) Milward v. Forbes, 4 Esp. C. 172.

(a) Supra, II. 26, 104.

(b) —— v. Shackles, cor. Parke, B. York Spring Assizes, 1835, where in an action by the assignees to recover deeds, the property of the bankrupt before his bankruptcy, which were alleged to have been deposited by way of lien, a declaration by the bankrupt before his bankruptcy was admitted, although the bankrupt had been called by the plaintiffs.

(c) Dixon v. Sanderson, York Spring Assizes, 1836. (d) 5 Mod. 18; 1 T. R. 754.

(e) Where the issue is upon the general bastardy of a party to an action, whether real or personal, depending on the validity of the marriage of the parents, the trial is by the certificate of the ordinary (2 Roll. 584, l. 35, 586, l. 7, 20, 3 Leo. 11). And as the certificate is peremptory, provided judgment be afterwards given, in a state of wedlock, presumes their legitimacy, unless the contrary be satisfactorily established by those who deny it. It has indeed, in some instances, been held that the presumption of legitimacy from non-access could not be overcome by any proof less than that of the absence of the husband beyond seas previous to and during the whole time of gestation (f) (1). But it seems to be now settled, that if such non-access be proved as plainly shows that the husband could not in the course of nature have been the father of the child, the proof will suffice to bastardize the child (g) (B); as, where it is proved that the husband had no access for more than two years previous to the birth of the child, until about a fortnight previous to the birth (h).

Evidence to prove bastardy. Of a child born in wedlock.

or the party alleging bastardy be nonsuited, proclamations are to be made in the court and in Chancery, in order that all persons may have notice to attend the bishop (9 Hen. 6, 11). But where bastardy is alleged on special grounds not involving the marriage (2 Roll. 586, 3 Leo. 11), or where general bastardy is not directly in issue (Ibid.) as in an action for calling the plaintiff a bastard, where the defendant justifies (2 Rol. 586. Hob. 179), or where the party alleged to be a bastard is a stranger, is dead, or is an infant, or if the issue arise on a plea in abatement, the issue is to be tried by the country; and the reason of this is, that the certificate of the ordinary would be peremptory, and in such instances the party or his representatives ought not to be concluded. See 2 Com. 584. Com. Dig. tit. BASTARD, [D.] 2. For decisions depending on the effect of a foreign marriage, see tit. HEIR.—MARRIAGE.—PEDIGREE.

An unborn illegitimate may take by particular description before its birth. Dawson v. Dawson, 6 Mad. 292.

The testator being at the date of the will married, and having no legitimate children, after providing for his wife, and devising certain premises to A. L. for life, gave certain lands, upon trust for the children which he might have by A. L., and living at his decease or born within six months after; upon the death of his wife he duly republished his will, and upon clear proof of his having acknowledged and treated the children of A. L. as his own, and that they had acquired the character of reputed children, held that they took an estate under such devise. Adam v. Wilkinson, 12 Pri. 471; affirming the decree in the court below. 1 Ves. & B. 422.

An order of filiation not expressly adjudging the defendant to be the father, but only that the Court was satisfied of that fact, was held to be sufficient; so the stating generally the child to be chargeable, by reason of the mother's inability, without going on to state the circumstances. R. v. Lewis, 1 Perr. & D. 112.

An order of filiation at sessions upon the evidence of the mother, and corroboration thereof, not stating it to be in some material particular, was held to be bad. Reg. v. Read, 1 Perr. & D. 413. (A.)

(f) 4 Vin. Ab. 21, [B.] pl. 3, 4, 5, and 6.

(g) Pendrell v. Pendrell, 2 Stra. 925. R. v. Bedall, Str. 1076. B. R. H. 379. Stra. 51.

(h) R. v. Luffe, 8 East, 193. In the case of the Banbury claim of peerage, the following questions were

(A) (In Connecticut, where the mother of a bastard prosecutes the father for its maintenance, her evidence cannot be received, unless she has also been examined during her travail, and her testimony shall be fortified by such examination. Warner v. Willey, 2 Root, 490. Chaplin v. Hartshorne, 6 Conn. R. 44. So in Massachusetts. Bacon v. Harrington, 5 Pick. 63. Commonwealth v. Cole, 5 Mass. R. 517.)

(1) [In North Carolina, a married woman may make the oath required by the statute of 1741, ch. 14, accusing a man of being the father of a bastard child begotten before her marriage. Wilkie v. West, 1 Murphey, 319. And in Tennessee, if a single woman charges A. as father of a child with which she is enseinte, and before the child is born, she marries B., A. is nevertheless chargeable with its maintenance. State v. Ingraham, 2 Hayw. Tenn. Rep. 221.]

(B) (The law is now universally understood to be settled, that a child, born during marriage, may be proved to be a bastard in various ways; such as,—First, evidence of the husband's inability;—Secondly, proof of non-access to his wife, which is certainly equal to any physical inability; Thirdly, proof that the child was born out of due time; or Fourthly, that it was born during her open cohabitation with another man, and was considered illegitimate by the family. Both in civil and criminal suits, the rule is the same; the parent is not a witness to prove non-access. But parents are competent witnesses both as to the legitimacy and illegitimacy of their children, either by proving or disproving a marriage. Commonwealth v. Stricker, 1 Browne's App. xlix. The mere probability of non-access by the husband is not sufficient to repel the presumption of law in favour of the legitimacy of a child born in wedlock; but it is not necessary for the party objecting to the legitimacy, to prove that access was impossible. Stigall v. Stigall, 2 Brock. 256. Where however, a man and his wife live together as married persons usually do, a third person may be convicted of fornication with the wife, but not of bastardy, unless the bodily impotence of the husband be clearly and fully established. Commonwealth v. Wentz, 1 Ashm. 269. Commonwealth v. Shepherd, 6 Binn. 283. And though it has been held, that the law will presume access, and that the husband is the father of the child even in a case of a voluntary separation, unless there be some physical impossibility. Tate v. Renne, 7 Martin, (N. S.) 553. Yet where the husband and wife live separate and apart, it may be shown either from facts or circumstances, that the husband had not access to the wife. Commonwealth v. Wentz, 1 Ashm. 269. And testimony of the resemblance of the child to the alleged father or of the want of it not being matter of fact, but merely of opinion, is not admissible. Keniston v. Rowe, 16 Shepley, 38.)

*Access is not to be conclusively presumed merely because the parties are within such distance as to render it possible under circumstances (i).

Where however a husband and wife are proved to have been together at a time such that in the order of nature the husband might have been the father of the child, if sexual intercourse did then take place, intercourse is to be presumed, and it lies on those who dispute the legitimacy of the child to disprove the fact of such intercourse having taken place by evidence affording an irresistible presumption that it could not have taken place, and not by mere evidence of circumstances which may afford a balance of probabilities against the fact (k).

If there be a separation by consent, the presumption of law will still be in favour of access and of legitimacy till the contrary be proved (l); but if there be a divorce a mensâ et thoro, non-access will be presumed, for (as it is said) it will be intended that the parties obeyed the sentence of the Court (m).

It has been held, from very early times, that issue born during wedlock might be bastardized by proof of a natural impossibility that the husband could have been the natural father. In Foxcroft's Case, 10th of Edw. 1 (n), where the husband was an infirm, bedridden man, a child born within twelve weeks after the marriage was held to be a bastard. So it was held, where the husband was shown to be within the age of puberty (o). So where a husband was under the age of fourteen (p). But evidence that a proposed to the judges:—First, whether evidence may be received and acted upon to bastardize a child born in wedlock, after proof given of such access of the husband and wife, by which, according to the laws of nature, he might be the father of such child, the husband not being impotent, except such proof as goes to negative the fact of generating access. Secondly, whether such proof must not be regulated by the same principles as are applicable to the legal establishment of any other fact.

On the 4th July, 1811, the Lord Chief Justice of the Common Pleas delivered the following unanimous answers:—First, "That in every case where a child was born in lawful wedlock, the husband not being separated from his wife by a sentence of divorce, sexual intercourse was presumed to have taken place between the husband and wife, until that presumption was encountered by such evidence as proved to the satisfaction of those who were to decide the question, that such sexual intercourse did not take place at any time, when by such intercourse the husband could according to the laws of nature be the father of such a child."—Secondly, "That the presumption of the legitimacy of a child born in lawful wedlock, the husband not being separated from his wife by a sentence of divorce, could only be legally resisted by evidence of such facts, or circumstances, as were sufficient to prove to the satisfaction of those who were to decide the question, that no sexual intercourse did take place between the husband and wife at any time, when by such intercourse the husband could by the laws of nature be the father of such child. That where the legitimacy of a child in such a case was disputed on the ground that the husband was not the father of such a child, the question to be left to the jury was, whether the husband was the father of such child: and the evidence to prove that he was not the father must be of such facts and circumstances as were sufficient to prove, to the satisfaction of the jury, that no sexual intercourse took place between the husband and wife at any time, when by such intercourse the husband could by the laws of nature be the father of such child."

(i) Clark v. Maynard, 6 Madd. 364.

(k) By Sir J. Leach, Head v. Head, 1 Sim. & Stu. 154; S. C. 1 Turner, 139; and see Morris v. Davis,[1] 3 C. & P. 427. And if the husband have access, legitimacy will be presumed although other persons are at the same time carrying on criminal intercourse with the wife. Cope v. Cope, 1 Mo. & R. 269;[2] 5 C. & P. 608. Secus (it is said) where although the husband has opportunity of access, but where the wife is living in open and notorious adultery. For then it is said that if the husband on one single occasion only had opportunity of access, and then at a time and under circumstances rendering it extremely improbable that he availed himself of the opportunity, those facts might perhaps be urged as a legal ground for concluding that sexual intercourse did not take place. The case of Morris v. Davis was decided on that principle, per Alderson, B. 1 Mo. & R. 275.

(l) St. George and St. Margaret, Salk. 123. (m) Ibid.

(n) 1 Roll. Ab 359 It does not appear, from the abridged note of the case in Rolle, whether the inability existed at the time of conception; but it must necessarily be presumed that it was so proved, for the inability at the time of marriage, twelve weeks only before the marriage, would be perfectly immaterial.

(o) 1 Roll. Ab. 358. In Lomax v. Holmden, Str. 940, evidence of inability from a bad habit of body was admitted; but the evidence amounting to improbability only, and access being presumed from the visits of the husband, the evidence was deemed to be insufficient.

(p) Year-book, 1 Hen. 6, 3, b.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xiv. 378. [2]Id. xxiv. 475.

husband was divorced from his first wife for impotence does not prove the bastardy of a child born during the second marriage (q).

*Where the husband is within the realm, it is not incumbent on the party alleging bastardy to prove that the husband could not by any possibility have had access to the wife; it is sufficient to adduce such circumstantial evidence as satisfies the minds of the jury (r) (1). *198

The removal of the husband to a place distant from the wife, her cohabiting with another man, and the fact that the son, whose legitimacy is questioned, took the name of the latter from his birth, which he and his descendants afterwards retained, is strong evidence to prove the illegitimacy (s). So it may be proved that the mother was a woman of ill fame (t).

In Lomax v. Holmden(u), the marriage being proved, and evidence given that the husband was frequently in London, where the mother lived, so that access must be presumed, the defendants were admitted to give evidence of his inability from a bad habit of body, but the evidence showing an improbability only, the plaintiff had a verdict (x).

Where the birth occurs so soon after the marriage as to show that the conception was ante-nuptial, that circumstance will not affect the legitimacy; but that case stands upon its own peculiar ground. The marriage of the parties is then the criterion of legitimacy; at least it raises a presumption that the husband was the father of the child (y). In this respect our law adopts the rule of civil law, according to which the offspring was legitimate if the parents married at any time before the birth (z). It seems, however, that in such case it is competent to prove that it was impossible that the husband could have been the father, for a stronger presumption cannot arise in such a case than is made in favour of a child conceived after wedlock (a) (A). It is held, that although the wife was pre-contracted, or within the prohibited degrees of consanguinity or affinity, yet if she be not afterwards divorced, the issue will not be bastards (b); and after the death of the parties the marriage cannot be drawn into question to bastardize the issue (c).

Although there has been an actual marriage, the issue may be bastardized by proof that the marriage was actually null and void; as by evidence that one of the parties had a wife or husband still living (d); or by proof of a divorce a vinculo matrimonii (e). But a divorce cannot be prosecuted

(q) Com. Dig. Bastard [B.] 5 Co. 98, b.; 2 Leo. 169, 173; Dy. 179, a. For as is said, a man may be habilis & inhabilis diversis temporibus, and this whether the divorce was causâ impotentiæ quoad hanc, or propter perpetuum impotentiam (Mo. 227), 1 And. 105; 2 Lev. 169. [The law seems formerly to have been different. See Lord C. J. Treby's note to 2 Dyer, 179, a.]

(r) Goodright v. Saul, 4 T. R. 356. And see R. v. Bedall, Str. 1076.

(s) 4 T. R. 356. And a new trial was granted, the judge on the first having informed the jury that the possibility of access must be negatived.

(t) Pendrell v. Pendrell, 2 Str. 925; B. N. P. 113. (u) B. N. P. 113.

(x) Lomax v. Holmden, 6 Geo. 2, at Bar. Str. 940; B. N. P. 113.

(y) See the observations of the Judges in R. v. Luffe, 8 East, 193.

(z) See 8 East, 210.

(a) And see Foxcroft's Case, above cited, 1 Roll. Ab. 359. But see 1 Roll. 358, l. 20.

(b) 1 Roll. 357, l. 42, 45.

(c) Ibid: and Com. Dig. Bastard [B]. But the marriage may, after the death of the parties, be proved to be void.

(d) See Marriage.—Pedigree.—Polygamy.

(e) 2 Roll. 586, l. 20. For the causes of such a divorce, see Com. Dig. Baron and Feme, [C.] 1., & supra, V. I. Ind. tit. Judgment, as to the effect of a judgment in the spiritual court.

(1) [The legitimacy of a child will be presumed, on slight proof, after the lapse of thirty years, and the death of the parents and the child. Johnson v. Johnson, 1 Desauss. 595.]

(A) (If a man marries a woman in such an advanced state of pregnancy, that her situation must have been known to him, it must be considered as a recognition of the child afterwards born as his own. Stigall v. Stigall, 2 Brock. 256.)

after the death of the parties (f). Nor can a marriage be drawn in question upon any collateral surmise after the death of either of the parties, such as that it was incestuous (g), in order to bastardize the issue. The effect of sentences in the ecclesiastical courts has already been considered (h).

*199 Posthumous child.

*In the case of a posthumous child (i), its legitimacy appears to be a question of fact to be tried by a jury (k), unless it appear to be manifestly impossible, according to the course of nature, that the child can be legitimate.

A case is mentioned in the books (l), where the child was found to be born eleven days post ultimum tempus legitimum mulieribus pariendi constitutum, and because of that fact, et quia per veredictum juratorum invenitur quod prædictus Robertus (the husband), non habuit accessum ad prædictum Beatricem per unam mensem ante mortem suam per quod magis præsumitur contra pradictum Henricum (the issue,) therefore the brother and heir of Robert had judgment to recover in assize; and L. C. J. Rolle adds a note to that case, that the jury found that the husband languished of a fever long before his death (m). Hence it appears, that in addition to the mere presumption, from the interval which elapses between the death of the husband and birth of the child, other circumstances are admissible to confirm that presumption. And in Pendrell v. Pendrell (n) it was held that the party who disputed the legitimacy might show that the mother was a woman of ill fame.

Where a woman marries so soon after the death of the first husband that it is uncertain which of the two husbands is the father, it is a question of fact to be tried by a jury (o).

Competency.

Either of the parents is competent to prove the bastardy of a child for want of legal marriage, although such evidence is open to much observation *(p). It has been said, that the mother being a married woman, is (f) 1 Roll. 360, H.; 1 Salk. 21; Com. Dig. Baron and Feme, [C.] 6.

(g) Carth. 271; Comb. 200; 4 Mod. 182. (h) Supra, Vol. I. Ind. tit. Judgments.

(i) Alsop v. Stoney, 17 J.—B. R. Co. Litt. 123, b. by Hargrave and Butler, in the note. The wife, who was, it seems, a lewd woman, was delivered of a child forty weeks and ten days after the death of the husband, and it was held to be legitimate (Hale's MSS.) So where the child was born forty weeks and eleven days after the death of the first husband. 18 Rich. 2, Hale's MSS. See Cro. Jac. 541; Godb. 281; Palm. 9.

(k) It has been quaintly said that the law does not appoint any certain time for the birth of a child, and that it is sufficient for the purpose of legitimacy if it be born within a few days after the forty weeks, if it can be proved by circumstances to be the issue of the husband (1 Rol. 356, l. 10; 2 Cro. 541; Pal. 9). The Roman law was very liberal in this respect. The Decemviri allowed that a child might be born in the tenth month; and although a law in the digest excluded the eleventh, yet the emperor Adrian, after consulting with philosophers and physicians, decreed even to this extent, where the mother was of good and chaste manners (Dig. 1, 4, 12). See the note by Hagr. & Butler, 2 Inst. 132, b. from which it appears that the judges of Friesland in one instance allowed to the extent of twelve lunar months, minus three days. It is not probable that an English jury would go quite so far.

The very learned editors of Lord Coke's Institutes procured the following information from Dr. Hunter. —"1. The usual period of gestation is nine calendar months; but there is very commonly a difference of one, two, or three weeks. 2. A child may be born alive at any time from three months, but we see none born with powers of coming to manhood, or of being reared, before seven calendar months, or near that time; at six months it cannot be. 3. I have known a woman bear a living child in a perfectly natural way fourteen days later than nine calendar months, and believe two women to have been delivered of a child alive in a natural way above ten calendar months from the hour of conception."

Lord Coke lays it down as a peremptory rule, that forty weeks is the longest time to be allowed for gestation (Co. Lit. 132); this, however, seems to be without foundation. See the note by Hagr. and Butler, Co. Lit. 123, b.

(l) Roll. Ab. 356. (m) Roll. Ab. 356. (n) 2 Str. 925.

(o) Hale's MSS. Cro. J. 615; Winch. 71; Litt. R. 177. Thecar marries a lewd woman, but she doth not cohabit with him, and is suspected of incontinency with Duncomb; Duncomb, within three weeks after the death of Thecar, marries her. 281 days and 16 hours after his death she was delivered of a son; and it was agreed, that though it was possible that the son might be begotten after the husband's death, yet being a question of fact it was tried by a jury, and the son was found to be the issue of Thecar.

(p) 6 T. R. 330, 331. Or to prove the legitimacy (Ibid.). It is said that the sole evidence of the mother, a married woman, shall not be sufficient to bastardize her child. Ca. T. H. 79. R. v. Rook, 1 Wils. 340. See also Standen v. Standen, Peake's C. 32; Standen v. Edwards, 1 Ves. jun. 133.

not competent to prove the non-access of the husband (A), as it seems, upon a principle of public policy, which prohibits the wife from being examined against her husband in any matter which affects his interest or character, unless in cases of necessity (q); and on that account it is at all events allowable to examine her as to the fact of her criminal intercourse with another, since it is a fact which must probably be within her own knowledge and that of the adulterer only (r).

But the parents are competent witnesses to prove the legitimacy of their children (s).

So the mother is competent to prove the access of the husband (t).

The declarations of the wife during her lifetime are not admissible in evidence, except for the purpose of contradicting her (u). Such declarations are not admissible to prove her son not to be the son of her husband, but of another man (x) (B).

As cohabitation and repute are evidence to prove the fact of marriage, so declarations by deceased parents, as to their being or not being married, are evidence as accompanying and explaining such cohabitation, and the presumption arising from cohabitation is either strengthened or destroyed by such declarations (y). So such declarations are admissible to prove whether the child was born before or after marriage (z), but they are not admissible to prove the illegitimacy of a child born in wedlock (a).

(q) R. v. Sourton,[1] 5 Ad. & Ell. 180. R. v. Bedall, 2 Str. 941. 1076; R. T. Hardw. 379. In the case of Goodright v. Moss, Cowp. 591, Lord Mansfield says it is a rule founded in decency, morality, and policy, that the parties shall not be permitted after marriage to say that they had no connection. See R. v. Reading, 1 East, 180; B. N. P. 112. The rule is the same, though the husband be dead at the time of giving her testimony. R. v. Inhab. of Kea, 11 East, 132.

(r) See Lord Ellenborough's observations, R. v. Luffe, 8 East, 202, where an order of bastardy was stated to be made upon the oath of the wife as otherwise, it was held to be good, since it was to be presumed that the non-access of the husband was proved by other witnesses, or if proved by her also, that the judgment of the justices was founded on the other proof. R. v. Luffe, 8 East, 193. And see R. v. Lubbenham, 4 T. R. 251.

(s) In Lomax v. Lomax, (cor. Ld. Hardwicke.) C. T. H. 380, the mother was admitted to prove the marriage; and in an ejectment against Sarah Brodie, Hereford, 1744, Wright, J. admitted the father to prove the daughter legitimate, her title being as heir-at-law to her mother. And see Stapleton v. Stapleton, Ca. T. Hardw. 277; Lord Valentia's Case, in D. P. Cowp. 593; Sacheverell's Case, B. N. P. 241.

(t) Pendrell v. Pendrell, cor. Ld. Raym. Str. 925; B. N. P. 287.

(u) 2 Str. 925; B. N. P. 113. (x) R. v. Cope, 1 Mo. & R. 275.

(y) B. N. P. 294, where it is said that such declarations are not to be given in evidence directly, but may be assigned by the witness as a reason for his belief one way or other. In May v. May, B. N. P. 112, on a trial at bar on an issue out of Chancery, the preamble of an act of parliament, reciting that the plaintiff's father was not married, to the truth of which he had sworn, was given in evidence; yet, upon proof of constant cohabitation, and of his having always acknowledged her to be his wife, the marriage was established. But where, in a settlement case, there was no evidence either as to the parentage, place of birth, or illegitimacy, except the testimony of the father, who denied any marriage, the court of K. B. held, that however difficult it might be to admit his evidence to bastardize a reputed legitimate child, yet, as all depended upon his testimony, the whole must be taken together. Parish of St. Peter, Worcester, v. Old Swinford, B. N. P. 112.

(z) Goodright v. Moss, Cowp. 591. R. v. Bramley, 6 T. R. 330.

(a) Ibid.

(A) (On an indictment for fornication and bastardy, a married woman is a competent witness to prove the criminal connection with her, but not the non-access of her husband. Commonwealth v. Shepherd, 6 Binn. 283. Commonwealth v. Stucker, 1 Browne, App. xix.)

(B) (A child born during marriage cannot have its condition affected by the declaration of either the husband or wife. Tate v. Renne, 7 Martin (N. S.) 553. And the unsworn declarations of the mother, that her son, born six months after marriage, is the son of another man, are not admissible to prove his illegitimacy, and a fortiori, the declarations of that man are not admissible; if their evidence is proper, their depositions should have been taken. But the general report of the neighbourhood on the question of legitimacy is not to be disregarded. Stegall v. Stegall, 2 Brock. 256. So [a husband's declaration that a child born in wedlock is not his, is not sufficient evidence to prove it illegitimate, notwithstanding it was born only three months after the marriage, and a separation between his wife and him took place by mutual consent. Bowles v. Bingham, 2 Munf. 442.])

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxxi. 312.

The declaration by a deceased husband that his wife was a legitimate child is evidence; for it is probable, that although not connected with her *201 by *blood, he would know the fact (b). And so would the declarations of members or relations of the family, or perhaps of others living in habits of intimacy with them (c).

One charged as a reputed father of a bastard cannot be compelled to give evidence tending to prove the fact (d).

Where one or more justices have power to examine in a case of bastardy, they have incidentally power to compel the woman to answer (e).

In the case of the King v. Ravenstone (f), it was held, that the examination of a woman pregnant of a bastard, was admissible evidence after her death against the party whom she charged as the putative father, although the proceeding was ex parte, the party charged not being present (g). This decision, however, conflicts with general principles, and the cases of depositions before magistrates under the stat. of Philip & Mary, upon which the court are reported to have relied in the above case, are in direct opposition to it.

As to the competency of inhabitants of a parish in cases of bastardy, see tit. INHABITANT.—INTEREST.

BILLS OF EXCEPTIONS. See Vol. I. and INDEX.

BILLS OF EXCHANGE.

Under this head may be considered,

I. THE EVIDENCE IN AN ACTION ON A BILL OR NOTE, p. 202.
II. THE EVIDENCE IN DEFENCE, p. 241.
III. THE COMPETENCY OF WITNESSES, p. 257.
IV. THE EFFECT OF A BILL OR NOTE IN EVIDENCE, p. 261.

I. ACTIONS on bills of exchange (h) differ from actions upon parol contracts, principally in these circumstances; 1st, it is in general unnecessary for the plaintiff to prove the consideration for which the bill or note was *202 *given, the bill or note being in itself primâ facie evidence of a sufficient consideration; and 2dly, because the interest in the bill, and the right of action consequent upon it, is of a transferable nature; so that in addition to the undertaking of the defendant, which is usually a consequence of his (b) Vowels v. Young, 15 Ves. jun. 148.

(c) 3 T. R. 723; B. N. P. 295; 1 M. & S. 689. Supra, Vol. I. Index, tit. HEARSAY.

(d) R. v. St. Mary's, Nottingham, 13 East, 58, in note.

(e) R. v. Jackson, 1 T. R. 655. And if she refuse, may commit until she answer. Ibid. But one justice has no such power under the stat. 6 G. 2, c. 31. See R. v. Beard, 5 T. R. 373. R. v. West, 6 Mod. 180; Billings v. Trinn, 2 W. Bl. 1017.

(f) 5 T. R. 373. Infra, tit. DEPOSITIONS.

(g) In the subsequent case of The King v. Clayton, 3 East, 58, the case of The King v. Ravenstone was referred to by Ld. Ellenborough, C. J. as an authority. In the case of R. v. Clayton, which was one of an order of bastardy made by two justices, which had been confirmed on an appeal to the sessions, it appeared that the original order had been made on the oath of R. T. and the examination of Mary Cole (the mother) taken before another justice. The title of the original order recited that Mary Cole was since deceased. And the court held the order to be good, by intendment that the examination of M. C. had been taken in writing, and that the examination had been verified by the oath of R. T. Note, that stress was laid on the fact that the second order was made on appeal to the sessions, where the objection for want of appearance, and for want of proof that the woman was dead at the time, might have been proved if well founded. The same reason, it is obvious, would apply to the objection that the examination took place in the absence of the party charged.

(h) Upon the question, whether a bill of exchange be joint or several, see Collins v. Prosser,[1] 1 B. & C. 682. A note not payable at all events, but intended as a set-off, is not a promissory note. Clarke v. Percival,[2] 2 B. & Ad. 660. An instrument, whereby the party promises to pay a sum with interest, "and all fines according to rule," cannot be declared on as a note. Ayrey v. Fearnsides, 4 M. & W. 168; and 6 Dowl. 654.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. viii. 183. [2]Id. xxii. 159.

being a party to the bill, it is in many instances necessary to prove the plaintiff's title to sue.

Actions brought in respect of bills of exchange or promissory notes are either founded on the instrument itself, or upon a collateral liability.

Where the action is founded on the instrument itself, the liability of the defendant is either, 1st, primary and immediate upon his direct undertaking, where it is brought against the acceptor of a bill or maker of a note; or, 2dly, it is a secondary and conditional liability of a drawer or indorser consequent upon the default of the acceptor or maker; or, 3dly, the liability is consequent upon the party's own default in not paying the bill according to his undertaking; as, where the action is brought by a drawer or indorser who has been compelled to take up the bill against the acceptor, or by the acceptor, who has paid the bill against the drawer.

The proofs will be considered in the following order:

Primary liability.

1. Proofs in an action by a payee or bearer (i) - - - - - - } v. { An acceptor of a bill or maker of a note.
2. - - - by an indorsee (k) - - - }

Secondary liability.

3. - - - by a payee (l) - - - v. The drawer of a bill.
4. - - - by an indorser (m) - - v. { The drawer of a bill. An indorser.

Collateral liability.

5. Presumptive evidence (n).
6. Proofs by a drawer or indorser (o) v. An acceptor.
7. - - - by an acceptor (p) - v. A drawer.
8. Proof of damage (q).
9. Proofs in defence (r); want of consideration (s); or of value given (t). illegality of consideration (u); discharge by satisfaction, release, &c. (x); laches (y); giving time (z); waver (a); indorsement of bill after it is due (b); alteration of bill (c).
10. Competency of witnesses, declarations, &c. (d).
11. Effect of bill, or note in evidence in payment, &c. (e).

In an action by the payee against the maker of a note or acceptor of a bill, the direct proofs (f) are, 1st. By the production of the note or bill, or proof of its destruction, &c. 2dly. Proof of the making of the note, or of the drawing and acceptance of the bill. 3dly. In some instances proof of the performance of conditions precedent or presentment. 4thly. In some cases of the identity of the payee, or title of bearer.

Production or proof of destruction.

1st. By the production of the bill or note. The ordinary proof of loss, in order to warrant the introduction of parol evidence of an instrument, is in *this case frequently insufficient (g), the instrument being of a negotiable nature, such proof must be given, where it is not produced, by evidence of its destruction (h), or otherwise, as shows that the defendant cannot afterwards be compelled to pay the amount again to a bonâ fide holder (A). In *203

(i) 202. (k) 214. (l) 221. (m) 233.
(n) 237. (o) 239. (p) 239. (q) 240.
(r) 241. (s) 242. (t) 243. (u) 245.
(x) 249. (y) 250. (z) 250. (a) 252.
(b) 253. (c) 254. (d) 257. (e) 261.

(f) Under the new rules the general issue cannot be pleaded, and of course no part of the ordinary proof of title need be proved which is not put in issue by some traverse.

(g) See 1 Esp. C. 50. 2 B & P. 93. 1 Atk. 446. Ld. Raym. 731. For the usual proof to warrant the introduction of secondary evidence, see above, Vol. I. Ind. tit. Secondary Evidence.

(h) As that the defendant tore his own note of hand, 1 Ld. Ray. 731.

(A) (Parol evidence is admissible to prove the contents of promissory notes which are lost. Such may be proved by the evidence of the person in whose custody it was. Jones v. Fales, 5 Mass. R. 101; Snyder v. Wolfley, 8 Serg. & R. 331; and for this purpose the plaintiff himself will be a competent witness. Meeker v. Jackson, 3 Yeates, 443. [Secondary evidence of the contents of a written instrument is not admissible, the absence of such proof the plaintiff cannot recover on the special count, or on the money counts, or upon the original consideration for which the bill or note was given, even although he has tendered to the defendant a bond of indemnity, for it may be still in existence, and the defendant may again be called upon to pay it (i). But where a bill has been specially indorsed to the plaintiff, (and for the same reason, where it is made payable to the plaintiff specially,) the plaintiff may prove that it has been stolen, without having been indorsed by him, and recover on giving parol evidence of the contents (k).

Foreign bill.

In the case of a foreign bill drawn in sets, both the sets should be produced.

Proof of the making and accepting.

2dly. The next step is to prove the making of the note, or the acceptance, (and in some cases the drawing) (l) of the bill.—Where the instrument has been signed by the defendant, and is unattested, the usual proof is by evidence of his hand-writing, or by evidence of his acknowledgment that it was signed by him (m). If the instrument has been attested by a subscribing witness, that witness must be called (n). Where the declaration alleges that the note was made, or bill accepted by a party, his proper hand being thereunto subscribed, it has been said that proof of the hand-writing of the party cannot be dispensed with, and that a precise allegation is essential, in order that the party may be prepared to show, if such be the fact, that (i) Pierson v. Hutchinson, 2 Camp. 211; 6 Esp. C. 126; 3 Camp. 324; 4 Taunt. 602. Dangerfield v. Wilby, 4 Esp. 159. Hansard v. Robinson,[1] 7 B. & C. 90. Although the bill was lost after it became due. Ib. Poole v. Smith,[2] Holt, 144. The remedy of the loser of the note is in equity (1 Ves. 341. 6 Ves. 812. 16 Ves. 430); and in general the holder of a bill cannot insist on payment from the acceptor without offering to deliver up the bill (Hansard v. Robinson,[1] 7 B. & C. 90. Champion v. Terry,[3] 7 Moore, 130. Powell v. Roach, 6 Esp. C. 76); and cannot, having lost the bill, though after it has become due, recover upon it, although an indemnity has been offered. Ib. An express promise to pay the contents of a lost bill, without some new consideration, is void. (Davis v. Dodd, 4 Taunt. 602.) An indorser in blank cannot recover, even where the bill has been lost after notice of trial given, although more than six years have elapsed since the bill became due. Poole v. Smith,[2] Holt's C. 144. So though the half of a bank-note has been lost. Mayor v. Johnson, 3 Camp. 324. Where the defendant had admitted that he owed money on the bill, which was in his own possession, Abbott, C. J., held that it was evidence under the common counts without notice to produce the bill. Fryer v. Browne,[4] R. & M. 145.

(k) Long and others v. Baillie, Guild. Dec. 1805, cor. Ld. Ellenborough, 2 Camp. 214, (n). And see Smith v. Clarke, Peake's C. 225.

(l) The acceptance admits the hand-writing of the drawer, and also the procuration, if the bill be drawn by procuration. Porthouse v. Parker, 1 Camp. 82. Robinson v. Yarrow,[5] 7 Taunt. 455. And this excludes the acceptor from insisting that a bill purporting to be drawn by a firm, was drawn by a single person. Bass v. Clive, 4 M. & S. 13. Or that the drawer's name is forged, Ib.; and Smith v. Chester, 1 T. & R. 655. Or that he is an infant. Taylor v. Croker, 4 Esp. C. 187; and see Shultz v. Astley,[6] 7 C. & P. 99.

(m) See tit. Admissions. In an action by the indorsee against the acceptor, the witness negativing the hand-writing to be that of the drawer, held that some proof of the hand-writing ought to be given, notwithstanding the defendant had acknowledged it to be his acceptance. Allport v. Meek,[7] 4 C. & P. 267.

(n) Supra, Vol. I. Ind. tit. Attesting Witness. A note for less than 5*l*., if not attested, is void by the stat. 17 Geo. 3, c. 30, s. 31. If the note appear to have been attested, the attesting witness must be called, the adversary is entitled to have any writing on the face of it read. Richards v. Frankum, 9 C. & P. 221.

---

when the original is within the control or custody of the party. Sebree v. Dorr, 9 Wheat. 558. But secondary evidence is admissible whenever it appears that the original is destroyed, or lost by accident, without any fault of the party. Rener v. Bank of Columbia, 9 Wheat. 581. In the case of a lost note, it is not necessary that its contents should be proved by a notarial copy—all that is required is, that it should be the best evidence the party has it in its power to produce. Ibid. The English practice of requiring a special count in the declaration, as upon a lost note, in order to let in secondary evidence of its contents, has not been adopted in the United States. Ibid. Of the evidence to prove a lost note, see Peabody v. Denton & al. 2 Gallison, 351. A copy of a bill of exchange and notarial protest, with an affidavit of the payee that the original is lost or mislaid, is not legal evidence to charge the drawer. Wright v. Hancock & al. 3 Munf. 521. See Pintard v. Tackington, 10 Johns. 104. Holmes v. D'Camp, 1 Johns. 34. Angel v. Felton, 8 Johns. 149. Smith v. Lockwood, 10 Johns. 366.] See also Swift v. Stevens, 8 Conn. R. 431. M'Nair v. Gilbert, 3 Wend. R. 344. Rowley v. Ball, 3 Cow. 303. Freeman v. Boynton, 7 Mass. R. 483. See also Vol. I. tit. Written Evidence. Anderson v. Robson, 2 Bay, 495.)

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. xiv. 20. [2] Id. iii. 55. [3] Id. vii. 443. [4] Id. xxi. 401. [5] Id. ii. 173. [6] Id. xxxii. 453. [7] Id. xix. 378.

no authority* or procuration has been given (o). Some evidence as to the identity of the defendant with the party whose hand-writing, or whose authority to sign the note, is proved, is also necessary (p). Proof of acceptance.

An acceptance (q) of a bill in blank without the name of a payee is an authority to a bonâ fide holder to insert a name (r).

By the stat. 1 & 2 Geo. 4, c. 78, s. 2, no acceptance of any inland bill (s) of exchange shall be sufficient to charge any person, unless such acceptance be in writing on such bill, or if they be more than one part of such bill, on one of the said parts. The defendant, by the act of acceptance (t) admits the signature of the drawer, and his ability to draw the bill (u); but where the acceptance is made without sight of the bill, it is necessary to prove the drawer's hand-writing (x).

An allegation that a bill was drawn by certain persons using the firm of A. & Co. is satisfied by a bill drawn by A. in the name of such a firm, payable to our order, although A. has no partner (y).

If the action be against several as makers or acceptors, the hand-writing of each must be proved (z); or if it be signed by one only in the name of the firm, it must be proved that they were partners (a) at the time of the acceptance. Acceptance by several.

(o) Levy v. Wilson, 5 Esp. C. 180. But where the drawer's name had been indorsed by the wife, Ld. Ellenborough was inclined to think that such allegation would be satisfied by proof that the name had been written by an authorized agent (Helmsley v. Loader, 2 Camp. 450); and where the declaration alleged that the defendants made a note in their own hands, &c. and the note had in fact been subscribed by one in the name of the firm, Ld. Ellenborough refused to nonsuit the plaintiffs. Jones v. Mars, 2 Camp. 305. Where the defendant's name had been signed by his wife, it was held that it was not sufficient to show that she had managed his business as an innkeeper, and applied the proceeds in discharge of debts incurred in the business, and that three months afterwards she had signed other notes, the amount of which was paid to his creditors. Goldstone v. Tovey, 6 Bing. N. C. 98.

(p) Middleton v. Sandford, 4 Camp. 34; B. N. P. 171. See Nelson v. Whittal, 1 B. & A. 19.

(q) Vide supra, 141. In an action against the acceptor of a bill for 46*l.*, with the common counts; plea, that the defendant accepted a bill drawn on him for 60*l.* in satisfaction of the plaintiff's demand; held, not sustained by evidence that the defendant transmitted to the plaintiff a blank acceptance, with 60*l.* in the margin, but which when produced had been altered to 46*l.* Baker v. Jubber, 1 Sc. N. S. 26; and 8 Dowl. (P. C.) 538.

(r) Cruchley v. Clarence, 2 M. & S. 90. Atwood v. Griffin,[1] 1 Ry. & M. 425.

(s) In the case of foreign bills a collateral acceptance is still sufficient.

(t) Str. 442, 668, 946. Taylor v. Croker, 4 Esp. C. 187. Robinson v. Yarrow;[2] 7 Taunt. 445; 1 Moore, 150; Burr. 1354; Chitty, O. B. 286; 1 T. R. 655. But where the bill is payable to the drawer's order, proof of acceptance is no evidence of indorsement by the drawer (Peake's C. 20). The acceptor is concluded by his acceptance as to the hand-writing of the drawer, although the bill be forged. Smith v. Chester, 1 T. R. 654.

(u) Consequently it is no defence on the part of the acceptor to show that the bill was drawn by an infant (Taylor v. Croker, 4 Esp. C. 187); or that the bill is forged (6 Taunt. 83; 4 M & S. 15; Leach v. Buchanan, 4 Esp. C. 226); or by one without the authority of his supposed principal (Porthouse v. Parker, 1 Camp. C. 82); or by a single person, when it purports to have been drawn by several persons composing a firm (Bass v. Clive, 4 M. & S. 13). So if the party acknowledge the acceptance to be in his hand-writing he cannot afterwards set up a forgery of the bill as a defence. Leach v. Buchanan, 4 Esp. C. 226.

(x) Peake's L. E. 220; Bayley, O. B. 219. It seems that the word accepted written on the bill is sufficient without the acceptor's signature. Dufaur v. Oxenden, 1 M. & R. 90. And an acceptance in blank, the bill being afterwards drawn in pursuance of the acceptor's authority, is sufficient. Leslie v. Hastings, 1 M. & R. 119.

(y) Bass v. Clive, 4 M. & S. 13.

(z) Peake, 18; Chitty, 627, 9th edit. Gray v. Palmers, 1 Esp. C. 135; B. N. P. 279.

(a) Every partner has an implied authority to bind his co-partners by the drawing, accepting, and indorsing of bills for commercial purposes (7 T. R. 210; 10 East, 264; 13 East, 175). Hence an acceptance by one partner in the name of the firm, is primâ facie evidence of the assent of all (13 East, 175. Pinkney v. Hall, 1 Salk. 126). But this presumption, arising from the relative situation of the parties (see tit. Admissions), is liable to be rebutted, by proof that the party insisting upon the usual presumption, knew that the partner had no authority, as by proof of express notice to that effect. Where one partner gave express notice that he would not be responsible for bills signed in the name of the firm, it was held that he was not bound by a security given to the party to whom such notice was given, although the latter advanced money upon it for the payment of partnership debts, and although part was so applied (Lord Galloway v. Matthew, 10 East, 264); or by proof of covin between the partner who signs the bill or note, and the party who takes it (Ridley v. Taylor, 13 East, 175). To prove fraud, it is not, it seems, sufficient to show that the

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. xii. 176. [2] Id. ii. 173.

*The implied authority of one to draw or accept a bill in the name of the firm may be rebutted by proof of fraud, or of notice to the party, that the other partners would not be responsible for bills so drawn or accepted (b).

Where the action is against A. and B. as acceptors of a bill, and A. suffers judgment by default, the signature of A. must be proved as well as that of B. (c).

An admission by one defendant that he accepted the bill will not be evidence against the co-defendants, without previous proof that they were partners at the time (d), and then his admission of the acceptance in the name of the firm will be evidence against all, even although the partnership was dissolved previous to making the admission.

Where all the partners except the defendant have been outlawed, it is still necessary to prove a joint acceptance by all; but in such a case Lord Ellenborough held, that a letter written by that defendant, in which he admitted the partnership, was evidence of the fact, for in an action by him against the rest for contribution, the record in the present action would not be evidence against the rest to prove the partnership, and it would be necessary to prove the fact aliunde (e).

The provisions of the bank-act do not apply to a note issued by a mere commercial firm, though consisting of more than six members (f).

*206 *Where the acceptance is by means of an agent, the authority of the agent must be proved (g). A letter of attorney from A. as executor, enaholder took the bill in payment of the separate debt of the partner (Ibid.) See Golding v. Davis, 2 Gl. & J. 218; Ex parte Husbands, 2 Gl. & J. 4. But the giving a bill in payment of the debt of two partners, contracted previously to their partnership with a third, has been held to be fraudulent as against the third (Shirreff v. Wilkes, 1 East, 48. See Swann v. Steele, 7 East, 210; Ex parte Bonbonus, 8 Ves. jun. 542; Williams v. Thomas, 6 Esp. C. 18; 15 Ves. 286; 15 East, 10; Pinkney v. Hall, Salk. 126; 1 Camp. 108, 384, 403). Where a partner accepted a bill in the name of the firm, but not in a partnership transaction, it was held at Nisi Prius that an indorsee could not recover on that acceptance against a dormant partner whose name did not appear, who was not known to be a partner, or where the bill was not taken on his credit[1] (Lloyd v. Ashley, 2 C. & P. 138). In the case of a bill drawn on several partners, an acceptance by one need not be in the name of the firm (Ibid.); but a promissory note drawn by one of several partners in his own name cannot be declared on as drawn by the firm, although given for a debt due to the partnership. Siffkin v. Walker and another, 2 Camp. 308.

(b) See the preceding note. See also, Wells v. Masterman, 2 Esp. C. 731. Ex parte Ayrer, 2 Cox, 312. It lies on a separate creditor, who takes a partnership security for payment of his separate debt, if it be so taken, and there is nothing more in the case, to prove that it was given with the consent of the other partners. Per Master of Rolls, in Frankland v. M'Garty, 1 Knapp, 301. One partner having become bankrupt, a solvent partner may still bind the firm by accepting a bill for a debt previously due to the firm, such bill being in the hands of a bona fide indorsee. Ex parte Robinson, 1 Mont. & Ayr. 18. See Wadbridge v. Swann,[2] 4 B. & Ad. 633. A member or director of a joint stock company has no implied authority to accept bills on the part of the directors. See tit. PARTNERS, and Bramah v. Boberts,[3] 3 Bing. N. C. 972; Ex parte Ellis, Mont. & B. 249.

(c) Bay. O. B. 227; 1 Esp. C. 135.

(d) Gray v. Palmer, 1 Esp. C. 135. Wood v. Braddick, 1 Taunt. 104.

(e) Sangster v. Mazzaredo and others,[4] 1 Starkie's C. 161.

(f) Wigan v. Fowler and others,[5] 1 Starkie's C. 459, and afterwards by the Court of K. B. But a corporation not established for trading purposes cannot accept bills of exchange payable at a less period than six months from the date (Broughton v. Manchester Waterworks Company,[6] 3 B. & A. 1). It was there observed that in Wigan v. Fowler it did not appear on the face of the bill to be accepted by more than six persons. And semble, a corporate body not established for trading purposes cannot without express authority bind itself but by deed (Ibid.); and see Starke v. The Highgate Archway Company,[7] 5 Taunt. 792.

(g) 1 Esp. C. 90; Chitty, O. B. 28. As to proof of agent's authority, see tit. AGENT. A secretary to a joint stock company has no implied authority to accept bills. Neale v. Turton, 4 Bing. 149. Where the declaration on a bill alleged it to have been drawn by one Hannah P. on, and accepted by the defendant, and afterwards indorsed by the said H. P. to the plaintiffs, the bill appeared to be indorsed "for H. P.," in the hand-writing of one J. P., and a witness stated that his employers had dealings with a Mrs. P. and that he had seen bills drawn and indorsed in the same form and hand-writing, which had been paid, and held that upon a question of authority, the statements of the witnesses were admissible, without the production of such bills; and the Court after a verdict for the plaintiff, upon an affidavit that the real name was Hannah, and that the bill was drawn and indorsed by her son J. P., by her authority, refused a new trial. Jones v. Turnour,[8] 4 C. & P. 204.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xii. 59. [2]Id. xxiv. 130. [3]Id. xxxii. 404. [4]Id. ii. 338. [5]Id. ii. 468. [6]Id. v. 215. [7]Id. ii. 268. [8]Id. xix. 344.

bling B. to transact the executorship affairs, gives him an authority to accept bills of exchange drawn by a creditor relating to a debt due from the testator, so as to make A. personally liable (h). The agent who accepted the bill by the authority of another, is a competent witness to prove his authority (i). If the authority was in writing, the instrument must be produced and proved (k). Proof of acceptance by an agent.

Proof of an acceptance after the bill became due is sufficient (l). Where an executor declares upon promises to the testator, he must prove an acceptance in the lifetime of the testator. Time of acceptance.

A collateral acceptance (m) may be proved either in writing (n), or by evidence of an oral assent (o) (1); and it is not necessary that the holder should be privy to such parol acceptance (p). What amounts to proof of an acceptance is a question of law, and not of fact (q). If the acceptance be by parol, the witness must be produced who heard the defendant accept the bill; and if it be in writing, it must be produced and proved; and if attested, must be proved by the attesting witness. In general, a promise to accept an existing bill, if made upon an executed consideration, or if it influence any person to take or retain the bill, is a complete acceptance as to the person to whom the promise is made in the one case, and the person influenced on the other (r), and all the subsequent parties in each (s). Proof of collateral acceptance.

Where the acceptance is by a letter collateral to the bill, the letter must be produced, and the hand-writing proved; and evidence is also requisite to identify the bill in question with that mentioned in the letter.

An assurance by a collateral letter that the bill shall meet with due honour, *is an acceptance (t); and so is an assurance of the drawee, by letter, that the bill shall be duly honoured (u). So a letter by the drawee, stating that the holder might rest satisfied as to payment, written after the bill was drawn, is an acceptance (x). But a promise to accept a non-existing bill is no acceptance (y). An indorsee may avail himself of that as an acceptance of which the drawer could not avail himself; as where A. to give credit to B. made an absolute promise to accept his bill, and B. showed the letter upon the Exchange (z) (A). *207

(h) 2 H. B. 218. But see 6 T. R. 591. (i) Supra, 41. (k) Ibid. (l) 5 East, 514.

(m) No such acceptance of an inland bill subsequent to the first of August, 1821, is valid. See the stat. 1 & 2 G. 4, c. 78, s. 2, supra, 204. (n) 1 T. R. 182, 186. Pillans v. Van Mierop, 3 Burr. 1663.

(o) Lumley v. Palmer, 2 Str. 1000. C. T. Hardw. 74.

(p) Powell v. Monnier, 1 Atk. 611. Wynne v. Raikes, 5 East, 514. Fairlee v. Herring,[1] 3 Bing. 625.

(q) 1 T. R. 182, 186. But see Rees v. Warwick,[2] 2 Starkie's C. 411. B. undertakes to guarantee A.'s debt, and draws a bill on A., which A. accepts; B. also writes an acceptance. B. is not liable as an acceptor; it is a collateral undertaking for the debt of A., which must be specially declared on. 2 Camp. 447; Beawes, L. M. 422.

(r) Milne v. Prest, 4 Camp. 393.

(s) Bayley on Bills, 78. 5 East, 514. Pierson v. Dunlop, Cowp. 571. Mason v. Hunt, Doug. 284. Clarke v. Cock, 4 East, 75.

(t) Clarke v. Cock, 4 East, 57. So, this I accept, and you may call for it when you like. Canissa v. Lanos, 2 Knapp, 276. The drawer of foreign bills being arrested, said he would have accepted them when presented, but he had not the funds from France; that when he got the funds he would have paid them, but for some expression of the indorsee, adding, that he told the clerk of the indorsee, that when he got the funds from France the bills should be paid. It was held, that this was a good conditional acceptance, on which the defendant having got funds from France was liable. Mendizabel v. Machado,[1] 6 C. & P. 218. 3 M. & S. 831.

(u) Powell v. Monnier, 1 Atk. 611; 5 East, 520.

(x) Wilkinson v. Lutwidge, Str. 648. See also Wynne v. Raikes, 5 East, 514; Clarke v. Cock, 4 East, 57.

(y) Johnson v. Collins, 1 East, 98.

(z) Per Ld. Mansfield, in Mason v. Hunt, Dougl. 284. Cowp. 571. Le Blanc, J. in Johnson v. Collins, 1 East, 105. Clarke v. Cock, 4 East, 70. But see Milne v. Prest, 4 Camp. 393.

(1) [See Havens v. Griffin, N. Chipman's Rep. 42. Mahew & al. v. Prince, 11 Mass. Rep. 54.]

(A) (An agreement to accept a bill to be afterwards drawn is valid in the United States, even if it be by

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xiii. 78. [2]Id. iii. 407. [3]Id. xxv. 365.

Where the plaintiff, being unable to prove the acceptance of the defendant upon the bill, proved, that when the bill was taken to the defendant's house for acceptance, a clerk in the defendant's banking-house answered that the bill would be taken up when due, (the defendant not being at home,) it was held that the proof was insufficient, without showing that the answer was given by the drawee, or his authority (a).

A direction on the bill to another to pay the sum out of a particular fund is an acceptance (b). So any words written upon the bill which do not negative its request, as "accepted" (c), "presented," "seen," or the day of the month, are primâ facie a complete acceptance. Even a refusal to accept written on a bill, will amount to an acceptance, if it be shown to have been done with intent to deceive the party who presented it, and to delude him into the belief that the bill had been accepted (d).

Where the drawee said on presentment of the bill, "there is your bill, take it, it is all right," it was held to be no acceptance (e).

Where the drawee stated in his letter, "your bill shall have attention," the court held that the phrase was too ambiguous to amount to an acceptance, in the absence of evidence to show that in mercantile acceptation the phrase amounted to an unequivocal acceptance (f).

Presumptive evidence of acceptance.

Where there is no direct evidence of acceptance, presumptive evidence may be resorted to in proof of the fact; for this purpose, the conduct of the parties, especially if it be explained by mercantile usage and understanding, is frequently very important. The fact that a bill sent to the drawee for acceptance has been detained by him, may be evidence of an acceptance; but according to the usual course of commercial dealings, the mere neglect and silence of the drawee, or even a refusal to return the bill, or its actual destruction, does not necessarily make the drawee liable as acceptor (g).

*208 *The acceptance of a bill of exchange imports a contract, which requires the assent of the party; and acts of detention, disfiguring, cancellation, or even destruction, do not necessarily and conclusively prove such

(a) Sayer v. Kitchen, 1 Esp. C. 209. (b) Moor v. Withy, B. N. P. 270.

(c) See Pillans v. Van Mierop, 3 Burr. 1663; Mason v. Hunt, Powell v. Monnier, 1 Atk. 611; 5 East, 220; Pierson v. Dunlop, Cowp. 571.

(d) Bayley O. B. 78. Ann. 75. But it is no acceptance if the drawee apprize the party at the time that what he had written was no acceptance.

(e) Per Ld. Kenyon, 1 Esp. C. 17. (f) Rees v. Warwick, 2 B. & A. 113.

(g) See the case of Jeune v Ward, 2 Starkie's C. 326; 1 Camp. 435; Bayley O. B. 81; Mason v. Barff, 2 B. & A. 26. One who without authority accepts a bill as by procuration, is guilty of a fraud in law. Polhill v. Walter,[2] 3 B. & Ad. 114; but is not liable as acceptor.

parol. Townsley v. Simrall, 2 Peters, 182. Ontario Bank v. Worthington, 12 Wend. 593. Dougal v. Cowles, 5 Day, 515. The rule laid down by the Supreme Court of the United States is, that a letter written within a reasonable time before or after the date of a bill of exchange, describing it in terms not to be mistaken, and promising to accept it, is, if shown to the person who afterwards takes the bill on the credit of the letter, a virtual acceptance, binding on the person who makes the promise. Boyce v. Edwards, 4 Peters, 111. Townsley v. Simrall, 2 Peters, 181. Schimmelpennick v. Bayard, 1 Peters, 265. Payson v. Coolidge, 2 Wheat. 66, s. c. 2 Gallis. 233. [In Wilson v. Clements, 3 Mass. Rep. 1, the Supreme Court of Massachusetts held that a promise to accept a non-existing bill, would not operate as an acceptance, unless it were in writing, and shown to the person who took the bill on its credit, within a reasonable time: And that a bill drawn two years afterwards in favour of one who took it on the credit of the promise, was not binding on the drawee. See the observations of Kent, C. J. in M'Ewers v. Mason, 10 Johns. 214, and of Spencer, J. in Weston v. Baker, 12 Johns. 284. See also M'Kim v. Smith & al. 1 Hall's Law Journal, 486. Goodrich & al. v. Gordon, 15 Johns. 6. Storer v. Logan & al. 9 Mass. Rep. 55.] Kennedy v. Geddes, 8 Porter, 263. Williams v. Winans, 11 Greene, R. 339. Vance v. Ward, 2 Dana, 95. Parker v. Greele, 2 Wend. 545. The principles of all decisions in Bunorgee v. Hovey, 5 Mass. R. 22. Van Reimsdyke v. Kane, 1 Gallis. 630, and Dougal v. Cowles, 5 Day, 111—would seem to render it unnecessary that the promise to accept should be specifically descriptive of a bill or bills to be drawn in pursuance of such promise.)

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. iii. 367. [2]Id. xxiii. 38.

assent, but are capable of explanation, by evidence of the usual course of dealing (h), and the conduct of the parties.

Evidence is admissible to show that a bill with a cancelled acceptance upon it has been accepted by mistake (i). So proof may be given that a cheque has been cancelled by mistake, and it may be returned unpaid (k). Proof of acceptance by mistake.

By the custom of London, the drawee of a cheque coming through another banking-house, may retain it till five in the afternoon (l); but if a cheque be cancelled by mistake, it may be returned unpaid (m).

Where the defendant's notice to produce, in an action on the bill, described the bill as accepted by the defendant, it was held that proof of the attorney's hand-writing to the notice was sufficient primâ facie evidence of acceptance (n).

3dly. The performance of conditions precedent:—

Whether an acceptance be absolute or conditional is a question of law (o). Where it is conditional, the plaintiff must allege that the condition has been performed; as, where the condition is that a house shall be given up to the acceptor on a day specified (p); or if the condition has not been performed, a legal excuse must be averred (q) and proved accordingly; and *matter of excuse cannot be proved under an allegation of presentment (r), or that the event has happened upon which it is to become absolute (s) (A). Conditional acceptance. *209

(h) Mason v. Barff, 2 B. & A. 26. Where the usage was to return the bills accepted, provided the goods had been delivered and the carrier's receipt sent, and the parties had made a second application to have the bill accepted which they had before sent, and an answer was returned that the invoice had not been received, but was expected shortly, the Court held that they could not afterwards treat the detention of the bill as an acceptance. Where a bill was drawn on the defendant, an executor, by a minor, to whom a legacy was to be paid by the defendant in a few days, and the bill being left at the executor's for acceptance, he detained it for a considerable time, and afterwards destroyed it, Lord Ellenborough ruled that the detention and destruction of the bill amounted to an acceptance; but the Court of K. B. (Ld. Ellenborough dissent.) afterwards, on a motion to set aside the verdict, held, that inasmuch as it appeared from the plaintiff's conduct that he did not rely upon the detention of the bill as an acceptance, but had used other means to intercept the money, the defendant could not be considered to be liable as an acceptor. Jeune v. Ward,[1] 2 Starkie's C. 326; 1 B. & A. 653. Where the writing on the bill returned by the drawee is illegible, it has been doubted whether it should be declared on as an accepted or defaced bill. Bayley O. B. 88, 89. Trimmer v. Oddie, Ibid. Paton v. Winter, 1 Taunt. 420. And see Thornton v. Dick, 4 Esp. 270; Marius, 29, 30; Bentinck v. Dorrien, 6 East, 199; Harvey v. Martin, 1 Camp. 425, n.

(i) Bentinck v. Dorrien, 6 East, 199, semble. And see Bayley O. B. 88, 89; Jeune v. Ward,[1] 2 Starkie's C. 326; Paton v. Winter, 1 Taunt. 420, 3; Raper v. Birkbeck, 15 East, 17; Fernandez v. Glynn, 1 Camp. 426, n. contra.; Thornton v. Dick, 4 Esp. C. 270; Trimmer v. Oddie, Bayley O. B. 88. In Cox v. Troy,[2] 5 B. & A. 474, the Court held that a drawer might erase his acceptance previous to any communication of his acceptance of the bill.

(k) Fernandez v. Glynn, 1 Camp. 426, n. (l) 1 Camp. 426, n.; Str. 415, 416, 550.

(m) 1 Camp. 425; Bayley, O. B. 81, n. (n) Holt v. Squire,[3] 1 Ry. & M. 282.

(o) Sproat v. Matthews, 1 T. R. 182. Where A., the joint consignee of goods in London, on being applied to accept a bill for the amount, refused to accept, because he did not know whether the ship would arrive at London or Bristol; on which B., the holder, agreed to leave it, reserving the liberty of protesting in case A. did not accept; and on a second application A. said he would accept the bill even if the ship were lost; held, that this was a conditional acceptance, depending on two events, the ship's arrival in London, or being lost; and that B. having the liberty of refusing such conditional acceptance, could not afterwards note the bill for non-acceptance.

(p) See Swan v. Cox,[4] 1 Marsh, 176.

(q) Leeson v. Pigott, Bayley, O. B. 187. Bowes v. Howe,[5] 5 Taunt. 30.

(r) Ibid.

(s) Bayley, O. B. 44, n. c. Sproat v. Matthews, 7 T. R. 182. Mason v. Hunt, Doug. 299. Smith v. Abbott, Str. 1152. Julian v. Shobrooke, 2 Wilson, 9. Pierson v. Dunlop, Cowp. 571. Where the drawee of a bill on account of a cargo consigned to him, says it will not be accepted till the ship with the wheat arrives; upon arrival, it is an absolute acceptance. Milne v. Prest, 4 Camp. 393.

(A) (If a bill is accepted, "to be paid when in funds," the acceptor will not be bound until he shall be put in funds. Andrews v. Baggs, Minor, 173. Campbell v. Pettengill, 7 Greenl. 126. A drawee who has accepted a bill on condition that he can sell the drawer's goods before the bill becomes due, is not bound thereby, if before that time the drawee's goods are attached by his creditors. Brown v. Coit, 1 McCord, 408.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. iii. 367. [2]Id. viii. 163. [3]Id. xxi. 439. [4]Id. iv. 333. [5]Id. i. 8.

The payee or other holder of a bill may consider a qualified acceptance as a nullity, and cause the bill to be noted; but if he note for non-acceptance he is precluded from afterwards insisting upon the transaction as an acceptance (t).

Where the purchaser of goods requested A. to accept a bill drawn in favour of the seller, and to draw on B. for the amount, and A. accordingly drew upon B. for the amount, and B. refused to accept the bill, it was held that the drawing the bill by A. upon B. did not amount to an acceptance by A. of the former bill, since he did not mean to make himself liable unless the bill he drew was accepted and paid (u).

The date written above the acceptor's signature upon a bill payable after sight is primâ facie evidence of the time of acceptance, although the date be in a different hand-writing; for it is usual for a clerk to write upon the bill the word "accepted," and the date, and for the drawee to write his name under the date (v).

In the case of Rowe v. Young, in the House of Lords, where a bill of exchange was specially accepted, payable at a particular place, proof of presentment there was held to be essential, though no place of payment was mentioned in the body of the bill (w).

But by the stat. 1 & 2 Geo. 4, c. 78, from and after the 1st day of August 1821, if a person shall accept a bill (x) payable at the house of a banker, or other place, without further expression in his acceptance, it shall be taken to be a general acceptance; but if the acceptor shall in his acceptance (which by sec. 2 must be in writing on the back of the bill) express that he accepts it at a banker's house or other place only, and not otherwise or elsewhere, such acceptance shall be taken to be a qualified acceptance of such bill, and the acceptor shall not be liable to pay the said bill, except in default of payment, when such payment shall have been first duly demanded at such banker's house or other place.

Under this statute, where a bill was accepted payable at a banker's, without exclusive words, the acceptor was not discharged by the omission to present it there, though the banker failed in the meantime (y); and it

(t) Bentinck v. Dorrien, 6 East, 199, 200.
(u) Smith v. Nissen, 1 T. R. 269.
(v) Glossop v. Jacob, 4 Camp. 227.
(w)[1] 2 B. & B. 165.
(x) A bill drawn in Ireland upon a person in England is not an inland bill, and may therefore be accepted without writing on such bill, notwithstanding the above statute. But that section, as well as 9 Geo. 4, c. 24, s. 8, applies to bills drawn in Ireland upon persons there. Mahoney v. Ashlin,[2] 2 B. & Ad. 478.
(y) Tower v. Hayden,[3] 4 B. & C. 1.

Where drafts drawn by a mail contractor on the Postmaster-General were accepted "on condition that the contracts be complied with," and were afterwards discounted for value, it was held that the terms were not retroactive, but referred to the subsequent performance of the contractor. It matters not what an acceptor means by a cautious and precise phraseology, if it be not expressed as a condition, nothing out of the expressed condition can be inferred. The United States v. The Bank of the Metropolis, 15 Peters, 377. A memorandum affixed at the bottom of a promissory note, "one half payable in 12 months and the balance in 24 months" before its delivery is a part of the contract. Heywood v. Perrin, 10 Pick. 228. As against the maker of a promissory note, or the acceptor of a bill of exchange, payable at a particular place, no demand of payment at the place designated is necessary to sustain an action upon the instrument. Bank of the United States v. Smith, 11 Wheat. 171. Foden v. Sharp, 4 John. R. 183. Walcott v. Van Santvoord, 17 John. R. 248. Caldwell v. Cassedy, 8 Cow. 271. Adm'rs. of Conn v. Ex'rs. of Gano, 1 Ohio, R. 484. McNairy v. Bell, 1 Yerger, 502. See also Fleming v. Potter, 7 Watts, 380. Contra Palmer v. Hughes, 1 Blackf. 329. But the demand in such a case need not be shown to have been made on the precise day on which the note fell due; it should however appear to have been made before the commencement of the suit. Ibid. See also Erwin v. Adams, 2 Louis, R. 318. So in Picquet v. Curtis, 1 Sumner, 481, it was held that in the case of foreign bills of exchange, payable at a particular place, no action could be maintained against the acceptor, until after a demand and dishonour. Semble, that the same principle would embrace inland bills. Ibid. It would seem, however, that in every case the want of such demand is matter of defence to be averred and proved by the defendant, the affirmative of which need not be averred or shown by the plaintiff. Foden v. Sharp; Walcott v. Van Santvoord.) has been held, subsequently to the above statute, that though a place of payment be mentioned in the body of a bill of exchange, as where the bill is drawn payable to the drawer's order in London, no proof of presentment is necessary (z).

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. vi. 53. [2]Id. xxii. 127. [3]Id. x. 259.

If a promissory note be made payable at a particular place, presentment there is still necessary (a).

*If a note be made payable at a particular house, a demand there is a demand upon the maker (a). *210 4thly. Where a bill is drawn with the payee's name in blank, and the plaintiff inserts his own name as payee, he must adduce evidence to show that he was intended as the payee (b). Identity of payee.

If a note be payable to A. in trust for B., A. is the legal owner, and may sue upon the bill (c).

Where a note or bill is payable to the bearer, or where it has been indorsed in blank, the mere possession of the bill or note is primâ facie evidence of the property in it (d).

(z) Fayle v. Bird,[1] 6 B. & C. 531. Selby v. Eden,[2] 3 Bing. 611. Gibb v. Mather, 2 C. & J. 254.

(a) Sanderson v. Judge, 2 H. B. 509. Jamieson v. Bowes, 14 East, 500, (a). Dickenson v. Bowes, 16 East, 110. Previous to the decision in Rowe v. Young,[3] 2 B. & B. 165, in the House of Lords, where no place of payment was specified on a bill of exchange, a special acceptance of the bill, making it payable at a particular place, was regarded by the Court of K. B. as a mere memorandum inserted for the purpose of apprizing the holder where he might apply for his money, and not as a condition restricting the general liability of the acceptor. Fenton v. Goundry, 13 East, 459; 2 Camp. 656. Lyon v. Sundius, 1 Camp. 423. But the contrary had been decided in the Common Pleas. Ambrose v. Hopwood, 2 Taunt. 61, and Callaghan v. Aylett, 2 Camp. R. 549; where it was held, that in case of a special acceptance, a presentment at the particular place was necessary. See Huffan v. Ellis, Bay. O. B. 98. See also Sanderson v. Bowes, 14 East, 500; Bay. O. B. 96; Sanderson v. Judge, 2 H. B. 509. In Gammon v. Schmoll,[4] 5 Taunt. 344; 1 Marsh. 80, it was held, that if a drawee accept a bill payable at a particular place, the holder is not bound to receive it, but may resort to the drawee, as in case of non-acceptance; but that if the holder accept it, the acceptance interposes a condition precedent.

Where the bill or note is payable at a particular place, a presentment and demand must be alleged, unless a discharge be shown on the face of the declaration. Bowes v. Howe,[5] 5 Taunt. 30. And an allegation that the makers of a note had become insolvent, and had ceased, and wholly declined and refused to pay at the place specified any of their notes, does not show a discharge of presentment and demand. Ibid. 34. But see Howe v. Bowes, 16 East, 112; where it was held, that if the makers had become insolvent, and shut up and abandoned their shop, it was evidence of a declaration to all the world of their refusal to pay their notes there.

A promissory note, promising to pay so much at the defendant's banking-house, must be presented there. Dickenson v. Bowes, 16 East, 110. By the acceptance of the bill the drawee recognizes and adopts the place of payment specified in the bill. Gray v. Milner,[6] 3 Moore, 90.(A)

(a) Saunderson v. Judge, 2 H. B. 509. In an action against the maker of a note payable at Guildford, a presentment at a banking-house at Guildford is a presentment to the defendant, although he lived in London. Hardy v. Woodroofe,[7] 2 Starkie's C. 319. Notice to the acceptor is unnecessary, even although the banker at whose house the note is payable has effects of the acceptor in his hands. Smith v. Thatcher,[8] 4 B. & A. 200. Teacher v. Hinton,[9] 4 B. & A. 413. Edwards v. Dick,[10] 4 B. & A. 212. So in an action by the drawer against the acceptor of a bill payable at a banker's, presentment there is unnecessary, and the omission to present affords no defence. Rhodes v. Gent,[11] 5 B. & A. 244. The acceptors of a foreign bill of exchange, who, after presentment to the drawees for acceptance, and a refusal by them to accept, and protest for non-acceptance, accept the same for the honour of the first indorsers, are not liable on such acceptance unless there has been a presentment of the bill to the drawees for payment, and a protest for non-payment. Hoare v. Cazenove, 16 East, 391.

(b) Crutchley v. Mann,[12] 1 Marsh, 29. And held, that a letter from the acceptor, promising to accept the bill, with the address torn off, was not evidence to prove the fact. (Ibid.) And held also, that the letter, had it been efficient, would have required a stamp. And see Parkins v. Hawkshaw,[13] 2 Starkie's C. 239; B. N. P. 171; Myddelton v. Sandford, 4 Camp. 34. Corfield v. Parsons, 1 C. & M. 730; Bulkely v. Butler,[14] 2 B. & C. 441; Roach v. Oastler, 1 Man. & B. 120.

(c) Smith v. Kendal, 1 Esp. C. 231; 6 T. R. 112. Evans v. Cramlington, Carth. 5; 2 Show. 507; 2 Vent. 309; Skinner, 264.

(d) Per Lord Mansfield, Doug. 632; Bayley, 116; Chitty, 278, 289. King v. Milsom, 2 Camp. 5. See 2 Saund. 47. Blackham's Case, 1 Salk. 290. Paterson v. Hardacre, 4 Taunt. 115; 13 Ves. 49.

(A) [See cases, English and American, collected by Mr. Howe, in a note to Roche v. Campbell, 3 Camp. 248. See also Carley v. Vance, 17 Mass. Rep. 389. 2 Phillips on Ev. 26, 27—and American Editor's notes.]

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xiii. 246. [2]Id. xiii. 70. [3]Id. vi. 53. [4]Id. i. 128. [5]Id. i. 8. [6]Id. iv. 265. [7]Id. iii. 363. [8]Id. vi. 400. [9]Id. vi. 468. [10]Id. vi. 405. [11]Id. vii. 84. [12]Id. i. 179. [13]Id. iii. 332. [14]Id. ix. 133.

Proof of a promissory note payable to A. B. generally, is primâ facie evidence of a promise to A. B. the father, and not to A. B. the son, their names being the same; but A. B. the son, although described in the declaration *as A. B. the younger, bringing the action, and being in possession of the note, is entitled to recover upon it (e). *211

If a payee annex a condition to his indorsement before acceptance, the drawee who afterwards accepts the bill is bound by the condition; and if the condition be not performed, the right of action reverts to the payee, and he may recover against the acceptor (f).

A bill payable to the order of A., is payable to A. if he make no order, and none is to be presumed (g).

Admissions. A promise to pay the amount of a bill, or part-payment of it, is an admission of the acceptance (h). An acknowledgment by one of several acceptors, of his own liability, is not evidence against the rest (i); but it is of his own, although made during a treaty for negotiation (k). Although the defendant on being applied to for payment, but without seeing the bill, desired the holder of the bill to call again, it was held that he might still prove that his acceptance had been forged; but on proof that he had on former occasions paid several similar bills drawn by the same person, Taylor, upon which, Taylor, who was connected with the defendant in business, had, it was supposed, written the defendant's name, it was held that the defendant had adopted the acceptance, and was liable on the bill (l).

If the acceptance of a bill appear on the face of it to have been cancelled, the plaintiff may still show that it was cancelled by mistake (m).

Stamp. Before the bill is read the defendant may object the want of a proper stamp (n); or that the note or bill appears to have been cancelled, so as to throw upon the plaintiff the burthen of giving evidence in explanation; as to show that the apparent cancellation was accidental, or resulted from mistake (o). The defendant cannot insist on reading an indorsement upon the note, which is no part of the note itself (p); and a witness called to prove the hand-writing of a maker of a note cannot be cross-examined as to an indorsement to which there is an attesting witness (q).

Variance. In general, an allegation descriptive of the bill must be precisely proved, because a variance shows that the instrument produced is a different one from that declared on; but it is sufficient if an averment, according to the substance and effect, be substantially proved (r).

Where a bill or note appears to have been altered, it lies on the party producing it to show that the alteration was not improperly made (s).

(e) Sweeting v. Fowler,[1] 1 Starkie's C. 106. (f) Robertson v. Kensington, 4 Taunt. 30.
(g) Smith v. M'Clure, 5 East, 476. (h) Jones v. Morgan, 2 Camp. 474.
(i) 2 T. R. 613; 3 Esp. 360; 4 Esp. C. 226; Doug. 651; 1 Esp. C. 135; B. N. P. 273; Str. 640. 1051; 12 Mod. 309.
(k) 1 Esp. C. 143, B. N. P. 236. Vide infra, PRESUMPTIVE EVIDENCE.
(l) Barber v. Gingell, 3 Esp. C. 60.
(m) Raper v. Birkbeck, 15 East, 17. And see below, ALTERATION, &c. {See Bogart v. Nevins, 6 Serg. & Rawle, 361.}
(n) See tit. STAMP.
(o) See Raper v. Birkbeck, 15 East, 17; and see Ind. tit. CANCELLATION. As to the question whether a drawee can cancel his acceptance before re-delivery, see Bentinck v. Dorrein, 6 East, 199.
(p) Stone v. Metcalf,[2] 1 Starkie's C. 53. (q) Ibid.
(r) See tit. VARIANCE. And see the late stat. Where the declaration alleged a special acceptance, payable at a certain place, "and not elsewhere," which latter words were not on the bill; it was held to be an allegation of a special acceptance, and the variance fatal, but that the sheriff was bound to have allowed the record to be amended as to such variance, and a new trial was granted. Higgins v. Nicholls, 7 Dowl. (P. C.) 551.
(s) Henman v. Dickenson,[3] 5 Bing. 183. Where it was left to the jury to say, from the nature of a blot appearing on the alteration, whether the alteration was made at the time of making the note, and the jury

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. ii. 316. [2] Id. ii. 292. [3] Id. xv. 409.

*In the case of a note payable by instalments, where the days of payment are described in the declaration, a variance in one of the days of payment is fatal (t). In date.

If the bill be alleged to have been made on the 3d, and the bill produced bear date on the 6th, the variance is not material; and it is unnecessary to prove that the bill was really made on the 3d (u). But a variance from the date of the bill, as alleged in the declaration, is fatal (x).

A variance as to the names of parties is fatal, where the allegation operates as a description of the bill; but otherwise, as it seems, where it merely relates to the names of the parties to the action, who might have pleaded the misnomer in abatement, provided the identity be proved (y). Where a bill was alleged to have been drawn by Crouch, (no party to the action,) and the bill itself appeared to have been drawn by Couch, the variance was held to be fatal (z). And where in an action against three as the makers of a note, the declaration alleged it to have been made by William Austin, Robert Strobell, and William Shutliff, of whom, the two latter were outlawed in the action, and the bill, on the trial against the third, appeared to have been drawn by William Austin, Samuel Strobell, and William Shirtliff, the variance was held to be fatal. In this case no evidence was given to prove the identity of the parties (a). But where the declaration was against Thomas Ray and others, as the joint makers of a note, and Thomas Ray suffered judgment by default, and the note was proved to have been signed by J. Hodgson for Rowes, J. Hodgson, Ray & Co., and the real name of the partner was John Rey, it was objected that Thomas Ray the party sued was not a partner; but proof being given that John Rey, the party intended to be sued, had actually been served with process, and was a co-partner with the other defendants, the variance in the christian names was held to be immaterial, and the variance in the surnames Ray and Rey was held to be immaterial, their pronunciation being similar (b). In names.

Where an action was brought by Willis, as the payee of a note, and on production the note was payable to Willis*on*, evidence was admitted on the part of the plaintiff to show that she was the party really meant, and to explain the mistake (c).

Where a bill is drawn with the payee's name in blank, and it is stated in the declaration that A. B. (a bonâ fide holder, who has inserted his own name) was the payee, it is no variance (d). finding that it was so made, the Court directed a nonsuit to be entered. Knight v. Clements, Q. B. T. T. 1838. Roscoe on Ev. 201.

(t) Wells v. Girling,[1] 3 Moore, 79; 1 Gow. 21.

(u) 1 Camp. 307. And see Pasmore v. North, 13 East, 517, where the note was issued and indorsed by the payee, who died before the day of the date.

(x) Coxon v. Lyon, 2 Camp. 308; Fitz. 130.

(y) See tit. VARIANCE; and see Boughton v. Frere, 3 Camp. 29. Mayor, &c. of Stafford v. Bolton, 1 B. & P. 40. Jowett v. Charnock, 6 M. & S. 45. The general rule seems to be, that if the identity of the parties be proved, a variance in their names is immaterial. A description of the plaintiffs as executors and trustees of A. B. is mere surplusage, the bill being payable to them in the name of a firm which they had assumed. Aguttar v. Moses,[2] 2 Starkie's C. 449. [See Mr. Howe's note to Boughton v. Frere, 3 Camp. 30.] (1)

(z) Whitwell v. Bennett, 3 B. & P. 559.

(a) Gordon v. Austin, 4 T. R. 611.

(b) Dickenson v. Bowes, 16 East, 110.

(c) Willis v. Barrett,[3] 2 Starkie's C. 26. Note, the declaration alleged a promise to pay Willis by the name of Willison. As to the admissibility of parol evidence to remove a latent ambiguity, see tit. PAROL EVIDENCE.

(d) Atwood v. Griffin, R. & M. 425. A variance between the real name of a payee and indorser, and that alleged in the declaration, and which appears on the bill, is immaterial. Forman v. Jacob,[4] 1 Starkie's C. 47.

(1) See the examples put by Duncan, J. Conner v. Gillespie, 7 Serg. & Rawle, 479.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. iv. 264. [2]Id. iii. 488. [3]Id. iii. 229. [4]Id. ii. 288.

In parties to the bill.

A declaration, alleging a note to have been made by A. and B. is not satisfied by evidence of a note given by A. alone, to secure a partnership *213 *debt (e); but it would be otherwise if A. had prefixed to his signature, "for A. and B." (f). Proof that others joined with the defendant in drawing, accepting, or indorsing the bill, is immaterial under the general issue, but is pleadable in abatement (g).

An undertaking to provide for the acceptance of a bill is not a promissory note (h).

An allegation that a bill is payable to A., is proved by a bill payable to the order of A. (i).

If a bill be made payable at a particular place, it is a variance to state it without that qualification (k).

But it is no variance when the place of payment is merely mentioned at the foot of the note (l). And in such case it has been held, that an allegation of being payable there was a variance (m).

In legal effect.

It is essential that the bill read in evidence should agree in legal effect, as well as in words, with that specified in the declaration; and therefore, where the bill proved was drawn in Dublin for payment in currency, but there was nothing in the declaration to show that Irish currency was meant, the variance was held to be fatal (n). The omission of the word sterling is immaterial (o). A memorandum indorsed on a note after it has been signed, stating it to have been given on a condition mentioned in an agreement referred to in the memorandum, is a mere ear-marking of the note, and does not incorporate the agreement (p). Where the variance arises in consequence of any artifice in framing the bill, as by the introduction of some words in small characters, or by the use of illegible marks (q) for the purpose of deceit, the variance is almost immaterial (r).

Where the declaration was on a bill of exchange, and the instrument given in evidence contained the word at, inserted before the drawee's name, it was held that it was no variance (s).

An allegation that the defendant made the note, "his own proper handwriting being thereunto subscribed," may be rejected as surplusage, and proof that it was made by another with his authority is sufficient (t).

Where the declaration stated the making and acceptance, and it appeared that the acceptance had been written before the bill was drawn, it was held to be no variance (u).

Direction.

An allegation that the bill was directed to the defendant is not supported by proof of a bill drawn payable to the drawer's order at a certain place named, although the defendant, when it was presented there, wrote his name upon it as the acceptor (x).

(e) 2 Camp. 308; 15 East, 7. (f) 1 Camp. 403. {See Rossiter v. Marsh, 4 Conn. Rep. 196.}

(g) Mountstephen v. Brooke, 1 B. & A. 224. And see Richards v. Heather, 1 B. & A. 29; and Evans v. Lewis, 1 Will. Saund. 291, d. n.

(h) Peake's C. 24. (i) Smith v. Maclure, 5 East, 476.

(k) Bayley on Bills, 310. Roche v. Campbell, 3 Camp. 247. Hodge v. Fillis, 3 Camp. 463.

(l) Williams v. Waring,[1] 10 B. & C. 2. Price v. Mitchell, 4 Camp. 200. Where the memorandum at the foot of the note was printed, Ld. Ellenborough considered the place to be part of the contract. Trecothick v. Edwin,[2] 1 Starkie's C. 468.

(m) Exon v. Russel, 4 M. & S. 585. But see Sproule v. Legg,[3] 3 Starkie's C. 157. Hardy v. Woodroofe,[4] 2 Starkie's C. 319.

(n) Kearney v. King, 2 B. & A. 301. Sproule v. Legg,[5] 1 B. & C. 18. (o) Ibid.

(p) Brill v. Criche, 1 M. & W. 232. (q) Allan v. Mawson, 4 Camp. 115.

(r) Where the word at was inserted before the drawer's name, the instrument was held to have been properly described as a bill of exchange. Shuttleworth v. Stevens,[6] 1 Camp. 402. And see Edis v. Bury, 6 B. & C. 433. (s) Dougl. 651; and see note (r).

(t) Booth v. Grove,[7] 1 Mood. & M. 182, and 3 C. & P. 335. This was formerly doubted. 2 Camp. 305.

(u) Molloy v. Delves,[8] 7 Bing. 428; 4 C. & P. 492. (x) Gray v. Milner,[9] 2 Starkie's C. 336.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxi. 11. [2]Id. ii. 470. [3]Id. xiv. 174. [4]Id. iv. 363. [5]Id. viii. 11. [6]Id. xiii. 227. [7]Id. xix. 28. [8]Id xx. 190. [9]Id. iii. 372.

*In an action against the acceptor on a bill directed to him, or, in his absence, to J. S., the conditional direction need not be stated (y). Variance.

Where the allegation was, that the bill was for value received in leather, and the evidence was that it was for value delivered in leather, it was held to be no variance (z): but if the bill be drawn in the usual form for value received (which means by the drawer), and the declaration allege it as value received by the drawee, the variance is material (a) (A). Consideration.

It seems that an allegation of the delivery of the bill to the payee may be rejected as surplusage (b). Delivery.

If the acceptance of the bill be unnecessarily alleged in an action against the drawer, it need not be proved (c).

Where the writing of the drawee upon the bill is not legible, it has been doubted whether it is to be considered as an accepted or as a defaced bill (d).

Indorsements unnecessarily alleged must be proved (e). If there be no date to the indorsement, a variance from the allegation that the bill was indorsed before it became due will not be material (f). Indorsements.

Upon a declaration against B. as an indorser of the bill, it appeared in evidence that the bill had been indorsed to B. in blank, and that B. without writing his own name, had converted the blank indorsement into a special indorsement to the plaintiff, and it was held that B. was not liable as indorser (g).

In the case of general acceptance, it is not necessary to allege or prove a presentment (h).

Although the declaration allege a presentment by a person specified, it is sufficient to prove a presentment by another (i). A variance as to the time of presentment and acceptance is not material, even although the bill be payable after sight (k). Presentment.

If presentment be alleged to have been made when the bill was due and payable, the day alleged under a videlicet will not be material, although it be on a Sunday (l).

The indorsee of a note or bill, in an action against the maker or acceptor, must prove, 1st, the making of the note, or the drawing and acceptance of Indorsee v. maker or acceptor.

(y) 12 Mod. 447. Bayley on Bills, 390.

(z) Bayley, O. B. 16, n. Jones v. Mars, 2 Camp. 305.

(a) Highmore v. Primrose, 5 M. & S. 65. Priddy v. Henbrey,[1] 1 B. & C. 675.

(b) Smith v. Maclure, 5 East, 476; 7 T. R. 596. (c) Tanner v. Bean,[2] 4 B. & C. 312.

(d) Bayley, O. B. 88; Chitty, 204, n. 9; 6 East, 199; 1 Taunt. 420.

(e) Wayman v. Bend, 1 Camp. 175; R. v. Stevens, 5 East, 244. Williamson v. Allison, 2 East, 446. Peppin v. Solomon, 5 T. R. 496.

(f) Young v. Wright, 1 Camp. 139.

(g) Vincent v. Hurlock, 1 Camp. 442. Where a note contains in the body of it, and not merely in a memorandum at the foot, a promise to pay at a particular place, a presentment at such place must be proved, but notice of dishonour to the maker is unnecessary. Pearce v. Pemberthy, 3 Camp. 261. A note payable at two places may be presented at either. Beeching v. Gower,[3] Holt's C. 313. A promissory note being in the following form, "I promise to pay M. A. D., or bearer, on demand, the sum of 10*l. at sight*," a presentment for sight was held to be necessary. Dixon v. Nuttall, 1 C. M. & R. 307. Where a note is payable on demand, a demand need not be alleged or proved; the action itself is a demand. Rumball v. Bull, 10 Mod. 38.

(h) Turner v. Hayden,[4] 4 B. & C. 1. Secus, in case of a qualified acceptance. Rowe v. Young,[5] 2 B. & B. 185. Where an acceptance, under the st. 1 and 2 Geo. 4, c. 78, is general, and the holder neglects to present it, and the bankers fail with money of the acceptor's in their hands, the acceptor is not discharged. Turner v. Hayden,[4] 4 B. & C. 1.

(i) Boehm v. Campbell,[6] 1 Gow's C. 55. Bolton v. Dugdale,[7] 4 B. & Ad. 619.

(k) Forman v. Jacob,[8] 1 Starkie's C. 46. (l) Bynner v. Russel,[9] 1 Bingh. 23.

(A) (See ante Assumpsit—variance.)

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. viii. 179. [2]Id. x. 340. [3]Id. iii. 117. [4]Id. x. 259. [5]Id. vi. 53. [6]Id. v. 459. [7]Id. xxiv. 125. [8]Id. ii. 228. [9]Id. viii. 230.

*the bill by the defendant. 2dly, presentment, where necessary. These proofs, and the effect of variance, have been already stated. 3dly, he must prove his own title to it by transfer; and 4thly, in some instances, must show that he gave value for it.

Title by transfer.

3dly. His title to the bill.—In the first place, it must appear from the bill itself that it is a negotiable instrument, which is a pure question of law (m); and next he must prove that the bill or note has been transferred to him.

An indorsement is equivalent to a new drawing. If after a special indorsement, and before the special indorsee signs his name, the defendant indorses the bill, and then the special indorsee indorses it, he may sue the defendant, and no new stamp is requisite (n).

Transfer by indorsement.

Where the bill or note is not payable to the bearer, but to a particular person, or to his order, an indorsement in writing made by that person, or by his authority, is essential to the transfer: and therefore, evidence of that person's hand-writing or of another person (o) proved to be his authorized agent, is essential to prove the transfer (p) (B).

(m) 3 Burr. 1523, 1526, 1528; but see Grant v. Vaughan, Burr. 1516, where Lord Mansfield left this question to the jury. (Vid. infra, tit. CUSTOM.) A bill or note payable on a contingency cannot be declared on as a negotiable instrument. Haussoullier v. Hartsincke, 7 T. R. 733. Collis v. Emmett, 1 H. B. 313. Hill v. Halford, 2 B. & P. 413. Blanckenhagen v. Blundell, 2 B. & A. 417. See Trier v. Bridgman, 2 East, 359; Carlos v. Fancourt, 5 T. R. 482; Colehan v. Cooke, Willes, 393. An instrument acknowledging the receipt of an acceptance, and containing an undertaking to provide for it, is not a promissory note, and requires a receipt stamp. Scholey v. Walsby, Peake's C. 24. See Williamson v. Bennett, 2 Camp. C. 417; also Leeds v. Lancashire, 2 Camp. 205, in the note.) If a note, before it is signed, be indorsed with a memorandum that it shall be void on the happening of a contingent event, it is not within the stat. 3 and 4 Ann. c. 9. Hartley v. Wilkinson, 4 Camp. 127. But a defeasance indorsed by the payee on the instrument is no part of the contract, unless proved to have been made at the same time. Stone v. Metcalf,[1] 1 Starkie's C. 53. I promise to pay, signed by two persons, is a joint and several note. March v. Ward, Peake's C. 130. [Hunt v. Adams, 6 Mass. Rep. 519, acc.] A note payable to A. only, without the words, bearer or order, is a valid note. Smith v. Kendall, 1 Esp. C. 231; 6 T. R. 123. Burchell v. Slocock, 2 Ld. Raym. 1545. Moor v. Paine, C. T. Hard. 238. A request to pay 15*l.* out of half-pay which will become due in January, is not a promissory note. Stevens v. Hill, 5 Esp. 247.) And see Evans v. Underwood, 1 Wills. 262. Jenny v. Herle, 2 Ld. Raym. 1362; 1 Str. 591; 8 Mod. 25. Josselyn v. L'Acier, 10 Mod. 294, 316 (A).

(n) Penny v. Innes, 1 C. M. & R. 439.

(o) An authority to draw does not of itself import an authority to indorse bills, but is evidence to go to a jury. Prescott v. Flinn,[2] 9 Bing. 19. There the clerk of the payees had been accustomed to draw bills and cheques for them, and had been in one instance authorized to indorse a bill, and had in two other instances indorsed bills which had been discounted by the payees at their banker's, and the jury were held to be warranted in finding a general authority.

(p) Skinn. 411; 1 Atk. 282; 1 Burr. 674; 3 East, 482, infra, 163. A., the indorsee of a bill of exchange, indorses it "pay to B., or his order, for my use." B.'s banker discounts the bill for B, and applies the proceeds for B.'s use; the property in the bill remains in A., and he may maintain an action against the bankers for the amount. Sigourney v. Lloyd,[3] 8 B. & C. 662. As to the transfer in a foreign country of a bill or note made in England, see Chaumette v. The Bank of England.[4] 9 B. & C. 208. A bank of England note is transferable in France under the stat. 3 and 4 Anne, c. 9. Where a set of foreign bills, drawn abroad, were sent to the drawee, the defendant who accepted two parts, and indorsed one to the plaintiff for value, prior to which the other had been indorsed by the defendant to his father conditionally, but who had never insisted on payment, but gave it up on the substitution of other securities; held, that the plaintiff was entitled to recover; and per Tenterden, L. C. J. and Parke, J., it would have been the same if the first

(A) (It is essential to a bill, that it be payable in money only, at all events, and not out of a particular fund. Reeside v. Knox, 2 Whart. 233. Cook v. Satterlee, 6 Cow. 108. Tucker v. Maxwell, 11 Mass. R. 143. Wooley v. Sergeant, 3 Halst. 262. Nichols v. Davis, 1 Bibb, 490. Mills v. Kuykendall, 2 Blackf. 47. Looney v. Pinckston, 1 Tennessee R. 384. Lawrence v. Dougherty and Gwin, 5 Yerger's R. 435. A note to be paid "in the office notes of a bank," is not negotiable by the usage or custom of merchants. Irvine v. Lowry, 14 Peters, 293. A note payable "in current bank notes," is not a negotiable note. Gray v. Donohue, 4 Watts, 400. But it has been held in Ohio, that a note promising to pay in current money, at a given time, a specific sum, unless the drawer takes "it out in store goods at the same rate," is a promissory note, importing in itself a consideration. Dugan v. Campbell, 1 Ohio R. 118. See also Byington v. Geddings, 2 Ohio R. 228.)

(B) (When a note is made payable to C., as agent of D., the legal title and interest in the note, is in C. Cocke v. Dickens, 4 Yerger's R. 29.)

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. ii. 292. [2]Id. xxiii. 246. [3]Id. xv. 319. [4]Id. xvii. 356.

*Where all the indorsements through which the plaintiff claims are special, they must all be alleged and proved by evidence of the hand-writing of the different indorsers, or of admissions on the part of the defendant (q).

Where the first, or any subsequent indorsement, is made in blank, the indorsee may claim immediately under that indorsement, although after the blank indorsement there be one or more special indorsements (r). Where, however, the intermediate indorsements are alleged in the declaration, they must all be proved (s), even although they were upon the bill at the time of acceptance (t). The hand-writing of the first indorser must be proved, although he was the drawer (u), and although his name was on the bill at the time of acceptance (v); and therefore the indorsee of a bill payable to a fictitious payee cannot recover against the acceptor, unless he can prove that the acceptor knew that the payee was fictitious, or that the money found its way into his hands (x).

Proof that the indorsement is in the hand-writing of another person of the same name with the payee is not sufficient, for it is a forgery, and a title to the bill cannot be derived through the medium of forgery (y). Neither can an indorsee recover where it appears that the first indorsement (through which he must derive his title) was made upon an usurious consideration (z). But where the defendant accepted bills drawn in fictitious names, and it was shown that the hand-writing of the supposed drawer and *indorser were the same, it was held that such evidence was admissible, and that a party accepting, without inquiry as to the reality of the person drawing, must be considered as undertaking to pay to the signature of the person actually drawing the bills (a). *217 part had been indorsed and delivered unconditionally. Holdsworth v. Hunter,[1] 10 B. & C. 449. So if a bill be drawn and issued in blank as to the name of the payee, it may be filled up by a bona fide indorser with his own name. Cruchley v. Clarance, 2 M. & S. 90. Attwood v. Griffin,[2] 1 Ry. & M. 425. Edie v. East India Company, Burr. 1216. A party to whom the bill is indorsed, for the purpose of procuring payment, may sue, although he is indebted to the indorsee, although no authority be given to bring the action. Adams v. Oakes,[3] 6 C. & P. 70. Or the indorser may sue. Stovern v. Butt, 2 C. & M. 416. So an indorsee by way of gift may sue an acceptor for value. Heydon v. Thompson,[4] 3 N. & M. 319. No indorsement is admitted by the acceptance. Smith v. Chester, 1 T. R. 654. Although the indorsement was on the bill at the time of the acceptance. Bosanquet v. Anderson, 6 Esp. C. 43. Where a bill is drawn and indorsed by procuration, the acceptance admits only the drawing, not the procuration. Robinson v. Yarrow,[5] 7 Taunt. 455. See Hankey v. Wilson, infra, 219 (k); and see Bousanquet v. Anderson, 6 Esp. C. 43, where Lord Ellenborough held, that though a drawee accept a bill with many names upon it, they must be proved.

An indorsement by a trader after his bankruptcy is good, if he has re-

(q) See Sidford v. Chambers,[6] 1 Starkie's C. 326.

(r) 1 B. & P. 658; 4 Esp. C. 210; 1 Esp. C. 180. Smith v. Clarke, Peake, 225; Bay. O. B. 48. But the intermediate indorsements must either be proved or struck out, per Abbot, C. J. Cocks v. Borrodaile, Chitty, 302, 7th edit., citing the opinion of Bayley, J. The indorsements may be struck out after the bill has been put in evidence. Mayer v. Jadis, 1 Mo. & R. 247.

(s) 1 T. R. 654; Wayman v. Bend, 1 Camp. 175. Bosanquet v. Anderson, 6 Esp. C. 43.

(t) 1 T. R. 654; 6 Esp. 43. In Jones v. Radford, 1 Camp. 83, Lord Ellenborough is stated to have held, that an indorsement in such a case by one person, in the name of himself and a supposed partner, was evidence against the acceptor after the indorsement, to prove the partnership, which was disputed at the trial; this, however, cannot be supported without going the full length of contending that the acceptance operates as an admission of the regularity of the indorsement altogether. See Carvick v. Vickery, Doug. 653.

(u) Macferson v. Thoytes, Peake's C. 20; Doug. 650, 653.

(v) 6 Esp. C. 43; 1 T. R. 654; Doug. 630; Peake's C. 225; 3 T. R. 175, 176; 4 T. R. 28.

(x) 1 Camp. 130; 3 Bro. 238; Co. B. L. 184, 5; 1 H. B. 313, 569, 625; Cullen, 98; Gibson v. Minet and another, 3 T. R. 481; 2 H. B. 187, 211. The plaintiff in such case may declare as on a bill payable to the bearer (3 T. R. 481; 1 H. B. 569, 625; 2 H. B. 187, 211, 288, 298); or, semble, as on a bill payable to the order of the drawer, or on a count stating the special circumstances. Ibid.

(y) Mead v. Young, 4 T. R. 28, by three Justices, Ld. Kenyon, C. J. dissentiente.

(z) Lowes v. Mazzaredo,[7] 1 Starkie's C. 385. (a) Cooper v. Meyer,[8] 10 B. & C. 468.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxi. 110. [2]Id. xii. 176. [3]Id. xxv. 286. [4]Id. xxviii. 71. [5]Id. ii. 173. [6]Id. ii. 410. [7]Id. ii. 438. [8]Id. xxi. 116.

Indorsement by a bankrupt.

By an executor.

Trustee.

ceived value (b). An accommodation bill, payable to the order of the drawer, does not pass to the assignees, and therefore an indorsement for value after the bankruptcy will confer a right of action (c). Where the bill was payable to a person deceased, the plaintiff may derive a title to it by proof of an indorsement by his executor or administrator (d) (A). Where the bill is payable to B. or order, for the use of C., and B. indorses to D. for value, D. may recover on the bill, since B. had the legal interest, and C. but an equitable interest in the bill (e).

Proof of transfer.

Indorsement by a wife.

If the property in the bill vest in a feme sole, who marries, the plaintiff must prove an indorsement by the husband (f), even although the husband permit her to trade as a feme sole (g); but where she indorses in the name of the husband, the jury may, in some instances, presume, from the particular circumstances of the case, that she was the authorized agent of the husband (h); and where a note was made payable to Mrs. Carter, and she indorsed it in that name, and in an action by an indorsee against the maker, the latter proved that she was the wife of Cole, and it was proved that when the note was presented to the defendant for payment, he had promised to pay it, it was left to the jury to presume, that the wife had authority from the husband to indorse the note in the name by which she was known to the world (i). Where the wife, by her husband's authority, signed and indorsed the bill in her own name, it was held sufficient to pass the interest in the bill to the indorsee, a bonâ fide holder (k). It is no defence to an action against the acceptor, that an indorsement essential to the plaintiff's title was made by an infant (l) (1).

By an infant.

An admission by an indorser of his indorsement, is not, it seems, evidence against the acceptor (m).

*218 *An averment that the payee by his indorsement directed the amount of the bill to be paid to A. B., is satisfied by proof of an indorsement directing the payment to the order of A. B., for the payment to his order is in effect a payment to him (n); and, conversely, an indorsement directing (b) Smith v. Pickering, Peake's C. 50. Where the bill is drawn payable to the order of a third person for value received, it is no variance to allege that it was for value received of the drawer. Grant v. Da Costa, 3 M. & S. 351. Value received in leather for value delivered in leather is no variance. Jones v. Mars,[1] 2 Camp. 306. "Value received" in a note means value received from the payee. Clayton v. Goslin, 5 B. & C. 360. Qu. as to the indorsement of a bill by one partner after the bankruptcy of his co-partner. Ramsbottom v. Cator,[2] 1 Starkie's C. 228.

(c) 1 Camp. 46; 3 East, 321; 12 East, 656.

(d) 3 Wilson, 4. See tit. EXECUTOR.

(e) Evans v. Cranlington, Carth. 5. See 2 Vent. 307.

(f) Connor v. Martin, Str. 516; 3 Wils. 5; Miles v. Williams, 10 Mod. 243. And the husband may sue alone, without the wife's indorsement. M'Neilage v. Holloway, 1 B. & A. 218. But see Richards v. Richards,[3] 2 B. & Ad. 453. Where a promissory note is made payable to a married woman, the husband alone may indorse. Mason v. Morgan, 2 Ad. & Ell. 30.

(g) Barlow v. Bishop, 1 East, 432. (h) Ibid. Vide supra, tit. AGENT.

(i) Cotes v. Davis, 1 Camp. 485.

(k) Prestwich v. Marshall,[4] 7 Bing. 565; see Cotes v. Davis, 1 Camp. C. 485.

(l) Taylor v. Croker, 4 Esp. 187; Bayley, O. B. 58; 2 B. & C. 299. Although he was the payee of the bill (Jones v. Darch and others, 4 Price, 300). Note, in that case the defendant knew that the payee, who had indorsed the bill before acceptance, was an infant. See Williams v. Harrison, Carth. 140.

(m) Hemmings v. Robinson, Barnes, 436; Bay. O. B. 223. But see 2 Esp. C. 647, 8. The signature of a party may, it has been said, be proved by an admission which would be evidence against the party who made it. 2 T. R. 613: 1 Esp. C. 60; 4 Esp. C. 226, tamen qu.

(n) Smith v. M'Clure, 5 East, 476. Fisher v. Pomfret, 12 Mod. 125.

(A) (An executor or administrator may assign the negotiable notes or bonds of his testator or intestate without naming himself executor or administrator. Neil v. Newbern, 1 Mar. 133.)

(1) [An infant may indorse a negotiable note made payable to himself, so as to transfer the property therein to the indorsee, for a valuable consideration. Nightingale v. Withington, 15 Mass. Rep. 273.]

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xi. 252. [2]Id. ii. 367. [3]Id. xxii. 119. [4]Id. xx. 242.

the payment to be made to A. B. may be alleged as a direction to pay to A. B. or order (o), since that is the legal import of the indorsement.

A special indorsement of a bill contains in itself an absolute transfer of a bill (p); but an indorsement in blank is mere primâ facie evidence of transfer (q); and therefore if A. the payee of a bill, indorse it in blank, and B. get the bill accepted, A. may still maintain an action on the bill, for B. might act either as agent or assignee, and not having filled up the indorsement, and thereby made the bill payable to himself, it is to be presumed that he acted as agent (r). Special indorsement.

Where the bill or note is payable to the bearer, or has been indorsed in blank, possession is primâ facie evidence of delivery (s), and ownership (t) (A). Consequently where several sue as the indorsees of a bill indorsed in blank, they are not bound to prove either that they are partners, or that the bill has been indorsed to them jointly (u); but where a bill specially indorsed to K., was by his direction indorsed in blank, and delivered to L. & Co., it was held that two of the firm of L. & Co. could not conjointly with a stranger support an action as indorsees of the bill, without some proof of transfer by L. & Co. to the plaintiffs, either by indorsement or delivery (x). By delivery. Transfer.

Where an indorsee of a bill recovered against a prior indorser (also an indorsee of the bill), who then brought an action against the acceptor, he was nonsuited for want of a receipt for the money paid by him to the indorsee (y); but it would have been sufficient to show that he had paid the money.

*And an indorser who takes up the bill from a subsequent indorsee, is remitted to his former rights on the bill (z) (B). It has even been held *219

(o) Acheson v. Fountain, Str. 557. More v. Manning, Com. 311. Edie v. East India Company, 2 Burr. 1216. Bl. R. 295.

(p) Pothier Contrat du Change, Part I. c. 2, s. 23, 24.

(q) Smith v. Pickering, Peake's C. 50. Clarke v. Pigott, Salk. 126, 130.

(r) Clarke v. Pigott, Salk. 126. 12 Mod. 192.

(s) The property in bills is not transferred by mere indorsement, without delivery, which must be averred. R. v. Lambton and others, 5 Price, 442.

(t) Ord v. Portal, 3 Camp. 239. King v. Milsom, 2 Camp. 5. So if a bill be indorsed in blank to several, one of whom dies, and the rest sue. Attwood v. Rattenbury,[1] 6 Moore, 579. And see Rordasnz v. Leach,[2] 1 Starkie's C. 446. Machell v. Kinnear,[3] 1 Starkie's C. 449. But where the bill is specially indorsed to a firm, 3 Camp. 240. Or where the plaintiffs sue as assignees of a bankrupt, or in any other special capacity, they must prove an indorsement in that capacity. Bernasconi v. Duke of Argyle,[4] 3 C. & P. 29.

(u) Ord v. Portal, 3 Camp. 239.

(x) Machell v. Kinnear, 1 Starkie's C. 499.

(y) Mendez v. Carreroon, Ld. Raym. 742. But this was on proof of a custom amongst merchants to produce a receipt for the money so paid; and Ld. Holt held that it would have been sufficient to prove that he had paid the money. In the above case (the record has been consulted) the plaintiff did not declare on the bill as indorsee, but specially alleged his payment of the money to the subsequent indorsee, on the default of the acceptor. Where, however, an indorser has been compelled by a subsequent indorsee to take up the bill, he may still sue as indorsee of the bill against the prior parties. See Death v. Serwonters, 1 Lut. 836; and the observations of Lawrence, J. in Cowley v. Dunlap, 7 T. R. 571, who considered the point as settled by the case of Death v. Serwonters, that the right to sue as indorser was not lost by indorsement, and that an indorser, on taking up the bill, was remitted to his former right to sue on the bill; and therefore that if A. indorsed to B., and B. to C., and C. to D., who returned the bill to C., the latter might recover as indorsee of the bill. And see Callow v. Lawrence, 3 M. & S. 97, and the case of Pownall v. Ferrand, infra, note (a). Where three persons, not partners in trade, had separately indorsed the bill for the accommodation of the drawer, and, on its being dishonoured, had paid in equal portions the amount to a party who had discounted it subsequently to their indorsements; held, that they might strike out their indorsements, and proceed jointly as possessors of the bill against a previous indorser. Low v. Copestake,[5] 3 Carr. & P. C. 300.

(z) Supra, note (y).

(A) (And in Louisiana a promissory note payable to order may be transferred without indorsement, and the transfer may be proved by parol evidence. Hughes v. Harrison and wife, 2 Louis. R. 92. So the assignment of promissory notes in Indiana is not governed by the law of merchants. Bullitt v. Scribner, 1 Blackf. 14.)

(B) (Possession of a bill or note in the hands of a party to it, is prima facie evidence of his title to it,

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. xvii. 61. [2] Id. ii. 463. [3] Id. ii. 484. [4] Id. xiv. 195. [5] Id. xiv. 316.

that an intermediate indorser who, on actions brought by a subsequent indorsee against himself, and also against the acceptor, pays part of the amount to such indorsee, may recover that sum against the acceptor as money paid to his use (a).

So if a party take up a bill for the honour of an indorser, he is entitled to sue all the previous parties on the bill (b).

Where a note was given by A. to B. to secure a debt, and was assigned by B. to C. with directions not to negotiate it, as he should want it for the purpose of settling with A.; it was held that C. could not, after a settlement between A. and B., and without a redelivery of the note, maintain an action against A. (c).

Where the bill or note is payable to A. and B., who are not partners, the indorsement of both must be proved (d).

By partners. An indorsement by one of several partners in the partnership name will be sufficient, if the partnership be proved, for an authority may be implied (e). So if one partner transfer in the name which he as managing partner has occasionally used for the purposes of the firm, although no privity on the part of his partners be proved, and although the firm whose name is thus used no longer exists (f).

Where the plaintiff claimed through the indorsement of E. S. the payee of the bill, and proved, that a person calling himself E. S. came to Cadiz, having the bill in his possession, and also a letter of introduction, proved to be genuine, which purported to be given to a person introduced to the writer as E. S., and also another bill of exchange drawn by the writer; and also, that that person resided at Cadiz ten days, during which time he visited the plaintiff, and indorsed the bill to him, and received a letter of credit from him, it was held that this was evidence of identity, sufficient to warrant a verdict for the plaintiff (g).

On the dissolution of a partnership, a power given to one of the partners to receive and pay debts, does not authorize him to indorse a bill in the name of the partnership (h). A partner becoming bankrupt cannot give a title by indorsement (i).

Evidence of an offer by the defendant to give another bill supersedes the proof of an indorsement (k).

*220 *4thly. Value. The holder of a bill indorsed in blank, or payable to (a) Pownall v. Ferrand,[1] 6 B. & C. 439.

(b) Mertens v. Winnington, 1 Esp. C. 113. He holds as an indorsee for value from the party for whom (not from whom) he takes the bill. Bayley on Bills, 146–8.

(c) 1 Bos. & Pull. 398.

(d) Carvick v. Vickery, Doug. 653; Bay. O. B. 55.

(e) Supra, 204.

(f) Williamson v. Johnson,[2] 1 B. & C. 147; 2 D. & R. 281.

(g) Bulkley v. Butler,[3] 2 B. & C. 434. See Mead v. Young, 4 T. R. 28.

(h) Kilgour v. Finlyson, 1 H. B. 155. See Lacy v. Woolcot,[4] 2 D. & R. 458.

(i) Thomason v. Frere, 10 East, 418. See Burt v. Moult, 1 C. & M. 525. Drayton v. Dale,[5] 2 B. & C. 293.

(k) Bosanquet v. Anderson, 6 Esp. C. 43; 1 T. R. 654; see Sidford v. Chambers,[6] 1 Starkie's C. 326. Where no proof was given of the hand-writing of one of the indorsers, but it appeared that the indorsement was on the bill when the defendant accepted it, and that he promised to pay it, Ryder, C. J., left the case to the jury, and the Court, after a verdict for the plaintiff, refused a new trial. Hankey v. Wilson, Say. 223; Bayley on Bills, 367. But where a bill was shown to the drawer, with the name of the payee indorsed upon it, and the drawer merely objected for want of consideration, it was held that it did not supersede the necessity of proving the indorser's hand-writing. Duncan v. Scott, 1 Camp. 101.

even after a special indorsement made by him, and without a re-indorsement or other evidence of any subsequent re-assignment. Dugan v. The United States, 3 Wheat. 172. Clark v. The United States, 2 Wheat. 27. Picquet v. Curtis, 1 Sumner, 479. Jacob Barker v. The United States, 1 Paine, 156. Lonsdale v. Brown, 3 Wash. C. C. R. 404. See also Zeigler v. Gray, 12 Serg. & R. 42. Weidner v. Schweigart, 9 Serg. & R. 385. Weakley v. Bell, 9 Watts, 273. Contra, Gorgerat v. M'Carty, 1 Yeates, 94; S. C. 2 Dall. 144.)

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. xiii. 230. [2] Id. viii. 44. [3] Id. ix. 133. [4] Id. xvi. 101. [5] Id. ix. 91. [6] Id. ii. 410.

bearer, is not prejudiced by a defect in the title without his knowledge, but he must in general, in such case, prove that he has given value for the bill; and therefore it is no defence to an action on a bill or note to prove that it was lost by the owner, or stolen from him, provided the plaintiff can show that he gave a valuable consideration for it (l) (1). So if the bill has been extorted by duress, the plaintiff must prove that he gave some value for it (m). So where the bill has been obtained from the drawer by fraud (n); and though value were given, the defendant may defeat the holder's claim by proof that he had notice of the defect (o). Proof of value.

It is, however, a question whether the plaintiff acted bonâ fide in taking the bill, and whether he acted with due and reasonable care and caution in doing so, where there are any circumstances sufficient to excite the suspicion of a prudent man (p) (A). And though he gave value, the plain-

(l) Miller v. Race, 1 Burr. 452. Lawson v. Weston, 4 Esp. 56. Grant v. Vaughan, 3 Burr. 1516; 1 Bl. R. 485; 2 Show. 235; 3 Salk. 126; Ld. Raym. 738. Peacock v. Rhodes, Doug. 611. Patterson v. Hardacre, 4 Taunt. 114. So bank-notes cannot be followed by the legal owners into the hands of bona fide holders for a valuable consideration without notice; and therefore where a trader, after bankruptcy and a commission, procured bank-notes in exchange for bills, and by these bank-notes, through an agent unknown to the defendants (bankers), redeemed a bill of exchange in their hands, it was held that the assignees could not recover. Lowndes v. Anderson, 13 East, 130. See also Solomons v. The Bank of England, 13 East, 135; and supra, tit. BANKRUPTCY.

(m) Duncan v. Scott, 1 Camp. 100.

(n) Rees v. Marquis of Headfort, 2 Camp. 574.

(o) See the cases above cited, note (l).

(p) Gill v. Cubitt,[1] 3 B. & C. 466. There a discount broker discounted a bill (stolen the night before) from a person whose features he knew, but whose name was unknown. Where a trader received from a stranger, in part-payment of goods, a bill which had been lost, the party paying it representing to the trader that he had been recommended to him by a customer of his, and directing the goods to be sent to a place not a regular booking-office; there was no evidence that the newspaper advertising the loss ever came under his view; the Judge left it to the jury to say whether the bill was received out of the ordinary course of business, and under circumstances which should have excited suspicion and inquiry; and they having found for the defendant, the acceptor, the Court, deeming it a case peculiarly for the consideration of a jury, refused a new trial. Slater v. West,[2] 3 C. & P. 325. And see Gill v. Cubitt, 1 C. & P. 163, 487.

(1) [If a Banker in a small market town change a 500*l.* Bank of England note for a stranger, without any further inquiry than merely asking his name, he is liable in trover to a party from whose possession such note had been unlawfully obtained; the question in such a case being, not whether there was an honest holdering on the part of the defendant, but whether, under the circumstances, there was a want of due caution. The plaintiff, however, must show, that he has done everything which in reason he ought. Snow et al. v. Peacock; Snow v. Leatham, 2 Carr. & Payne, 215, 314.]

(A) (Though the holder of a negotiable promissory note, which has been fraudulently assigned, may recover upon it against the maker or a prior indorser, if it was taken by such holder in the usual course of trade, and for a fair and valuable consideration without notice of the fraud; yet if it was taken without due caution, and under circumstances which ought to have excited the suspicion of a prudent and careful man, the maker or prior indorser may be let into his defence. Hall v. Hale, 8 Conn. R. 336. Bank of St. Albans v. Gilliland, 23 Wend. 311. Wheeler v. Guild, 20 Pick. 545. So on the other hand if a note is paid in full, at maturity, by a party liable thereon to a person having the legal title to the note in himself by indorsement, and the party paying has no notice of any defect in the title of such holder, the payment will be good. Wheeler v. Guild, supra. The indorsee of a negotiable promissory note negotiated after it is due, is considered as receiving dishonoured paper, and takes it subject to every infirmity, equity and defence, to which it was liable in the hands of the payee. Robinson v. Lyman, 10 Conn. R. 30. And a note payable on demand is not regarded as dishonoured within one month after its date. Ranger v. Cary, 1 Metcalf R. 369. But such a note dated Sept. 3, 1817, was held to be dishonoured paper on the 25th of May, 1818. Nevins v. Townsend, 6 Conn. R. 5. A dishonoured note is not however subject to a set off of debts due from the payee to the maker, having no connection with the subject matter of the note. Stedman and another v. Jillson and another, 10 Conn. R. 55. If the word renewal were written upon the margin of a note, indorsed for the accommodation of the maker, and intended solely for the renewal of another note in the bank, and that word remained upon it, when it was negotiated to the holder; or if such word had been partially erased, leaving such appearances as would, in the ordinary course of business, excite the suspicion of a careful and prudent man; in either case, a misapplication and fraudulent transfer may be shown as a defence. Hall v. Hale, 8 Conn. R. 336. In a recent case in the District Court of Philadelphia, it was held in conformity with the recent English cases, that nothing but gross negligence or mala fides would let in any defence as against a holder of a note negotiated to him for value before it was due. Parks v. M'Candless, Sept. 1841. An indorsee as against the maker of a note is not bound to show what consideration he gave for it, even after notice to do so, unless the defendant has given evidence tending to show facts which tiff cannot recover on a note, cheque or bill, which has been lost or stolen, if he take it after it has become due (q).

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. x. 154. [2] Id. xiv. 330.

Bankers who have given acceptances for a customer beyond the cash balance in their hands, hold all collateral securities for value (r), and may recover against an accommodation acceptor, although the customer who had previously deposited the bill with them had it in his hands when it became due, and had agreed to deliver it up for a valuable consideration, instead of which he redelivered it to the plaintiffs (s). So, although they had delivered it to the payee when it became due to procure payment, and it *221 *remained in his hands till his bankruptcy, and then passed into the hands of his assignees (t).

Effect of notice to prove value.

An acceptor could not, before the new rules, by mere notice to the plaintiff, and without throwing suspicion on his title, compel him to prove value (u) (1) (A). According to the practice of the Court of Common Pleas, the defendant was required to give notice of his intention to call upon the plaintiff to prove that he gave value for the bill (x). In the King's Bench it was not necessary to give such notice, although it was usual and proper to do so (y). Whether such notice had or had not been given (z), the plaintiff, it seems, was not bound to enter upon proof of consideration as part of his original case, or until suspicion had been cast upon his title, (q) Down v. Halling,[1] 4 B. & C. 330. A cheque on a banker, lost by accident, was paid to a shopkeeper for goods, in London, five days after the date; in an action by the owner against the shopkeeper, it was held, that it was for the jury to say whether the defendant had taken the cheque under circumstances which ought to have excited the suspicion of a prudent man; it was also held that the shopkeeper having taken the cheque five days after it was due, it was sufficient for the plaintiff to prove his property in the cheque without showing how he lost it. And see Egan v. Threlfall,[2] 5 D. & R. 326; Beckwith v. Corrall,[3] 3 Bing. 444.

(r) Bosanquet v. Dudman,[4] 1 Starkie's C. 1.

(s) Ibid.

(t) Bruce v. Hurley,[5] 1 Starkie's C. 23.

(u) Reynolds v. Chettle, 2 Camp. 596.

(x) Paterson v. Hardacre, 4 Taunt. 11.

(y) In an action by an indorsee against the acceptor of an accommodation bill, no notice to dispute the consideration is necessary. Mann v. Lent,[6] 1 Mo. & M. 240. Wyatt v. Campbell,[7] 1 Mo. & M. 80. Semble, in all cases of no consideration given, the holder must prove value. Ib. Sharpe v. Bailey, 8 B. & C. 44. In an action on a note which has been stolen, it is incumbent on the plaintiff to prove that he gave full value for it. De la Chaumette v. The Bank of England,[8] 9 B. & C. 208. Nor can he recover if he had notice of the fact before he paid value. Ib. And notice to a party who presents the note for payment, and to whom the note has been remitted by a foreign merchant for payment, is notice to the party, a foreign merchant, who remits it. Ib. S. being indebted to a firm in which he was partner, gave a note in the name of another firm, in which he was also a partner, in discharge of his individual debt; the payees indorsed it over, and the indorsees sued the parties who appeared to be makers; held that this note was made in fraud of S.'s partner in the second firm, and could not be enforced against him by the payees, and that at all events, under these circumstances of suspicion, the indorsee could not recover without proving that he took the note for value, though no notice had been given him to prove the consideration. Held also, Parke, J. dissentiente, that in all cases where, from defect of consideration, the original payee cannot recover on the note or bill, the indorsee, to maintain an action against the maker or acceptor, must prove consideration given by himself or prior indorsee, though he may have had no notice that such proof will be called for. Heath v. Sansom,[9] 2 B. & Ad. 291.

(z) A contrary course was adopted by Ld. Ellenborough (Delauney v. Mitchell,[10] 1 Starkie's C. 439); but the later practice appears to be more convenient, since it frequently happens that the defendant is unable to impeach the plaintiff's title, and then the proof of consideration becomes unnecessary.

---

ought to exonerate him from payment, except as against a bona fide holder for value. Jarden v. Davis, 5 Wharton, 338. Receiving a note for a precedent debt, is receiving it for value within the law merchant, if it be taken in satisfaction of such precedent debt, and the indebtedness be cancelled. Bank of St. Albans v. Gilliland, 23 Wend. Brush v. Scribner, 11 Conn. R. 388. So even when a note is taken as collateral security for a pre-existing debt, if there is a new and distinct consideration—as if time was given in consideration of obtaining the note as security for the debt, &c. Depeau v. Waddington, 6 Wharton, 220.)

(1) [An indorsement is prima facie evidence of having been made for full value, and it is incumbent on the other party to show it to be otherwise. Riddle v. Mandeville, 5 Cranch, 332.]

(A) (Bassett v. Dodgkin, 10 Bingh. 40, (25 Eng. Com. Law Reps. 21. See also Wylie v. Lewis, 7 Conn. R. 301.)

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. x. 347. [2]Id. xvi. 237. [3]Id. xiii. 44. [4]Id. ii. 267. [5]Id. ii. 278. [6]Id. xxii. 301. [7]Id. xxii. 257. [8]Id. xvii. 356. [9]Id. xxii. 78. [10]Id. ii. 462.

either upon cross-examination of his witnesses (a), or by proof on the part of the defendant (b). (A).

An indorsee cannot recover against the acceptor, costs incurred by him in an action on the bill against him, there being no privity of contract between them (c).

Secondly, where the liability is of a secondary and conditional nature, and is consequent upon the default of the maker of a note or acceptor of a bill, that is, where the action is brought. Secondary liability.

1st. By the payee against the drawer of a bill. 2dly. By an indorsee against the drawer or indorser of a bill, or against the indorser of a promissory note. Payee against the drawer.

*1st. By the payee against the drawer of a bill: Here the plaintiff must prove (d), 1st, The drawing of the bill. 2dly, Due presentment. 3dly The drawee's or acceptor's default. 4thly, Notice, or facts which excuse the want of notice, to the drawer; and in some cases, 5thly, A protest. *222

1st. The drawing of the bill is usually established by proof of the drawer's hand-writing, or by proof of the drawing in his name by an authorized agent. Where there are several drawers, it must be proved that they all signed the bill, or gave authority for the drawing of it in their joint names (e). Drawing of the bill.

2dly. Presentment (f). As the liability of the drawer or indorser is of a secondary nature only, for he undertakes to pay the amount upon the default of the maker or acceptor, it is necessary to aver and prove that due diligence has been used for the purpose of procuring payment from the maker or acceptor (g) (B), and here it is to be observed, that an allegation of due presentment, and a refusal to pay, will not be satisfied by evidence that the maker or acceptor could not be found when the note or bill was due (h). Proof of presentment.

(a) Where notice had been given to prove the consideration given for a note, and a witness had been cross-examined in order to disprove the consideration, it was held that the plaintiff was bound to give evidence of consideration as part of his case in chief, and that he could not give such evidence in reply. Whitlocke v. Underwood,[1] 3 D. & R. 356. Delauney v. Mitchell, 1 Starkie's C. 439.

(b) Reynolds v. Chettle, 2 Camp. 596. Paterson v. Hardacre, 4 Taunt. 114. Humbert v. Ruding, Chitty on Bills, 512. In an action by a third indorser against the acceptor, it is not sufficient for the defendant to show no value given as between the drawer and first indorsee, or upon the subsequent indorsements, without showing no value as between himself and the drawer. Whitaker v. Edwards,[2] 1 Ad. & Ell. 538. Notice to dispute had been given.

(c) Dawson v. Morgan,[3] 9 B. & C. 618. (d) As to the production of the bill, vide supra, 202.

(e) Vide supra, Proof of Acceptance, 203. Qu. whether one who draws a bill in the name of a firm, and of which he is not a member, without authority, is liable as drawer. Wilson v. Barthrop, 2 M. & W. 863.

(f) Where it is ambiguous on the face of an instrument whether it be a bill of exchange or promissory note, the payee may treat it as either, and presentment is unnecessary. Edis v. Bury,[4] 6 B. & C. 433. Gray v. Milner,[5] 8 Taunt. 739. Allen v. Mawson, 4 Camp. 115. Shuttleworth v. Stevens, 1 Camp. 407. Presentment for acceptance is not necessary except in cases of bills payable within a limited time after sight. Bayley on Bills, 182. But in case of presentment and dishonour, notice must be given. Goodall v. Dolly, 1 T. R. 712.

(g) 2 Burr. 677; 2 H. B. 565. (h) Leeson v. Pigott, cited Bayley O. B. 187.

(A) (The publication in a gazette by the maker of a note, of a defence to it, will not affect a holder with notice, though it be proved that such holder is a subscriber to the gazette, that it was regularly sent to him, and no complaints were made of its not being received. Beltzhoover v. Blackstock, 3 Watts, 20.

In order to throw on the holder of a note, the necessity of showing the consideration which he gave for such note, express notice must be given that he will be called upon at the trial to do so; notice by maker (the defendant) that no consideration had passed between him and the payee is not sufficient. Id. But in The People v. Niagara C. P. 12 Wend. 246, it was held, that a total failure of the consideration of a note may be given in evidence under the general issue without notice. See also Spalding v. Vandercoock, 2 Id. 431. Burton v. Stewart, 3 Id. 238. Reab v. M'Allister, 8 Id. 109.

(B) (Where bills payable at a particular time were enclosed by letter to the drawee, before they were due, and he advised his correspondent that they were not accepted, it was held a sufficient presentment and refusal to accept. Carmichael v. Bank of Pennsylvania, 4 Howard's R. 567.)

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. ix. 51. [2]Id. xxviii. 171. [3]Id. xvii. 457. [4]Id. xiii. 227. [5]Id. iv. 265.

Duly presented means presented according to the custom of merchants, which necessarily implies an exception in favour of those unavoidable accidents which must prevent the party from doing it within the regular time (i) (A).

For payment. A presentment may be either for acceptance or payment. Where the bill is payable at a certain date a presentment for payment must be proved to have been made on the last day of grace, whether the bill be an inland or foreign one (k).

Where the bill is dishonoured for nonpayment a previous acceptance, though alleged, need not be proved (l)

A bill payable at a banker's must be presented within the usual banking-hours (m); but where the bill is payable at the house of a private tradesman, the presentment need not be made within the banking-hours. In *223 such *case it has been held that a presentment at eight in the evening is Time of. not unseasonable (n); and a presentment at any time in the day or evening is sufficient, if an answer be given by an authorized person (o).

Where the bill is payable at sight, or within a certain time after, it must be presented within a reasonable time (p) (B).

No precise rule has been laid down defining the limits allowed for pre-

(i) Per Lord Ellenborough, Patience v. Townly, 2 Smith, 224.

(k) 4 T. R. 152. Tassel v. Lewis, Ld. Raymond, 743. Anderton v. Beck, 16 East, 248. Days of grace are not allowed where the bill is payable on demand (Chitty, 146). A cheque received on one day should be presented for payment on the next day. 2 Camp. 537. Where a bill was drawn at C., in Newfoundland, on the 12th August, in duplicate, from which place there was a daily post to St. John's, and a post-office packet from thence to England three times a week, and the voyage about 18 days, and the bill was not presented for acceptance until the 16th November, and was dishonoured when due, and the jury found a verdict for the defendant, the Court refused to disturb it. Straker v. Graham, 4 M. & W. 721.

(l) Either in an action against the drawee or an indorsee, for the fact is not essential to the defendant's legal liability. Tanner v. Bean,[1] 4 B. & C. 312. Contra, Jones v. Morgan, 2 Camp. 407.

(m) Parker v. Gordon, 7 East, 885. Elford v. Teed, 1 M. & S. 28. And it will not be inferred from the circumstance of the bill being presented by a notary, that it had before been duly presented within banking hours. Ibid.

(n) 2 Camp. 527. And see Triggs v. Newnham,[2] 1 C. & P. 631.

(o) Garnett v. Woodcock,[3] 1 Starkie's C. 475; 6 M. & S. 44. See also Henry v. Lee,[4] 2 Ch. 124; Whitaker v. Bank of England,[5] 1 C. M. & R. 744; 6 C. & P. 700.

(p) Muilman v. D'Eguino, 2 H. B. 565. And see Darbishire v. Parker, 6 East, 3; 2 H. B. 565. See Fry v. Hill,[6] 7 Taunt. 397. Semble, presentment on the fourth day in London, when drawn at the distance of twenty miles from London, is within a reasonable time. Ibid. And see Goupy v. Harden,[7] 7 Taunt. 159. It is not unreasonable to treat bills of this nature as not requiring immediate presentment, but as being retainable by the holders for the purpose of using them, within a moderate time (for indefinite delay cannot of course be allowed), as part of the circulating medium of the country. Shute v. Robins, M. & M. 133. The question in such case is, whether looking at the situation and interests of both drawer and holder, there has been any unreasonable delay on the part of the former in forwarding the bill for acceptance, or putting it into circulation. Mellish v. Rawdon,[8] 9 Bing. 416. In the case of Moule v. Brown,[9] 4 Bing. N. C. 267, it appeared that a cheque drawn by F. on a banker at Bath, was cashed for the defendant by a branch of the N. W. bank at Malmesbury, on Tuesday, March 28; the same day it was forwarded to the principal N. W. bank, at Melksham, twelve miles from Bath; on Friday the 21st it was presented at Bath, and dishonoured. The Court held, that the presentment was not in time to give the N. W. bank a claim against the defendant. Tindal, J. in delivering judgment, said, "The result of the cases from Richford v. Ridge, 2 Camp. 539, to Baddington v. Schleucher,[10] 4 B. & Ad. 752, is that the plaintiff receiving a cheque has till the following day to present it, where there are the ordinary means of doing so. Here the plaintiffs resided in a post-town, and if they had remitted the cheque to Bath by the next day's post, it would have been presented on Thursday: if there was any sufficient cause for not pursuing that course, it is on them to show it, but I think on the whole of the facts, they have been guilty of laches."

(A) (Where the maker of a note removes from the state where he resided at the time of making it, into another state, the holder is not bound to make a demand of the maker to charge the indorser. Gist v. Lybrand, 3 Ohio R. 319.)

(B) (Where a bill of exchange is made payable at no particular time, it is payable immediately; and to charge a drawer or indorser, it must be presented for payment in a reasonable time after the receipt of it. Taylor v. Young, 3 Watts, R. 339.)

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. x. 340. [2]Id. xi. 502. [3]Id. ii. 473. [4]Id. xviii. 273. [5]Id. xxv. 605. [6]Id. ii. 152. [7]Id. ii. 58. [8]Id. xxiii. 319. [9]Id. xxiii. 347. [10]Id. xxiv. 153.

sentment in such cases, the courts have cautiously avoided the fixing any certain time even in respect of an inland bill; and it has been said that no precise rule can be laid down upon the subject (q). The question of reasonable time in this, as in all other cases, appears to be a mixed question of law and of fact (r); but in the late case of Fry v. Hill, the court seem to have considered it to be a question for the jury (1). It has been held, however, that the plaintiff is not guilty of laches in sending a foreign bill, payable after sight, into circulation before acceptance (s), and in keeping it in circulation without acceptance, so long as the respective holders found convenient.

A cheque payable on demand need not be presented till the day after that on which it was given; it is sufficient to send it for presentment by the next day's post (t).

Where a bill is accepted payable at a particular place (u), the allegation Place of.
*and proof that the bill was presented at that place is sufficient, without *224 showing a presentment to the acceptor himself. For although the statute 1 & 2 G. 4, c. 77, has provided that the acceptor may be called on else-

(q) Per Eyre, C. J. Muilman v. D'Eguino, 2 H. B. 565; and per Heath, J. and Gibbs, C. J. Goupy v. Harden, 7 Taunt. 159.

(r) Darbishire v. Parker, 6 East, 3. See the rule, infra, p. 226.

(s) Goupy v. Harden, 7 Taunt. 159, in an action by the indorsee against the indorser; and in Muilman v. D'Eguino, 2 H. B. 565. Whitaker v. Bank of England, 1 C. M. & R. 744; 6 C. & P. 700.

(t) Fry v. Hill, 7 Taunt. 397; and see the rule Williams v. Smith, 2 B. & A. 497, and infra, p. 226.

(u) A note in the margin mentioning a place where payable, need not be averred in the declaration, nor need the bill be proved to have been presented there for payment, it being treated as a memorandum only, and not as part of the contract. Williams v. Waring,[1] 10 B. & C. 2. It is sufficient that the bill is presented at the place where it is made payable, notwithstanding the drawee may die before it becomes due, and his representatives may be ignorant of the existence of the bill. Philpot v. Bryant,[2] 3 C. & P. 244. A foreign bill upon being presented to the drawees at their place of residence at L., is refused acceptance; the defendants, the correspondents of the payees, who had indorsed it, accepted it in the terms, "accepted under protest for honour of L. & Co., and will be paid for their account if regularly protested and refused when due," held, that as under such special acceptance there could not be a refusal to pay unless there was a presentment and demand of payment, it was the duty of the plaintiffs to present it to the drawees on the day it became due, and at the place where they resided, no other being designated in the bill, and that it was properly protested for non-payment at L., the usage of merchants being excluded by the terms of the special acceptance. Mitchell v. Baring,[3] 10 B. & C. 4.

(1) [In Atwood v. Clark, 2 Greenleaf, 249, Mellen, C. J. says, "what is reasonable time, within which an act is to be performed, when a contract is silent on the subject, is a question of law." S. P. Ellis v. Paige, 1 Pick. 43. In cases of bills of exchange and notes, the reasonableness of demand and notice is now considered, in New Hampshire, as a mere question of law, though until recently it was otherwise. Haddock v. Murray, 1 N. Hamp. Rep. 140. When the facts are agreed on or proved, it is a question of law whether demand, notice, &c. are within a reasonable time. Furman v. Haskin, 2 Caines' Rep. 369. Bryden v. Bryden, 11 Johns. 188. Whitwell & al. v. Johnson, 17 Mass. Rep. 453. In Pennsylvania, it is said in several cases, that what constitutes reasonable notice is matter of fact for the jury to determine. Robertson v. Vogle, 1 Dallas, 255. Mallory v. Kirwan, 2 Dallas, 192. Warder v. Carson's Ex'ors, ibid. 129. 1 Yeates, 531. Ball v. Dennison, 4 Dallas, 165. Bank of North America v. Pettit, ibid. 233. In one case, however, M'Kean, C. J. says, what is reasonable notice, where the parties live in the same city, or near to each other, is now settled to be matter of law, though the strictness required in England has not obtained in Pennsylvania. Bank of North America v. M'Knight, 1 Yeates, 147.

In New Jersey, the question whether reasonableness of notice is to be decided by the court or by the jury seems not to be settled, Ferris v. Saxton, 1 Southard's Rep. 1. In Maryland, the court decide this question. Phillips v. M'Curdy, 1 Har. & J. 187.

The strict rule of the English law respecting non-payment of bills has not prevailed in North Carolina. What shall be reasonable notice depends on the local situation and respective occupations and pursuits of the parties—of which it seems the court are to judge. London v. Howard, 2 Hayw. 332. Austin v. Rodman, 1 Hawks, 195.

In Kentucky, reasonable diligence in giving notice, &c. is matter of law to be decided by the court. Dodge v. Bank of Kentucky, 2 Marsh. 616. Noble v. Bank of Kentucky, 3 Marsh. 264.

See Taylor v. Bryden, 8 Johns. 173 ,and Field v. Nickerson, 13 Mass. Rep. 131, where the question of reasonable notice seems to have been considered as a mixed question of law and fact.]

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxi. 11.‡ [2]Id. xiv. 288. [3]Id. xvi. 12.

where, notwithstanding the limitation in his acceptance, yet it is not compulsory on the holder to go elsewhere (x).

If the presentment be at the place mentioned in the acceptance, proof of the acceptor's hand-writing is essential, otherwise it would not appear that the place mentioned in the acceptance was appointed by him (y).

If a holder of a bill payable after sight keep it without either presenting it or putting it into circulation, he is guilty of laches, and cannot recover (z).

Present-ment, where.

Proof of presentment of a bill to a banker's clerk at the clearing-house, is sufficient (a). If the bill has been accepted by the agent of the drawee, who is abroad, it must be presented to that agent for payment (b).

Where the acceptor is dead, presentment must be made to his executor or administrator, and if there be none, at the house of the deceased (c) (A). If the bill be payable at a particular place it is not necessary to present it to the executor (d).

If a note be made payable at a particular house, a demand of payment at that house is a demand on the maker (e). Where a note was made payable at the house of C., who was the banker of A., and in the course of business was indorsed to C., it was held that it was unnecessary to make any demand upon the maker (f). If the maker or acceptor be dead, the note or bill should be presented to his representative, if he lives within a reasonable distance (g).

Presentment at a banker's must be within banking-hours, in other cases must be at a reasonable hour; presentment between seven and eight in the evening is reasonable (h).

*225 *An allegation of the presentment of a bill to P. P. (the bill having been accepted by P. P., No. 6, Budge Row,) is proved by showing that the holder went to No. 6, Budge Row, and found it shut up, no one being there (i).

See the statute 6 & 7 W. 4, c. 58, as to a bill accepted supra protest for honour.

Proof of dishonour.

3dly. The default of the drawee or acceptor.—Where a bill is payable so many days after sight, the plaintiff must prove a presentment for ac-

(x) De Bergareche v. Pillin,[1] 3 Bing. 476. And see Hawkey v. Borwick,[2] 4 Bing. 135. Turner v. Hayden,[3] 4 B. & C. 2; Bayley on Bills, 178. Whether the house be mentioned in the bill or note, or in the margin, or in the acceptance only, that is the proper place of presentment. See Macintosh v. Hayden, My. & Mo. 362. Under an allegation that the bill was duly presented, without stating an acceptance, the plaintiff may prove a presentment at the place mentioned in the acceptance. Parks v. Edge, 1 C. & M. 429.

(y) Sedgwick v. Jager,[4] 5 C. & P. 199. (z) 2 H. B. 565.

(a) Reynolds v. Chettle, 2 Camp. 595. Harris v. Parker, 3 Tyr. 370.

(b) Phillips v. Astling and others, 2 Taunt. 206.

(c) Molloy, b. 2, c. 10, s. 34. Chitty on Bills, 317. (d) Philpott v. Briant,[5] 3 C. & P. 244.

(e) Saunderson v. Judge, 2 H. B. 509. Bowes v. Howe,[6] 5 Taunt. 30. Where the bill was taken to the house of which the drawer was described in the bill, and the party was informed by a woman in the passage that the drawer was gone, and it was shown by the defendant that the woman was a lodger, and that the drawer having quitted the premises, no one had heard of the message so communicated, it was held to be evidence from which the jury might infer that she was an inmate, and that the presentment was sufficient. Buxton v. Jones, 1 M. & G. 83.

(f) Saunderson v. Judge, 2 H. B. 509. In that case the note was made payable at the banker's merely by means of a memorandum indorsed at the foot; and the court were of opinion that the averment of a presentment according to that note was unnecessary.

(g) Bayley, O. B. 95.

(h) Wilkins v. Jadis,[7] 2 B. & Ad. 188; 2 M. & M. 141. Barclay v. Bayley, Camp. 527.

(i) Hine v. Allely,[8] 4 B. & Ad. 624.

(A) (Where the maker of the note having died on the day of maturity, the notary on calling at his domicil and being informed of his death, did not demand payment of his heirs or representatives, but protested the note for non-payment, and notified the indorser, held, that the circumstances did not excuse the want of demand and that the indorser was discharged. Toby v. Maurian, 7 Louis. R. 495.)

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xiii. 59. [2]Id. xiii. 376. [3]Id. x. 259. [4]Id. xxiv. 277. [5]Id. xiv. 288. [6]Id. i. 8. [7]Id. xxii. 57. [8]Id. xxiv. 127.

ceptance (k). But in other cases it is sufficient to prove a presentment for payment when the bill becomes due and a refusal to pay (l) (A); and if a previous acceptance be unnecessarily alleged, it need not be proved (m). It is sufficient to prove a presentment for acceptance, and a refusal to accept at any time before the bill becomes due, for upon the dishonour the drawer becomes liable (n) immediately. (1) (B). It is also sufficient to show that the drawee refused to accept according to the form of the bill; and evidence is inadmissible for the purpose of proving that the mode of payment proposed would have been equivalent to a payment according to the terms of the bill (o). The plaintiff must prove that the refusal came from the defendant; it is not sufficient therefore to produce a witness who went to the drawee's residence, and was there told by some one that the bill would not be honoured (p).

4thly. Notice to the drawer (q).—The general rule is that the plaintiff must prove that he has used due diligence in giving notice of the default; and whether due diligence has been used is usually a question of law, but dependent on facts, such as the situation of the parties, their places of abode, and the facility of communication (r). Notice—General rule.

(k) Chitty, O. B. 122.

(l) B. N. P. 269. Bright v. Purrier, 3 East, 483. Ballingalls v. Gloster, 3 East, 481. See Macarty v. Barrow, Str. 949.

(m) Tanner v. Bean,[1] 4 B. & C. 312; contra, Jones v. Morgan, 2 Camp. 474.

(n) B. N. P. 269. Bright v. Purrier, 3 East, 483. Ballingalls v. Gloster, 3 East, 481. See Macarty v. Barrow, Str. 949.

(o) Boehm v. Garcias, 1 Camp. C. 425.

(p) Cheek v. Roper, 5 Esp. C. 175.

(q) Dagglish v. Weatherby, 2 Bl. R. 747. Notice to the acceptor in an action against the drawer of a bill, payable at a particular place, is unnecessary. Edwards v. Dick,[3] 3 B. & A. 212.

(r) See Darbyshire v. Parker, 6 East, 3; 2 Camp. 602. Tindal v. Brown, 1 T. R. 167. But see Lord Kenyon's opinion in Hilton v. Shepherd, 6 East, 14. n.; and see the ordinary rule, infra, n. (a). By the st. 7 & 8 G. 4, c. 15, s. 1, where bills of exchange becoming due on the day preceding Good Friday or Christmas-day are dishonoured, notice thereof may be given on the day after such Good Friday, &c. sec. 2. Bills of exchange becoming due on fast or thanksgiving days, to be payable the day next preceding such fast or

(A) (Absence of the drawer from home, when called on for acceptance, is not a refusal to accept. Bank of Washington v. Triplett, 4 Peters, 35. A notice sent through the post office to the maker of a note, is not such a demand as the law requires, where his residence is supposed to be ascertained. Stuckert v. Anderson, 3 Whart. 116. In an action on a promissory note payable at a time and place certain, it is not necessary for the plaintiff to aver and prove a presentment at such time and place; and it is incumbent on the defendant to show by way of defence that he was ready to pay at such time and place. Payson v. Whitcomb, 15 Pick. R. 212. See, also, Granite Bank v. Ayres, 16 Pick. 392. Shaw v. Read, 12 Pick. 132. [Going with a note to the maker's place of business in business hours, to demand payment, and finding it shut, is tantamount to a personal demand. Shed v. Bret & Trustee, 1 Pick. 413. So if a notary go to the maker's house, and find it shut up, and that he is out of town, it is a sufficient demand. Ogden v. Cowley, 2 Johns. 274. But in North Carolina, it is held that in such case, "some endeavour must be used to find the maker." Sullivan v. Mitchell, 1 Car. Law Repts. 482.] If a notary testifies that it is his usual custom to send written notice of protest by post, on the evening of the day on which a bill is dishonoured, to the indorser or drawer, and believes he gave such notice to the indorser in the case in question, this is prima facie evidence to support the averment of due notice to the indorser. Miller v. Huckley, 5 Johns. 375. The notarial book of a deceased notary is evidence of the fact it states respecting protest notice, &c. Back v. Cooper, 1 Harring. 10.)

(1) [Sterry v. Robinson, 1 Day, 11. Watson & al. v. Loring & al. 3 Mass. Rep. 557. Lenox v. Cook, 8 Mass. Rep. 460. Mason v. Franklin, 3 Johns. 202. Weldon v. Buck, 4 Johns. 144. Taan v. Le Gaux, 1 Yeates, 204. Winthrop v. Pepoon, 1 Bay. 468, acc.]

(B) (An action cannot be brought on the third day of grace against a maker of a promissory note. Osborn v. Moncure, 3 Wend. 170. See, also, Church v. Clark, 21 Pick. 310. The Savings Bank of Newhaven v. Bates, 8 Conn. R. 505. But it has been held, that the acceptor of a bill of exchange for the accommodation of the drawer, may pay it on the last day of grace, before the commencement of business hours, and forthwith bring his action against the drawer to recover an indemnity. Whitwell v. Bingham, 19 Pick. 117. Suit may be brought against the indorser of a promissory note on the very day a note becomes due after demand and notice, for there is then a breach of contract. City Bank v. Cutter, 3 Pick. 418. Shed v. Brett, 1 Pick. 401. The maker of a promissory note is bound to pay it, upon demand made at any seasonable hour of the last day of grace, and may be sued on that day, if he fail to pay on such demand. Staples v. Franklin Bank, 1 Metcalf, R. 43.)

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xi. 340. [2]Id. vi. 403.

By whom. It is sufficient to prove that the defendant had due notice from any party to the bill (s) (1). If the drawer receive due notice from his own indorsee, he is liable to a subsequent indorsee, from whom he received no direct notice (t).

*226 *A bill indorsed in blank having been left at an attorney's office to be Proof of dishonour. presented by him, was on presentation dishonoured; a letter written by the attorney to the drawer was held to be a sufficient notice of dishonour, although he did not state on whose behalf he applied (u).

Upon the guarantee of the price of goods to be paid for by bill, it was held that notice of dishonour should be given both to the drawer and to the party who guaranteed the payment, unless both were bankrupts (x).

Notice should be given to all whom the holder means to sue (2); if he give notice only to an intermediate party, it will not be sufficient as to a prior party unless he has otherwise received due notice (y).

Time of. Notice of dishonour may be given immediately on the refusal to pay, without waiting to see whether the bill will be taken up in the course of the day (z). The general rule as to time, is, that if the parties live in the same town, notice shall be given the next day; if in different places, by the next day's post (a) (3). Where the holder received notice of the thanksgiving day, sec. 3. Good Friday, Christmas-day, as regards bills of exchange, to be treated as the Lord's Day. A party who receives notice on a Sunday, Good Friday, or Christmas-day, is in the same situation as if it had not reached him till the next day. Bray v. Hadwen, 5 M. & S. 68. A Jew is not obliged to forward a bill on the day of a grand religious festival. Lindo v. Unsworth, 2 Camp. 602. If notice be, in fact, given before action brought, although not at the proper time, yet proof of having used diligence will satisfy the allegation of notice having been given. Harris v. Richardson,[1] 4 C. & P. 522.

(s) 2 Camp. 177. Rosher v. Kieran, 4 Camp. 87. Shaw v. Croft, 2 Camp. 373. Wilson v. Swabey,[2] 1 Starkie's C. 34. Jamieson v. Swinton, 2 Camp. 373. Gunson v. Metz,[3] 1 B. & C. 193. Chapman v. Keane,[4] 3 Ad. & Ell. 606. But see ex parte Barclay, 7 Ves. jun. 598; and Tindal v. Brown, 1 T. R. 167. In that case time had been given to the maker of the note. A notice given by one not a party to the bill is insufficient. Stewart v. Kennett, 2 Camp. 177. [See Haslett v. Poultney, 1 Nott & McCord, 456. Bower v. Wooton, 2 Taylor, 70. Stafford v. Yates, 18 Johns. 327.]

(t) Shaw v. Croft, 2 Camp. 373.

(u) Woodthorpe v. Laws, 2 M. & W. 109. (x) 2 Taunt. 206.

(y) Bayley on Bills, 209. Notice to the drawer's attorney is not sufficient. Croft v. Smith, 1 M. & S. 554. Where the drawee is dead, notice is to be given to his executors or administrators. Where a bankrupt has left his house, notice should be left there, and with the messenger when he is in possession. Ex parte Johnson, 1 Mont. & Ayr. 622. Where an indorsee was abroad, but had a house in England, and the notice was sent to his house, and the bill was shown to his wife, it was held to be sufficient. Cromwell v. Hynrow, 2 Esp. C. 511. Honsego v. Cowne, 2 M. & W. 348.

(z) 3 Camp. 193. And see Wright v. Shawcross, 2 B. & A. 501.

(a) Williams v. Smith, 2 B. & A. 496, where it was held that notice of the dishonour of bills must be given, or presentment made, by the post on the day following that on which the party receives the bills, or notice of the dishonour; and the Court said, that if it were to be the next practicable post, difficult questions of fact would often be raised, and uncertainty would arise from peculiar local situations. Where, there-

(1) [Notice by the drawee who has refused to accept the bill, is not sufficient—he not being a party or chargeable in virtue of the bill. Stanton & al. v. Blossom & al. 14 Mass. Rep. 116. Notice or demand, however, may be given or made by a notary. Hartford Bank v. Stedman, 3 Conn. Rep. 489. Shed v. Brett, Pick. 401.]

(2) [So if the indorser of a note be dead at the time it becomes payable, and there are executors or administrators known to the holder, notice of non-payment must be given to them. Merchant's Bank v. Birch's Ex'ors, 17 Johns. 25. But where a note fell due on the 22d December, and the indorser died at sea on the 12th December, but his death was not known to the holder until March following, and the bill was not proved, nor letters testamentary granted until April; it was held that a notice of non-payment left, at the time, at the dwelling house of the indorser, his last place of residence in New York, and also sent to his family, who had, a short time before, removed into the country, was sufficient to support an action against the executors of the indorser, without showing notice to them of the non-payment, ibid. S. P. Stewart's v. Eden's Ex'ors, 2 Caines' Rep. 124. See Price v. Young, 1 Nott & McCord, 438. Hale v. Barr, 12 Mass. Rep. 86.]

(3) [Whitwell & al. v. Johnson, 17 Mass. Rep. 453. Shed v. Brett, 1 Pick. 401. Ireland v. Kip, 11 Johns. 231. Dodge v. Bank of Kentucky, 2 Marsh. 616. Robinson v. Ames, 20 Johns. 146, acc. See post. p. 269. note (1).]

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. xix. 506. [2] Id. ii. 283. [3] Id. viii. 58. [4] Id. xxx. 69.

dishonour on Sunday, notice by him by Tuesday's post was held to be sufficient (b). Where the dishonour was on Saturday at nine, the notice to the plaintiff on Monday, at Knightsbridge, by his banker, and notice by the plaintiff to *the indorsee in Tottenham-court-road on Tuesday, it was held to be sufficient (c). Notice by a letter put into the two-penny post-office after five o'clock in the afternoon of the day after that on which the party knew of the dishonour, was held to be insufficient (d); but where the letter in the usual course, would reach the defendant on the evening of the day following that on which the bill was dishonoured, it was held to be sufficient although the parties resided within a short distance of each other (e). Where notice was given to a Jewish indorser on the 8th, which was a great Jewish festival, it was held that it was not necessary for him to give notice by the general post till the 9th (f). Where the indorsee, living in Holborn, gave notice to the indorser, living at Islington, by nine the next night, it was held to be reasonable notice (g).

*227 Time of notice.

A bill was received by a traveller for the plaintiff, who transmitted it to his principal; the bill being dishonoured, the latter wrote to his traveller to inquire from whom he received it, and on receiving the requisite information gave notice to the defendants, and it was held to be sufficient (h).

An attorney who is employed to discover the residence of a party to a bill, has on discovery made, as in the case of a banker, a day to consult his employer, and it is sufficient if he forward the information to him on the succeeding day (i).

Where a bill is dishonoured abroad, notice by the first direct and regular mode of conveyance, whether it be an English or a foreign ship, is sufficient; the holder is not bound to send such notice by the accidental, though earlier, conveyance, of a foreign ship (k).

fore, country bank notes were received on Friday, and transmitted partly by the Saturday and partly by the Sunday's post, so that both were received in London on Monday, and were presented on Tuesday and dishonoured, the Court held that the holder had not been guilty of laches, although he had received the note several hours before the post went off on Friday. Ibid. And see Tindal v. Brown, 1 T. R. 167; Puckford v. Maxwell, 6 T. R. 52; and Wright v. Shawcross, 2 B. & A. 501. It has been doubted whether it is sufficient that the drawer should have had notice in as many days as there are intermediate indorsers between himself and the plaintiff. Lord Ellenborough ruled in the negative in Marsh v. Maxwell, 2 Camp. 210; and the same point was decided in Turner v. Leach,[1] 4 B. & A. 451. See M'Queen v. Farquhar, 11 Ves. 478; and infra, 234. Where there is a post on the day when the party receives notice, and none on the following day, it is sufficient to send notice on the third day. Geill v. Jeremy, M. & M. 61. Notice on the day on which the bill becomes due is not too soon. Burridge v. Manners, 3 Camp. 193. Unless the acceptor afterwards, and on the same day, pays the bill. Hartley v. Case, 1 C. & P. 556. A party receiving notice of dishonour need not give notice to the party above him till the next post after the day on which he himself receives the notice, although he might easily give it on that day, and there is no post on the day following. Geill v. Jeremy,[2] 1 M. & M. 61. A bill drawn by bankers in the country on their correspondents in town, payable after sight, is indorsed to the traveller of the plaintiffs on their account; he transmits it to them after an interval of a week, and they, two days afterwards, send it for acceptance, which is refused, the drawer having become a bankrupt; if the bill had been sent by the traveller to his employers on the receipt, they would have been able to have got it accepted before the bankruptcy. Held, that there was no laches in the traveller or his employers. Shute v. Robins,[3] 1 M. & M. 133.

An averment of notice is satisfied by proof of notice within a reasonable time, without stating the special circumstances which render earlier notice unnecessary. Firth v. Thrush,[4] 8 B. & C. 387. Sharp v. Bayley,[5] 9 B. & C. 44.

(b) Wright v. Shawcross, 2 B. & A. 501.

(c) Haynes v. Birks, 3 B. & P. 599.

(d) 3 Camp. 108; Bay. 125. Scott v. Lifford, 9 East, 347; and see Langdale v. Trimmer, 15 East, 291.

(e) Hilton v. Fairclough, 2 Camp. 633. (f) Ibid. 602.

(g) 2 Taunt. 224; and see Hilton v. Shepherd, 6 East, 14, n. Where there were five indorsers, A. B. C. D. E. all living near London, notice of dishonour on the same day to E., and on the next to D., was held to be sufficient.

(h) Baldwin v. Richardson,[6] 1 B. & C. 45. (i) Firth v. Thrush,[4] 8 B. & C. 387.

(k) Muilman v. D'Eguino, 2 H. B. 565.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. vi. 484. [2]Id. xxii. 249. [3]Id. xiv. 215. [4]Id. xv. 242. [5]Id. xvii. 329. [6]Id. viii. 66.

Manner of the notice. It is not necessary to prove a notice in writing (l) (A). It is sufficient to prove a reasonable endeavour to give notice, as by sending an agent to the drawer's country house, who used his endeavours to give the notice (m) (B).

By the post. To prove a notice, it is sufficient to show that a letter, announcing the dishonour, and directed to the defendant (n), was put into the proper post-office (o), or that such a letter was left at the defendant's house (p).

*228 *Notice by a letter put into the twopenny post, has been deemed to be sufficient, although the parties lived within a short distance of each other (q); but it should appear that the letter was put into the receiving-house in sufficient time to be delivered to the party, according to the course of the post, within the time of legal notice (r). And in the case of a foreign bill also, the delivery of a letter at the post-office has been held to be sufficient evidence of notice (s). Where there is no post, it is sufficient to prove that notice was sent by the ordinary mode of conveyance (t) (1).

Where a bill was indorsed in Jamaica by A., who remained there after the dishonour of the bill, but whose usual residence was in England, it was held that proof of notice of the dishonour left at his residence in England

(l) Cross v. Smith, 1 M. & S. 545. Housego v. Cowne, 2 M. & W. 348. Phillips v. Gould,[1] 8 C. & P. 355. Notice to the drawers by sending to their counting-house during the hours of business on two successive days, knocking there and making noise sufficient to be heard by persons within, and waiting there several minutes, the inner door being locked, is sufficient, without leaving notice in writing or sending by the post, although some of the drawers live at a small distance from the place. Woodthorpe v. Lomas, 2 M. & W. 109.

(m) As where such agent went to the drawer's counting-house on two successive days, during hours of business, knocked there, and made sufficient noise to be heard by persons within, and waited there several minutes, the inner door being locked. Cross v. Smith, 1 M. & S. 545.

(n) Notice to an indorser, addressed, 'Mr. Haynes, Bristol,' was held to be too general. Walter v. Haynes,[2] 1 R. & M. 149. It is otherwise in an action against the drawer of a bill dated generally. Where the bill was dated Manchester, Abbott, C. J. held that it was sufficient to direct a letter to the drawer, 'at Manchester,' generally. Mann v. Moors,[3] R. & M. 249. So where a party drew a bill, dating it generally London. Clarke v. Sharpe, 3 M. & W. 166.

(o) Pothier, 148; Bay. 119; 2 H. Bl. Scott v. Lifford, 9 East, 347; 1 Camp. 246. Saunderson v. Judge, 2 H. B. 509.

(p) 1 Esp. C. 5. [Smith v. Bank of Washington, 5 Serg. & Rawle, 322. Smedes v. Utica Bank, 20 Johns. 372.]

(q) Hilton v. Fairclough, 2 Camp. 633. Scott v. Lifford, 9 East, 347; 1 Camp. 246.

(r) Smith v. Mullett, 2 Camp. 208. Hilton v. Fairclough, 2 Camp. 633.

(s) 2 H. Bla. 509; 6 East, 3, 9; 7 East, 385; 3 Esp. C. 54.

(t) Bayley, O. B. 128.

(A) (Caylev v. Stevens, 4 Wend. 556.)

(B) (Where there is no dispute as to the facts, the Court must determine the question of diligence used to charge an indorser, and the sufficiency of the notice, and not submit these questions to the jury. Remer v. Downer, 23 Wend. 620. It is settled, that whether or not due diligence was used in making inquiry for the indorser is a mixed question of law and fact. The court are to give their opinion on the law to the jury according to the circumstances as they appear; but the jury must decide the fact whether there was due diligence or not. Stuckert v. Anderson, 3 Whart. 116. Verbal notice of the non-payment of a note is sufficient. Rahm v. Philadelphia Bank, 1 Rawle, 335. It is not necessary that the notice, when sent by mail, should be addressed to the post-office nearest the residence of the party when there were several post-offices in the same town. Remer v. Downer, 23 Wend. R. 620. S. P. Gist v. Lybrand, 3 Ohio, 318. Notice of non-payment of a note, erroneous in amount, and directed on its face to a person other than the one sought to be charged as indorser, is not sufficient, although it be directed on its outside to the indorser of the note described in the declaration. Ibid. See further Davis v. Williams, Peck. 191. Barker v. Hall, Mart. & Yerg. 183. Where a party to a bill of exchange is a transient person, having no known residence, notice of protest sent by the first mail to a place to which he very frequently resorts, is sufficient. And if he shows that another place is his usual resort, as his home, still if it appears, that if the notice had been sent there, he could not have received it sooner than he did, it must be deemed sufficient. M'Lain v. Waters, 9 Dana, 55.)

(1) [In the Bank of Logan v. Butler, 3 Littell's Rep. 498, the court in Kentucky held that where an indorser lived in the country and not on a post-road, a special messenger ought to be employed, or other means used to convey the notice with the same despatch and certainty as it would go between places where there are post-offices. See post, 259.]

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxxiv. 425. [2]Id. xxi. 402. [3]Id. xxi. 429.

was sufficient (u). Proof that the letter containing notice was delivered to the person in whose house the defendant lodged, for the defendant, and was next morning thrown into the plaintiff's house, was held to be presumptive evidence of notice (x). It is insufficient to prove that notice was given on one of two days, where the notice on the latter day would not be in time; for the plaintiff is bound to show that he has given proper notice (y). It seems to have been doubted whether parol evidence of the contents of the letter announcing the dishonour be admissible, unless notice to produce the letter be first proved (z) (1). It has since been held, upon a conference of all the Judges, that it is unnecessary to give such notice (a).

Where a notice sent to the drawer of a bill arrives too late in consequence of misdirection, it is a question for the jury whether the holder has used due diligence (b).

Contents of notice.

A notice is good although it be accompanied by an intimation that the holders had reason to believe that a friend of the acceptor's would take up the bill in a few days, and that they would hold the bill (to save expense), till the end of the week, unless they heard from the drawers to the contrary (c). No particular form of notice is requisite; the object in giving *notice is to apprise the party that the holder intends to require payment from him, and to enable him to pursue his remedy against any other party who may in turn be liable to him (d). *229 (u) 2 Esp. C. 561. [S. P. Fisher v. Evans, 5 Binney, 542.] (x) Stedman v. Gooch, 1 Esp. C. 3.

(y) Per Ld. Ellenborough, C. J. in Lawson v, Sherwood,[1] 1 Starkie's C. 314. Where it was proved that duplicate notices had been written, and that a letter had been sent to the drawer the same day, and that notice had been given to the defendant to produce this letter, it was held to be evidence of notice of dishonour. (Ibid. And afterwards by the court of K. B.) But in Hetherington v. Kemp, (4 Camp. 193), it is said to have been held, that it is not sufficient to show that notice was written by a merchant in his counting-house, and laid upon his table, from which, in the course of business, all letters would be carried to the post-office.

(z) In Langdon v. Hulls, 3 Esp. C. 157. Shaw v. Markham, Peake's C. 165, such proof was held to be necessary. In Ackland v. Pearce, 2 Camp. 601, Le Blanc, J. admitted secondary evidence without proof of notice. It is sufficient to prove a duplicate of the notice (Philipson v. Chase, 2 Camp. 110; Roberts v. Bradshaw,[2] 1 Starkie's C. 28; S. P. King v. Beaumont,[3] 3 B. & B. 228). Where the plaintiff's clerk stated that a letter containing the notice was sent by the post on a Thursday morning, but had no recollection whether it was put in by himself or another clerk, it was held to be insufficient. Hawkes v. Salter,[4] 4 Bing. 715.

(a) Swain v. Lewis, 2 C. M. & R. 263. And notice to produce such notice is unnecessary. Ib. But notice is necessary to warrant the reading of letters, to prove the dishonour of bills, other than those on which the action is brought. Lanauze v. Palmer,[5] M. & M. 31.

(b) Siggers v. Brown, 1 Mo. & R. 520. Where the delay arose from the bill having been sent to a wrong person, and the mistake arose from the indistinctness of the drawer's writing on the bill, it was held that he was not discharged. Howitt v. Thompson, 1 Mo. & R. 548.

(c) Forster v. Jourdison, 16 East, 105.

(d) Tindal v. Brown, 1 T. R. 170. The notice, however, must be such as to show what the bill is, and that payment has been refused. A letter containing merely a demand of payment, without even stating that the bill was ever accepted, is insufficient. And see Margeson v. Coble,[6] 2 Chitty's R. 365. Hartley v. Case,[7] 4 B. & C. 339; 6 D. & R. 505; where notice was given on the day when the bill became payable, but did not explicitly state the fact of dishonour, the answer being "no effects, but that they probably should have them in the course of the day," the notice was held to be insufficient. Hartley v. Case,[7] 1 C. & P. 555. Although a notice of dishonour does not require all the formality of a protest, yet it must in express terms, or by necessary implication, inform the party that the bill has in fact been dishonoured: where the notice to an indorsee was contained in a letter from the attornies of the holder, stating only that the bill bearing the indorsement of the defendant had been put into their hands, with directions to take legal measures unless immediately paid; it was held not to amount to a notice of dishonour. Solarte v. Palmer,[8] 7 Bing. 530. A

(1) [In Lindenberger & al. v. Beall, 6 Wheat. 104, it was held, that evidence of a letter having been put into the post-office, giving notice of the dishonour of a bill, might be given to the jury, without giving notice to the defendant to produce the letter.] {The contents of a written notice to an indorser of a promissory note may be proved by parol, without giving notice to produce such writing. Eagle Bank, &c. v. Chapin, 3 Pick. Rep. 180.}

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. ii. 405. [2] Id. ii. 281. [3] Id. vii. 423. [4] Id. xv. 125. [5] Id. xxii. 239. [6] Id. xviii. 368. [7] Id. x. 350. [8] Id. xx. 226.

Where the bill has been drawn by several, who are partners, a notice to one is a notice to all (e).

Facts in excuse (A.) The plaintiff, in excuse of his laches in not giving notice, may prove (f) that the drawer had no effects in the hands of the acceptor to answer the bill, either at the time of drawing, or when the bill became due (g); for the note from the holder's attorney, "A bill for 50*l*., drawn on and bearing your indorsement, has been put into our hands by A. B., with directions to take legal measures for the recovery thereof unless immediately paid," is insufficient. Salarte v. Palmer,[1] 7 Bing. 530; 1 Bing. N. C. 194; 2 Clark & F. 93. So where the notice was that the bill in question had been returned unpaid, coupled with a demand of payment. Boulton v. Welsh,[2] 3 Bing. N. C. 688. But in the case of Grugeon v. Smith, where the notice was, "Your bill, due this day, has been returned with charges, to which we request your immediate attention," Patterson, J. and afterwards the court above, held the notice to be sufficient. And this case was afterwards approved of in that of Hedger v. Stevenson, 2 M. & W. 799. In the latter case the notice in substance was, that the promissory note indorsed by the defendant had been returned unpaid, and requesting a remittance. In Phillips v. Gould,[3] 8 C. & P. 355, a notice that the bill "in question, indorsed by you (the defendant), lies at my office due and unpaid," was held to be insufficient. Notice of dishonour in a letter in the terms, "S. & Co. inform P. (the defendant) that B.'s acceptance, 100*l*. is not paid; as indorsee, P. is called upon to pay the money, which will be expected immediately," is insufficient. Strange v. Price, 2 Perr. & D. 278, and 10 Ad. & Ell. 125; supporting Solarte v. Palmer,[4] 1 Bing. N. C. 194. Although it need not be expressly stated, it ought to appear by necessary inference that the bill is due. Where the notice was in the terms, "D.'s acceptance for 100*l*., drawn and indorsed by you, has been presented and returned, and now remains unpaid," was held to be sufficient. Cook v. French, 10 Ad. & Ell. 131. A letter to the defendant, the indorser of a bill, dated ——, in the terms, "Sir, the bill for 100*l*., drawn by R. and accepted by S., and bearing your indorsement, has been presented to the acceptor for payment and returned dishonoured, and now lies overdue and unpaid by me, as above, of which I hereby give you notice," was held sufficient notice of dishonour, as conveying all the requisite information. Lewis v. Gompertz, 6 M. & W. 399. And see Hedger v. Steavenson, 2 M. & W. 799. A letter in the terms, "This is to inform you that the bill I took of you, 100*l*., is not took up, and 4*s*. 6*d*. expense, and the money I must pay immediately," was held to be an insufficient notice of dishonour. Messenger v. Southey, 1 Man. & Gr. 76; 1 Sc. N. S. 180. [Reedy v. Seixas, 2 Johns. Cas. 337.]

(e) Porthouse v. Parker, 1 Camp. 82, (1.)

(f) But the excuse for not giving due notice must appear on the face of the declaration; still, if the parties be in privity, as where an action is brought by the payee of a bill against the drawer, the plaintiff may recover on the account stated. Per Abbott, L. C. J. Guildh. Sitt. after M. T. 1826. Where there is express averment of notice of dishonour, proof of mere knowledge is insufficient, and if there be facts amounting to a waiver they should be set forth; held also, that a statement that in case of certain events, the party would pay part of the money on the bills the day they fell due, was not an admission of a present debt sufficient to support the count on an account stated. Burgh v. Legge, 5 Mees. & W. 418; and 7 Dowl. 814.

(g) If the drawer of a bill have no effects in the hands of the drawee at the time of drawing the bill and of its maturity, and have no reason to expect that it will be paid, it is not necessary to present the bill at maturity; and the drawer will be liable, although the bill be not presented till two days after, and is then refused. For P. C. the same reason applies to want of presentment as to want of dishonour, and therefore the same rule ought to prevail with regard to want of effects operating as an excuse. Terry v. Parke,[5] 6 Ad. & Ell. 502; and see Bickerdike v. Bollman, 1 T. R. 405. Rogers v. Stephens, 2 T. R. 713. Clegg v. Cotton, 1 Bos. & Pull. 652; 3 Bos. & Pull. 239, 242. Per Chambre, J. in Clegg v. Cotton, the ground of this rule is the fraud of the drawer. Calridge v. Dalton, 4 M. & S. 226. But where it was clear that the drawee lent his name in the expectation that a third party, who was indebted to him, would provide funds for the payment of the bill when due; held that he was entitled to notice. Lafitte v. Slater,[6] 6 Bing.

(A) (The use of due diligence, in order to give notice to a long absent drawer, who has no known agent to receive it, will charge him. Blakely v. Grant, 6 Mass. 386. The stoppage of all business in a city during a pestilence. Junno v. Lague, 2 John. C. 1. So a state of war. Hopkirk v. Page, 2 Brock. 20; but in that case notice must be given within a reasonable time after peace. Ibid. If the drawer had no effects in the hands of the drawee, at the date of the bill, and no reasonable ground to expect it would be honoured, he is chargeable without notice. Hopkirk v. Page, 2 Brock. 20. Warder v. Tucker, 7 Mass. R. 452. Savage v. Merle, 5 Pick. 88. Read v. Wilkinson, 2 Wash. C. C. R. 514. Hoffman v. Smith, 1 Caines, 157. But an indorser must always receive notice, unless he has been placed in funds by the drawer to take up the bill. Barton v. Baker, 1 Serg. & R. 334. Scarborough v. Price, 1 Bay. 178. Denniston v. Imbrie, 3 Wash. C. C. R. 401. Ramdulolday v. Darieux, 4 Wash. C. C. R. 61. And even the drawer is entitled to notice of the dishonour of a bill, if he had reasonable ground to believe it would be honoured, though he had no funds in the drawee's hands. Austin v. Rodman, 1 Hawks, 195. Stanton v. Blossum, 14 Mass. R. 116. French's Ex'ors v. Bank of Columbia, 4 Cranch, 141. Robinson v. Ames, 20 John. R. 146. Grosvenor v. Stone, 8 Pick. 83. The burden of proof is, however, on the holder of a bill, to show that the drawer had no funds in the drawee's hands. Thompson v. Stewart, 3 Conn. 172. Ralston v. Bullits, 3 Bibb, 261.)

(1) [Dodge v. Bank of Kentucky, 2 Marsh. 616. Sed vide Shepherd v. Hawley, 1 Conn. Rep. 367.]

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. xx. 226. [2] Id. xxxii. 283. [3] Id. xxxiv. 425. [4] Id. xxvii. 351. [5] Id. xxxiii. 129. [6] Id. xix. 181.

*drawer was guilty of fraud in drawing on one who had no effects to answer the call (h); and an acceptor is competent to prove the fact (i); and a protest is unnecessary to charge the drawer of a foreign bill where the drawee had no effects of the drawer in his hands, although the drawer entertained reasonable expectations that the bill would be accepted (k)(1).

Deeds deposited by the drawer in the hands of the drawee, for the purpose of raising money, are not effects, it seems, for this purpose (l).

Absence from home on account of the dangerous illness of the party's wife has been held to be no excuse for not giving notice (m).

An acknowledgement by the drawer that the bill would come back to him, has been held to supersede the necessity of notice (n) (2).

Where the plaintiff received a bill in payment of goods which turned out worth nothing for want of a sufficient stamp, and was never paid, it was held that the defendant from whom he received it was not entitled to any notice of dishonour (o).

A declaration by the drawee when the bill is presented, as to the want of effects of the drawer in his hands, is evidence of the fact, because he is for that purpose the agent of the drawer; but a subsequent declaration is not admissible (p). The plaintiff may also show, in excuse for want of 623. The Court considering the case of Bickerdike v. Bollman, 1 T. R. 405, as an excepted case, and not to be extended. See also Rucker v. Hillier, 16 East, 45. Where the drawer made a bill payable at his own house, held that it was properly left to the jury as evidence of its being an accommodation-bill, and rendering notice of dishonour unnecessary. Sharp v. Bailey,[1] 9 B. & C. 44.

(h) See Spooner v. Gardiner,[2] 1 R. & M. 84.

(i) 1 Esp. R. 332. Walwyn v. St. Quintin, 2 Esp. R. 515; Peake's L. Ev.

(k) 2 Camp. 310. Legge v. Thorpe, 12 East, 171, 177.

(l) Walwyn v. St. Quintin, 1 B. & P. 651; and see Legge v. Thorpe, 12 East, 171.

(m) Turner v. Leach, Chitty, O. B. 212, 7th Ed. cor. Ld. Ellenborough, C. J.; but see Hilton v. Shepherd, 6 East, 15.

(n) Brett v. Levett, 13 East, 213; but qu. (o) Cundy v. Marriott,[3] 1 B. & Ad. 696.

(p) Prideaux v. Collier,[4] 2 Starkie's C. 57. Pickin v. Graham, 1 C. & M. 725.

(1) [Notice is not necessary when the drawee has no effects of the drawer. Bond & al. v. Fornham, 5 Mass. Rep. 170. Hoffman v. Smith, 1 Caine's Rep. 157. Baker v. Gallagher, Circuit Court, Oct. 1806. Wharton's Digest, 87. Anon. v. Stanton, 1 Hayw. 271. But it lies in the holder of a bill to prove that the drawer had no funds in the hands of the drawee, in order to excuse the want of notice. Baxter v. Graves, 2 Marsh. 152.

The drawer of a bill is entitled to notice of its dishonour, though the drawee is not indebted to him, either when the bill was drawn or fell due, if he had reasonable ground to believe that it would be honoured—and a written authority from the drawee to the drawer for the latter to draw is sufficient ground. Austin v. Rodman, 1 Hawks, 194. S. P. Robinson v. Ames, 20 Johns. 146.

If the drawer withdraw his funds from the drawee's hands, after the bill is drawn, he is still entitled to notice of the dishonour of the bill. Edwards v. Moses, 2 Nott & M'Cord, 433. So if his effects are attached by a trustee process before the bill is presented. Stanton & al. v. Blossom & al. 14 Mass. Rep. 116. See Sutcliffe v. M'Dowell, 2 Nott & M'Cord, 251. Lilly v. Miller, ibid. 257, n.

Insolvency of a party to a bill does not excuse the holder from giving notice of its dishonour. May v. Coffin, 4 Mass. Rep. 341. Bond & al. v. Farnham, 5 ib. 170. Lenox v. Leverett, 10 ib. 1. Sullivan v. Mitchell, 1 Car. Law Repos. 482. Edwards v. Thayer, 2 Bay, 217. Buck v. Cotton, 2 Conn. Rep. 126.

Where before a note became due, the indorser informed the holder that the maker had absconded, and requested a further time of payment, it was held that a demand on the maker or notice to the indorser was unnecessary. Leffingwell v. White, 1 John. Cas. 99. If the maker has absconded, and is not to be found when the note falls due, a demand of payment is not necessary to charge the indorser. Duncan v. M'Cullough, 4 Serg. & Rawle, 480.

Where the drawer of a bill is partner of the house or firm, on whom it is drawn, it is not necessary for the holder to prove that notice of its dishonour was given to the drawer. Gowan v. Jackson, 20 Johns. 176. But in Connecticut, where a note was drawn by one partnership and indorsed by another, the acting partner in both being the same person, it was held that this did not excuse the want of due demand and notice. Dwight v. Scovill, 2 Conn. Rep. 664.]

(2) [The prevalence of a malignant fever in the place of the parties' residence was admitted to be a sufficient excuse for not giving notice until November of a protest for non-payment, made in September. Tunno v. Lague, 2 Johns. Cas. 1.]

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xvii. 329. [2]Id. xxi. 386. [3]Id. xx. 474. [4]Id. iii. 242.

notice, that he was ignorant of the drawer's place of abode, and that he has used due diligence to discover it (q).

Proof to excuse want of notice.

In the case of Phipson v. Kneller (r), the drawer, a few days before the bill became due, stated to the holder that he had no regular place of residence, but that he would call and inquire whether the bill had been paid by the acceptor, and Ld. Ellenborough held that he was not entitled to notice of dishonour. Notice by the drawer to the drawee before the bill becomes due, not to pay it, dispenses with notice of dishonour, but not with the duty of presentment for payment (s). The plaintiff cannot go into general evidence to show that the defendant in the particular instance has suffered no prejudice from the want of notice, for this would lead to inquiries of too complicated and indefinite a nature (t). Where one of the *231 drawers is also *the acceptor of the bill, notice is unnecessary (u). But it is necessary where the party draws the bill with a bonâ fide reasonable expectation that he shall have assets in the hands of the drawee, having shipped goods on his own account, and which were on their way to the drawee, although the goods had not come to the hands of the drawee when the bill was presented for acceptance (x). So, where acceptances were made on the faith of consignments of goods which had not been received, on the ground of fair mercantile agreements (y), or where there are fluctuating accounts between the drawer and drawee (z); or where at the time of drawing a foreign bill, the drawee has effects of the drawer in his hands, although they are taken out before the bill becomes due (a); or where the drawee has effects of the drawer in his hands at any time whilst the bill is running (b).

Or where the bill is drawn in the fair and reasonable expectation, that in the ordinary course of mercantile transactions it will be accepted or paid (c). And in general, notice must be given in all cases where the drawer would have any remedy over against a third person (d).

It has been held, that notice is not dispensed with although the drawer and drawee have agreed that the former should take up the bill (e), or, although the drawer of a bill, destroyed by accident, refuse to give a new bill according to the statute (f); or although the drawee be a bankrupt or insolvent (g); or although the drawee has previously informed the drawer of his inability to pay, and has paid him money towards the taking up the (q) Phipson v. Kneller,[1] 1 Starkie's C. 116. (r) 1 Starkie's C. 116; 1 Camp. 285.

(s) Hill v. Heap,[2] 1 D. & R. 57. (N. P. C.) 57.
(t) Rogers v. Stephens, 2 T. R. 718. Dennis v. Morrice, 2 Esp. C. 158.
(u) 12 East, 317.
(x) Rucker v. Hillier, 16 East, 43. Claridge v. Dalton, 4 M. & S. 226.
(y) Per Eyre, C. J. 1 B. & P. 652.
(z) Semble, Blackhan v. Doren, 2 Camp. 503. Brown v. Maffey, 15 East, 221. And see Legge v. Thorpe, 12 East, 171.
(a) Orr and others v. Maginnis, 7 East, 359.
(b) Hammond v. Dufresne, 3 Camp. 145. Thackray v. Blackett, 3 Camp. 164. So if the drawer has effects in the hands of the drawee, although to less amount than the bill. Thackray v. Blackett, 3 Camp. 164. Or although the drawer is indebted to the drawee in a greater amount than those effects. Blackhan v. Doren, 2 Camp. 503.
(c) Claridge v. Dalton, 4 M. & S. 231. See France v. Lucy,[3] R. & M. 342.
(d) As where a bill is drawn for the accommodation of an indorsee. Cory v. Scott,[4] 3 B. & A. 623. Norton v. Pickering,[5] 8 B. & C. 610.
(e) 1 Esp. 333; 2 H. B. 607; 11 East, 114; 15 East, 216.
(f) 9 & 10 Will. 3, c. 17.
(g) Esdaile v. Sowerby, 11 East, 114. Bowes v. Howe,[6] 5 Taunt. 30; Thackray v. Blackett, 3 Camp. 164. Russell v. Langstaffe, Doug. 514. But see Brett v. Levett, 13 East, 213. Note, it was there held that an acknowledgement after his bankruptcy by the drawer, that the bill would be paid, superseded the proof of notice.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. ii. 321. [2]Id. xvi. 435. [3]Id. xxi. 452. [4]Id. v. 401. [5]Id. xv. 314. [6]Id. i. 8.

bill (h); or although the drawer had no effects in the hands of the acceptor, but has given acceptances still outstanding for the accommodation of the acceptor (i); or although the drawer become bankrupt and abscond before the bill becomes due, the house being still kept open by the assignee under the commission (k); or although the plaintiff be able to show that the drawer was not damnified by the want of notice (l); or although the party knew of the dishonour. But although mere knowledge is insufficient without notice, yet proof that the drawer of a bill knew two days after its maturity that it was unpaid in the hands of a particular indorsee, and that he objected to paying *it on the ground of its having been obtained by fraud, has been held to be evidence for the consideration of the jury of the defendant having received notice (m). *232

The necessity of proving due notice is superseded by evidence of part-payment, or other admission on the part of the defendant (with a knowledge of the facts), of his liability on the bill (n).

Where a substituted bill has been given and dishonoured, and the plaintiff sues on the first bill, it is sufficient to prove the dishonour of that bill, without proving notice of the dishonour of the substituted bill (o).

5thly. In the case of a foreign bill a protest is necessary (p) (A), for it is part of the custom of merchants (q) (1); the mere proof of noting the bill for non-acceptance, without a protest, is insufficient to charge the drawer (r). Where the drawer resides abroad, the notice of the non-acceptance should be accompanied by a copy, or some other memorial of the protest, for otherwise he cannot know of the protesting (s). But a copy of the protest Proof of protest.

(h) Baker v. Birch, 3 Camp. 107. But such sum may be recovered by the holder, as money had and received by the drawer to his use.

(i) Spooner v. Gardiner,[1] 1 R. & M. 84.

(k) Rohde v. Procter,[2] 4 B. & C. 517. It is insufficient to show that the chance of obtaining anything by way of remedy once was hopeless, that the persons against whom the remedy would apply were insolvent or bankrupt, or had absconded, for parties are entitled to have that chance offered them; the law, which is founded on the usage and custom of merchants, says they are discharged, Ibid; and see Cory v. Scott, 3 Bert. 619.

(l) Dennis v. Morris, 3 Esp. 158. But see Poth. p. 1, c. 5, n. 157.

(m) Wilkins v. Jadis, 1 Mo. & R. 41.

(n) Vide infra, 237. A letter written six days after the drawer should in due course have received notice of dishonour, containing ambiguous expressions respecting the non-payment of the bill, is evidence to go to a jury of regular notice. Booth v. Jacobs,[3] 3 Nev. & M. 351. A declaration by a defendant in reference to his defence, that the plaintiff had not sent the letter to him in time, is not evidence to go to a jury of notice of dishonour. Per Ld. Denman, Braithwaite v. Colman,[4] 4 Nev. & M. 654.

(o) Bishop v. Rowe, 3 M. & S. 362.

(p) Gale v. Walsh, 5 T. R. 239. But see Legge v. Thorpe, 12 East, 171; and see 7 East, 359, where notice was held to be unnecessary where it appeared that the drawer had no effects in the hands of the drawee at the time, nor any fluctuating balance of assets between them unascertained, which might have afforded probable ground of belief to the drawer that the bill would be honoured.

(q) 4 T. R. 174; 5 T. R. 239; B. N. P. 272; 6 Mod. 80; Salk. 134; 12 Mod. 345; Ld. Ray. 993. A bill protested for non-acceptance need not be protested for non-payment. See Price v. Dandell, Chitty, O. B. 309. De la Torre v. Barclay,[5] 1 Starkie's C. 7. But see Orr v. Maginnis, 7 East, 359. The noting of a bill is a proceeding unknown to the law as distinguished from the protest. 4 T. R. 170. The protest must be made on the last day of grace. 4 T. R. 174.

(r) 2 T. R. 713. The use of noting is, that it should be done on the day of the refusal, in order that a formal protest may afterwards be drawn. See Chaters v. Bell, 4 Esp. 48; Sel. 312.

(s) Goostrey v. Mead, B. N. P. 271. Bayley on Bills, 118. Cromwell v. Hynson, 2 Esp. C. 211.

(A) (The notarial certificate of protest is sufficient proof of the dishonour of a foreign bill. Nicholls v. Webb, 8 Wheat. 333. Bryden v. Taylor, 2 Har. & J. 399. But a protest by a huissier (an officer authorized by the French commercial code) to make protests is not evidence without proof of the code. Chanoine v. Fowler, 3 Wend. 173.)

(1) [As to bills drawn in the U. States and payable in a foreign country, the custom of merchants in the United States does not ordinarily require, in order to recover on a protest for non-payment, that a protest for non-acceptance should be produced, although the bills were not accepted. In Supreme Court of U. States, Brown v. Barry, 3 Dallas, 365. Clarke v. Russell, ibid. 415.]

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxi. 386. [2]Id. x. 397. [3]Id. xxviii. 401. [4]Id. xxx. 403. [5]Id. ii. 270.

is not necessary (t). But if he resides here, although at the time of the dishonour he be abroad, or if he has returned to this country previous to the dishonour of the bill, notice of dishonour is sufficient, for he can make inquiry as to the protest (u). Such protest should be made out by a notary public, if there be one in the neighbourhood, if not, by an inhabitant of the place where it is made, in the presence of two witnesses (x). The bill should be noted on the day of refusal, but the protest may be drawn up afterwards (1).

In the case of an inland bill, it is unnecessary to prove a protest (y) (A), except, perhaps, for the purpose of recovering special damages or costs, occasioned by the non-acceptance or non-payment (z). Such a protest cannot be made until after the bill has become due (a). The protest is proved *233 *by the mere production (b), and will be presumed from a subsequent part-payment of the bill, or promise to pay it, in the case of a foreign bill (c). The presentment of a foreign bill in this country must be proved, as in the case of an inland bill (d). The necessity of proving a protest is superseded by proof of an admission by the defendant of his liability (e).

(t) Goodman v. Harvey,[1] 4 Ad. & Ell. 870.

(u) Cromwell v. Hynson, 2 Esp. C. 511. Robins v. Gibson, 1 M. & S. 237; 3 Camp. 335.

(x) Bayley, O. B. 118; B. N. P. 272. Chaters v. Bell, 4 Esp. 48; Sel. 379.

(y) Windle v. Andrews, 2 B. & A. 696.

(z) Bay. O. B. 121. Brough v. Parkins, Ld. Raym. 992; 6 Mod. 80; Salk. 131. Harris v. Benson, Str. 910; Skinn. 272; 4 T. R. 75, 170; Ca. Temp. Hardw. 74. Lumley v. Palmer, Ann. 78. Interest is recoverable, although there be no protest,[2] 2 Starkle's C. 425. [See Payne v. Minne, 2 Bay. 374. Lang v. Brailsford, 1 Bay. 222. Murray v. Clayborn, 2 Bibb. 300.] Qu. whether if in the case of an inland bill, a protest be alleged, it must not be proved? Boulager v. Talleyrand, 2 Esp. C. 550.

(a) See 9 & 10 Will. 3, c. 17, s. 1, which directs a protest in case of the non-payment of inland bills to the amount of 5*l.* and upwards for value received, payable at a certain number of days, weeks, and months from the date, and accepted by the underwriters of the acceptor, to be made after the expiration of three days after the bill shall become due. The stat. 3 & 4 Ann. c. 9, s. 4, extends these provisions to cases where the drawee refuses to accept. By 3 & 4 Ann. c. 9, s. 6, no such protest is necessary either in the case of non-acceptance or non-payment, unless the bill be expressed to be for value received, and be drawn for the payment of 20*l.* sterling or more. The first of these statutes does not apply to bills payable after sight.

(b) 12 Mod. 345; per Holt, C. J. Bay. O. B. 226. A protest made in England ought, it is said, to be proved by the notary who made it and subscribing witness, if any. Chitty on Bills, 405, 7th ed.

(c) Bay. O. B. 221. Gibbon v. Coggon, 2 Camp. 188. Taylor v. Jones, 2 Camp. 105.

(d) Chesmer v. Noyes, 4 Camp. 129. (e) Vide infra, 237.

(1) [A bill was drawn and dated at New York on persons residing there, who accepted it. The drawers resided in Petersburg in Virginia: The bill being protested for non-payment, two letters were seasonably put into the post-office, giving notice to the drawers, one directed to New York, and the other to Norfolk, the supposed place of their residence.—It was held that the notice was sufficient, as it did not appear that the holders knew where the drawers resided. Chapman v. Lipscombe, 1 Johns. 294. See also Reid v. Payne, 16 Johns. 218. Where a notary testified that it was his practice, in all cases of protest of bills, where the indorser or drawer lived at a distance, to send written notice by post on the same day, and that he believed he had so done in the case then before the court, it was held to be sufficient, in the first instance, to support an averment of due notice to the indorser, of the dishonour of the bill. Miller v. Hackley, 5 Johns. 375. In an action by an indorsee of a foreign bill of exchange against the drawer or indorser for non-payment of the bill, the plaintiff is bound to prove a protest for non-acceptance as well as for non-payment, and the protests themselves are the only regular evidence of the fact. Lenox v. Leverett, 10 Mass. Rep. 1. And where a bill, noted for non-acceptance, is accepted and paid for the honour of a party, the holder is still bound to the same duties as to protests and notice, as if the bill had not been taken up. Ibid. In South Carolina, a bill drawn there on a person in New York, is regarded as a foreign bill, and if not protested for non-acceptance, though notice be given of its dishonour, the holder cannot recover against the indorser. Duncan v. Course, 1 Rep. Con. Ct. 100. But in New York, a bill drawn in the U. States, on any part of the U. States, is regarded as an inland bill, and no protest is necessary. Miller v. Hackley, ubi sup. When a drawer has no effects in the drawee's hands, no protest is necessary, as between them—Aliter, if an indorser is to be charged. Fotheringham v. Price's Executors, 2 Bay. 291.] {But a protest is not necessary upon the dishonour of a promissory note, and notarial fees cannot be recovered of the indorser. City Bank v. Cutter, 3 Pick. Rep. 415.}

(A) (A protest of an inland bill is not necessary nor evidence of the facts stated in it. Union Bank v. Hyde, 6 Wheat. 572. Miller v. Hackley, 5 John. R. 375. Lonsdale v. Brown, 4 Wash. C. C. R. 148. Fitler v. Morris, 6 Whart. 406.)

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxxi. 212. [2]Id. ii. 415.

Indorsee v. Drawer.

An indorsee in an action against the drawer must prove (f), 1st. The drawing of the bill. 2dly. Due presentment. 3dly. The drawee's or acceptor's default. 4thly. Notice of the dishonour. 5thly. Title in himself by indorsement. 6thly. In the case of a foreign bill, a protest. The proofs, therefore, seem to be similar to those in the preceding class, except as to proving the title by indorsement, the proofs of which have been already partially considered (g); but some additional observations as to proof of notice, which are applicable to this case, will be subsequently made in considering the evidence in an action by an indorsee against an indorser (A).

Proof of indorsement. By agent.

Where the indorsement is by an agent, proof of the agent's authority must be given (h); and if the principal expressly enjoin the agent not to indorse a bill, which he delivers to him in order to procure it to be discounted, he will not be bound by an indorsement by the agent (i); but in the absence of any direction as to indorsing the bill, if the agent in fact indorse it, and the principal afterwards promise to pay the bill, it is strong evidence of authority to the agent (k) (B).

Indorsee v. Indorser.

Every indorser of a bill of exchange is to be regarded as a new drawer (l). Hence, the same proofs are for the most part applicable, as in the last class of cases (m) (C). The plaintiff must prove, 1st. The indorsement by the defendant, which amounts to an admission of the drawing, and of the previous indorsements (n). 2dly. Due presentment. 3dly. The refusal to accept or pay. 4thly. Due notice to the defendant, or of facts in excuse. 5thly. Title in himself by indorsement; and, 6thly. In the case of a foreign bill, a protest.

*234

Indorsement.

*1st. Proof of the defendant's indorsement (o) is conclusive evidence of the hand-writing of the drawer, and of that of all the prior indorsees (p),

(f) The indorsement, unless traversed, will be taken as admitted. In an action by the indorsee against the drawer, it was pleaded that the bill was drawn by a partner, but not for partnership purposes, and was indorsed to the plaintiff after it became due, replication that the bill was not indorsed to the plaintiff after it became due, but was indorsed to, and taken and received by the plaintiff before it became due; and it was held to be sufficient for the plaintiff to put in the bill, and that it was not incumbent on him to show that the bill was indorsed to him before it became due. Parkin v. Moore,[1] 7 C. & P. 408.

(g) In the case of an indorsee against the acceptor. Supra, 214.

(h) See tit. AGENT.

(i) Fenn v. Harrison, 3 T. R. 757. And a promise to pay the bill would be a mere nudum pactum. Ibid.

(k) Fenn v. Harrison, 4 T. R. 177.

(l) But the indorsee of a note cannot declare against his indorser as maker, even when the latter has indorsed the note, not payable or indorsed to him, so that the indorsee cannot sue the maker. Gwinnell v. Herbert,[2] 5 Ad. & Ell. 436.

(m) 1 Show. 495; 1 Str. 479; 2 Burr. 674; 3 East, 482.

(n) The admission is conclusive. Lambert v. Oakes, 1 Ld. Ray. 443. It admits the ability and signature of all intermediate indorsers. Critchlow v. Parry, 2 Camp. 182. An acceptance, although stated, need not be proved. Tanner v. Bean,[3] 4 B. & C. 312. Park v. Edge, 1 C. & M. 429. No demand from the drawer or any previous indorsee is necessary. Bromley v. Frazier, 1 Str. 441.

(o) An indorsement in pencil is sufficient. Geary v. Physic,[4] 5 B. & C. 234.

(p) Salk. 127. Lambert v. Oakes, Ld. Raym. 443. Peake's L. E. 221. Although stated without necessity, Ibid. and Critchlow v. Parry, 2 Camp. 282. Chaters v. Bell, 4 Esp. C. 210.

(A) (The contract of the indorser of a bill is a new and independent contract, which is governed by the law of the place where the indorsement is made, and the extent of his obligation is determined by it. Aymar et al. v. Sheldon et al. 12 Wend. 439.)

(B) (In an action against a party charged as indorser of a promissory note, where it was proved that the indorsement was not in the hand-writing of the indorser, but in that of the maker, it is competent for the plaintiff, for the purpose of showing authority in the maker and acquiescence in the indorser, to prove that the defendant remained silent, although he received notice of the protest, was sued, suffered a default in pleading, and took no measures to defend his suit until after the maker absconded, and that the indorser had assumed the payment of other notes similarly situated. Weed v. Carpenter, 10 Wend. 403. Where a note was made payable to J. H. or order, who enclosed it J. H. agent, he is not liable as indorser. Mott v. Hicks, 1 Cow. 513.

(C) In an action by indorsee against the indorser, the declaration alleged acceptance by the drawee. Held, it need not be proved. Tanner v. Bean, Eng. Com. Law Reps. x. 340.

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxxii. 559. [2] Id. xxxi. 373. [3] Id. x. 340. [4] Id. xi. 213.

although the bill be forged. The subsequent indorsements must be proved as alleged in the declaration. An admission by the defendant of his liability supersedes the necessity of proving subsequent indorsements (q). If the bill be payable to A. or bearer, and A. deliver it for money without indorsing it, it is a sale by A. and he is not liable on the bill (r). An indorsee cannot recover against an indorser, on proof that he took the bill when due to the acceptor, who had absconded with it (s), although the defendant had promised to pay the bill if produced (t).

Present-ment. Refusal. Notice.

2dly. The presentment (A), and 3dly, the dishonour, must be proved, as in an action against the drawer (u); and 4thly, The proofs of due notice of the dishonour to the drawer of a bill, apply for the most part to the proofs of notice to an indorser (x). It is not necessary to prove any demand on the drawer or prior indorsers, or to give any notice to them, since the undertaking is to pay on the default of the acceptor; and the very existence of the drawer or prior indorsers is immaterial (y). The rule as to notice, by an indorsee to an indorser or drawer, is, that reasonable notice shall be given, and what is reasonable notice seems to be a question of law, the rule in regard to which has already been stated (z). What has been said as to the notice from the payee to the drawer, applies for the most part to notice by an indorsee to an indorsee (a) (1). There are, however, some consider-

(q) Sidford v. Chambers,[1] 1 Starkie's C. 320.

(r) Per Holt, C. J. Gov. & Co. of the Bank of England, v. Newman, Ld. Raym. 442.

(s) Powell v. Roach, 6 Esp. 76; 12 Mod. 310; 1 Show. 164; Holt, 118.

(t) Ibid. And see 1 Taunt. 153.

(u) Supra, 221. An action lies by the indorsee against the indorser immediately upon non-acceptance. Ballingalls v. Gloster, 3 East, 481.

(x) Supra, 225. Notice to the indorsee of a bill of the dishonour of a bill drawn by him is insufficient. Beauchamp v. Cash,[2] 1 D. & R. (N. P. C.) 3. A. draws a bill on B. for the accommodation of C., who indorses it for value to D.; neither A. nor C. have effects in the hands of B., yet B. is entitled to notice. Norton v. Pickering,[3] 8 B. & C. 610; see Cory v. Scott,[4] 3 B. & A. 619. Where bankers paid a bill purporting to be the acceptance of a customer, but on the following day, having discovered the acceptance to be a forgery, gave notice to the party whom they had paid, and required him to repay the money; it was held, that the holder of a bill being entitled to know, on the day it becomes due, whether it is an honoured or dishonoured bill, that he may, if he thinks fit, take steps on that day against the parties to the bill; the parties who pay the bill ought not, by any negligence in satisfying themselves whether the acceptance is genuine or not, to deprive the holder of that right; the bankers having therefore suffered him to retain the money during the whole of that day, they could not recover it back. Cocks v. Masterman,[5] 6 B. & C. 902.

(y) See Ld. Mansfield's observations, 2 Burr. 675. So in the case of a cheque, 2 Camp. 537.

(z) Supra, 226. Darbishire v. Parker, 5 East, 10, 11, 12. But see Hilton v. Shepherd, 6 East, 14, n.

(a) Vide supra, 226.

(A) (Where no particular place of payment is designated, the holder is bound to demand payment of the maker personally, or at his place of residence, and the indorser contracts only to be answerable in case of default by the maker after demand and notice. Anderson v. Drake, 14 John. R. 114. Woodworth v. Bank of America, in error, 19 John. R. 391; see also Wilbar v. Selden, 6 Cow. 162. It is sufficient evidence of demand and refusal on a note payable at a particular place, if the note be left there and no funds provided to take it up. Nichols v. Goldsmith, 7 Wend. 160; Folger v. Chase, 18 Pick. 63. In the case of a note indorsed after it has become due, the indorser is not liable unless payment be demanded of the maker, and notice of the non-payment given to the indorser; and as such a note has become payable on demand, the demand on the maker must be made within a reasonable time, and immediate notice of non-payment given to the indorser. Colt v. Barnard, 18 Pick. 260. As to demand in case of cheques on a bank, see Mohawk Bank v. Broderick, 10 Wend. 304.)

(1) [When the indorser lives in another town, notice to him is seasonable if put into the post-office at any time during the day succeeding that on which the note becomes due. Whitwell et al. v. Johnson, 17 Mass. Rep. 453; Shed v. Brett, 1 Pick. 410. But notice may be given on the day the note becomes due, after refusal by the maker to pay on demand made on that day. 1 Pick. ubi sup. Corp v. M'Comb, 1 Johns. Cas. 328; Lindenburgher et al. v. Beall, 6 Wheat. 204. And notice by mail is sufficient, though it is never received by the indorser; putting a letter into the post-office is notice per se. 1 Pick. ubi sup.; Smith v. Bank of Washington, 5 Serg. & R. 322. When the indorser resides in a post town different from that in which the note is dishonoured, it is proper to send him notice by the mail; and perhaps, where he does not, sending it to the nearest post town is sufficient. Per Parker, C. J. 1 Pick. ubi sup. A notice to an indorser is sufficient, though it does not state at whose request it is given, nor who is the owner of the note. Ibid. Shrieve v. Duckham, 1 Littell's Rep. 194.]

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. ii. 410. [2]Id. xvi. 410. [3]Id. xv. 314. [4]Id. v. 401. [5]Id. xvii. 517.

ations which are peculiar to the present case; for where there are several previous indorsers, the indorsee may, by giving notice, proceed against any or all of them, as well as against the drawer. The general rule is, that each indorser is bound to give notice within a day after he has received notice (b).

*Where a bill passed through the hands of five persons, A. B. C. D. and E., all of whom lived in or near London, and the bill being dishonoured, the holder on the same day gave notice to E., who on the next day gave notice to D., and he on the same day to A., the Court were of opinion that due diligence had been used (c). *235 Proof of notice.

But the holder of a bill has not as many days as there are indorsers, but each indorser has his own day, and whether the holder proceed against the indorser or the drawer, notice must be given within the same time (d).

Where the bill when it becomes due is in the hands of the bankers of the indorsee, and is presented by them, notice to him by the next day's post, and by him to a previous indorser by the next day's post after that, is sufficient.

Where the holder had deposited a bill indorsed in blank with his bankers in London, which was presented by them at two o'clock on the afternoon of Saturday (when due), and being dishonoured, was noted, and presented again between nine and ten in the evening by a notary, and on the Monday the bankers informed the holder at Knightsbridge of the dishonour, and he the same day gave notice to the indorser in the Tottenham-court-road, the notice was held to be sufficient (e).

Where a bill due on the 25th, was presented on that day by the banker of the holder at another banking-house in London, and dishonoured, but a doubt being entertained whether it had not been presented too early on that day, it was presented again on the 26th, and again dishonoured, and was returned to the holder on the same day, who sent notice of the dishonour to the indorser in the country on the 27th, it was held to be sufficient (f).

The plaintiff may prove in excuse (g) (A), for not giving notice, that the (b) Turner v. Leach,[1] 4 B. & A. 451. An indorser who pays the bill after laches by a subsequent indorsee, cannot recover against a former indorser, although had successive notices been given, the defendant would not have received earlier notice. Ibid. and per Ld. Ellenborough, in Marsh v. Maxwell, 2 Camp. 210. Where, after due diligence to ascertain the abode of an indorser, it was not discovered until a month after the bill became due, when it was communicated to the attorney of the holder; held, that as he had a right to take a day to communicate it to his client, notice on the following day was sufficient; and the notice being legal and valid, held that evidence of the circumstances under which it was given was sufficient to support the allegation in the declaration that notice was given according to the legal effect. Firth v. Thrush,[2] 8 B. & C. 387. And see Bateman v. Joseph, 12 East, 443; and Baldwin v. Richardson,[3] 1 B. & C. 245.

(c) Hilton v. Shepherd, 6 East, 14, n.

(d) Dobree v. Eastwood,[4] 3 C. & P. 250.

(e) Haynes v. Birkes, 3 B. & P. 599.

(f) Langdale v. Trimmer, 15 East, 291.

(g) It seems that the excuse for want of notice should be alleged on the face of the declaration, vide supra, and Cory v. Scott,[5] 3 B. & A. 619. But the general principle on which notice is excused is, that the party must have known that the bill when presented would not be paid. This is in effect to substitute knowledge for actual notice. Qu. therefore, whether when the want of effects in the hands of the acceptor is the excuse for not giving notice to the drawer, such excuse need be alleged specially, for the drawer has notice in effect.

(A) (It is not sufficient to excuse want of notice that the indorser was not injured by the neglect. Hill v. Martin, 12 Martin, 199. The duty of presentation of a bill for payment will not be dispensed with under circumstances of involuntary mistake and accident in forwarding it, but it seems that where there is an impossibility to present the bill on the day it falls due through unavoidable accidents, without the fault of the holder, a subsequent presentment will be good. Scofield v. Bayard, 3 Wend. 488. For circumstances under which a delay in presentation will be excused, see Gowan v. Jackson, 20 John. R. 176. The relative right and duties of parties who indorse a promissory note for the accommodation of the maker, are the same as in the case of a business note; so that due notice of the dishonour of such accommodation note having been given, a subsequent indorser who pays it, may recover of a prior indorser the whole amount paid, and not merely a contribution as in the case of sureties. Church v. Barlow, 9 Pick. R. 547.)

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. vi. 484. [2]Id. xv. 242. [3]Id. viii. 66. [4]Id. xiv. 289. [5]Id. v. 401.

Excuse for want of notice.

indorser gave no consideration for the note, and knew the maker to be insolvent (h): That the defendant, the payee of the note, had no effects in the hands of the maker (i): That the indorsee was ignorant of the indorser's place of abode (k); and then it is question of fact, whether he used due diligence to discover it (l). He ought to show that he has made diligent but ineffectual inquiry in places where the indorser was likely to be found (m) (1):

*236 *That the defendant afterwards promised to pay the bill (n); and a promise made to a subsequent indorsee is evidence for this purpose (o).

It is no defence to an action by a bonâ fide indorsee without knowledge that the bill had already been dishonoured, and no notice given (p).

One who indorses a bill without consideration, but without fraud, is entitled to notice, although the acceptor is a fictitious person (q). So where the transaction arises out of various dealings for the accommodation of the acceptor (r).

It is no excuse in an action against an indorser to show that the drawee has no effects of the drawer in his hands (s), or that the payee (the indorser) gave no consideration to the maker of a note (t); or that there was an understanding that the note was not to be put in suit; or that the payee and indorser of a promissory note knew that D., at whose house the note was made payable, had no effects of the maker in his hands, and requested D. to send it to him that he might pay it (u) (2); that the payee and in-

(h) De Berdt v. Atkinson, 2 H. B. 336; and see Sisson v. Tomlinson, 1 Sel. N. P. 328, 7th edit. But a mere accommodation indorsee is entitled to notice. Smith v. Becket, 13 East, 187. Secus, in an action against the drawer of a bill accepted for his accommodation, for the drawer is the real debtor, and cannot be hurt by want of notice.

(i) 1 Esp. 302. See 13 East, 127; Bay. 136. (k) 12 East, 433; 3 Esp. R. 240.

(l) Bateman v. Joseph, 12 East, 433; 3 Esp. R. 240. And see Goodall v. Dolley, 1 T. R. 712.

(m) Inquiry at the place where the bill was payable for the residence of the indorser, was held to be insufficient. Beveridge v. Burgess, 3 Camp. 262. Inquiry should be made from other parties to the bill or note, and of persons of the same name. Bayley on Bills, 229, citing Beveridge v. Burgess. It is said in one case to have been held to be sufficient, on a promissory note being dishonoured, to make inquiry at the maker's for the residence of the payee. Harris v. Derrick, Wight. 76. Calling on the last two indorsers, on the day after the bill became due, to know where the drawer lived, and on his not being in the way, calling again the next day, and then giving him notice, is (semble) sufficient. Browning v. Kinnear,[1] Gow. 81.

(n) Vide infra, 237. (o) Potter v. Rayworth, 13 East, 417.

(p) Dunn v. O'Keefe, 5 M. & S. 282. (q) Leach v. Hewit, 4 Taunt. 731.

(r) Ex parte Heath, 2 Ves. & B. 240; 2 Rose, 141.

(s) Goodall v. Dolley, 1 T. R. 712; Peake's C. 202. Wilkes v. Jacks, Peake's C. 202. And see Sisson v. Tomlinson, Sel. N. P. 324. Brown v. Muffey, 15 East, 216; where the defendant had indorsed for the accommodation of a subsequent indorser, but did not know that the acceptor had no effects of the drawer in his hands.

(t) Free v. Hawkins,[2] 1 Holt's C. 550, by Gibbs, C. J.

(u) Nicholson v. Gouthit, 2 H. B. 609. A. being insolvent, B. as a security indorsed a note made by A. payable to B. at the house of D. for a debt due from A. to C. B. being informed that D. had no effects of A.'s in his hands, desires D. to send the note to him, and says he will pay it, having then a fund in his hands for that purpose; the note was not presented at D.'s house till three days after it was due; and it was held that it was discharged.

(1) [See Sturgis & al. v Derrick, Wightwick, 78.]

(2) [In Cory & al. v. Scott, 3 B. & A. 619, where a bill was drawn for the accommodation of an indorsee, and neither he nor the drawer had any effects in the hands of the acceptor; it was held that the subsequent indorsee, in order to entitle himself to recover against the drawer, was bound to give notice of non-payment.

This case has greatly shaken, if not overturned, that of Walwyn v. St. Quintin, 1 B. & P. 652—but most of the American cases agree with it. See Scarborough v. Harris, 1 Bay, 175. French's Executor v. Bank of Columbia, 4 Cranch, 141. Pons's Executors v. Kelly, 2 Hayw. 45. Smith v. M'Lean, 2 Taylor, 72. Buck v. Cotton, 2 Conn. Rep. 126. Crossen v. Hutchinson, 9 Mass. Rep. 205. Bond & al. v. Farnham, 5 Mass. Rep. 170. Sandford v. Dillaway, 10 Mass. Rep. 52. Farnum v. Fowle, 12 Mass. Rep. 89. Barton v. Baker, 1 Serg. & Rawle, 334. In this last case, however, it was held that an acceptance by the indorser of an assignment of the drawer's estate, for the purpose of indemnifying him against his indorsement, rendered notice unnecessary. See post, 274, note (1).

Evidence of an agreement between the indorser and indorsee of a note taken after due, that the latter

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. v. 471. [2] Id. iii. 184.

dorser of the bill had received notice from the drawer that he would not pay the bill (x); that the indorsee being ignorant of the laches in the holder, paid the bill (y); that the indorsers had full knowledge of the bankruptcy of the drawer and of the acceptor before and at the time when the bill became due (z); that the indorsement was lent to the maker of a note, to enable the maker to raise money from the plaintiffs, who were bankers, and agreed to advance the money thereon for six months, and had renewed their advances at the end of six months, without the knowledge of the indorser (a). So, where a bill was drawn and indorsed by several indorsers for the accommodation of the last indorser, and the acceptor had no effects of the drawer in his hands, but that fact was not known to the defendant, a prior indorser, it was held that he was entitled to notice of the dishonour, in order to enable him (if he had no remedy on the bill) to call immediately upon the last indorser, to whom he had lent his indorsement, and who had received the amount of the bill (b). So in the case of an indorsee, without consideration but without fraud, of a bill, the drawer and acceptor of which are fictitious persons (c). Proof of notice will be rendered unnecessary by *evidence of a promise to pay on the part of the defendant (d). But it *237 seems that an express promise is necessary, in order to discharge an indorser who has not had notice (e).

6thly. The proof of a protest has already been considered (f).

If an acceptance of the bill be stated unnecessarily, it need not be proved (g).—Such are the detailed proofs in these cases. Variance.

It is a general rule, that an admission (h) of the party's liability on the bill, made with a knowledge of the facts, will supersede the necessity of the usual regular proof in detail. Such an admission operates as presumptive evidence that all things have been rite-acta, or perhaps, in some cases, Presumptive evidence.

(x) 1 T. R. 171.
(y) Roscow v. Hardy, 12 East, 434.
(z) Esdaile v. Sowerby, 11 East, 114.
(a) Smith v. Beckett, 13 East, 187.
(b) Brown and others v. Maffey, 15 East, 216. Bayley, O. B. 137. Peake's C. 202. And see Cory v. Scott,[1] 3 B. & A. 619.
(c) Leach v. Hewitt, 4 Taunt. 731.
(d) Wilkes v. Jacks, Peake's C. 202.
(e) Borrodaile v. Lowe, 4 Taunt. 93.
(f) Supra, 232.
(g) Supra, 213.
(h) The whole of the admission must, according to the general rule, be taken. Where the defendant said, "I do not mean to insist upon the want of notice, but I am only bound to pay you 79*l*.," the bill being for 200*l*., Abbott, C. J., held that the plaintiff could not recover more than 70*l*. Fletcher v. Froggatt, 2 C. & P. 270. Assumpsit by the indorsee against acceptor, plea that the defendant did not accept the bill modo et forma, but generally, and it appeared that the acceptance had been, without his knowledge, altered by the addition of payment at a particular banker's, where, when presented, it was dishonoured, and on application to the defendant he denied having accepted it payable there, but was always ready to pay at his own place of residence; held, not to amount to an acknowledgement of a subsisting debt to entitle the plaintiff to recover on an account stated. Calvert v. Baker, 4 M. & W. 417; and 7 Dowl. (P. C.) 17.

should look to the drawer and not to the indorser, was admitted in South Carolina. Rugely v. Davidson, 2 Rep. Con. Ct. 33.

In Tennessee, it has been decided that notice is not necessary where the indorser and indorsee knew of the insolvency of the maker at the time of the indorsement. Stothart v. Parker, 1 Overton's Rep. 260. See also Crossen v. Hutchinson, ubi. sup. Agan v. M'Manus, 11 Johns. 180.

If a note be void in its creation, and known to the indorser to be so, demand and notice are not necessary to charge him. Copp v. M'Dougall, 9 Mass. Rep. 1. A waiver by an indorsee of a right to notice of non-payment by the maker, does not dispense with the necessity of a demand upon him. Berkshire Bank v. Jones, 6 Mass. Rep. 524. See Hill v. Heap, ante, p. 269, note (o). But when the maker has absconded before the note falls due, a demand is not necessary to charge the indorser. Putnam & al. v. Sullivan & al. 4 Mass. Rep. 45. Widgery v. Monroe & al. 6 Mass. R. 449.

In Virginia, the indorser of a note is not liable on non-payment by the maker, unless the maker is shown to be insolvent, or a suit has been brought against him and proved fruitless; although such indorser has been counter-secured by the maker of such indorsement. Dulany v. Hodgkin, 5 Cranch, 333.

See Mr. Day's notes to Wilkes & al. v. Jacks, Peake's C. 203, and Smith & al. v. Becket, 13 East, 189, Swift on Ev. and Bills, 287-290.]

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. v. 401.

even still more strongly as a waiver by the party of an irregularity as to presentment, notice, or protest (i), of which he actually was, or may be presumed to have been cognizant. These admissions consist either in part-payment, which is the strongest of all, or in asking for time, or in an express promise to pay the bill, or in other declarations, or conduct by which the party plainly acknowledges his liability (k) (A).

An agreement between the drawer and first indorser, stating the bill to be then over-due, and dishonoured, and stipulating for payment by weekly instalments, admits notice of the dishonour (l).

In an action against an acceptor, notice by his attorney to produce all papers relating to a bill, described as the bill in question, and as accepted by the said defendant, is primâ facie evidence of acceptance (m).

Part-payment of the amount of the bill by the drawer raises a presumption that he has received due notice of the acceptor's default (n).

*238 *An acceptor, who has credited or adopted the acceptance by an acknowledgement of his hand-writing, or by paying other similar bills, cannot afterwards insist that the alleged acceptance is a forgery (o). But the merely desiring the holder of the bill to call again does not exclude him from such a defence (p).

Where the declaration alleged a due presentment of the bill for payment, which had been drawn and accepted for the accommodation of the indorser, and the bill was not presented till after banking hours, when the answer was given "no effects," an application by the indorser, after declaration filed, for further time, was held to be evidence of the waiver of the objection, with notice of the fact of which he had the means of informing himself (q).

(i) Gibbon v. Coggon, 2 Camp. 188; 2 T. R. 713; 6 East, 16, 231; 13 East, 417; Wood v. Brown,[1] 1 Starkie's C. 217; Peake's C. 202. Where the defendant agreed to join with three others in several notes to the plaintiff to secure a debt; but after he had signed one refused, and never did in fact sign; and upon the first note becoming due the defendant, upon being applied to, offered a security; it was held, that it was for the jury to say whether he was cognizant of the refusal of the party to sign, and whether, by offering such security, he intended to waive the objection as to all the notes; as if he did, and obtained time in consequence, he was liable, otherwise not. Leaf v. Gibbs,[2] 4 C. & P. 466.

(k) See Jones v. Morgan, 2 Camp. 474. Vaughan v. Fuller, 2 Str. 1246; and tit. Admissions. An admission by one of several partners is evidence against the rest. Hodenpyl v. Vingerhoed, Chitty on Bills, 489, 5th ed.; Roscoe on Evidence, 207. Sangster v. Mazzaredo,[3] 1 Starkie's C. 161. But an admission by one of several acceptors, not parties, is not evidence against the rest. Gray v. Palmer, 1 Esp. C. 135. In an action by the indorsee against the maker, and issue on the fact of presentment, a promise by the defendant, after the note became due, to pay, was held to be a sufficient admission of the presentment having been duly made. Croxon v. Worthen, 5 M. & W. 5.

(l) Gunson v. Metz,[4] 1 B. & C. 193; 2 D. & R. 334.

(m) Holt v. Squires,[5] R. & M. 282.

(n) An offer to give another bill supersedes the proof of indorsement. Bosanquet v. Anderson, 6 Esp. 43, An admission by the defendant that the hand-writing to a promissory note is his, will be sufficient proof in the case of an unattested note, although it was made pending a treaty for a compromise. Waldridge v. Kennison, 1 Esp. C. 43.

(o) Leach v. Buchanan, 4 Esp. C. 226. Barber v. Gingell, 3 Esp. C. 60.

(p) Barber v. Gingell, 3 Esp. C. 60. And see tit. Admissions.

(q) Greenway v. Hindley, 4 Camp. 52. It operates as a waver of the want of notice (Rogers v. Stephens, 2 T. R. 713; Peake's C. 202; 6 East, 231; 13 East, 417); and where, on demand made, the drawer answered that the bill must be paid, it was held to be equivalent to a promise to pay; Ibid.; and see Lundie v. Robertson, 7 East, 231. The drawer on the first application promised the plaintiff that he would pay the bill if he

(A) If, after the dishonour of a note, the indorser promise to pay it, such promise is presumptive evidence of due demand and notice. Breed v. Hillhouse, 7 Conn. R. 523. Where W. A. the payee of a negotiable note, then payable, indorsed it thus, "W. A. holden," he was held liable without demand or notice. Bean v. Arnold, 16 Shepley, 251. The drawer of a protested bill of exchange being applied to on behalf of the holder for payment, acknowledges the debt to be just, and promises to pay it, saying nothing about his having received notice; the holder in an action of debt upon the bill against such drawer, is not bound to prove that notice was given to him of the protest. Walker v. Laverty & al. 6 Munf. 487. Vid. Sice v. Cunningham, 1 Cow. 397. Myers v. Coleman, Anth. N. P. 150.)

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. ii. 363. [2]Id. xix. 475. [3]Id. ii. 338. [4]Id. viii. 58. [5]Id. xxi. 439.

So where the drawer, knowing that time had been given by the holder to the acceptor, but supposing that he was still liable on the bill, in default of the acceptor, said, three months after the bill was due, that he was liable, and if the acceptor did not pay it, he would, it was held that he was bound by the promise (r). Where, however, a promise to pay has been made in ignorance of material facts, such as the holder's laches, it will not supersede the necessity or the usual proof of notice (s).

Where the indorsee of an inland bill presented it before it was due, for acceptance, and it was refused on the 4th of November, and the indorsee on the 6th of January following, (the bill expiring on the 11th of January,) gave notice generally of the dishonour of the bill, but without specifying the time or circumstances of the presentment, whereupon the defendants, the drawers, being ignorant of the circumstances, made a proposal the next day to pay the bill by instalments, it was held that they had not waived *the notice (t). So a promise made by the defendant when arrested, and *239 when he is ignorant of the facts, will not be a waver (u).

Where the defendant, being a foreigner, on being applied to to take up the bill, said, "I am not acquainted with your laws; if I am bound to pay it, I will," it was held that the declaration did not supersede the necessity of proving notice (x) (1).

A promise by one of several indorsers who are not partners is not evidence against the other indorsers (y). It has been said, that where an indorser has promised to pay the bill, payment must still be demanded before the action is brought (z); this, however, appears to be unnecessary.

would call again; upon a second application, he said that he had not regular notice, but that as the debt was justly due he would pay the bill (and see Haddock v. Bury, 7 East, 236, n; Gibbons v. Coggan, 2 Camp. 188; Taylor v. Jones, 2 Camp. 105). A waiver by a drawer may be implied, but qu. whether a waver by an indorsee must not be express. 4 Taunt. 93. In an action by an indorsee against a previous, but not immediate indorser, the defendant, on the bill being shown, said, "my affairs are deranged, I cannot take it up now, but I will do something in a fortnight," it was held to be sufficient on the account stated. Wagstaff v. Boardman, K. B. Hil. 1827. A letter written by the drawer, stating that the bill had been accepted for his accommodation, and would be paid, dispenses with notice. Wood v. Brown,[1] 1 Starkie's C. 217. But a letter written by an indorser who had been applied to for payment after several days laches, informing the plaintiff that he would not remit till he received the bill, and desiring the plaintiff, if he considered him (the defendant) to be unsafe, to return the bill to a prior indorser, was held to be no such waiver of the laches, and promise to pay, as would entitle the plaintiff to recover. Borrodaile v. Lowe, 4 Taunt. 93. So where the drawer said, "If I am bound to pay it, I will." Dennis v. Morris, 3 Esp. C. 158. So where he merely offered to compromise. Cuming v. French, 2 Camp. 106. And see Brett v. Levett, 13 East, 213, supra. The drawer of a bill being applied to for payment, said, "If the acceptor does not pay I must; but exhaust all your influence with the acceptor first;" and afterwards directed the applicant to raise the money on the lives of himself and the acceptor, it was held that the admission was not conclusive evidence of the defendant's having received or waived notice of the dishonour of the bill. Hicks v. Duke of Beaufort,[2] 4 Bing. N. C. 229.

(r) Stevens v. Lynch, 12 East, 38.

(s) Goodall v. Dolly, 1 T. R. 712. Blizard v. Hirst, 5 Burr. 2670. 4 Taunt. 93. Picken v. Graham, 1 C. & M. 725. 3 Tyr. 923.

(t) 1 T. R. 712. 2 H. B. 336.

(u) Rouse v. Redwood, 1 Esp. C. 155; 4 Taunt. 93.

(x) Dennis v. Morrice, 3 Esp. C. 158.

(y) 1 Barnes, 317; 1 Esp. C. 15.

(z) Brown v. Macdermot, 5 Esp. C. 265, tamen qu.

(1) [A promise by an indorser to pay a note, after being discharged in law by neglect of due notice, is not binding, unless made with a knowledge of all the material facts. Martin v. Winslow, 2 Mason's Rep. 241. Duryee v. Dennison, 5 Johns. 248. Fotheringham v. Price's Ex'or, 1 Bay, 291. Donaldson v. Means, 4 Dallas, 109. Tower v. Durrell, 9 Mass. Rep. 332. And the promise must be explicit, and made out by clear and unequivocal evidence. Miller v. Hackley, 5 Johns. 375.

Where the indorser, knowing that a demand has not been made on the maker, promises to pay the note, it is a waiver of the necessity of proving demand and notice. Hall v. Freeman, 2 Nott & McCord, 479. Hopkins v. Liswell, 12 Mass. Rep. 58. Pierson v. Hooker, 3 Johns. 68. Such promise is an implied admission that the indorser has received notice—but where it is evident that such notice was not given, a promise by the indorser to pay, after he is legally discharged, and without any consideration, will not maintain an action. Lawrence v. Ralston, 3 Bib. 102. Phillips v. M'Curdy, 2 Har. & J. 187. Walker v. Laverty, 6 Munf. 487.]

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. ii. 363. [2]Id. xxxiii. 337.

A promise is binding although made under ignorance of the law (a).

An offer to pay part by way of compromise, and made for the purpose of buying peace, is not admissible in evidence (b); and a mere offer to compromise is no waiver of the want of notice (c).

Collateral liability. Drawer v. Acceptor.

III. Where the liability is consequent on the defendant's own default, as where, 1st, the drawer brings an action against the acceptor, or 2dly, the acceptor against the drawer. 1st. By the drawer against the acceptor (d); the plaintiff must prove,

1st. The acceptance of the bill by the defendant, which is primâ facie evidence that he has effects of the drawer in his hands (e).

2dly. Presentment to the acceptor, and the refusal by him to pay the bill.

3dly. The payment of the bill by the plaintiff, the drawer.

The indorsement of a general receipt on the bill primâ facie imports payment by the acceptor, although the bill be produced by the drawer; for it is rather to be presumed that the bill was delivered to him by the acceptor, on a settlement of accounts (f); and therefore the plaintiff should prove a payment to the holder by himself (g).

4thly. That the acceptor has effects of the drawer in his hands; of this fact the acceptance is primâ facie evidence (h). The bankruptcy of the acceptor is no defence against the drawer, who has paid the bill since the bankruptcy (i).

Acceptor v. Drawer. *240

The acceptor of an accommodation bill in an action against the drawer, must prove, 1st. The drawing of the bill by the defendant (k), by proof of *his hand-writing. 2dly. He must rebut the usual presumption of consideration, by evidence showing the absence of it. 3dly. Payment of the bill by himself (l), or execution against his person (m). The mere production of the bill will not afford even primâ facie evidence of payment, without showing that the bill has been in circulation since the acceptance; and payment is not to be presumed from a receipt indorsed on the bill, except it be in the hand-writing of some person entitled to demand payment (n).

Damages.

In order to prove the particular amount of damage which the plaintiff has sustained, the course of exchange, and the liability of the defendant to pay re-exchange, are questions for the jury (o) (A). Interest is recover-

(a) 12 East, 38; vide supra, 87.

(b) B. N. P. 236.

(c) Cumming v. French, 2 Camp. 106.

(d) The drawer may recover against the acceptor, having effects of the drawer in his hands, in his own name, without assignment from the payee.

(e) Vere v. Lewis, 3 T. R. 183. If A. & B. exchange acceptances, the one is a consideration for the other, each is liable on his own acceptance as an absolute debt; the engagement is not of a conditional nature for mutual indemnity, but constitutes at once an absolute debt on each part. Consequently either may prove the acceptance of the other as a debt under a commission of bankrupt against him previous to the payment of either acceptance. Rolfe v. Caslon, 2 H. B. 570. A., on the bankruptcy of B., will be compelled to pay the bill drawn by him, as well as the one accepted by him after the bankruptcy of B.; he cannot afterwards recover against B., as on an implied contract to indemnify him. Per Lawrence, J. in Cowley v. Dunlop, 7 T. R. 567.

(f) Scholey v. Walsby, Peake's C. 24. So where an indorsee having been obliged to take up the bill, declares specially against the acceptor. Mendez v. Carreroon, Ld. Raym. 742.

(g) Peake's C. 26; Peake's L. E. 221.

(h) 10 Mod. 36, 37. Parminter v. Simmons, 1 Wils. 185; 3 T. R. 183; 3 East, 169; 3 Wils. 18.

(i) Mead v. Braham, 3 M. & S. 91.

(k) Vide supra, 222.

(l) Taylor v. Higgins, 3 East, 169; 3 Wils. 18. In the latter case the count must be special. Where A., according to the ordinary course of dealing with B., accepts bills for him, having funds of B.'s in his hands, and B. being bankrupt, A. compounded his acceptances with the holders for less than their amount, it was held, that in the account between A. and the assignees of B., A. was entitled to charge the full amount. Stonehouse v. Read,[1] 3 B. & C. 669; 5 D. & R. 603.

(m) Ibid.

(n) Pfiel v. Vanbatenburg, 2 Camp. 439.

(o) De Tastet & others v. Baring & others, 2 Camp. 65; 11 East, 265; 2 H. B. 378; 2 B. & P. 335; Ambler, 634.

(A) (By the English law merchant, the acceptor of a foreign bill of exchange is not liable for the able from the day when the bill became due to the day of signing judgment (p).

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. x. 211.

Where a sum is payable on a promissory note by instalments, and the whole is to become due on the first default, interest becomes due on the first default (q); and it is recoverable, although not stated in the particulars (r). Interest may be recovered against the drawer of an inland bill, without proof of a protest (s). Interest.

Where an accommodation acceptor was sued by a bonâ fide holder it was held that as he ought to have paid it when demanded, he could not recover the costs against the party to whom he had lent his acceptance (t).

An indorsee having received part of the contents from the drawer, cannot recover more than the residue from the acceptor (u).

The acceptor of a bill payable in England is liable only to the sum payable, and 5 per cent interest (x).

In an action on a foreign note payable in the currency of this country, interest is to be calculated according to the state of exchange at the time of the demand of payment (y).

Where a bill drawn on a party in a foreign country, after having been negotiated through another foreign country, is refused payment by the drawee, such payment being prohibited by the law of the country where he resides, the drawer is liable for the whole of the re-exchange between the different countries (z).

Where a foreign bill is dishonoured here for non-acceptance, and the plaintiff is allowed a per-centage in the name of damages, it seems that he is to recover interest from the day of payment only, and not from the time of non-acceptance (a); but where there is no allowance for damages, he *241 is to recover interest from the time of dishonour for non-acceptance (b).

Where a bill is made payable with interest, it is to be calculated from the date of the bill (c).

A plaintiff is entitled to recover the whole amount, although as to part he is only a trustee (d).

The rules of Hilary Term, 4 Will., declare that in all actions on bills of exchange and promissory notes (e) the plea of non assumpsit shall be inadmissible, and that in such actions a plea in denial must traverse some matter of fact, e. g., the drawing, or making, or indorsing, or accepting, or presenting, or notice of the dishonour of the bill or note. The defendant in support of a plea, according to these rules, on which issue is taken, may Defence.

(p) Robinson v. Bland, 2 T. R. 58; 2 Burr. 1077. (q) 4 Esp. C. 147. (r) Ibid.

(s) Windle v. Andrews,[1] 2 Starkie's C. 425. Where a bill is accepted payable at a particular place, although it is unnecessary to show a presentment at such place, in order to entitle the party to recover the principal sum, yet it is to recover interest. Phillips v. Franklin, 1 Gow's C. 196. A note payable at a particular time carries interest after that time, and it ought not to be left to the discretion of the jury, unless the non-payment has been occasioned by the fault of the plaintiff. Laing v. Stone,[2] 2 M. & Ry. 561.

(t) Roach v. Thompson, 1 M. & M. 487. (u) Bacon v. Searles, 1 H. B. 88.

(x) Woolsey v. Crawford, 2 Camp. 445.

(y) Pollard v. Herries, 3 B. & P. 335. Mellish v. Simeon, 2 H. B. 378. But see Houriet v. Morris, 3 Camp. 303.

(z) Ibid.

(a) Gantt v. Mackenzie, 3 Camp. 51. (b) Harrison v. Dickson, 3 Camp. 52.

(c) Doman v. Dibden,[3] 1 R. & M. 381. (d) Reid v. Furnival, 1 C. & M. 538.

(e) Yet if an executor declare on a bill or note payable to his testator, laying a promise to him, the promise may still be denied by non assumpsit. Timmins v. Platt, 2 M. & M. 720.

---

exchange, or any charge but interest, according to the rate established at the place of payment; and the statute of Pennsylvania, which gives liquidated damages as a substitute, has regard only to drawers and endorsers. Wats v. Riddle, 8 Watts, 545. In an action against the indorser of a promissory note, the fees of protest are a proper item in the assessment of damages. Merritt v. Benton, 10 Wend. 118.)

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. iii. 415. [2]Id. xviii. 320. [3]Id. xxi. 465.

show, 1st, no contract, or an insufficient one in point of law (f); 2dly, that the bill or note has been altered (g), (and in some instances) no consideration; or, 3dly, illegality or fraud; 4thly, that the plaintiff has no title by transfer to sue upon the bill; 5thly, that the bill has been released or satisfied; 6thly, discharge by laches, or giving time, or by waiver; 7thly, that it was an accommodation bill, &c. and indorsed after it became due; 8thly, that it is improperly stamped; 9thly, that it has been altered.

That the defendant, in point of fact, or of law, did not contract to pay the bill, as, that the defendant is an infant (A) (h), or a feme covert (i). But an acceptor cannot set up the infancy or coverture of the drawer as a defence (k) (1); nor can an indorsee defend himself by showing that the bill was drawn by a feme covert upon her husband, who indorsed it over (l). So he may show that one of the plaintiffs promised jointly with the defendants (m).

Proof to impeach the contract.

If a bill has been accepted by one of several partners in the name of all the copartners, the others being sued may prove fraud in defence, and show that the bill concerned the acceptor only in his private and individual capacity (n) (B). But where several persons trade together under different firms, it is not competent for one partner to show that the bill was drawn in respect of a firm in which he had no interest (o).

Collateral evidence.

It seems to be a general rule, that no extrinsic evidence is admissible to vary the contract apparent on the bill; as to show that the defendant did not accept the bill upon his own private account, but upon that of his principal (p); *or, that at the time of making the note, the plaintiff had agreed to take a renewal of the note in lieu of payment (q).

*242

The acceptor cannot give in evidence a parol understanding that the drawer was not to demand payment on the bill in case he could reimburse himself out of other funds (r). So the plaintiff cannot be permitted to prove in excuse for not giving notice of dishonour, a parol agreement that the (f) It is a good defence to show that the plaintiff, who sues on a bill accepted by a company, is himself a member of that company. Neale v. Turton,[1] 4 Bingh. 149. In an action by an indorsee against acceptor, to prove the forgery by the drawer of the acceptance, the same evidence only is admissible as would have been so in the case of an indictment for forgery. Griffiths v. Payne, 3 P. & D. 107.

(g) An alteration of a bill of exchange after acceptance may be taken advantage of under a plea that the defendant did not accept the bill. Cock v. Coxwell, 2 C. M. & R. 291. See as to alterations, the cases cited below, in reference to the proper stamp on a bill or note.

(h) Carth. 160. Ingledew v. Douglass,[2] 2 Starkie's C. 36. [Van Winkle v. Ketcham, 3 Caine's Rep. 323.]

(i) 1 East, 432.

(k) 4 Esp. C. 187. Per Lord Hardwicke, Haly v. Lane, 2 Atk. 181, 2.

(l) 2 Atk. 181, 2.

(m) Mainwaring v. Newman, 2 B. & P. 120. Note, the objection was taken in this case by special demurrer, vide supra, note (f).

(n) Pinkney v. Hall, Salk. 126, vide supra, 205.

(o) Baker v. Charlton, Peake, S. C. 80. (p) Str. 955; Cas. T. Hardw. 1.

(q) Hoare v. Graham, 3 Camp. 57. See Snowball v. Vicars, Bunb. 175; Moller v. Living, 4 Taunt. 102, infra, tit. PAROL EVIDENCE.

(r) Campbell v. Hodgson,[3] 1 Gow. 74.

(A) (A negotiable note made by an infant is voidable and not void; and if he, after coming of age, promise the payee that it shall be paid, the payee may negotiate it, and the holder may maintain an action in his own name against the maker. Reed v. Bachelder, 1 Metcalf R. 539.) [A negotiable note given by an infant even for necessaries, is void. Swasey v. Vanderheyden's Administrator, 10 Johns. 33.] {M'Crillis v. How, 3 New Hamp. Rep. 648.}

(B) (Where a partner procures a note to be made to his firm as accommodation paper, and transfers it for his sole benefit in the partnership name, a copartner, although wholly ignorant of the transaction, is liable to a third indorsee. Bank of St. Albans v. Gillilam, 23 Wend. R. 311. See also Smith v. Loring, 2 Ohio R. 467.)

(1) [See Nightingale v. Withington, ante, note—and Grey v. Cowper, Lawes Plead. in assumpsit, 671, in note. See also Heineccius de Vitiis Negotiationis Collybisticæ vel Cambialis; Chap. II. sect. 7.]

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xiii. 382. [2]Id. iii. 233. [3]Id. v. 468.

amount was not to be demanded until the estates of the drawer (for whose benefit the bill had been given) had been sold (s) (A).

A bill of exchange or promissory note expressed to be for value received is presumed to have been made upon a good consideration (t); but the failure of consideration may sometimes be proved as a defence against the payee of a bill although it would be no defence against a bonâ fide indorsee for value (u). As between the original parties to the bill, the total failure of consideration may be set up as a defence (x) (1) (B). It may be

Want of consideration.*

(s) Free v. Hawkins,[1] 1 Moore, 535; and see Hoare v. Graham, 3 Camp. 535; 4 Taunt. 731. {Or that the indorser, at the time of the transfer of a note by an indorsement in blank, agreed to be responsible at all events, without demand of the maker, or notice of non-payment. Barry v. Morse, 3 New Hamp. Rep. 182.}

(t) The presumption of consideration may be rebutted by evidence. Where a note expressed to be for value received was given to a boy only nine years old, whose father was living, the donor being in a state of imbecility, and not far from his death, it was a question for the jury whether it was given upon any legal consideration. Gratitude to the father, or affection to the son, is not, it seems, a sufficient consideration, and such a note is not good as a donatio mortis causâ. Holliday v. Atkinson,[2] 5 B. & C. 501. A cross-acceptance, with an exchange of securities, is a good consideration for a note. 1 Camp. 179; 3 East, 72; Co. B. L. 176, 510; Bayley, O. B. 205. Cowley v. Dunlop, 7 T. R. 571; and see Buckler v. Buttivant, 3 East, 72; Ex parte Walker, 4 Ves. 373.

(u) 2 T. R. 71; Com. 43. Morris v. Lee, Bayley on Bills, 397. Snelling v. Briggs, B. N. P. 284. Puget de Bras v. Forbes, 1 Esp. C. 117. Where, by the course of trade a bill was to be given by the drawer before the consideration was paid, and before payment the payee's agent became bankrupt, it was held that the payee could not recover against the drawer. Ibid. and see 1 Str. 674.

(x) 7 T. R. 121. Even although the defendant has promised to pay the bill, if no proof of payment be

* As to notice that the party relies on this defence, vide supra, 221.

(A) (Where a promissory note was given for the price of a horse, payable absolutely in ten days, and it was at the same time agreed, that if the horse did not meet the expectation of the person for whom he was purchased, and was returned within ten days, he should be received in lieu of the note, and the horse was in accordance with such contract returned, but not accepted by the vendor. It was held that it was not competent to give such collateral matter resting in parol in evidence in defence of the note. Isaac v. Elkins, 11 Vermont Rep. 679. See also Cunningham v. Wardwell, 2 Fairf. 466. [See Thompson v. Ketcham, 8 Johns. 189. Dow v. Tuttle, 4 Mass. Rep. 414. Bausman v. ——, stated 1 Dallas, 26.] But it has been held that evidence is admissible to prove that when a note was executed, there was an agreement to receive in part payment a debt on another person. Murchie v. Cook & M'Nab, 1 Alabama R. 41. In an action by the payee against the maker of a negotiable note in common form, the defendant cannot give in evidence, by way of defence, a parol agreement, that upon his giving a deed of real estate to the plaintiff, the note should be given up. Spring v. Lovett, Pick. R. 11, 417.)

(B) (In an action upon a promissory note, a total failure of consideration may be given in evidence to defeat it, when the suit is between the original parties; but it is otherwise where there is only a partial failure. That can only be remedied by a distinct suit. Washburn v. Picot, 3 Dev. 390; Slade v. Halstead, 7 Cow. 322; Hills v. Bannister, 8 Cow. 31. [Schoonmaker v. Roosa & al. 17 Johns. 301. Pearson v. Pearson, 7 Johns. 26. Ten Eyck v. Vanderpool, 8 Johns. 120. The People v. Howell, 4 Johns. 296. Fink v. Cox, 18 Johns. 145. Yelv. 4, b, note.] {In Massachusetts, it is held, that a note given without consideration, cannot for that reason be avoided, if no fraud or imposition has been practised. Bowers v. Hurd, 10 Mass. Rep. 427. And see Swift on Bills, 265.} A promissory note founded on the payee's agreement to convey to the promisor land belonging to a third person, is not invalid on the ground of want of consideration. Trask v. Vinsion, 2 Pickering, 105.)

(1) [Where a promissory note is given for the purchase of real property, and the title to the property fails, it is not a good defence against the note, unless the failure be total. Greenleaf v. Cook, 2 Wheat. 13. See Smith v. Sinclair, 15 Mass. Rep. 171. Lloyd v. Jewell & al. 1 Greenleaf, 352. Frisbie v. Hoffnagle, 11 Johns. 50. Although the consideration of a note fail by reason of the failure of the payee to perform an agreement, yet if a new agreement be made by the parties, as a substitute for the old, the failure of consideration creates no equity in favour of the maker against the indorsee, even in Virginia. Young v. Grundy, 7 Cranch, 548. A note given in consideration of the assignment of a patent right, which had been fraudulently obtained, was held to be void, although certain materials had been furnished, and certain instructions given by the payee to the maker. Bliss v. Negus, 8 Mass. Rep. 46. A note given on the sale of a chattel, fraudulently represented by the vendor to be of great value, when it was of no value, it was without consideration, and void, and evidence of these facts is admissible under the general issue, in an action on the note. Still v. Rood, 15 Johns. 230. So in an action on a note, the maker may show that the consideration was a quit-claim deed, executed by the plaintiff to him, of lands which the plaintiff induced him to purchase by fraudulently pretending to a title to them. Hawley v. Beeman, 1 Tyler, 238. Where the owner of a slave told him if he would procure good notes for $200, he should be immediately manumitted, and the slave procured the notes and delivered them to his master, who made out a deed of manumission, but refused to deliver the deed, and kept it and the notes for more than two years, during which time he held the slave as a slave; it was held in an action on one of the notes against the maker, that the consideration had wholly failed, and that the plaintiff could not recover. Petry v. Christy, 19 Johns. 53.]

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. ii. 105. [2]Id. xi. 286.

shown, that the *contract on which the bill was given is wholly rescinded, where it is entire; or, that it has been partially rescinded, where it consists of divisible parts (y).

Where a note was given by the defendant as an apprentice fee with his son, and the indentures were void for want of a stamp under the statute 8 Anne, it was held that the plaintiff could not recover, although he had maintained the defendant's son for the time (z); and in some cases, as between the original parties, the defendant may show what consideration was really given for the bill, and the plaintiff cannot recover more (a).

Where the defendant accepted a bill in consideration of partnership, and broke off the treaty, it was held that the plaintiff could recover no more than compensated the injury actually sustained (b). In order, however, to reduce the demand, the acceptor must prove a failure to a certain liquidated amount. It is now completely settled, that a partial failure which may be the subject of an action for unliquidated damages, and which leaves the whole of the contract still open and unrescinded, cannot be inquired into in an action on the bill or note (c), as, that the goods delivered are of bad quality (d); and in general, a party who has given a bill of exchange for the amount of a tradesman's bill, is precluded from the disputing the reasonableness of the charges (e).

Where the defendant having possession of the premises, gave a bill as a consideration for a lease, which the plaintiff refused to execute, it was held that the refusal constituted no defence to the action (f); but where a par- given within a specific time which is elapsed. Elmes v. Wills, 1 H. B. 64. Where the defendant accepted bills for goods supplied on a contract "to be of good quality and moderate price," held that it was no answer to the action on the bills that the goods turned out to be of inferior quality, and that the defendant had paid to the plaintiff much beyond what they sold for; in an action for the price, the value only can be recovered; but in an action upon the security, the party holding it is entitled to recover, unless there has been a total failure of consideration. Obbard v. Beetham,[1] 1 M. & M. 483. Even the forcible re-taking of goods, two months after the sale, is no defence to an action on a bill given for the price of goods. Stephens v. Wilkinson,[2] 2 B. & Ad. 320. So it is no defence to an action by the payee against the maker of a promissory note, that the payee had agreed to convey an estate to the maker in consideration of a sum of money then paid or secured to be paid to the maker (being the sum mentioned in the note), and of a further sum to be paid at a future day, and that such estate had never been conveyed. Spiller v. Westlake,[3] 2 B. & Ad. 155. Held also, Parke, J. dissentiente, that in all cases where, from defect of consideration, the original payees cannot recover on the note or bill, the indorsee to maintain an action against the maker or acceptor, must prove consideration given by himself or a prior indorsee, though he may have had no notice that such proof will be called for. Heath v. Sansom & Evans,[4] 2 B. & Ad. 291. In assumpsit on a bill accepted by the defendant, plea, stating a contract for certain work and payment in part by money, and the residue by the bill, averring the insufficiency of the work done, and that the money paid exceeded the value thereof; held, on motion for judgment non obstante vered. that the plea was bad, as showing only a partial failure of consideration for the money and the bill, alike applicable to both. Trickey v. Larne, 6 M. & W. 278; 8 Dowl. (P. C.) 174.

(y) Bayley on Bills, 236. Barber v. Backhouse, Peake's C. 61; where, in an action by the payee against the acceptor of a bill, the defendant paid part of the money into court, and proved that there was no consideration for the residue, the jury, under the direction of Lord Kenyon, found for the defendant.

(z) 7 T. R. 121.

(a) Darnell v. Williams,[5] 2 Starkie's C. 166. And see Wiffen v. Roberts, 1 Esp. C. 261. He may show that it was accepted for value as to part, and as an accommodation bill as to the residue. 2 Starkie's C. 166.

(b) Peake's C. 216.

(c) Morgan v. Richardson, 1 Camp. R. 40, n.; 2 Camp. R. 346. Fleming v. Simpson, 1 Camp. R. 40, n. Moggridge v. Jones, 14 East, 486; 3 Camp. C. 38; Bayley, O. B. 235. Day v. Nix,[6] 9 Moore, 159. See also Gascoyne v. Smith, 1 M. & Y. 338. Where the indorsee of a note for which the consideration was the transfer of a ship, was held to be entitled to recover, although the transfer was void for non-compliance with the Registry Acts, there being evidence to show that the defendant had been in possession for two years.

(d) Morgan v. Richardson, 7 East, 483; 3 Smith, 487; 1 Camp. 40; Camp. 346; 1 Esp. 159. Moggridge v. Jones, 3 Camp. 38; 14 East, 86. Tyers v. Gwynne, 2 Camp. 346.

(e) 1 Esp. C. 159, 261. Solomon v. Turner,[7] 1 Starkie's C. 51.

(f) 3 Camp. 38; 14 East, 484. Moggridge v. Jones, 3 Camp. 38.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxii. 363. [2]Id. xxii. 86. [3]Id. xxii. 49. [4]Id. xxii. 78. [5]Id. iii. 296. [6]Id. xvii. 121. [7]Id. ii. 291.

tial failure arises from fraud it is a defence to the action (g). Thus, where the bill is given for the price of goods fraudulently sold under a warranty, the breach of warranty is a bar to an action on the bill, if the defendant has tendered back the goods (h).

The failure of consideration is no defence against an indorsee for value(i) (A); neither is it any defence against a bonâ fide indorsee for value, that the bill was an accommodation bill, and that he knew it to be such (k) (B).

*It is no defence to an action by an indorsee against the acceptor, that the drawer of a bill, payable to his own order, had committed a secret act of bankruptcy, and that the assignees under the commission had withdrawn from the defendant a lease, pledged by the drawer to him as a security against the acceptance (l). If the indorsee knew that the bill was an accommodation bill, he can recover no more than the value he has paid; but if the bill was made upon a good consideration, he may recover the whole; and if he has not paid full value for it, he is a trustee for the indorser in respect of the surplus (m). *244

Where no consideration was given for the bill originally, or where it has been obtained by fraud or duress, it is, as has been seen, incumbent on the plaintiff to prove that he gave value for the bill (n). And though the bill was drawn on a good consideration, yet if it was afterwards lost or stolen, and afterwards came into the hands of an indorsee for value, yet it would be a good defence to show that he took it malâ fides with a knowledge of the circumstances; or even under circumstances which ought to have excited his suspicion as to the title of the party from whom he received it (o).

As the law presumes a bill to have been made on a good consideration, when the issue is joined on a replication that there was a consideration for the bill (p) to a plea that there was no consideration (q), the proof lies on the defendant (r). But where, to a general plea of no consideration, the plaintiff pleads some particular consideration, concluding with a verification which the defendant traverses, the plaintiff, by his form of pleading, takes,

(g) 2 Taunt. 2. Ledger v. Ewer, Peake's C. 216. Fleming v. Simpson, 1 Camp. 40. Secus, where a purchaser who has given the bill in payment does not repudiate the contract. Archer v. Bamford,[1] 3 Starkie's C. 175.

(h) Lewis v. Cosgrave, 2 Taunt. 2. The jury found for the plaintiff; but the court granted a new trial, on the ground of fraud. And see Solomon v. Turner, 1 Starkie's C. 51.

(i) Boehm v. Sterling, 7 T. R. 423. Even although it was indorsed over after it was due, the drawers (the defendants) having issued it nine months after the date.

(k) Smith v. Knox, 3 Esp. 46. But it would be otherwise if he knew that the bill was drawn for a particular purpose, 3 Esp 46. And see Charles v. Marsden, 1 Taunt. 224; Fentum v. Pocock,[2] 5 Taunt. 193; and per Eldon, C. Bank of Ireland v. Beresford, 6 Dow. 237.

(l) Arden v. Watkins, 3 East, 317. (m) Wiffen v. Roberts, 1 Esp. 261.

(n) Supra, 220.

(o) Supra, Ib. Co-executors cannot recover as bona fide holders for valuable consideration without notice, where one of them has notice, though in a different capacity, that the bill was accepted for accommodation. —— v. Adams, 1 Younge, 117.

(p) Such a replication is good on special demurrer. Prescott v. Long, 1 Mo. & R. 382, (n.)

(q) Such a plea is bad on special demurrer. Stoughton v. Earl of Kilmorey, 2 C. M. & R. 72; Mills v. Oddy, Ib. 103.

(r) Lucy v. Forrester, 2 C. M. & R. 59. Batley v. Catterall, 1 Mo. & R. 379. Percival v. Framplin, 2 C. M. & R. 180. In a similar case, Morgan v. Cresswell, 1 Mo. & R. 180, n., the plaintiff was nonsuited, but the court set aside the nonsuit. Ib.

(A) (A failure of the consideration of a promissory note by the misconduct of the holder, without the fault of the maker, will discharge the latter from his obligation to such holder. Kernier's Syndic v. Jumonville De Villier, 8 Louis. R. 550.)

(B) (S. P. Grant v. Ellicott, 7 Wend. 227.)

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xiv. 176. [2]Id. i. 72.

as it seems, the burthen of proof upon himself (s); unless, however, it thus appear from the form of pleading that the plaintiff meant to rely on the particular consideration alleged, and not simply to deny the truth of the plea, the proof of consideration will still, it seems, be incumbent on the defendant (t).

Action by an indorsee against the acceptor, plea, that the defendant accepted the bill for the accommodation of the drawer, and that the drawer did not give nor the defendant receive any consideration for his accepting or paying the bill, that the drawer indorsed to the plaintiff without any consideration, and that the plaintiff held the bill without consideration, and it was held that it was not incumbent on the plaintiff to begin and prove that *245 he gave value for *the bill, but that it is otherwise when the title of the plaintiff is impeached on the ground of fraud, duress, or of the bills having been lost or stolen (u). In an action by an indorsee against the acceptor, it is not sufficient in order to prove no consideration, to show that the drawer, on the day before the bill became due, procured all the indorsements to be made without consideration, to enable the action to be brought by the indorsee, upon the understanding that the money should be divided between one of the indorsees and the drawer; the want of consideration between the defendant and the drawer must be proved (x).

The declarations of a former holder are not evidence to prove want of consideration (y) (1), unless the title of the plaintiff be identical with that of the party who made the declaration; as where he took the bill from him after it became due (z), or sues as agent of the declarant (a).

Illegality. As against an original party to the bill or note, the defendant may give the illegality of the consideration in evidence in bar of the action (b). And (s) Batley v. Catterall, 1 Mo. & R. 379. In which case Alderson B. stated that he had so ruled in a previous case.

(t) Lowe v. Burrows,[1] 1 Mo. & R. 381; 4 N. & M. 366. There, to a general plea of no consideration, the plaintiff replied that the defendant did receive consideration for the said acceptance, videlicet two cows sold and delivered by the plaintiff to the defendant, and concluded to the country. Ld. Denman held that proof of consideration lay on the defendant, the replication being in substance a traverse of the plea, the videlicet and conclusion to the country showing that the words under the videlicet were not meant as introductory of new matter; and the Court refused a new trial.

(u) Mills v. Barber, 1 M. & W. 425. In Edwards v. Groves, 2 M. & W. 642, which was an action by the indorsee against the maker of a promissory note, the defendant pleaded that the note was given for a gaming debt, and indorsed to the plaintiff with notice thereof, and without consideration; replication, that the note was indorsed to the plaintiff without notice of the illegality, and for a good consideration, on which issue was joined, and it was held that the illegality was not so admitted as to render it necessary for the plaintiff to give any evidence of consideration in the first instance, but that in order to do so, the defendant ought to have proved the illegality by evidence. Upon a traverse of the indorsement of an accommodation bill to the plaintiff after it was due, it is for the defendant to begin and show that the bill when indorsed was due. Lewis v. Lady Parker,[2] 4 Ad. & Ell. 838.

(x) Whitaker v. Edmonds,[3] 1 Ad. & Ell. 638; 1 Mo. & R. 366.

(y) Smith v. De Wruitz,[4] R. & M. 212. Shaw v. Broom,[5] 4 D. & R. 730. Beauchamp v. Parry,[6] 1 B. & Ad. 19. Barough v. White,[7] 4 B. & C. 325.

(z) See the observations of Parke, B. infra, 261, note (y), Benson v. Marshall, cited 4 D. & R. 732.

(a) Benstead v. Levy, 1 B. & Ad. 89; 1 Mo. & R. 138.

(b) As where the bill had been accepted in a smuggling transaction. 1 Camp. C. 383. A bill given to a creditor to induce him to sign the certificate of a bankrupt is void in whatsoever hands it may be, and whatever the consideration given by the holder; but if given merely to keep him from taking steps to oppose the bankrupt in obtaining it, it will be good in the hands of a holder for value without notice. Birch v. Jervis,[8] 3 C. & P. 379. See Bankrupt Act, s. 125. A bill given for a wager exceeding 10*l*., although on a legal horse-race, is nevertheless void, even in the hands of an innocent indorsee. Shillito v. Thede,[9] 7 Bing. 405. See 16 C. 2, c. 7, 1, 3. Where the bill was given by the acceptor to the drawer for "difference in consols,"

(1) [Declarations of the payee of a note, when the note was in his hands, that he gave no consideration for it, cannot be given in evidence in an action by an indorsee against the maker. Burough v. White, Eng. Com. Law Reps. x. 345.]

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxix. 152. [2] Id. xxxi. 200. [3] Id. xxviii. 171. [4] Id. xxi. 419. [5] Id. xvi. 220. [6] Id. xx. 351. [7] Id. x. 345. [8] Id. xiv. 358. [9] Id. xx. 181.

so he may as against an indorsee who was privy to the illegal transaction (c). But no illegality between the original parties will affect an indorsee (except under the statutes against gaming and usury) (d), unless he had notice (e) of *the illegality, or took the bill after it become due, from one who had notice (f) (A). The question of malâ fides in such cases is usually a question of fact for the consideration of the jury (g). *246

Where a bill is given for the differences in a stock-jobbing transaction, an indorsee who is privy to the transaction cannot recover (h). Where the payee of such a bill indorsed it after it was due, it was held that the indorsee could not recover (i). Where part of the consideration is illegal the bill is void for the whole (k) (B).

Illegality of consideration.

In an action by an indorsee against the maker of a note, letters from the payee to the maker, proved to be contemporaneous with the making of the note, have been held to be evidence (l) to prove that it was illegal in its creation.

By the provisions of the stat. 9 Ann. c. 14, s. 1, securities for money or valuables won by gaming, &c. (m), or for repaying money knowingly lent for gaming, are void; and by the stat. 12 Ann. stat. 2, c. 16, s. 1, so are contracts for the payment of money lent on usury (n). And a bonâ fide holder it was held that the Court could not say that it necessarily meant illegal differences; and even if paid, it was available in the hands of a bona fide indorsee without notice. Day v. Stuart,[1] 6 Bing. 109; and 3 M. & P. 334. So a bill drawn by the broker for stock-jobbing differences, paid by him for the defendant, is not absolutely void, and the amount may be recovered by an innocent indorsee. Greenland v. Dyer,[2] 2 M. & Ry. 422. Where the bill was dated on a Sunday, the Court, in the absence of evidence, would not presume the acceptance to have been written on that day; and even if it had, such an act would not be an act of ordinary calling within the st. 29 C. 2, c. 7. Begbie v. Levy, 1 Cr. & J. 180. See ASSUMPSIT.

(c) 1 Esp. C. 389; 2 Esp. C. 589. [Brisbane v. Lestarjette, 1 Bay. 113. Wiggins et. al. v. Bush, 12 Johns. 306.]

(d) And now even such securities are (by st. 5 & 6 W. 4, c. 41, s. 1) not to be void, but to be decreed to have been given for an illegal consideration.

(e) Doug. 632. Wyatt v. Bulmer, 2 Esp. C. 538. Strongitharm v. Lukyn, 1 Esp. C. 389. Dugnall v. Wigley, 11 East, 43, where a broker got the bill discounted for illegal brokerage. An agreement between a petitioning creditor who has sued out a fiat in bankruptcy, and the bankrupt, for abandoning the prosecution, and the bankrupt's acceptance of a bill is void, inter partes. Davis v. Holding, 1 M. & M. 159. Where a statute prohibits a thing to be done, and does not expressly avoid the securities affected by the illegality, it is an available security unless the illegality appears on the face of the instrument, or unless the holder has notice. Broughton v. Manchester Waterworks,[3] 3 B. & A. 10.

(f) Doug. 632. [Perkins v. Challis, 1 N. Hamp. Rep. 254.]

(g) Per Lord Mansfield, Doug. 632. Although gross negligence be evidence of mala fides, it is not equivalent to it, and ought not to be left so to a jury. Goodman v. Harvey,[4] 4 Ad. & Ell. 870. See Crooke v. Jadis,[5] 6 C. & P. 191. Foster v. Pearson, 1 C. M. & R. 855. Backhouse v. Harrison, 3 Nev. & M. 388.

(h) Steers v. Lashley, 6 T. R. 61; 7 T. R. 630. Time bargains in foreign funds are not within the provisions of the st. 7 G. 2, c. 28, nor are they illegal at common law. Elsworth v. Cole, 2 M. & W. 31.

(i) 7 T. R. 630. Brown v. Turner, 2 Esp. C. 631.

(k) 2 Burr. 1002. Scott v. Gilmore, 2 Taunt. 226. Cruikshanks v. Rose, 1 Mo. & R. 101.

(l) Kent v. Lowen, 1 Camp. 177. Walsh v. Stockdale, cor. Abbott, J. Guildhall Sitt. after. Trin. Term, 1818.

(m) Bills substituted for those illegally given are equally void.

(n) The mere negotiation of a bill by a broker at exorbitant brokerage, the broker advancing no money himself, and being no party to the bill, will not avoid the bill under the stat. Dagnall v. Wigley, 11 East, 43. As to proof of usury, see the title.

(A) (In Pennsylvania the bona fide holder of a note given on an usurious contract will not be affected by the unlawfulness of the transaction, if he took it without knowledge of the usurious consideration. Creed v. Stephen, 6 Wharton, 223. So in New York, Huckley v. Sprague, 10 Wend. 113. Steele v. Whipple, 21 Id. 103. But in Kentucky and Louisiana it has been held that gaming and usurious considerations are exceptions to the general rule, and render the bill entirely void even in the hands of a bona fide holder without notice. Early v. M'Cart, 2 Dana, 415. Leblanc v. Sanglair, 12 Martin, 402.)

(B) (A promissory note given in consideration of the purchase of an improvement upon vacant government land, is for an illegal consideration and cannot be recovered. Merrell v. Legrand, 1 Howard, 150. So a note made in pursuance of a contract to suppress a prosecution for an assault and battery without leave of the court, is illegal and void. Vincent v. Groom, 1 Yerger, 430.)

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xix. 20. [2]Id. xvii. 315. [3]Id. v. 215. [4]Id. xxxi. 212. [5]Id. xv. 350.

could not recover on a bill usurious in its origin (o), or on a bill legal in its inception, but indorsed by the payee upon the usurious contract (p).

By the stat. 58 Geo. 3, c. 93, no bill or note, although it may have been given for an usurious consideration, shall be void in the hands of a bonâ fide indorsee who has discounted or paid value for it (q), without notice of the usury (r). And an innocent holder of a bill accepted to secure a gaming debt may recover against the drawer or indorser; the construction of the stat. (9 Anne, c. 14) is, that such a security shall not be used to enforce payment from the loser (s); but no illegality of this nature, after an indorsement in blank, will prejudice an innocent indorsee (t).

By 2 & 3 Vic. c. 37, bills and notes at less than 12 months' date, above 10*l.*, are not to be affected by the usury laws (u).

*247 *It has been held, that as between the original parties to the bill, the plaintiff could not recover where the consideration was money lent to the defendant, to obtain the liberation of the parties, and the ransom of the defendant's ship, contrary to the stat. 45 Geo. 3, c. 72 (x) (1); the sale of spirituous liquors in less quantities than 20*s.* value, although part of the consideration was also money lent (y); the executing a composition-deed, where the note or bill was given to secure a fraudulent preference over the other creditors (z); an illegal binding of an (a) apprentice for want of inserting the premium in the indentures (b).

A substituted bill, unless it be relieved from an illegality to which the original was liable, is open to the same objection, although it be given to a bonâ fide indorsee for value (c). But a security for no more than the prin-

(o) Lowe v. Waller, Doug. 735. See Lowes v. Mazzaredo,[1] 1 Starkie's C. 385.

(p) Lowes v. Mazzaredo, 2 Starkie's C. 385. Chapman v. Black, 2 B. & A. 589. But see Parr v. Eliason, 1 East, 92; Daniel v. Cartony, 1 Esp. C. 274.

(q) The statute does not extend to one who takes an usurious bill in payment of an antecedent debt, although without notice. Vallance v. Siddell,[2] 6 Ad. & Ell. 932.

(r) Since the above statute a bona fide indorsee of such a bill for value, may recover upon it. Wyatt v. Campbell, Chitty's Stat. 181, n.; M. & M. 80.

(s) Edwards v. Dick,[3] 4 B. & A. 212. In the case of Bowyer v. Bampton, (Str. 1155) the action was brought against the loser.

(t) See Parr v. Eliason, 3 Esp. 210; 1 East, 92. Daniel v. Cartony, 1 Esp. C. 274, i. e. if he does not by his declaration claim title through an usurious indorsement. See Lowes v. Mazzaredo,[1] 1 Starkie's C. 385.

(u) The exemption of 58 Geo. 3, c. 93, of bills and notes given for usurious consideration in the hands of innocent holders, was confined to the cases where such holders discount or pay a valuable consideration for such bills, and not where they receive them (although innocently) in satisfaction of an antecedent debt; the provisions of 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 98, are not confined merely to bills drawn for a time certain, not having more than three months to run, but apply also to such as are payable on demand. Vallance v. Siddell,[3] 6 Ad. & Ell. 932.

(x) Webb v. Brooke, 3 Taunt. 6.

(y) Scott v. Gillmore, 3 Taunt. 226. See Witham v. Lee, 4 Esp. 264.

(z) Cockshott v. Bennett, 2 T. R. 763. Recognized by Ld. Ellenborough in Steinman v. Magnus, 11 East, 390. Middleton v. Lord Onslow, 1 P. Wms. 768. Jackson v. Lomas, 4 T. R. 166. So if the stipulation were not for a larger sum, but for better security. Leicester v. Rose, 4 East, 372.

(a) Although the plaintiff had maintained the apprentice till he absconded. The stat. 8 Ann. c. 9, avoids such indentures. (Jackson v. Warwick, 7 T. R. 121.) Aliter, if the indentures be merely voidable, the binding being for less than seven years. Grant v. Welchman, 16 East, 207.

(b) For other instances, see above, 49, 71. It seems to have been held, in some cases, that a bill or note might be enforced which had been substituted for a bill, or given as a security for a debt which could not have been enforced. See Witham v. Lee, 4 Esp. C. 264; 3 Camp. 9, n. where the bill had been given for liquors contrary to 24 Geo. 2, c. 40, s. 12. But see 2 B. & P. 375. Although a bill drawn abroad in favour of an alien enemy cannot be enforced, it will be a good consideration for a subsequent promise in time of peace. Duhammel v. Pickering,[4] 2 Starkie's C. 90. And see Antoine v. Morshead,[5] 6 Taunt. 237.

(c) Chapman v. Black, 2 B. & A. 588.

(1) [A bill of exchange, expressed to be for the ransom of a vessel, and given as collateral security for the payment of the ransom bill, is a contract on which an action may be sustained in a court of common law—the plaintiff and payee being an alien friend. Maisonaire & al. v. Keating, 2 Gallison, 325. In an action on such bill, capture must be taken to be justifiable, and the ransom regular. Ibid.]

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. ii. 438. [2] Id. xxxiii. 249. [3] Id. vi. 405. [4] Id. iii. 260. [5] Id. i. 370.

cipal and legal interest being substituted for an usurious bond or bill, is binding (d).

Where the bonâ fide indorsee of a bill delivered it up to the payee, who informed him that the acceptance was forged, and received in place of it a bill on the defendant, it was held that the plaintiff might recover on the latter bill, though accepted by the defendant without consideration, unless it could be proved that the plaintiff had compounded a felony (e).

A note given to officers of Excise for the amount of penalties in which the defendant had been convicted, the conduct of the officer having been sanctioned by the commissioners, was held to be legal (f); so was a note given by the defendant who had been convicted of a misdemeanor at the quarter sessions, for which the parish officers had been bound over to prosecute, under the 32 Geo. 3, c. 57, and which was considered by the court in adjusting the quantum of punishment (g). So where the note was given to procure the discharge of a receiver appointed by the Court of Chancery, in custody *under the warrant of a Chancellor for not accounting, being for the amount of the debt and costs (h). So where the note was given by a friend of a debtor, to secure 5*s*. in the pound, in consideration that the plaintiff would sue out a commission of a bankrupt against the debtor (i). But as between the original parties to the bill, it is a defence to show that it was procured by fraud (k); and such a defence is also available against any indorsee with notice of the fraud (l); but not against a bonâ fide indorsee for value (m). *248

An agreement to forego a prosecution for a misdemeanour is illegal (n). But the plaintiff may recover on a bill given by the defendant for the costs of a civil suit, although the plaintiff has also instituted a prosecution against the defendant which is afterwards abandoned, unless it be distinctly proved that the abandonment was part of the consideration for the bill (o).

A declaration by an indorser, not proved to be the agent of the plaintiff, is inadmissible to prove usury (p).

If the consideration involve a fraud upon a third person, the plaintiff can- Fraud.
not recover. A. as a friend of the defendant agreed to give the plaintiff 70*l*. for certain goods on account of the defendant; a note given by the defendant to the plaintiff without the knowledge of A. to secure an additional sum cannot be enforced (q) (A).

(d) Barnes v. Hedley, 2 Taunt. 184. Wicks v. Gogerly, R. & M. 123. Preston v. Jackson,[1] 2 Starkie's C. 238. So if where part of the consideration being illegal, and part legal, two securities are substituted, and the giver manifest his election to ascribe the illegal claim to one he will be liable on the other. Habrey v. Richardson, Bayley on Bills, 59.

(e) Wallace v. Hardacre, 1 Camp. 45. And see Harding v. Cooper,[2] 1 Starkie's C. 467.

(f) Pilkington v. Green, 2 B. & P. 151. See also Sugars v. Brinkworth, 4 Camp. 46.

(g) Beeley v. Wingfield, 11 East, 46; 2 Wils. 341; 2 Esp. C. 643; 5 East, 294.

(h) Brett v. Close, 16 East, 293. Although only one of the parties to the suit assented to the discharge.

(i) Fry v. Malcolm,[3] 5 Taunt. 117. Bryant v. Christie,[4] 1 Starkie's C. 329.

(k) Ledger v. Ewer, Peake, 216; 2 Taunt. 24. (l) Ibid.

(m) Ibid. See 13 East, 182. Williams v. Thomas, 6 Esp. C. 16.

(n) Harding v. Cooper,[5] 1 Starkie's C. 467. In Collins v. Blantern, 2 Wils. 341, it was held that the compounding an indictment for perjury was a great offence, and that whether it was between the parties to the action (on a bond) or strangers, was immaterial.

(o) Ibid.

(p) Basset v. Dodgin,[6] 10 Bing. 40. To establish such a defence usury must be distinctly proved. Ib.

(q) Jackson v. Duchaire, 3 T. R. 551. On issue taken on a plea of no consideration (which is demurable) the defendant may show that the bill was void ab initio for fraud. Mills v. Oddy, 2 C. M. & R. 103.

(A) (The payment of a note cannot be avoided, in a suit at law, (by way of defence) upon the ground of fraud, unless the fraud goes to the whole consideration. Harlan v. Read, 3 Ohio, 285. Powell v. Waters, 8 Cow. 449. Vallett v. Parker, 6 Wend. 615. It is no fraud in the holder of a bill of exchange to make [1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. iii. 332. [2]Id. ii. 470. [3]Id. i. 34. [4]Id. ii. 412. [5]Id. ii. 470. [6]Id. xxv. 21.

Want of title in plaintiff.

The defendant may also prove in bar the want of title in the plaintiff; as, that one of the parties through whom the plaintiff claims had no legal right or authority to transfer the bill. In an action by the indorsee of a bill against the acceptor, the latter may prove the bankruptcy of the payee previous to the indorsement (r).

In an action by the indorsee against the drawer, a plea alleging that the plaintiff was never a bonâ fide holder for a good consideration does not admit proof of fraud, the malâ fides not being sufficiently alleged (s).

Satisfaction.

The defendant may, under the proper issue, give evidence to show that the bill has been discharged by payment or other satisfaction (t), or by the assent or laches of the holder (u) (A).

*249 *The acceptor may prove in bar that the holder has received satisfaction from the drawer (x); after payment by the drawer (who is not also the payee), the bill is no longer negotiable (y); and if a bill be paid, and re-issued after maturity, the holder cannot recover (z); but a promissory note paid and re-issued before maturity is available in the hands of a bonâ fide holder, without notice (a). If the drawer, who is also payee of a bill, take it up, he may indorse it over after it is due, without a fresh stamp (b); but it is otherwise where the bill is made payable to a third person (c). After twenty years, it is to be presumed that a promissory note or bill of exchange has been satisfied (d); and such a presumption may be left to a jury after the lapse of a much shorter period, although the Statute of Limitations has not been pleaded. The holder of a bill gives in a blank schedule under an insolvent act: this is not conclusive evidence to discharge the acceptor (e). Satisfaction to one of two parties is satisfaction to both (f). The payment of part by the acceptor to the payee, cannot be set up as a defence by the (r) 2 Esp. C. 611; 3 East, 322. But a bill payable to the order of the drawer, and accepted for his accommodation, does not pass to the assignees; and therefore an indorsement for value after the bankruptcy gives a right of action. Watson v. Hardacre, 1 Camp. 46, 173; 3 East, 321; 12 East, 656. See above, title by transfer.

(s) Ulber v. Rich, 2 P. & D. 579. Where in trover for a bill the defendant pleaded that the plaintiff indorsed it in blank, and that the party who became the holder pledged it with the defendant as a security for a debt; replication, that at the time the defendant received it, he knew that the party had no authority to pledge it; held good. Hilton v. Swan,[1] 5 Bing. N. C. 413.

(t) In assumpsit by holder against a prior indorsee of a note; plea, that the note was drawn for a debt, and indorsed by the defendant expressly as a security for the debt, and that such debt had been paid and the note delivered back to the party ultimately liable; held, on general demurrer, that the facts stated in the plea sufficiently showed that the note had been satisfied, and by the Stamp Act no longer negotiable. Bartrum v. Caddy, 1 P. & D. 207. And see Freakley v. Fox,[2] 9 B. & C. 130; and Thorogood v. Clarke,[3] 2 Starkie's C. 251. No presumption will, it seems, be drawn as to payment or satisfaction of a bill from the mere lapse of 20 years, unless the Statute of Limitations be pleaded. Du Belloix v. Lord Waterpark,[4] 1 D. & R. 17.

(u) Where a promissory note has been received in satisfaction of a bill sued upon, a replication of the non-payment of the note, is no answer to the plea. Sard v. Rhodes, 1 M. & W. 153. See note (l) post.

(x) 12 East, 317; 1 H. B. 89, n. Either wholly or in part, for the holder can recover the residue only from the acceptor. Bacon v. Searles, 1 H. B. 88. Pearson v. Dunlap, Cowp. 571.

(y) Beck v. Robley, 1 H. B. 89. But see the explanation of this doctrine in Callow v. Lawrence, 3 M. & S. 95.

(z) 3 Camp. 194. As to re-issuing notes, see 48 Geo. 3, c. 149, s. 13.

(a) 3 Camp. 149. Beck v. Robley, 1 H. B. 89; Bayley, O. B. 63.

(b) Callow v. Lawrence, 3 M. & S. 95.

(c) Beck v. Robley, 1 H. B. 89, n.

(d) Duffield v. Creed, 5 Esp. C. 52.

(e) 3 Camp. 13.

(f) Jacaud v. French, 12 East, 317. Ellison v. Dezell, 1 Sel. N. P. 172.

---

an arrangement with one of the indorsers, by which it is agreed that the whole burden shall be thrown upon the other indorsers; and that the indorser first mentioned is to be liable only in case they should be unable to pay. Farmers' Bank, &c. v. Vanmeter, 4 Rand. 553.)

(A) (The drawer's possession of a note with payee's indorsement is prima facie evidence of payment. Miller v. Reynolds, 5 Martin, N. S. 667.)

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxxv. 156. [2]Id. xvii. 342. [3]Id. iii. 337. [4]Id. xvi. 12.

acceptor against an indorsee, without notice (g). The holder may sue a prior indorser, although he has taken in execution and discharged a subsequent one (h); and an acceptor sued by the holder, and discharged under an insolvent act, is still liable to the drawer (i).

Where a defendant gave his acceptance as a security for the acceptances of a third person, but allowed his own acceptance to remain, knowing that the former acceptances had been paid by means of fresh acceptances, it was held that it must be presumed that he allowed his acceptance to remain as a security for such fresh acceptance. (k).

A composition with the acceptor, and the taking a third person's note as a security for the composition-money, operate as a satisfaction of the bill (l).

*The taking the separate notes of one of three partners after a dissolution *250 of partnership, under an agreement by deed with one partner, the holder strictly reserving his right as against all three, and retaining possession of the bills, does not, in the event of the new bills turning out to be unproductive, exclude the holder from his remedy against the other partners (m), although the separate bills have been from time to time renewed.

In assumpsit by the indorsee against maker; the plea alleged the making of a former note for the accommodation of the drawer and indorsement to the plaintiff, and that the indorsement of the note in the declaration was made and given to take up the former note, and had been paid; held, that the former allegation was surplusage, and that the defendant was not bound to produce the former note, nor give any evidence in support of that allegation (n).

Where in assumpsit against the maker of a joint and several note, the Release.
defendant pleaded a release to one of the joint makers, replication, that the release was given at the defendant's request, and in consideration thereof the defendant promised to pay as if no release had been given, held bad, as setting up a parol contract to avoid the release (o).

Prior parties are not discharged by a release to subsequent parties (p). It will be seen that an acceptor cannot be discharged without proof of express assent by the holder (q).

Where a bill has been renewed, and a warrant of attorney given to enter up judgment, the new security is no defence, unless judgment has been entered up (r); and it is no defence to an action on the first bill that the second is outstanding (s).

(g) Cooper v. Davies, 1 Esp. 463; 1 Camp. 35; Doug. 235. But see 2 Camp. 185. Although the holder has taken security from another party, or discharged him out of execution. 3 Esp. 46; 2 Bl. 1235; 2 B. & P. 62. A. makes a note in favour of B. without consideration, which B. indorses to C., with notice: B. becomes bankrupt, C. takes a dividend under the commission, and covenants not to sue B.; A. is still liable on the note (Mullett v. Thomson, 5 Esp. C. 178), sed quære, for the discharge of the principal discharges the surety.

(h) Hayling v. Mulhall, 2 Bl. R. 1523. English v. Darley, 2 B. & P. 62. So he may sue the drawer, after having taken the acceptor in execution, who has been discharged under the Lords Act. Macdonald v. Bovington, 4 T. R. 825. And the drawer may still recover from the acceptor, for the being taken in execution is no satisfaction as between the drawer and acceptor. Ibid.; and see 12 East, 317.

(i) 4 T. R. 825; 2 B. & P. 61. (k) Woodroffe v. Hayne,[1] 1 Carr. & P. 600.

(l) Lewis v. Jones,[2] 4 B. & C. 513. Perfect v. Musgrave, 6 Price, 111.

(m) Bedford v. Deakin, 2 B. & A. 210.

(n) Shearm v. Burnard, 2 P. & D. 365. And see further as to surplusage, Fitzgerald v. Williams, 6 Bing. N. C. 69.

(o) Brooks v. Stuart, 1 P. & D. 615; 10 Ad. and Ell. 854.

(p) Smith v. Knox, 3 Esp. C. 46; 2 Bl. 1235. Carstairs v. Rolleston,[3] 5 Taunt. 551; 1 Marsh. 207, where it was held, on demurrer, that a release by the holder to the payee of an accommodation note did not discharge the maker, the holder not having notice of the want of consideration.

(q) Vide infra, 252. (r) Norris v. Aylett, 2 Camp. 329; 3 East, 251.

(s) 3 East, 251; 5 T. R. 513.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xi. 490. [2]Id. x. 393. [3]Id. i. 184.

The acceptor who has paid the amount under a forged indorsement is still liable to the supposed indorser (t). A tender of the amount after the day of payment is not available (u).

Discharge by laches.

It has been seen, that where the action is brought against a drawer or indorser of a bill, it is incumbent on the plaintiff to prove that due diligence has been used in making presentment of the bill and giving notice of default. But an acceptor is not discharged by the neglect of the holder to present the bill (x).

Where a party accepted a bill payable at his banker's, and it was held that he was not discharged by the neglect of the holder to present it for several months after it had become due, although the bankers had funds of the acceptor in their hands, and in the meantime became bankrupts (y).

Giving time, &c. *251

The giving time to the principal (z) in general discharges the surety; *hence it is a good defence by a drawer or indorser of a bill to show that the holder has given time to the acceptor of a bill or maker of a note (a), or has compounded with him (b), or has taken a renewed bill from him (although the indorser afterwards approve of it) (c), or any other security (d) (A); but if the drawer or indorser consent to this, he is not dis(t) Cheap v. Harley, 3 T. R. 127. Smith v. Sheppard, Sel. Cas. 243.

(u) Hume v. Peploe, 8 East, 168; 5 Ves. 350.

(x) Farquhar v. Southey[1], 1 M. & M. 14. (y) Sebag v. Abitbol,[2] 1 Starkie's C. 79.

(z) The principle as to the indorsees is, that if the holder give time to a prior indorser, and then sue a subsequent one, he in effect breaks his faith with the former. Per Ld. Eldon, English v. Darley, 2 B. & P. 61. But it seems that the time must be given in such a way as to preclude the party who gives it from suing for that time. Time given to a subsequent indorser does not discharge a prior indorser. Giving time to the acceptor after judgment against him does not discharge the drawer. Pole v. Ford, 2 Ch. 125. Where the acceptor gave a second bill after the dishonour of the first, it was held to be a mere collateral security which did not discharge the drawer. Pring v. Clarkson,[3] 1 B. & C. 14; 2 D. & R. 78.

(a) 3 B. & P. 366; 2 Ves. jun. 540. Nisbit v. Smith, 2 Bro. C. C. 579; 2 B. & P. 61. Ex parte Smith, 3 Bro. C. C. 1. Tindal v. Brown, 1 T. R. 167; 2 T. R. 186. Even although the drawer had no effects in the hands of the acceptor. Gould v. Robson, 8 East, 567. Where time is given to the principal without communication with the surety, the latter is discharged, the creditor has made a new contract. See Boultbee v. Stubbs, 18 Ves. 20. Forbearance to sue the acceptor after protest and notice does not discharge the drawer. Walwyn v. St. Quintin, 1 B. & P. 652. Aliter, if the forbearance be before protest, or if the holder take security from the acceptor after protest. Ibid. A conditional agreement to give time to the acceptor on his paying part, which condition is not fully performed, does not discharge the indorsees. Badnall v. Samuel, 4 Price, 174. A bill of exchange being dishonoured, the acceptor transmitted a new bill for a larger amount to the payee, without any communication with him respecting the first; the payee discounted the second bill with the holder of the first, which he received back as part of the amount, and afterwards, for a valuable consideration, indorsed it to the plaintiff; it was held that the second bill was merely a collateral security, and that the receipt of it by the payee did not amount to giving time to the acceptor of the first bill, so as to exonerate the drawer. Pring v. Clarkson,[3] 1 B. & C. 14. See also Adams v. Bingley, 1 M. & W. 192 The taking a cognovit from the acceptor, by which the time of obtaining judgment against him is not deferred, will not discharge the drawer. Jay v. Warren,[4] 1 C. & P. 532. Price v. Edmonds,[5] 10 B. & C. 579. Lee v. Levi, 4 B. & C. 390.

(b) Ex parte Smith, Co. B. L. 6th edit. 168; 3 B. C. C. 1.

(c) 2 Camp. 179. And see Gould v. Robson, 8 East, 576. There the holder, after taking part payment from the acceptor, took another acceptance, payable at a future date; it was agreed that the holder should keep the original bill as a security, but the indorser, who was no party to the agreement, was held to be discharged. See also English v. Darley, 2 B. & P. 61. Hull v. Pitfield, 1 Wils. 48. Dillon v. Rimmer,[6] 1 Bing. 100. Kendrick v. Lomax, 2 C. & J. 405. Where on the defendant's asking for time on an acceptance, he gave another bill for the same amount, the plaintiff telling him that something was due for interest, and continuing to hold the first bill, the second being paid when due, it was held that the plaintiff was entitled to recover interest on the first bill. Lumley v. Musgrove, 4 Bing. 9.

(d) 2 B. & P. 60, per Ld. Eldon. But where an indorsee commenced actions against the acceptor and indorser, and without the privity of the latter took from the acceptor a warrant of attorney for debt (and costs, it was held, that as the fact could not have been pleaded generally in bar, it was inadmissible under the general issue. Lee v. Levi,[7] 4 B. & C. 390; 6 D. & R. 475.

(A) (But a mere agreement by the holder with the drawer for delay, without any consideration for it, and without any communication with the indorser, will not discharge the latter from a liability previously charged (e), and consequently evidence of assent may be adduced in reply to such evidence on the part of the defendant (f). Evidence of the mere forbearance to sue the acceptor is not sufficient (g). Where a party on the face of a note is liable as a principal, it is not competent to him to prove his liability only as surety (h).

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxii. 234. [2]Id. ii. 304. [3]Id. viii. 10. [4]Id. xi. 460. [5]Id. xxi. 135. [6]Id. viii. 263. [7]Id. x. 364.

*An acceptance is primâ facie evidence of the acceptor's having in his *252 hands effects of the drawer sufficient to answer the amount of the bill; he Waver (A).

(e) Clarke v. Devlin, 3 B. & P. 363. And see Withall v. Masterman, 2 Camp. 178. So in case of a promise to pay the bill after notice that time has been given. Stevens v. Lynch, 12 East, 38.

(f) 1 B. & P. 419; 10 East, 34; 11 Ves. jun. 411; 8 East, 576; 2 Esp. C. 515; 1 B. & P. 652; supra, note (e).

(g) Walwyn v. St. Quintin, 1 B. & P. 652. English v. Darley, 2 B. & P. 62, 3 Price, 533.

(h) Price v. Edmunds,[1] 10 B. & C. 578. And see Fentum v. Pococke, 5 Taunt. 192. Raggit v. Axmore, 4 Taunt. 730. Kerrison v. Cooke, 3 Camp. 362. The case of Laxton v. Peat, 2 Camp. 185, in which Lord Ellenborough ruled that in the case of a bill for the accommodation of the drawer, a holder, knowing the fact, who gave time to the drawer, discharged the acceptor, seems therefore to have been overruled. And see Harrison v. Courtald,[2] 3 B. & Ad. 36. Nicholls v. Norris, Ib. 41. The drawer is not discharged by giving time to an accommodation acceptor, Collott v. Haigh, 3 Camp. 281. Nor by giving time to the acceptor where the latter is the agent of the drawer. Clarke v. Noal, 3 Camp. 411.

---

fixed upon him. M'Lemore v. Powell, 12 Wheat. 554. The acceptance by the holder of a note, of a bond and warrant of attorney to confess judgment from the maker and first indorser, will not discharge the second indorser, although time for payment be given to the maker and first indorser, if the time so given be not greater than would have elapsed, had a suit been brought against the parties, and prosecuted with due diligence. Sizer v. Heacock, 23 Wendell, R. 81. Though where the holders of a promissory note on the day that it became due, accepted from the maker a cheque drawn upon a bank, by a firm consisting of the maker and a third person, dated six days afterwards, which check was to be in full satisfaction of the note, in case it was paid at maturity; it was held that this amounted to a suspension of the remedy against the maker, and discharged the indorser. Okie v. Spencer, 2 Whart. 253.)

[In Virginia, it has been decided that the holder of a note, who gives further time to the drawer, or enters into a new contract with him, does not thereby discharge the indorser. Bennett v. Maule, Gilmer, 305. In other states the English rule is enforced. Scarborough v. Harris, 1 Bay, 177. Haslett v. Ehrick, 1 Nott & McCord, 116. Moodie v. Morall, 1 Rep. Con. Ct. 371—Shaw v. Griffith, 7 Mass. Rep. 494—Crain v. Colwell, 8 Johns. 384. Lynch v. Reynolds, 16 Johns. 41. Hubbly v. Brown et al. ib. 70—Henry v. Donaghy, Addison's Rep. 39. M'Fadden v. Parker, 4 Dallas, 275, S. C. 3 Yeates, 496.] {But giving time to the drawer, by forbearing to proceed to the recovery of the money by legal process, and delaying to sue the indorsers for several years, will not operate as a discharge to the indorser, provided no time be given until after the note is protested. Sterling v. The Marietta, &c. Company, 11 Serg. & Rawle, 179.}

(A) (A stipulation by the indorser of a note to waive a notice of demand of payment, does not dispense with the demand itself. Backus v. Shepherd, 11 Wend. 629. And if the indorser of a dishonoured note says that the note would be paid, this is not a waver of notice. Creamer v. Perry, 17 Pick. 332. So the offer made by an indorser on demand of payment from him, to indorse another note, is no evidence of waver of notice. Laporte v. Landry, 5 Martin, N. S. 360. A subsequent promise to pay, is a waver by the indorser of the want of notice of non-payment by maker. Dulreys v. Mollere, 3 Martin, N. S. 320. See also Walker v. Laverty, 6 Munf. 487. Higgins v. Morrison's Ex'rs, 4 Dana, 102. But to make a promise of payment operate as a waver of demand and notice, the holder must show affirmatively and clearly, that the indorser promised with a full knowledge that he had not been charged as indorser by a regular demand and notice. Sice v. Cunningham, 1 Cow. 397. Jones v. Savage, 6 Wend. 658. Richter v. Selin, 8 Serg. & R. 438. Walters v. Swallow, 6 Whart. 446. Laurence v. Ralston, 3 Bibb. 102. Miller v. Hackley, 5 Johns. 385. May v. Coffin, 4 Mass. 347. Warder v. Tucker, 7 Mass. 452. Craig v. Brown, 3 Wash. C. C. 506. Fotheringham v. Rice, 1 Bay. 291. See also Ralston v. Bullits, 3 Bibb. 261. Aliter, if he have full knowledge of the facts. Ib. Richter v. Selin, 8 S. & R. 438. But where the fact of laches was not known, a promise by an indorser or drawer after maturity to pay the note or bill, is presumptive proof of demand and notice. Tebbetts v. Dowd, 23 Wend. 379.) {Parol evidence is not admissible to prove, that at the time a note of hand was transferred, by an indorsement in blank, the indorser agreed to be liable at all events, without a demand on the maker, and notice of non-payment. Barry v. Morse, 3 N. Hamps. Rep. 132.} (But see Brent's Ex'rs v. The Bank of the Metropolis, 1 Peters, 89.) [Where a party relies on a waver of demand and notice, he must allege the demand and notice in his declaration, in the same manner as if actually given, and proof of the waver is equivalent to proof of demand and notice. Norton v. Lewis, 2 Conn. Rep. 478. S. P. Williams v. Matthews, 3 Cowen, 252. And an agreement by an indorser, after the note was due, but before the days of grace had expired, to pay the amount, in consideration of time being given, was held to be a waver of demand and notice. Norton v. Lewis, ubi. sup. So if the indorser receive security of the maker to meet the indorsement. Bond & al. v. Farnham, 5 Mass. Rep. 170. Tower v. Durell, ubi. sup. Mead v. Small, 2 Greenleaf, 207. See Agan v. M'Manus, 11 Johns. 180, where it is said the doctrine as to waver of notice does not apply to promissory notes.]

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxi. 135. [2]Id. xxiii. 25.

is the principal debtor, and primarily liable to all parties, and cannot be discharged but by express agreement (i).

A complete acceptance may, in some instances, be waved by an express agreement to consider the acceptance at an end. Walpole, being the holder of a bill accepted by Pulteney, agreed to consider his acceptance as at an end, and wrote in his bill-book, "Mr. Pulteney's acceptance at an end." Walpole kept the bill three years without calling upon Pulteney, and then brought his action; the jury found for the plaintiff, but the Court of Exchequer granted a new trial, and the jury then found for the defendant (k).

The indorsees of a bill knowing that it had been accepted for the accommodation of the drawer, and possessing goods of the drawer, from the produce of which they expected payment, said, at a meeting of the acceptor's creditors, that they looked to the drawer, and should not come upon the acceptors, in consequence of which the latter assigned their property for the benefit of their creditors, and paid them 15*s.* in the pound. The drawer's goods turned out to be of little value, and the indorsees sued the acceptors; and Lord Ellenborough said, that if the plaintiffs' language amounted to an unconditional renunciation of all claim upon the acceptors, the latter were discharged; if only to a conditional promise not to resort to the acceptors, if they were satisfied elsewhere, they were not discharged; and the jury found for the plaintiffs (l).

Black arrested Peele as acceptor of a bill drawn by Dallas, but his attorney, on finding that the bill was for the accommodation of Dallas, took a security from Dallas, and sent word to Peele, that he had settled with Dallas, and that he (Peele) need give himself no farther trouble; Dallas became bankrupt, and Black sued Peele; but it was held, that as Black had in express words discharged Peele no action could be maintained (m). It is, however, to be observed, that a mere agreement, without proof of consideration, not to sue the acceptor, will not discharge him unless he be a surety for the drawer (n). But a verbal agreement by the indorsee at the time of the indorsement to him, that he should sue the acceptor only, was held to be a good bar to an action brought against a party by the indorsee (o).

The defendant may show that the plaintiff has received the whole of the consideration for the defendant's acceptance of the bill, for that is a waver of the acceptance in point of law (p); as, where the whole of the consideration was the consignment of goods to the defendant, and the policy of insurance upon them, and the plaintiff, the holder of the bill, signed a memorandum, stating that the defendant had refused to accept the bill, and *253 *that he the plaintiff accepted the bill of lading and policy, and undertook to apply the proceeds in payment of the bill (q).

If the holder of the bill receive part of the money from the drawer, and (i) Vere v. Lewis, 3 T. R. 182.

(k) Walpole v. Pulteney, cited Doug. 236, 237, 248, 249.
(l) Whatly v. Tricker, 1 Camp. 35.
(m) Black v. Peele, cited Doug. 236; see also, Mason v. Hunt, Doug. 284, 297, and Dingwall v. Dunster, Doug. 235, 247. A. & Co. having accepted a bill for B.'s accommodation, paid it into the hands of his banker without notice, who retained it in his possession several years, charging interest, but never debiting him with the amount of the bill. During this time they became bankers to A. & Co. but gave them no notice. The balance of B.'s account was always against him, that of A. & Co. in their favour, but seldom to the amount of the bill. Held that A. & Co. were not discharged unless the jury could infer an express agreement to discharge, or an express renunciation. Farquhar v. Southey,[1] 1 M. & M. 14.
(n) Parker v. Leigh,[2] 2 Starkie's C. 228. It was so held in Wilson v. Smith, on demurrer, K. B. Trin. T. 58 Geo. 3.
(o) Pike v. Street,[3] 1 M. & M. 226.
(p) Doug. 284, 297; Bay. 91.
(q) Mason v. Hunt, Doug. 284.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxii. 234. [2]Id. iii. 327. [3]Id. xxii. 299.

take a promise from him upon the back of the bill for the payment of the residue at an enlarged time, it is for the jury to say whether this is not a waver of the acceptance: but it is said, that it ought to be left to them with strong observations to show that it is (r). No neglect to call on the acceptor, or indulgence given to the other parties, will be evidence of a waver, so as to discharge the acceptor (s).

The acceptor of a bill for the accommodation of the drawer is not discharged by giving time to the drawer (t).

The payee and holder of a promissory note appointed the maker his executor; and it was held that it was a discharge of the note, and that an indorsement could not give a third person the right of action (u).

Indorsement after due.

It is no defence that the indorsement was made after an action had been commenced by the indorser (x).

The defendant, by proof that the bill was indorsed to the plaintiff after it became due, places the plaintiff in the situation of the indorser, and may give any evidence in bar of the plaintiff's claim which would have defeated that of the indorser (y) (1); and therefore, an indorsee for value by the payee, after the bill has become due, cannot recover against the acceptor of an accommodation bill (z); but if the holder before the bill became due, could have recovered, so also may the indorsee of the bill indorsed after it has become due (a). But if the drawer of a cheque issue it long after the date, a bonâ fide holder for value without notice may recover against the drawer, although the consideration for which the drawer delivered the bill has failed (b).

*If the bill be substituted for another, it is liable to the equities incident to *254

(r) Ellis v. Galindo, B. R. Mich. 24 Geo. 3, cited Doug. 270; Bayley, O. B. 91, quære.

(s) Dingwall v. Dunster, Doug. 247; and see note (m) ante.

(t) Raggit v. Axmore, 4 Taunt. 730. And the taking a cognovit for payment by instalments, from the drawer of a bill accepted for his accommodation does not discharge the acceptor, although the holder knew that it was an accommodation bill. Fentum v. Pocock,[1] 5 Taunt. 192; and see Bank of Ireland v. Beresford & others, 6 Dow. 237; Harrison v. Courtald,[2] 3 B. & Ad. 36; Nicholls v. Norris, ib. 41. See, on the contrary, Luxton v. Peat, 2 Camp. C. 185. Collott v. Haigh, 3 Camp. C. 281. Hill v. Read,[3] 1 D. & R. (N. P. C.) 26. Where a bill was accepted for the accommodation of the drawer, and time was given to the acceptor, it was held that the drawer was not discharged. Kerrison v. Cooke, 3 Camp. C. 362.

(u) Freakley v. Fox, 9 B. & C. 130. And see Wankford v. Wankford, 1 Salk. 290; Cheetham v. Ward, 1 B. & P. 630.

(x) Columbies v. Slim, 2 Ch. Ca. T. M. 637; yet qu. if the indorsee took the bill with knowledge of the fact.

(y) 3 T. R. 80, and in note; 7 T. R. 431. Good v. Coe, cited in Boehm v. Sterling, 7 T. R. 427; 7 T. R. 630. [Bowman v. Wood, 15 Mass. Rep. 535; Field v. Nickerson, 13 ib. 137; Gold v. Eddy, 1 ib. 2.]

(z) 1 Camp. 19. Charles v. Marsden, 1 Taunt. 224.

(a) 1 Camp. 383. But the taker of a banker's cheque for value nine months after the date, does not take it charged with the equity with which it was charged in the hands of the person from whom he received it, if he took it for value and without notice. Boehm v. Sterling, 2 Esp. C. 575; 7 T. R. 423. Morris v. Tee, Bayley on Bills, 4; 1 Taunt. 224; 3 Burr. 1516. Where the defendant gave to the husband a note payable to the wife, or order, which the husband, after it was due, indorsed to the plaintiff, held, first, that as the husband had a right to treat it as separate property, and had done so by indorsing it, no set-off could be maintained by the maker in respect of a debt due by the wife dum sola; and secondly, that the indorsee of the note, after it was due, was liable only to such equities as attached to the note itself, and not to claims arising out of collateral matters, Burough v. Moss,[4] 10 B. & C. 558. See as to a promissory note payable on demand, indorsed before any demand made. Banks v. Colwell, cited in Brown v. Davis, 3 T. R. 80.

(b) Boehm v. Sterling, 7 T. R. 423.

(1) [But the same demand and notice are required when a note is indorsed after it becomes due, as in the case of an indorsement before. Course v. Shackleford, 2 Nott & M'Cord, 283. Ecfert v. De Condres, 1 Rep. Con. Ct. 69. Rugely v. Davison, 2 ib. 33. Poole v. Tolleson, 1 M'Cord, 199. Stockman v. Riley, 2 M'Cord, 398. Berry v. Robinson, 9 Johns. 121. Dwight v. Emerson, 2 N. Hamp. Rep. 159. Bishop v. Dexter, 2 Conn. Rep. 419. Thayer v. Brackett, 12 Mass. Rep. 450. In Pennsylvania, however, it has been held that an indorsement of a note after it becomes due, is an original undertaking, and no demand on the former drawer or indorser, or notice to the indorser, is necessary. Bank of North America v. Barrier, 1 Yeates, 360.]

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. i. 72. [2]Id. xxiii. 25. [3]Id. xvi. 418. [4]Id. xxi. 128.

the one in lieu of which it was given; and, therefore, where a former bill was indorsed over in breach of trust after it was due, although for a valuable consideration, it was held that the indorsee could not recover on a bill substituted for this, the defendant having received notice from the party entitled not to pay it (c).

Where the defendant, the acceptor of a bill, would be entitled, on a recovery by the plaintiff against him, to recover back the amount, on an agreement by the plaintiff to indemnify him, it was held that the action was not maintainable (d).

The want of a proper stamp may be taken advantage of under a traverse of the drawing or acceptance (e).

Stamp.—Alteration (A). An objection to a bill or note for want of a proper stamp must be taken before the bill is read.

By the stat. 31 Geo. 3, c. 25, bills and notes cannot be stamped after they are made; but if a bill properly stamped be offered in evidence, the court will not inquire when it was so stamped.

By the stat. 43 Geo. 3, c. 127, a stamp of higher value, but of the same denomination, is sufficient (f).

A bill or note made abroad must be stamped according to the law of the country where it is made (g).

Where partners resident in Ireland, signed and indorsed a copper-plate impression of a bill of exchange, leaving blanks for the date, sum, and name of the drawee, and transmitted it to B. in England, it was held to be a bill of exchange, by relation, from the time of signing in Ireland, and that an English stamp was unnecessary (h).

Protest.—Alteration of bill. A protest must be stamped (i). Where a bill on the face of it appears to have been altered, it is for the plaintiff to show that such alteration was not improperly made (k).

If a complete bill be altered in a material point (l), after negotiation, or (c) Lee v. Zagury,[1] 1 Moore, 556.

(d) Carr v. Stephens,[2] 9 B. & C. 758. But where at the time of the defendant's lending his name to several bills as security for the acceptor, the holder stipulating not to sue the defendant on the bills, until the effects of the acceptor, which were thereby assigned to a trustee should have been sold, and the proceeds applied in payment of the bills and expenses; but the trustee, with the knowledge and assent of the defendant, omitted to take possession of the goods, and they were seized under a commission of bankruptcy; such an undertaking by the plaintiff does not operate as a covenant not to sue, nor furnish any answer to the action against the defendant on the bills. Lancaster v. Harrison,[3] 6 Bing. 726.

(e) Dawson v. M'Donald, 2 M. & W. 26. M'Dowell v. Lyster, 2 M. & W. 52. In proof of a traverse of making a cheque, the defendant may show that it was post-dated. Field v. Woods,[4] 7 Ad. & Ell. 114.

(f) See Taylor v. Hague, 2 East, 414; Farr v. Price, 1 East, 55; Chamberlain v. Porter, 1 N. R. 30.

(g) Alves v. Hodgson, 7 T. R. 241. See Farr v. Price, 1 East, 55; Taylor v. Hague, 2 East, 414. An I O U does not require a stamp, either as a note or as a receipt (1 Esp. 426; 1 Camp. 499; Chitty, 345), infra, tit. STAMP.

(h) Snaith v. Mingay, 1 M. & S. 87. (i) Sel. 312.

(k) Henman v. Dickenson,[5] 5 Bing. 183, doubting the authority of R. v. Cliviger, 2 T. R. 263.

(l) A party to a joint and several note paid part, and signed a joint note for the residue, an alteration

(A) (Where, in a note intended to be made for eight hundred dollars, indorsed by the payee for the accommodation of the maker, and delivered to him, the words "hundred dollars" were omitted, so that it purports to be a note for eight , the maker, without the assent of the indorser, may insert the words "hundred dollars." Boyd v. Brotherson, 10 Wend. 93. See however Norwich Bank v. Hyde, 13 Conn. R. 279. A joint and several promissory note was signed by A. B. and C., and afterwards A. acknowledged his signature to a witness who subscribed his name in the presence of A. and of the payee, without stating that he witnessed only the signatnre of A. In an aetion against the three makers it was held that this was not such an alteration of the instrument as to discharge B. and C. Beary v. Haines, 4 Wharton, 17. An alteration made in a note (increasing the amount for which it was given) without the knowledge or assent of the drawer, renders the note void. Pankey v. Mitchell, 1 Breese, 301. A memorandum put at the bottom of a note "payable at the house of A. &c." is not such an alteration as avoids the note. Nugent v. Delhomme, 2 Mart. R. 312.)

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. iv. 38. [2]Id. xvii. 491. [3]Id. xix. 216. [4]Id. xxxiv. 47. [5]Id. xv. 409.

after it has become due (m), though before negotiation, a fresh stamp is *necessary. But, in general, an alteration, to correct a mistake before negotiation, and with the acquiescence of the parties, is immaterial (n). An alteration in the sum or date is a material alteration (o). So is the alteration of the word "date" into the word "sight" (p), or of the name of the banking-house where it is payable (q) (1). So, where a promissory note on the day after the delivery to the payee, and expressed to be for value received, was altered by the addition of the words "for the good-will of a lease and trade" (r), the Court held that this alteration was material, because it afforded evidence of a fact which otherwise must have been proved aliunde, and pointed out to the holder to inquire whether the consideration had really passed. *255

The introduction of words after the acceptance of a bill which do not affect the responsibility of the parties, is immaterial (s). Thus it has been held that the introduction of a place of payment without the knowledge of the acceptor was immaterial, since it did not alter his liability (t).

without his knowledge, by interlining the words jointly and severally, avoids the note as to him; although to a letter requesting him to pay his joint and several note, he answered that it should meet his earliest intention. Perring v. Hone,[1] 4 Bingh. 28.

(m) Bowman v. Nichol, 1 Esp 81; 5 T. R. 537. Although altered with the consent of the acceptor (Ibid.) The bill in this case was originally drawn payable twenty-one days after date; whilst it was in the hands of the drawer it was altered, with the consent of the acceptor, to fifty-one days after date, and again, to twenty-four days after date, after the time of payment had expired.

(n) Kennerly v. Nash,[2] 1 Starkie's C. 452. Walton v. Hastings,[3] Ibid. 515. Jacobs v. Hart,[4] 2 Starkie's C. 45. Where the note, after being signed, but before it was given to the payee, with consent of all the parties, was altered, by erasing the words "on demand," and inserting "one month after date," and striking out the words "with interest," held, that it was to be considered as all one transaction, and not issued at the time of the alteration. Sherrington v. Jermyn,[5] 3 C. & P. 374. So where after an acceptance generally, it was altered with the consent of the acceptor, and whilst it remained in the drawer's hands by inserting a particular place of payment in the acceptance. Stevens v. Lloyd,[6] M. & M. 292. See also Leykariff v. Ashford,[7] 12 Moore, 281. So an alteration in the date, according to the original intention of the parties, and to correct a mistake, does not vitiate the instrument, nor render a fresh stamp necessary; nor does a subsequent addition of a place where to be made payable in the acceptance with the acquiescence of the acceptor. Jacob v. Hart, 2 M. & S. 143. But now see 1 & 2 Geo. 4, c. 78, s. 1.

(o) Cordwell v. Martin, 1 Camp. 79, 180; 9 East, 190. Master v. Miller, 4 T. R. 320; 5 T. R. 367; 2 H. B. 141; 1 Anst. 225. Trapp v. Spearman, 3 Esp. 57.

(p) Long v. Moore, 3 Esp. C. 155; but see 1 Taunt. 20.

(q) Tidmarsh v. Grover, 1 M. & S. 735. (r) Knill v. Williams, 10 East, 431.

(s) Marson v. Petit, 1 Camp. 82, n. Jacobs v. Hart, 2 Starkie's C. 45.

(t) Marson v. Petit, 1 Camp. 82, n. 3 Esp. C. 57. Such an alteration would now be material, in consequence of the late decision in the House of Lords, in Rowe v. Young, supra, 209, and so held in Cowie v. Halsall,[8] 4 B. & A. 197. M'Intosh v. Haydon,[9] 1 R. & M. 362. But see Fayle v. Bird, supra, 209. It has

(1) [In a note payable in "merchantable neat stock," an insertion of the word "young," after the word "merchantable" is a material alteration, and if made by the promisee designedly, destroys the validity of the note; and the promisee is not at liberty to prove the contract by other evidence. Martendale v. Follett, 1 N. Hamp. Rep. 95. But by inserting the word "good" before "merchantable wool," the note is not avoided; for the law would have intended that the wool should be good. The State v. Cilley, cited Ibid. p. 97. So in Hunt v. Adams, 6 Mass. Rep. 519, the insertion of the word "year," in the date of a note, was held not to avoid it, because the law would have supplied the word. But where a person not present at the execution of a note, afterwards subscribed his name thereto as a witness, at the instigation of the payee, it was held to avoid the note—as by a statute of Massachusetts, a note that has an attesting witness is not within the statute of limitations. Homer v. Wallis, 11 Mass. Rep. 309.

An alteration in the date of a note by the payee, {without the consent of the drawer,} whereby the time of payment is retarded, avoids it, although in the hands of an innocent indorsee for a valuable consideration. Bank of U. States v. Russel, 3 Yeates, 391. {As will an alteration of the date, though it does not appear from what date it was altered. Stephens v. Graham, 7 Serg. & Rawle, 505.} But an alteration in the date of an assignment on a note does not affect the claim of an assignee on the drawer. Griffith v. Cox, 1 Overton's Rep. 210.

In Peepoon v. Stagg, 1 Nott & M'Cord, 102, it was held that the insertion, by the holder of a due bill or promissory note, of the words "or order," destroyed its validity.

The law will not presume that an alteration, apparent on the face of a note, was made after its execution —but this, it seems is a question for the jury to decide. Cumberland Bank v. Hall, 1 Halstead's Rep. 215.]

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xiii. 328. [2]Id. ii. 466. [3]Id. ii. 362. [4]Id. iii. 237. [5]Id. xiv. 356. [6]Id. xxii. 310. [7]Id. xxii. 450. [8]Id. vi. 399. [9]Id. xxi. 456.

An exchange of acceptances is a sufficient negotiation to render a new stamp necessary (u); and so it is said is the delivery to the drawer of a bill drawn for his accommodation, and payable to his own order (x). So where a bill indorsed by the drawer was left with the drawee for acceptance, who altered the date before he accepted it (y).

Where the drawee, upon presentment of the bill for acceptance, altered it as to the time of payment, and accepted it so altered, it was held that he thereby vacated the bill as to the drawer and indorsers; but that as the holder acquiesced, it was good as against him and the acceptor (z).

*256 *An alteration of the bill in the hands of the payee will defeat the action of the indorser, although he was not privy to the alteration (a).

If a note be signed by A., and in consequence of a subsequent arrangement B. sign the note as a surety, he is not bound without a new stamp (b).

Where a bill or a note is void for want of a proper stamp, the plaintiff may go into evidence of the original consideration (c).

Where the alteration is made by consent of the parties, and before negotiation, a new stamp is unnecessary (d); as, where A. being indebted to B., the latter drew a bill upon him at three months for the amount, and the bill being sent to A. for acceptance, he requested the time to be altered from three months to five, to which the drawer consented (e).

It is, it seems, incumbent on the plaintiff to prove that an alteration apparent on the face of the bill was made previous to negotiation (f).

Where the alteration is made to correct a mistake, and in furtherance of the intention of the parties, a new stamp is unnecessary: as where, in a bill intended to be negotiable and payable to the defendant, the drawer, the words "or order" were omitted, and the bill having been indorsed over to the plaintiff the next day, was returned by him to the drawer on the same day, and the mistake was then rectified (g); the jury finding upon the evidence that such was the original intention of the parties, the Court of King's Bench afterwards held that the alteration was allowable. But where a bill dated on the 1st of August, was drawn at two months date, payable to the order of the drawer, and after acceptance by the defendant was re-delivered by him to the drawer as a security for a debt, and after the latter had kept it twenty days the date was altered to the twenty-first, by the consent of the acceptor, and before the indorsement and delivery to a third person, it was held that a new stamp was necessary, since the bill was drawn according to the original intention of the parties, and was available in that form (h).

since been held that an alteration of a general acceptance of a bill by the addition of a place of payment without the privity of the acceptor discharges him. Desbrow v. Wetherley, 1 Mo. & R. 438.

(u) Cardwell v. Martin, 1 Camp. 79, 180; 9 East, 190.

(x) Calvert v. Roberts, 3 Camp. 342.

(y) Outhwaite v. Luntley, 4 Camp. 179.

(z) Paton v. Winter, 1 Taunt. 420. And held that no action would lie at the suit of the holder against the acceptor for rendering the bill invalid. But see Walton v. Hastings,[1] 1 Starkie's C. 215; 4 Camp. 223. Long v. Moore, 3 Esp. 155.

(a) Master & others v. Miller, 4 T. R. 320; 5 T. R. 367; 2 H. B. 141; 1 Ans. 225.

(b) Clerk v. Blackstock,[2] Holt's C. 474.

(c) 1 East, 258; 6 T. R. 52; 7 T. R. 241; 2 B. & P. 118. Brown v. Watts, 1 Taunt. 353.

(d) Johnson v. The Duke of Marlborough,[3] 2 Starkie's C. 313. Kennerley v. Nash,[4] 1 Starkie's C. 452.

(e) Kennerley v. Nash,[4] 1 Starkie's C. 452.

(f) Johnson v. The Duke of Marlborough,[3] 2 Starkie's C. 313; Phillips on Evidence, 495, edit. 1824.

(g) Kershaw v. Cox, 3 Esp. C. 246, cor. Le Blanc, J. and afterwards by the Court of K. B. And see Bathe v. Taylor, 15 East, 412; Cole v. Parkin, 12 East, 471; Brutt v. Picard,[5] 1 R. & M. 37. The remedying an accidental omission by inserting the words or order does not vitiate the bill. Byron v. Thompson, 3 P. & D. 71. In assumpsit by indorsee against acceptor, plea, that before the bill became due and was in full force and effect, the date was altered; held bad, as not alleging the alteration to have been made after acceptance. Langton v. Lazarus, 5 M. & W. 629.

(h) Bathe v. Taylor,[6] 15 East, 412.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. ii. 362. [2]Id. iii. 159. [3]Id. iii. 360. [4]Id. ii, 486. [5]Id. xxi. 376. [6]Id. xii. 180.

A bill properly stamped and put into circulation, and afterwards taken up by the drawer, may again be circulated without a new stamp. It is negotiable in infinitum, till it has been paid by or discharged on behalf of the acceptor (i); and therefore, where the drawer of a bill payable to his own order, indorsed it over to A., who indorsed it to B., who returned it to the drawer on payment of the amount by the latter, having first struck out his own and A.'s indorsement, and the drawer indorsed it to the plaintiff after *it was due, it was held that he might recover against the acceptor *257 without a new stamp.

In order to prove that a bill dated at Paris was drawn in England, it has been held to be insufficient to prove that the drawer was in England at the time of the date (k).

The drawer may prove that he tendered the amount in a reasonable time after notice of the dishonour (l). A tender on the day following that of the notice was held to be in time (m).

III. It was a general rule in criminal cases, that no one could prove that a bill drawn, accepted or indorsed in his name, was a forgery (n); but it seems that the rule was confined to criminal proceedings, although it has been held in a civil case that the supposed drawer of a bill was not competent to prove that he did not draw it (o). This anomalous rule is now defeated by the late statute. A party to a bill is competent to prove that it is void (p), although the contrary was once held (q) (A); and a party to a Competency.

(i) Per Lord Ellenborough, in Callow v. Lawrence, 3 M. & S. 97. Note, this case was held to be distinguishable from that of Beck v. Robley (1 H. B. 89, in the note), for there the bill was payable not to the order of the drawer, but of a third person; and if the drawer, on taking up the bill, could have transferred it, the payee would have been wrongfully made liable. } Contra Bire v. Moreau, 2 Carr. & Payne, 376.}

(k) Abraham v. Du Bois, 4 Camp. 269. (l) Walker v. Barnes,[1] 1 Marsh. 36.

(m) Ibid. (n) Unless he has been rendered competent by payment, &c. See tit. FORGERY.

(o) 12 Mod. 345; Holt, 297. But see tit. FORGERY.—INTEREST.

(p) Walton v. Shelley, 1 T. R. 296, where it was held that an indorser was not competent to prove the consideration to have been usurious.

(q) 7 T. R. 62; Esp. C. 332; Peake's L. Ev. 181.

(A) (The decisions in the United States, on this subject vary. There is a difference between the questions, as to the validity of a defence impeaching the character of an instrument, and the competency of a witness invalidating a paper, to which he may have given currency, or his sanction. The case of Fox et al. v. Whitney, 16 Mass. Rep. 118, was decided without regard to this distinction; but it was made the foundation of the opinion of one of the judges in Winton v. Saidler, 3 Johns. C. 185.

The principle laid down in Walton v. Shelly, 1 T. R. 296, has been, almost wherever it has been adopted, confined to negotiable instruments, which have been negotiated. Blagg v. Phœnix Ins. Co., 3 Wash. C. C. R. 5. The rule has been further restrained, so as to permit a party to a negotiable paper, to prove facts subsequent to the due execution of the note, and which do not invalidate it in its inception, though they go to destroy the title of the holder. Woodhull v. Holmes, 10 Johns. R. 231. Skilding et al. v. Warren, 15 Johns R. 270. An indorsee of a promissory note is a competent witness to prove a payment of it by the maker. White v. Kibling, 11 Johns. R. 128; and an indorser may prove an agreement between the maker and the payee, and may show that it had not been performed, and that the indorsee had notice at the time of the indorsement to him of the condition on which the note was given. M'Fadden v. Maxwell, 17 Johns. R. 188. Thus a second indorser of a note is a competent witness to prove, that the third indorser had said, that he had received and discounted it at usurious interest. Powell v. Waters, 17 Johns. R. 176. So likewise an indorser of a note is a good witness to prove, that the indorsement was made after the note was due. Baker v. Arnold, 1 Caines' R. 258. The payee of a note, who had indorsed it with a saving of his own liability, was received as a competent witness, to prove an alteration of the note after its execution. Parker v. Hanson, 7 Mass. Rep. 470.

The decisions confining the rule to negotiable instruments are numerous. A grantor was admitted to prove, that he never had any interest in the lands granted, and that the conveyance from him under which the defendants claimed was without consideration. M'Ferran v. Powers, 1 Serg. & Rawle, 102. Brown v. Downing et al. 4 Serg. & Rawle, 494. Loker v. Haynes, 11 Mass. Rep. 498. Doe v. Stokes, 2 Hawks. 235. Croft v. Arthur, 3 Desauss, 223. Wilson v. Speed, 3 Cranch, 283. The assignor of a bond is a competent witness, to show, that he obtained it fraudulently. Baring v. Shippen, 2 Binn. 154. In Pleasants v. Pemberton, 2 Dall. 196, a guardian whose ward was the plaintiff, was admitted to prove, that a receipt given by him to the defendant for so many thousand dollars, meant continental dollars. Even an indorser will not bill is competent to defeat or support the action, unless he be directly interested in the event, or unless the verdict would be evidence for or against him.

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. i. 91.

The incompetency of a party to the bill results from the consideration, that if his testimony were to prevail he would stand in a better relative situation than he would do if a contrary verdict were given. In the usual and natural course of a bill in theory, every party to it seems to be competent. The transfer of the bill is the assignment of a debt due from the drawee to the drawer, the drawee having money of the drawer in his hands. In such a state of things, the drawer and indorsers, and drawee or acceptor, must, it seems, in general be competent, since ultimately the drawer or acceptor will be liable for the amount in case it should be recovered from any other party; and no party can either gain or lose by aiding or opposing a recovery in an action between any other parties. In practice, this relative situation of the parties is liable to constant disturbance; and as bills of exchange are used as the instruments of adjusting the most complicated and varied transactions, the relative situation of the parties is frequently altered. The following decisions have taken place on this subject:

Drawer. In an action by an indorsee against the acceptor of a bill payable to the be precluded from giving evidence to destroy a note, which has not been negotiated until after the day of payment. Baird v. Cochran et al. 4 Serg. & Rawle, 397; and so it would seem, where it has never been negotiated. Fox et al. v. Whitney, 16 Mass. Rep. 118. For the purpose of discrediting a bill of lading, if not of denying its authenticity, the testamentary declaration of the captain of a vessel was received in evidence, though the instrument purported to have been signed by him. Blagg v. Phœnix Ins. Co. 3 Wash. C. C. R. 5. After an indorsement in blank of a bill of lading, an indorser, the consignee of the goods to which the bill referred, was admitted as a witness for his consignors in an action brought by them against the purchasers of the goods for their price. Brown et al. v. Babcock et al. 3 Mass. Rep. 29.

In opposition to the case just cited, several are found, which extend the rule beyond negotiable instruments, and reject the distinction as to facts subsequent to the execution of the paper. It has been held that the trustees under a deed, could not be admitted to give parol evidence to defeat or destroy the trust deed. Wilson v. Wilson, 1 Desauss, 230. To prove that the day of payment in a bond was by mutual mistake, ante-dated, the assignor was offered as a witness in an action brought against the obligee; but his testimony was rejected. Davis v. Cammel, 1 Addison, 233. So the assignor of a bond was refused as a witness to prove payment. Canty v. Sumter, 2 Bay, R. 93; or that the contract between the assignees and obligor was founded on an usurious transaction, Gilliam v. Clay et al. 3 Leigh, R. 590. It has been decided that a captain of a vessel should not be allowed to prove, that he did not receive the goods mentioned in his bill of lading. Anonymous—cited in Pleasants v. Pemberton, 2 Dall. 196.

The rule that a party to a negotiable instrument shall not be permitted to impeach it, has been adopted in N. Hampshire, Massachusetts, Pennsylvania, and it would seem, Virginia and South Carolina. Bank of U. S. v. Dunn, 6 Peters, 51. Houghton v. Page, 1 N. Hamp. Rep. 60. Warren v. Merry, 3 Mass. Rep. 27. Parker v. Lovejoy, 3 Id. 565. Churchill v. Suter, 4 Id. 156. Barker v. Prentiss, 6 Id. 430. Jones v. Coolidge, 7 Id. 199. Manning ex. v. Wheatland, 10 Id. 506. Hartford Bank v. Barry, 17 Id. 94. Packard v. Richardson et al. 17 Id. 122. Knights v. Putnam, 3 Pick. R. 184. Stills v. Lynch, 2 Dallas, 194. Respublica v. Ross, 2 Id. 242. Shaw v. Wallis, 2 Yeates, 17. Hepburn v. Cassell, 6 Serg. & Rawle, 113. Bank of Montgomery v. Walker, 9 Id. 229. Wilson v. Lennox, 1 Cranch, 194, but qu. as to the dictum of Chase, J., that upon the statutes of gaming, usury and the like, but in no other cases, are the drawers, indorsers, &c., competent witnesses. 1 Id. 202, n. It was held, however, in Taylor et al. v. Beck, 3 Randolph, 316, that the indorsee of a note, whether negotiable or not, is a competent witness in a suit between the holder and maker, to prove that the note was given for an usurious consideration.

In Connecticut, the English doctrine is adopted, that a party to a negotiable instrument, who is divested of his interest, is a competent witness to prove it void in its creation. Townsend v. Bush, 1 Conn. Rep. 260.

In New York, although the rule that a party to a negotiable paper shall not be permitted to invalidate it, was in several instances acknowledged, Winton v. Saidler, 3 Johns. C. 185, Coleman v. Wise, 2 Johns. 165, Mann v. Swann, 14 Id. 270; it must now be considered as there exploded. One whose name appears upon negotiable paper, may notwithstanding be a witness to prove that it was void in its inception for usury. Stafford v. Rice, 5 Cowen, 23. The maker, or other person whose name appears upon a promissory note is a competent witness to show that it was void in its creation. Utica Bank v. Hilliard, 5 Cowen, 153. Jackson v. Packard, 6 Wendell, R. 415.

In Haig v. Newton, 1 Rep. Consti. Ct. 423, it was questioned whether this rule was the law of South Carolina. It appears to be doubtful, whether this rule has been adopted in Kentucky. Although one who gives currency to a note, cannot (as some judges say) be received as a witness to invalidate it; yet the rule cannot apply to prevent the witness to depose to subsequent facts, unless he be interested. Duncan v. Pindell, 2 Pirtle's Dig. 539. (4 Bibb, 330–2). The assignor of a note is a competent witness to prove usury in an action by the assignee v. the payor. 2 Pirtle's Dig. 542. (5 Munroe, 215).)

order of the drawer, the latter is competent to prove usury (r), or that the bill has been paid (s); but it would be otherwise if the bill were accepted *for the accommodation of the drawer, who would then be liable to the *258 costs of the defendant, if the plaintiff succeeded (t). He would still be competent if he had become bankrupt and obtained his certificate (u).

In an action by the indorsee against the acceptor, the drawer is competent to prove the defendant's hand-writing (x) (A).

A joint maker of a note is a competent witness for the plaintiff, for he Maker.
stands indifferent, being liable, in the event of the plaintiff's failure, to an action at the suit of the plaintiff for the whole, with a claim on the defendant for a moiety, and in case the plaintiff should succeed, being liable to the defendant for contribution (y) (1).

In an action against the indorser of a note the maker is competent to prove that the date has been altered (z).

But a joint maker of a promissory note is not competent to prove a plea of illegality of consideration, in an action brought against the other maker alone (a).

In an action by the holder against the drawer, the acceptor is competent Acceptor.
to prove that he had no effects of the drawer in his hands (b).

An acceptor is not competent to prove for the defendant, in an action by the indorsee against the drawer, that he accepted the bill in discharge of part of a debt due from him to the plaintiff, and that it was delivered to the plaintiff on condition that if he obtained cash for it he might deduct the amount of the debt due to him from the acceptor; for he would be bound to indemnify the defendant against the costs, if the plaintiff succeeded (c).

(r) Beard v. Ackerman, 5 Esp. 119. Where the defence was a gaming consideration, the drawer was called by the defendant. It was objected that he was interested to defeat the plaintiff, being liable for treble penalties if he recovered, but not if he failed. But it was held that the witness was competent, since if the plaintiff failed the witness was liable to him; if he succeeded, the witness might deliver himself from the penalties by refunding within the time. Habner v. Richardson, Holroyd, J., 1818, Manning's Index, 327.

(s) Hamphrey v. Moxon, Peake's C. 52. See also Phetheon v. Whitmore, Peake's C. 40. Contra, Adams v. Lingard, Peake's C. 117. Accord. Jordaine v. Lashbrook, 7 T. R. 604. See also Williams v. Keats,[1] 2 Starkie, 290. It is no objection that the witness is a prisoner on a charge of having forged the bill. Barber v. Gingle, 3 Esp. C. 62. In an action by the indorsee against the acceptor, the drawer is a competent witness for the plaintiff, although he state that the defendant has taken the benefit of the Insolvent Act, and that his name was inserted as a creditor in the schedule. Cropley v. Corner,[2] 4 C. & P. 21.

(t) Jones v. Brooke, 4 Taunt. 464. Hardwick v. Blanchard,[3] Gow. 113.

(u) In an action by the indorsee against the acceptor, the drawer is a competent witness for the latter, although he state that the defendant has taken the benefit of the Insolvent Act, and that his name is inserted as a creditor in the schedule. Cropley v. Corner,[2] 4 C. & P. 21.

(x) Dickins v. Prentice, 4 Esp. C. 32. The objection in this case was, that forgery was imputed to the witness by the defendant.

(y) York v. Blott, 5 M. & S. 71. See Str. 35.

(z) Levy v. Essex, Chitty, O. B. 284; 4 Esp. 37; Peake's L. Ev. 102. And he may be called in such an action to prove a notice. Venning v. Shuttleworth, Bayley on Bills, 422. Ashton v. Longes, 1 Mo. & M. 127.

(a) Slegg v. Phillips, 4 B. & Ad. 852. Nor is he rendered competent by having paid half the amount of the note before action brought, the note on the face of it bearing interest, and a year's interest having been due at the time of the payment, for he is liable to contribution in respect of interest. Ib.

(b) Staples v. Okines, 1 Esp. C. 332; Peake's L. E. 154. Legge v. Thorpe, 2 Camp. 310. It has been held, that in an action against the drawer the acceptor is not a competent witness for the defendant, to prove a set-off. Mainwaring v. Mytton,[4] 1 Starkie's C. 83. But qu. and see Vol. I. p. 131. Bayley on Bills, 424, 4th ed. Reed v. Furnival, 1 C. & M. 538.

(c) Edmonds v. Lowe,[5] 8 B. & C. 407.

(A) (In a suit brought by the indorsee of a bill against the acceptor, the drawer is a competent witness, unless there are circumstances in the case showing a greater interest in favour of one party than the other. Jackson v. Packer and others, 13 Connecticut R. 342.)

(1) [In an action upon a promissory note against one of several makers, another of the makers is a competent witness for the defendant, being released by him from all claims to contribution in case the plaintiff should recover. Ames v. Withington, 3 New Hamp. Rep. 115.]

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. iii. 351. [2]Id. xix. 256. [3]Id. v. 480. [4]Id. ii. 306. [5]Id. xv. 250.

Indorser. An indorser is in general a competent witness in an action by an indorsee against the drawer or acceptor, either for the plaintiff or defendant; for the plaintiff, because though the plaintiff's succeeding in the action may prevent him from calling for payment from the indorser, it is not certain that it will, and whatever part of the bill or note the indorser is compelled to pay, he may recover again from the drawer or acceptor; for the defendant, for if the plaintiff fail against the drawer or acceptor, he is entitled to recover against the indorsee (d). He may be called for the plaintiff to prove his own indorsement (e).

A payee is competent in an action by an indorsee against the acceptor, to prove that the bill was originally void for want of a proper stamp (f), having been made in London, although dated at Hamburgh.

*259 *A prior indorser of a bill, in an action by an indorsee against the drawer, is competent to prove a promise to pay the bill after it became due (g). (A)

The payee of a bill (drawn for his accommodation) who has indorsed it to the plaintiff, is competent, in an action against the drawer, to prove that he indorsed it for a valuable consideration; for if the plaintiff should fail, he would be liable to him to the amount of the bill; if he should succeed, he would be liable to the same amount to the defendant (h).

An indorsee was held to be competent, in an action by the holder against the drawer, to prove the payment by the drawer of money into his hands, to take up the bill, and that he had satisfied the bill; for he is liable, at all events, either to the holder or the drawer, for the amount of the bill (i). In an action against the maker of a note, an indorser is a competent witness to prove that it has been paid (k) (B). But a drawer or indorser of a bill or note (d) Bayley on Bills, 422, 4th ed.

(e) Richardson v. Allen,[1] 2 Starkie's C. 334.

(f) 7 T. R. 601; Esp. C. 10, 85, 298, 332; Peake's C. 40. Rich v. Topping, Peake's C. 224; Esp. C. 177. See also Cooper v. Davis. 1 Esp. C. 463.

(g) Stevens v. Lynch, 2 Camp. 332; 12 East, 38.

(h) Shuttleworth v. Stevens, 1 Camp. 407. [Hewit v. Thompson,[2] 2 C. & P. 372.] In an action against the drawer of a bill payable to his own order, but for the accommodation of the first indorsee, since become bankrupt, the latter is a competent witness to prove notice to defendant of the dishonour, as coming to speak against his own interest; but the defendant cannot be deemed a person, surety, or liable for a debt of the bankrupt, within the 49 Geo. 3, c. 121, s. 8, so as to be barred by the certificate. Mayer v. Meakin, 1 Gow's C. 183.

(i) Birt v. Kershaw, 2 East, 458. The Court seems to have considered that the further liability of the witness to the drawer in respect of the costs of the action, occasioned by the neglect of the witness to pay over the money, made no difference (according to Ilderton v. Atkinson, 7 T. R. 481). It would be difficult to support, upon principle, the position, that the getting rid of a legal liability to the costs of an action did not disqualify a witness; but the decision itself may be sustained upon the consideration that, as a mere indorser, the witness was competent, and that as the mere agent of the drawer in paying the money over to the holder of the bill, he was also competent to prove such payment according to the general rule as to the competency of agents (inf. INTEREST). In strictness, the objection to his competency rested on his liability to the drawer for the consequences of his negligence in not having paid over the money, which was wholly independent of his being a party to the bill; if he had been a mere stranger to the bill, but employed as agent to pay over the money, the same objection might have been taken and overruled on the ground of the general competency of an agent. In assumpsit on a bill by the indorsee against the acceptor, and plea of payment, a prior indorsee was held to be a competent witness for the defendant, although on the voir dire he acknowledged that he received money from the defendant to pay the plaintiff the amount of the bill. 8 Ad. & Ell. 917. [See Phil. Ev. 15.]

(k) Charrington v. Milner, Peake's C. 6. Birt v. Kershaw, 2 East, 458; or that an unstamped bill dated abroad was in fact made here. Jordaine v. Lashbrooke, 7 T. R. 601.

(A) (In an action by an indorsee against the maker of a promissory note, the payee is a competent witness to prove the time of the indorsement. Spring v. Lovett, 11 Pick. R. 417. But he is not a competent witness in an action by the indorsee against the maker, to prove that the plaintiff agreed with the defendant at the time the note was given and indorsed to the plaintiff, that if the defendant would sign the note, the plaintiff would not in any event call on him for payment. Jarden v. Davis, 5 Whart. 338.)

(B) (The indorser of a promissory note is incompetent to testify in an action between the holder and drawer, although the note was not protested for non-payment at maturity, or notice given him, if the failure accepted for his accommodation is not a competent witness for the defendant in an action against the acceptor or maker; for he would be liable for the costs if the plaintiff succeeded (l). The st. 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 21, makes no difference in this respect (m).

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. iii. 371. [2] Id. xii. 178.

*It has been said, that one whose name is on the bill as an indorser is not competent to prove that the property is in himself, and that he indorsed it to the plaintiff without consideration (n). *260

In an action against the indorser of a bill, a prior indorsee for whose accommodation the bill was indorsed by the defendant, and who has become bankrupt and obtained his certificate, is a competent witness for the defendant (o). (A)

A party in prison on a charge of having forged the bill is competent to prove payment of it, in an action brought to recover it (p).

Where a bill has been drawn by one partner in fraud of the rest, to pay a separate creditor, a co-partner is a competent witness for the acceptor in an action against him by the creditor, to prove the want of authority, for if Partner.

(l) Jones v. Brook, 4 Taunt. 464. Maundrell v. Kennett, 1 Camp. 408. Bottomley v. Wilson,[1] 3 Starkie's C. 148. Williams v. Keates, Mann. Ind. WITNESS, 106. Secus, if he has subsequently become a bankrupt, and obtained his certificate. Brind v. Bacon,[2] 5 Taunt. 183. For by the stat. 49 Geo. 3, c. 121, s. 8, the drawer is discharged of the costs, (vid. infra, SURETY,) to which he would otherwise be liable; the cases of Maundrell v. Kennett, 1 Camp. 408; Pinkerton v. Adams, 2 Esp. C. 612; were previous to the stat. See also Scott v. Lifford, 1 Camp. 249. Where A. and B. having dissolved partnership, an action was brought by the acceptor of a bill afterwards drawn in the name of the firm, and A. pleaded his subsequent bankrupcy and certificate, and nol. pros. as to him; it was held that A. was a competent witness for B. on the ground that the bill (as stated by A.) was drawn for his accommodation alone, and was therefore barred by the certificate. Moody v. King,[3] 2 B. & C. 558.

One who having received a bill to get it discounted for the drawer, delivers it to the plaintiff, in payment of a debt, is not competent to prove the fact in an action against the drawer, for he would be liable to the costs if the plaintiff succeeded. Harman v. Lasbrey,[4] Holt's C. 390.

(m) Burgess v. Cuttill,[5] 6 C. & P. 282.

(n) 1 Esp. C. 85. Buckland v. Tankard, 5 T. R. 570; B. N. P. 288. But qu., for if the plaintiff recovered he would still be but a trustee for the witness. And see Birt v. Kershaw, 2 East, 458; and see Jordaine v. Lashbrooke, 7 T. R. 601. An indorsee is competent to prove property in a bill to be in either of two persons. Winlow v. Daniel, 1 T. R. 298, (2.)

(o) Bassett v. Dodgin,[6] 9 Bing. 653.

(p) 3 Esp. C. 62.

to protest it was occasioned by a special agreement between the indorser and holder. Hanckley v. Walters, 9 Watts, 179. An indorser may prove an alteration of the note made after the indorsement. Shamburg v. Commagere, 10 Mart. R. 18. In an action against the maker of a note, by the holder, whether the indorser he a competent witness for the defendant, depends upon the character of the evidence which he is to give: he is incompetent to establish a want of consideration for the note, but it seems he would be competent to prove a direct payment of it by the maker. Harrisburgh Bank v. Forster, 8 Watts, 304.

(A) (A maker of a note may prove its execution in a suit by the indorsee against the indorser. Abat v. Rian, 9 Mart. R. 465. But he is not a competent witness in an action by the holder against the indorser, to prove that the plaintiff was an original party to the drawing of the note, and agreed not to hold the defendant responsible for his indorsement. Emerick v. Harley, 2 Whart. 50. See also Smith v. Thorne, 9 Watts, 144. In a suit against the indorser, the drawer is incompetent to prove the extinguishment of the note. Abat v. Dolisle, 3 Mart. 659. Bank of the Metropolis v. Jones, 8 Peters, 12. In an action by an indorsee against an indorser, the drawer of the note is a competent witness to prove, that the note, although purporting to be negotiable, was not so in fact as between the parties to the action: and that the indorsements upon the note did not exhibit truly the order in which they were made. O'Brien v. Davis, 6 Watts, 498. [In South Carolina and Massachusetts, the maker of a note, unless released, is not a competent witness for the indorser in an action by the indorsee against him. Haig v. Newton, 1 Rep. Con. Ct. 423. Pierce v. Butler, 19 Mass. Rep. 303. But it is held differently in England and in New York, unless the note was made and indorsed for the accommodation of the maker (4 Taunt. 464)—in which case, as the indorser is regarded as a surety, and would, if the indorsee recovered against him, be entitled to charge the maker not only with the amount of the note, but also with the costs he had been compelled to pay, his liability for costs renders him interested to defeat the action. Hubbly v. Brown & al., 16 Johns. 70. See also Skilding & al. v. Warren, 15 Johns. 275. Wilson v. Lenox & al., 1 Cranch. 194. Duncan v. Pindall, 4 Bibb. 330.] The maker of a note who has been released by the defendant, the payee and first indorser, is an admissible witness to prove the note usurious in its inception. Stump v. Napier, 2 Yerg. 35.)

(2) {The case of Buckland v. Tankard, was denied to be law in Page v. Weeks, 13 Mass. Rep. 201.}

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xiv. 172. [2]Id. i. 68. [3]Id. ix. 177. [4]Id. iii. 138. [5]Id. xxv. 398. [6]Id. xxiii. 409.

the plaintiff should succeed, and the acceptor recovered against the firm, the witness would have his remedy over against the fraudulent partner (q) (1); and it was held that the intervening bankruptcy of the debtor partner made no difference.

The effect of the late statute 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 42, on cases of this description, has already been observed upon (r).

Declarations by holders.

In general a declaration made by a prior indorsee or holder of a bill or note is not evidence against a subsequent one, for, according to the elementary rule, he ought to be called as a witness (s). Such declarations are admissible upon general principles when they have any legal operation or effect on the instrument in the hands of the plaintiff, or where the plaintiff is identified in interest with the party who made the declaration (t).

*261 *Where the question is whether a note was originally void for usury, it seems that letters written by the payee to the maker, proved to be cotemporaneous with the making of the note, are admissible to prove that it was illegal in its creation (u).

In an action by the indorsee against the maker of a promissory note for 100*l.*, with interest, payable to Arnet or order on demand, and where there was evidence of value given by the plaintiff to Arnet, it was held that declarations made by Arnet whilst he held the note, that he gave no value to the maker, were not admissible in evidence against the plaintiff, without proof that when the plaintiff took the note he gave no consideration; for it was held that the note could not be considered as having been indorsed after it was due; and that there was evidence of value given by the plaintiff, (q) Ridley v. Taylor, 13 East, 176.

(r) See Vol. I. p. 127, and the cases of Burgess v. Cuthill,[1] 6 C. & P. 282. 1 Mo. & R. 315, S. C. Faith v. M'Intyre,[2] 7 C. & P. 44.

(s) A declaration by a holder, under whose indorsement the plaintiff claims, that after the bill was due the amount was settled between himself and the acceptor, is not evidence for the latter, for such holder may be called. Per Ld. Ellenborough, Duckham v. Wallis, 5 Esp. C. 251. And see Shaw v. Broom,[3] 4 D. & R. 730; and Smith v. De Wruitz,[4] 1 R. & M. 212. In Pocock v. Billing,[5] 2 Bingh. 269, it was held that declarations made by a former holder of a bill after he had parted with the possession were not receivable in evidence. It is observable that in that case no circumstances appear which would have warranted the reception of the evidence, had the declarations been made during the possession of the bill. In Collenridge v. Farquharson,[6] 1 Starkie's C. 259, where A. indorsed a bill to B. as a security for a running account, and after the bill became due B. indorsed it to C., it was held that an entry or declaration by B. as to the state of the accounts was not evidence for A., unless at least it was cotemporary with the indorsement to B. Where a note, which was alleged to have been substituted for a bill originally given for money lost at play, had been indorsed by the plaintiff, held that declarations by the payee at the time when he agreed to take the substituted note, as to the consideration of the original bill, were not admissible against the plaintiff, a third person, unless the indorsement were shown to have been made after the note became due. Beauchamp v. Parry,[7] 1 B. & Ad. 89. In an action against the maker of a note, letters of the indorser are not admissible evidence to impeach the indorsee's title, though the indorsement was made after the note was payable. Clipsam v. O'Brien, 1 Esp. C. 10. In the case of Banks v. Colwell, cited in Brown v. Davis, 3 T. R. 80, Buller, J. is stated to have ruled, that in an action on a note payable on demand, evidence was admissible to show that the note had been indorsed to the plaintiff a year and a half afterwards, and to impeach the consideration by showing that it had originally been given for smuggled goods. But see the observations of Bayley, J. on that case in Barough v. White,[8] 4 B. & C. 325.

(t) Per Parke, J. in Woolway v. Rowe,[9] 1 Ad. & Ell. 116. See the observations of Parke, B. in that case on the former case of Barough v. White, infra, note (y), and the observations of Bayley, J. in the case of Barough v. White, supra, tit. Admission. Declarations of a person who held a negotiable security under the same circumstances with the party to the action have been considered admissible against such party.

(u) Kent v. Lowen, 1 Camp. 177. Walsh v. Stockdale, cor. Abbot, J. sitt. after T. T. 1818.

(1) {So where a promissory note has been drawn by one partner in fraud of another, for the payment of a debt due by himself and a person, who with him at a former period constituted another firm, the partner in fraud of whom the note has been drawn is a competent witness for the indorsers of the note, in a suit against them by the holder, to show a want of authority to draw the note. Charzournes v. Frost, 3 Pick. Rep. 5. In this case the witness was objected to at the trial as interested, but being released he was admitted.}

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxv. 398. [2]Id. xxxii. 430. [3]Id. xvi. 220. [4]Id. xxi. 419. [5]Id. ix. 409. [6]Id. ii. 381. [7]Id. xx. 351. [8]Id. x. 345. [9]Id. xxviii. 52.

and consequently, that the plaintiff could not be considered as identified in interest with Arnet (x).

But if the plaintiff's right or interest in the bill or note be identical with that of the prior indorser; as, where the plaintiff either gave no value to such indorser or took it after it was due; it seems that declarations made by such prior indorser, whilst he was in possession of the bill, would be admissible in evidence against the plaintiff (y). It seems, however, that such declarations made after the transfer (z) would not be admissible unless the plaintiff sued merely as a trustee for the party making the declaration, the action being brought for his benefit and with his privity (a).

IV. A promissory note is primâ facie evidence of money lent by the payee to the maker (b), or of a balance due from the maker to the payee upon an account stated (c) (1). And the acceptance of a bill of exchange payable to the order of the drawer is primâ facie evidence of money had and received by the acceptor to the use of the drawer (d). A bill is also, it is said, evidence *of money lent by the payee to the drawer (e). So it has been said, *262 that either a bill or note is evidence of money had and received by the acceptor or maker to the use of the holder (f) (2). Effect of a bill or note in evidence.

The theory of a bill of exchange is, that a bill is an assignment to the payee of a debt due from the acceptor to the drawer, and the acceptance imports that the acceptor is a debtor to the drawer to the amount of the bill; hence it has been said that the effect of the transaction is to appro(x) Barough v. White,[1] 4 B. & C. 325.

(y) See the observations of Bayley, J. in Barough v. White, 4 B. & C. 325. And see the observations of Parke, J. in Woolway v. Rowe,[2] 1 Ad. & Ell. 116. In Barough v. White, the interest of the plaintiff was not identical with the interest of the payee. The declarations of a person who held a security under circumstances identical with those under which the party to the action holds it, have been considered admissible against such party; but the title of a person holding by a good title is not to be cut down by the acknowledgement of a former holder that he had no title. In the case cited, the holder had a better title than the party had whose declarations were proposed to be proved.

(z) Pocock v. Billing,[3] 2 Bing. 269, supra. In an action by the indorsee of a bill of exchange against the acceptor, the defendant proved that the plaintiff held the bill as indorsee from the payee for a purpose which had been satisfied, but the Court held that this bill did not warrant the reception of declarations made by the payee subsequent to the indorsement, to show that the bill had been accepted without consideration. K. B. Trin. T. 1824.

(a) Pocock v. Billing,[3] 2 Bing. 269, supra, note (s). And see Shaw v. Broom,[4] 4 D. & R. 730.

(b) Carter v. Palmer, 12 Mod. 380, per Holt, C. J.; Burr. 1525. Clarke v. Martin, Ld. Raym. 758.

(c) Storey v. Atkins, 2 Str. 719; B. N. P. 136–7. Harris v. Huntbach, 1 Burr. 373. Pawley v. Brown, cor. Abbott, J. Devon Lent Ass. 1818.

(d) Thompson v. Morgan, 3 Camp. 101. Scholey v. Walsby, Peake's C. 24. Where the bill is payable to a third person, the presumption does not arise without proof of consideration, and his remedy against the acceptor is confined to the bill. Per Lawrence, J., Cowley v. Dunlop, 7 T. R. 579. And it is evidence under the account stated. Per Abbott, J., Rhodes v. Gent,[5] 5 B. & A. 245.

(e) Bayley, O. B. 163, citing Clerke v. Martin, Ld. Raym. 758; 12 Mod. 380; Burr. 1525. Smith v. Kendall, 6 T. R. 123.

(f) Bayley on Bills, 287. 2 Phill. Ev. 39. But it seems from later authorities, that this position must be restricted to cases where the bill or note is attempted to be enforced against an immediate party. See below, and Exon v. Russell, 4 M. & S. 507. Waynam v. Bend, 1 Camp. 175. Wells v. Girling,[6] Gow. 22. Thompson v. Morgan, 3 Camp. 101. Eales v. Dicker,[7] M. & M. 324. But this, however, is too large a position. A promissory note is not evidence under the money counts in an action by the indorsee against the maker of a note. Bentley v. Northouse,[8] 1 M. & M. 66. A party to a bill of exchange is not liable for money paid to his use by a person who takes up the bill for his honour, unless formal protest be made before payment. Vandewall v. Tyrrell,[9] 1 M. & M. 87.

(1) [An action cannot be supported upon the common money counts against one of the makers of a promissory note, who signed it as surety only for the other maker. Wells v. Girling, 3 Moore, 79, S. C. 8 Taunt. 737.]

(2) {See Smith v. Smith, 2 Johns. 235. Cruger v. Armstrong, 2 Johns. Cas. 5. Arnold v. Crane, 8 Johns. 79. Saxton v. Johnson, 10 Johns. 418. Raborg & al. v. Peyton, 2 Wheat. 385. Mandeville & al. v. Riddle, 1 Cranch, 290. Lindo v. Gardner, ibid. 343. Appendix to 1 Cranch.}

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. x. 345. [2]Id. xxviii. 52. [3]Id. ix. 409. [4]Id. xvi. 220. [5]Id. vii. 84. [6]Id. v. 445. [7]Id. xxii. 323. [8]Id. xxii. 251. [9]Id. xxii. 258.

priate, by an agreement between the parties, so much property to the account of the holder of the bill (g). It is also said, that a bill or note is evidence of money paid by the holder to the use of the acceptor or maker (h). This doctrine has, however, been questioned (i), and it may be doubted whether the plaintiff, if he resort to the common counts, must not *prove that the defendant has in fact received the amount of the bill (A). At all events, whenever there is a doubt whether the plaintiff can recover on the special counts, it is desirable to be prepared with evidence (according to the fact) to show that the defendant has received money for the purpose of the bill.

When evidence on money counts.

*263

An action of indebitatus assumpsit will not lie upon the acceptance of a bill of exchange (k); for an acceptance is but a collateral engagement, it must be used as evidence of some duty; as money lent, or money had and received, for which an indebitatus assumpsit will lie (l). And in such case, it is but evidence, and consequently the presumption which the writing affords may be encountered, and contradicted by other evidence, and the jury are to draw the conclusion of fact, that so much money was lent, or (g) Vere v. Lewis, 3 T. R. 182, where it was held that the acceptance of a bill payable to a fictitious payee was evidence of value received by the acceptor from the drawer, to support an action by the holder for money paid, or money had and received. But note, that the Court were of opinion that the plaintiff might recover on the second count, as on a bill payable to the bearer. The giving a bill is, as it were, an assignment of so much property, which becomes money had and received to the use of the holder; per Yates, J. in Grant v. Vaughan, cited 3 T. R. 182, by Lord Kenyon in giving judgment. In Tatlock v. Harris, 3 T. R. 174, where an indorsee recovered against the acceptor on a similar bill, there was proof of value received by the acceptor from an indorser. In Dimsdale v. Lanchester, 4 Esp. C. 201, Lord Ellenborough said, "Where a person puts his name to a promissory note, he thereby acknowledges that he has money in his hands of the payee of the note, and undertakes to pay it to the party legally entitled to receive it, that is, to the person who has paid for it a good consideration, and thereby become the legal holder of the note." In Grant v. Vaughan, Burr. 1516, it was held by Ld. Mansfield and the other Judges, to be clear beyond dispute that the bona fide bearer might recover against the maker as for money had and received to his use. But see Williams v. Everett, 14 East, 582; Johnson v. Collings, 1 East, 98, and Waynam v. Bend, 1 Camp. 175; where, in an action by the indorsee against the maker of a promissory note for value received, and payable to the bearer, Lord Ellenborough was of opinion that the note was not evidence under the money counts, without proof of value received by the defendant to the use of plaintiff; but the cause was not decided on this ground. See also Hard's Case, 1 Salk. 23; Hodges v. Steward, 1 Salk. 125; and below, note (i).

(h) Bayley, O. B. 163. Vere v. Lewis, 3 T. R. 182. Tatlock v. Harris, 3 T. R. 147.

(i) See Gibson v. Minett, 1 H. B. 569, where it was held that a bona fide indorsee for value might recover against the acceptor of a bill of exchange made payable to a fictitious payee, as upon a bill payable to the bearer. In that case L. C. B. Eyre, who gave his opinion in a very elaborate judgment against the decision of the Court of K. B. in favour of the plaintiff, seems to have admitted that the acceptance of a bill would be evidence of a duty as for money lent, or money had and received, upon those counts, but considered those counts to be out of the question, the finding by the special verdict being insufficient to raise the question upon these points. He said, "It has been expressly determined that a general indebitatus assumpsit will not lie upon a bill of exchange, but the indebitatus assumpsit must be for some duty, such as money lent, &c., and the bill is offered as evidence of that duty." He adds, "The presumptions of evidence which the writing affords have no application to the assumpsit for money paid by the payee or holder of the bill to the use of the acceptor; it must be a very special case which will support such an assumpsit." See also Waynam v. Bend, 1 Camp. 175; supra, note (g). At common law, if a promissory note was made payable to J. S. or bearer, the bearer could not bring an action on the note in his own name, but was obliged to sue in the name of the principal. See Nicolson v. Sedgwick, 3 Salk. 67; 1 Ld. Raym. 180; a difficulty which could not have arisen, if he could have maintained the action for money had and received.

In the case of Were v. Taylor, cor. Ld. Ellenborough, C. J. (cited 1 Camp. 130), where the bill was made payable to a fictitious payee, and declared on as payable to the bearer, Ld. Ellenborough said that the cases on the subject had been much doubted; and the plaintiffs failing to show that the value of the bill had been received by the defendant were nonsuited. And in the subsequent case of Bennett v. Farnell, 1 Camp. 130, where the payee was also a fictitious person, Ld. Ellenborough said that he would admit evidence of value having been received by the defendant; and that if the plaintiff's money had found its way into the defendant's hands, he should not be allowed to retain it, for then he had money in his hands belonging to another person, which might be recovered from him as money had and received. The plaintiff failing to prove this was nonsuited.

(k) Hard's Case, 1 Salk. 23; and per C. B. Eyre, Gibson v. Minett, in error, 1 H. B. 602.

(l) Per Eyre, L. C. B., 1 H. B. 602, supra, note (i).

(A) (The holder of a note transferred by delivery or indorsement, may recover on it under the money counts. Olcott v. Rathbone, 5 Wend. 490. Ellsworth v. Brewer, 11 Pick. 316.)

so much money was had and received, from all the evidence in the case (m).

In the case of Whitwell v. Bennett (n), where the plaintiff, an indorsee, could not recover on the special counts by reason of variance, and it was proved that when the defendant accepted the bill (for 30*l.*), he stated that although the drawer had not remitted the amount, he expected that he would do so, and that as he had a bill of his for 80*l.*, which would be paid, he would take all risks upon himself, the Court held, that if the bill had been paid, the count for money had and received would have been maintainable, on the ground of the specific appropriation of the particular sum to the payment of the plaintiff's demand; but that as the action was on the bill for 30*l.*, it was a surprise on the defendant to call for proof of the non-payment of the other bill, and therefore that payment ought not to be be presumed. Resort to the common counts.

But the acknowledgement by the defendant of his acceptance of a bill of exchange is evidence on the account stated (o).

*An indorsement of a bill or note is evidence of money lent by the indorsee to the indorser (p). *264

It has also been said that a bill is primâ facie evidence of money had and received by the drawer to the use of the holder, or of money paid by such holder to the use of the drawer (q). This, however, appears to be very questionable (r) (1). And the contrary has since been ruled (s).

(m) Ibid. (n) 3 B. & P. 559.

(o) Leaper v. Tatton, 16 East, 420; and per Bayley, J. an acknowledgement of his acceptance, and that he has not paid it, creates a debt. And it was held to be sufficient to take the case out of the Statute of Limitations, although the defendant at the time said that he had been liable, but was not then liable because it was out of date. In an action by the indorsee against the acceptor, the declaration containing also the money counts, the stamp turned out to be insufficient, and the bill could not be read; but two letters were produced from the defendant, the first addressed "To the gentleman that calls with the bill," expressing his regret at not being able to take up the bill for £100, and desiring the holder to allow him to renew it for a month; and the second being an answer to an application by the attorney, requiring payment of the bill in favour of Mr. T. for £100, but not stating in whose behalf the application was made, in which the defendant stated that it was impossible he could take up the bill, but that if T. would draw at one month he should then be prepared, there being nothing in the letter acknowledging a liability to the plaintiff, nor admitting him to be the holder, it was held that plaintiff was bound to show, by proof of the indorsement on the bill, that he was entitled to it, and that no proof of the indorsement, without proof also of the contents of the bill to identify with it the defendant's letter, would be sufficient; the contents of the bill were a necessery part of the plaintiff's title, and could not be looked at by the jury to ascertain that fact. Jardine v. Payne,[1] 1 B. & Ad. 663, overruling Bishop v. Chambre, 1 Dans & Lloyd, 83. On a declaration by the payee against the acceptor containing counts on the bill and the money counts, the defendant having paid the balance due on the bill into court on the latter counts, held that there being but that one matter in dispute, the demand in respect of the bill was discharged by such payment; but semble, if the only evidence in the case had been the acceptance of the bill, the plaintiff being the payee, and the bill drawn by another, he could not have recovered on the account stated. Early v. Bowman,[2] 1 B. & A. 889.

(p) Bayley, O. B. 164, cites Kessebower v. Sims, MS. C.

(q) See the authorities cited Bayley on Bills, 163.

(r) Vide supra, p. 202, note (i). [2 Phil. Ev. 14.] (A)

(s) Eales v. Dicker,[3] 1 M. & M. 324.

(A) (The giving of a note is no extinguishment of the prior cause of action, and where there is a count upon a note as well as the general counts, a recovery may be had upon the general counts, though the note is alleged to be lost. Kiddie v. Debrutry, 1 Hay. 420. Bill v. Porter et al. 13 Conn. Rep. 23. The mere giving, for an antecedent debt, of a note or bill which turns out to be unproductive, is not, in the absence of any agreement to receive it as payment, an extinguishment of such debt. Davidson v. The Borough of Bridgeport, 8 Conn. R. 472. If a creditor actually receives bank bills of his debtor, though he protests that he will not receive them unless the difference between their value and that of specie shall be allowed to him, and the debtor refuses to make, or to promise to make such allowance, the creditor cannot maintain an action to recover the amount of such difference. Phillips, Judge v. Blake, 1 Metcalf R. 156.)

(1) [It has been decided in New York that an indorsed note is evidence, under a count for money had and received, {or for money lent and money paid,} in an action by the indorsee against the maker. Pierce v. Crafts, 12 Johns. 90.] {Wild v. Fisher, 4 Pick. Rep. 421.}

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xx. 463. [2]Id. xx. 502. [3]Id. xxii. 323.

A receipt upon a bill is primâ facie evidence of payment by the acceptor (t).

If the plaintiff fail to prove the bill by reason of variance, or where the bill is void for want of a proper stamp, he may resort to the common counts if they be applicable (u), and there be a privity of contract between the parties, and may give evidence of the original consideration on which the note was given (x).

In an action by the indorsee of a bill against one who has received money from the acceptor for the purpose of taking up the bill, any defence may be set up of which the acceptor could have availed himself (y).

An accommodation acceptor, who defends for the drawer, may recover costs as money paid to the use of the drawer, without an undertaking in writing (z).

Where an acceptor of a bill, finding that he cannot discharge it, pays part to the drawer to take it up, the money is had and received to the use of the holder (a).

Proof of the delivery and payment of a cheque is not primâ facie evidence of a debt, or of a set-off, unless it be shown under what circumstances it was given (b).

Operation of, in payment, &c.

In general a bill of exchange or note is no satisfaction of any debt or demand for which it is given, but is only primâ facie evidence of payment, which renders it necessary that the party who receives it should account for it before he will be entitled to recover the consideration (c).

*265

Effect of in payment.

*If a draft or bill given in payment be dishonoured, the party receiving it may consider it as a nullity (d).

Formerly, where a bill was paid in discharge of a debt, but there was no contract that the taking the bill should be a discharge of the debt, it was held to be no payment, unless the creditor received the money (e), although the creditor had neglected to present the bill for payment, or to give notice of the dishonour. But by the stat. 4 & 5 Ann. c. 9, s. 7, the acceptance of

(t) Peake's C. 26. Peake's L. E. 221. [See 2 Camp. 439.]

(u) Alves v. Hodgson, 7 T. R. 241. Tyte v. Jones, 1 East, 58; 1 Esp. C. 245; 4 T. R. 320. But he cannot, where the bill is made payable to a fictitious payee, and declared on as payable to the bearer (1 H. B. 313, 569). Neither can he where he proves a mere promise to pay without producing the bill, or proving its destruction. Dangerfield v. Wilby, 4 Esp. C. 159.

(x) Farr v. Price, 1 East, 55. Brown v. Watts, 1 Taunt. 353. Wilson v. Kennedy, 1 Esp. C. 245. Manby v. Peel, 5 Esp. 121. Wade v. Beasley, 4 Esp. C. 7.

(y) 1 Camp. 372; Cro. J. 687; 2 Roll. C. 440.

(z) 1 Esp. C. 162.

(a) Baker v. Birch, 3 Camp. 107.

(b) Aubert v. Walsh, 3 Taunt. 277; 4 Taunt. 293.

(c) Bayley on Bills, 265; Kearslake v. Morgan, 5 T. R. 513. A bill of exchange, unless there be an agreement that it should be so, is no satisfaction of a debt; but it is otherwise of a bill accepted by the debtor, and negotiable per Lord Mansfield; in Richardson v. Rickman, cited 5 T. R. 518; and see 10 Mod. 37. But the creditor cannot resort to the original consideration where a bill has been so accepted without showing that it has not been negotiated. Kearslake v. Morgan, 5 T. R. 513. If the purchaser of goods pay by a bill, which the vendor indorses, a judgment obtained by the indorser does not operate as satisfaction. See tit. PAYMENT, and Tarleton v. Allhusen,[1] 2 Ad. & Ell. 32. Where the creditor received an acceptance of the debtor as payment, held that proof of its having been lost was not sufficient to render the latter liable to the debt. without going further, and showing it to be destroyed, although an indemnity was offered. Woodford v. Whitely,[2] 1 M. & M. 517. The vendor of goods is paid by a bill drawn by the vendee on a third person, and after acceptance alters the bill as to the time of payment; by doing so he makes the bill operate in satisfaction of the debt, and cannot afterwards recover for the goods sold. Alderson v. Langdale,[3] 3 B. & A. 660.

(d) Puckford v. Maxwell, 6 T. R. 52; where a draft had been given when the defendant was arrested, it was held that he might be again arrested on the same affidavit, the draft having been dishonoured. And see Brown v. Kewley, 2 B. & P. 518. Where the dishonoured bill has been given in payment for goods, the payee may maintain an action for goods sold and delivered, although the time of credit has not expired, and although he has not returned the bill. Hickling v. Hardy,[4] 7 Taunt. 312. Mussen v. Price, 4 East, 147.

(e) Clark v. Mundall, 1 Salk. 124.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxix. 20. [2]Id. xxii. 372. [3]Id. xxiii. 155. [4]Id. ii. 118.

such a bill in satisfaction of a debt shall be deemed payment to the creditor if he do not take his due course to obtain payment of it (f).

Where a bill has been delivered in payment, the party receiving it cannot resort to the original consideration, without either producing the bill, or showing that the defendant can no longer be liable upon it. It is not sufficient to show that the bill or note is lost (g), without proof that under the circumstances the defendant cannot be legally called on to pay (h).

The statute does not require notice to any stranger to the bill, but only to parties. If one deliver a bill to another without indorsing his name upon it, he does not subject himself to any obligation by the law of merchant on the bill; neither, on the other hand, is he entitled to the same advantages (i). If in such case the party who takes the bill take it as an absolute discharge, agreeing to run all risks in the absence of fraud, the delivery *operates as an absolute discharge (k). But it is not to be inferred, from the *266 mere fact of delivering a bill, that it is received in absolute discharge.

If a bill or note be delivered in payment of an antecedent debt, without indorsement by the debtor, and the creditor be guilty of laches in procuring payment or giving notice of dishonour to the debtor, the latter, it seems, will be discharged by such laches, if he may have been prejudiced by it. For if the creditor mean to repudiate the payment, he ought to apprise the debtor of his intention, and of the circumstances, as soon as he can with convenience (l).

If a party agree to take the notes of a third person, payable to the bearer as money, absolutely and without condition, and they are what they purport to be, they operate as a satisfaction of the debt, though the maker be insolvent; it would be otherwise if the notes were not what they purported to be, but were forged. If they be taken not absolutely and unconditionally, but merely as negotiable instruments in the ordinary course, they are taken subject to a condition that the holder will use due means to obtain (f) And therefore the general rule seems to be, that in all cases where a bill to which the debtor is a party is given in discharge of a debt, notice of dishonour must be given to every party sued on such bill, who on keeping the bill would be entitled to a remedy over against any other party. See Cory v. Scott, 3 B. & A. 619. A bill was drawn for the accommodation of an indorsee, and neither the indorsee nor the drawer had effects in the hands of the acceptor; it was held that in an action by a subsequent indorsee against the drawer, proof of notice was necessary; for the drawer might, on notice, have resorted to the indorsee. See Brown v. Maffey, 15 East, 216.

(g) Dangerfied v. Wilby, 4 Esp. C. 159. Powell v. Roach, 6 Esp. C. 76. Williamson v. Clements, 1 Taunt. 523. Poole v. Smith,[1] Holt's C. 144. Champion v. Terry,[2] 3 B. & B. 295. So where half the note was lost. Mayor v. Johnson, 3 Camp. 224. Secus, semble, where the bill is still within the plaintiff's control, though it has not been delivered up. Hadwen v. Mendisabal,[3] 2 C. & P. 20.

(h) As by proof that the plaintiff, the payee of the bill accepted by the defendant for goods sold to him by the plaintiff, lost the bill previous to indorsement. Rolt v. Watson,[4] 4 Bing. 273.

(i) P. C. Van Wart v. Woolley,[5] 3 B. & C. 430. A., to whom B. was indebted for goods sold, drew a bill on C., who was B.'s debtor, with B.'s consent, for the amount, which bill C. accepted, but afterwards dishonoured; it was held that B. was not entitled to notice of the dishonour. Swinyard v. Bowes, 5 M. & S. 62.

(k) Swinyard v. Bowes, 5 M. & S. 62.

(l) Camidge v. Allenby,[6] 6 B. & C. 373. Van Wart v. Woolley,[7] 3 B. & C. 430, and infra note (m). Waud v. Evans, 2 Lord Kenyon, 928; 2 Salk. 442; 6 Mad. 56. Owenson v. Morse, 7 T. R. 64; Str. 415, 416, 508, 550; 6 T. R. 52; 8 T. R. 451; 2 B. & P. 518. So in the case of a guarantee, in respect of goods to be paid for by a bill, although the guarantee be not a party to the bill, and therefore, although notice of the dishonour be not essential to his liability, according to the ordinary rule, yet he will be discharged by the omission of the creditor to take the necessary steps to obtain payment on the security. As in Phillips v. Astling, 2 Taunt. 206. There the drawer (the principal) and the acceptor remained solvent for many months after the bill was dishonoured, and it was not until they had become bankrupts that payment was demanded of the defendant, the guarantee. It is otherwise where the defendant has sustained no detriment by the want of presentment or notice, as in Warrington v. Furbor, 8 East, 242, where a commission of bankrupt had issued against the acceptor (the principal) before the bill became due, and Holbrow v. Wilkins,[8] 1 B. & C. 10, where the acceptors were known to be insolvent before the bill became due, and the bill, if presented, would not have been paid.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. iii. 55. [2]Id. vii. 443. [3]Id. xii. 7. [4]Id. xiii. 430. [5]Id. x. 145. [6]Id. xiii. 201. [7]Id. x. 145. [8]Id. viii. 8.

payment, and then they ought to be presented for payment within a reasonable time. There is no guarantee in such case, on the part of him who passes such a note, that the maker is solvent at the time (m) (A).

A distinction has been taken between the payment of a bill or note in discharge of an antecedent debt, and a delivery at the time of sale. But it is obvious that the same principle must govern both cases; each must depend on the intention of the parties. If the facts show that at the time of the *267 *mutual delivery of a bill or note for a chattel, the parties intended an absolute exchange, each taking the thing delivered with all faults, the delivery of the bill in the absence of fraud must operate as a discharge; but if the bargain was not for the delivery of the bill specifically, but for a money price, and the bill was merely taken in payment of that price, there seems to be no distinction in principle between a delivery contemporaneous with the sale, and one made at a subsequent time (n).

Where an acceptor, in order to pay his acceptance, drew another bill which was dishonoured by the drawee, but no notice was given, it was held that the acceptor was entirely discharged (o).

If A. and B. exchange bills absolutely, the property is changed, and does not revest in either, although the bill which he has received is dishonoured (p); otherwise, when the exchange is conditional (q). But it seems, that if B. knew that his own bill was worthless, the whole transaction would be vitiated by the fraud, and the property in A.'s bill would not be altered.

Bank-notes cannot be followed by the legal owners into the hands of bonâ fide holders who took them in payment, without notice (r).

The giving a bill in payment excludes all objections to previous accounts (s).

For the evidence upon an indictment for forgery, see tit. FORGERY.

(m) Camidge v. Allenby,[1] 6 B. & C. 373. And therefore, where A. paid notes of the Huddersfield Bank to B., at York, at three in the afternoon of the 10th, in payment for goods, the bank having stopped payment at eleven o'clock in the forenoon of the same day, but neither of the parties knew of the stoppage or of the insolvency, and B. neither circulated the notes, nor presented them, but afterwards required A. to take them back, and pay him the amount; it was held that the debt was satisfied. See also Moore v. Warren, Str. 415, Holme v. Barry, Ib, where it was laid down that if a party taking a banker's note is guilty of laches, he gives new credit to the banker, and the party who paid it is discharged. Where the plaintiff's servant received banker's notes in payment for cattle at a fair, fourteen miles distant from home, on Friday afternoon, and his master not being at home on his return, did not settle his accounts till Saturday evening, the bankers having stopped in the middle of the day; it was held that the master was not guilty of laches in not presenting the bills on the Saturday. James v. Holditch,[2] 8 D. & R. 40. In Owenson v. Morse, 7 T. R. 64, A. agreed to buy articles of plate from B., who was to get A.'s arms engraved on it, and the plate was delivered to an engraver for that purpose. A. gave in payment for the goods the notes of a banker who had then stopped payment, and in an action of trover by A. for the plate, it was held that B. might stop the goods in transitu, there being no delivery or payment. See also Tapley v. Martens, 8 T. R. 458; Dangerfield v. Wilby, 4 Esp. C. 159.

(n) See[2] 6 B. & C. 381, and Mr. Long's excellent Work on Sales, 286.

(o) Bridges v. Berry, 3 Taunt. 130. See also Bevan v. Hill, 2 Camp. 381.

(p) Hornblower v. Proud, 2 B. & A. 327. And see Cowley v. Dunlop, 7 T. R. 565. (q) Ibid.

(r) Lowndes v. Anderson, 13 East, 130. Solomons v. Bank of England, Ibid. 135.

(s) Knox v. Walley, 1 Esp. C. 159; 9 Mod. 23.

(A) (A draft or bill of exchange upon a third person given by a debtor to a creditor who stipulates that it shall be in full satisfaction of the debt when paid, is prima facie evidence of payment of the original debt; and to rebut such evidence the creditor is bound to show, in an action for the recovery of the original debt, diligence in obtaining payment of the bill, and if not paid, notice of non-payment; or he must excuse the non-presentment and produce the bill in the trial to be cancelled. Dayton v. Trull, 23 Wend. 315. Although the taking of the note of a third person as collateral security for a pre-existing debt without more, will not place the taker in the situation of a holder for value, so as to protect him against the equities subsisting between the original parties to the note; yet it is otherwise if there is a new and distinct consideration, as if time was given in consideration of obtaining the note as security for the debt, &c. Depeau v. Waddington, 6 Whart. R. 220.)

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xvi. 332. [2]Id. xiii. 201.

BILL OF EXCEPTIONS. See VOL. I.

BILL OF LADING.

A BILL of lading is the written evidence of a contract for the carriage and delivery of goods sent by sea for a certain freight (t). Such instruments are negotiable by the custom of merchants (u), and are transferred by the shipper's indorsement (x); and there is no distinction between a bill of lading indorsed in blank and an indorsement to a particular person (y). Effect of.

The indorsement and delivery of a bill of lading is primâ facie an immediate transfer of the legal interest in the cargo (z). And a bill of lading signed by a deceased master of a vessel for the delivery of goods to a consignee, is evidence of property in the consignee to show an insurable interest in the goods (a) (1).

The bill of lading as between the original parties is merely a receipt, but not conclusive as to the quantity of the goods shipped, and may be opened by evidence of the real facts (b).

An assignment of the bill of lading to a third person for a valuable consideration devests the consigner's right of stoppage in transitu (c).

*BILL OF PARTICULARS. See PARTICULARS. *268

BOND.

THE proof in an action on a bond depends entirely upon the issue taken upon the plea of non est factum, payment, performance of conditions, &c. Proof.

By the rules of Hil. Term, 4 Will. 4, in an action of debt on specialty, the plea of non est factum shall operate as a denial of the execution of the deed in point of fact only, and all other defences shall be specially pleaded, including matters which make the deed absolutely void, as well as those which make it voidable.

(t) Per Ld. Ellenborough, 1 H. B. 358. (u) 5 T. R. 683. Lickbarrow v. Mason.
(x) Lickbarrow v. Mason, 2 T. R. 63. Haille v. Smith, 1 B. & P. 564.
(y) 2 T. R. 63. (z) 1 T. R. 215, 216. Hibbert v. Carter, T. R. 745.
(a) Haddow v. Parry, 3 Taunt. 305. (b) Bates v. Todd, 2 M. & M. 106.
(c) Lickbarrow v. Mason, 2 T. R. 63. 5 T. R. 367, 683. Secus, where a bill of lading is assigned by the vendee to his factor, although he has drawn upon him to the amount of the consignment, it being clear that it was not intended that the goods in question should be appropriated to the payment of the particular bills, and the goods not having reached the factor's hands, and no specific pledge having been made. Patten v. Thompson, 5 M. & S. 350. See Kinloch v. Craig, 3 T. R. 119, 783. [See Moore v. Sheridene, 2 Har. & M'Hen. 453.]

(1) [A bill of lading stating the property to belong to A. & B. is not conclusive evidence, and does not estop A. from showing that the property belongs to another, in an action against an insurer. Maryland Insurance Co. v. Ruden's Administrator, 6 Cranch, 338. A bill of lading subscribed by the owner of a vessel, and by the master, is evidence against the owner of the goods, of the amount freighted, but cannot be declared on as the foundation of an action for the freight. Shalzell v. Hart, 2 Marsh. 192. In an action for wages, by the executors of a master of a vessel, against the owners, a bill of lading, signed by the captain in the foreign port, was allowed to be given in evidence, to show that by the usage of trade at a certain port, the captain was entitled to certain privileges. Vicary's Executors v. Ross & al. 1 Yeates, 38. But a copy of a bill of lading, not signed by the captain, but verified by an affidavit, was ruled not to be admissible. Wood v. Roach, 2 Dallas, 180. S. C. 1 Yeates, 177.

How far and when a bill of lading, which acknowledges the freight of goods received on board to be paid, can be contradicted by the parties concerned, see Portland Bank v. Stubbs, 6 Mass. Rep. 422. If a master of a vessel sign a bill of lading, acknowledging that the goods are in good order, it seems that in an action against him for not delivering them in good order, no evidence is admissible to prove that they were not in good order when he received them—if they were open to inspection when shipped, and no fraud or imposition were practised on him. Barrett & al. v. Rogers, 7 Mass. Rep. 297. But if the goods were delivered in packages, and not open to inspection, such bill of lading would not be conclusive evidence of the good condition of the goods, but prima facie evidence of the highest order. Ibid.

In a prize court, a bill of lading consigning the goods to a neutral, but unaccompanied by an invoice or letter of advice, is not sufficient evidence to entitle the claimant to restitution; but is sufficient to lay a foundation for the introduction of further proof. The Friendschaft, 3 Wheat. 14.]

Upon the plea of non est factum the plaintiff must prove the execution of the bond in the usual way (d) (A).

Illegality or fraud cannot be proved under this plea (e).

Breaches. Where the bond contains a condition for the performance of covenants and agreements, breaches must be assigned (f) under the stat. 8 & 9 Will. 3, c. 11, s. 8, in the declaration, or suggested on the roll, in all cases, except of money-bonds and bail-bonds (g), and, as it seems, bonds entered into by *269 a *petitioning creditor to the Ld. Chancellor in case of bankruptcy (h); and in general where nothing but computation is necessary to ascertain the precise sum due (i). After proof of the bond the plaintiff proceeds to prove the breaches assigned, where, from the nature of the case, the burthen of proof is not thrown on the defendant to prove the affirmative; as where the condition is to pay money by instalments, or the payment of rent (j) (B).

(d) Infra, tit. DEED. It is no defence on this plea that the defendant was misled as to the legal effect of the bond. Edwards v. Brown, 1 Cr. & J. 307. The obligatory part of a bond purported that the obligor was to become bound for ——, omitting to insert the word pounds, but from the recitals in the condition it appeared to be the intent that he should enter into a bond for securing various sums of money composed of pounds sterling; the court read the bond as if the word pounds were inserted in it. Coles v. Hume,[1] 8 B. & C. 568. Debt on bond described in the declaration as conditioned for payment by three persons; the bond produced was a bond for payment by two of those named, and by a third person not named; held to be a fatal variance, although the bond was joint and several. Adams v. Bateson,[2] 6 Bing. 110, and 3 M. & P. 339.

(e) A party cannot, even after notice, give in evidence that it had been executed in consideration of foregoing a prosecution against R. for embezzling monies of his employers which had been concealed from the defendant when he executed the bond; the fact must be pleaded specially. Harmer v. Rowe, 6 M. & S. 146. In debt on bond given by the defendant on his being appointed deputy to the plaintiff as a colonial secretary, the condition reciting an agreement to appoint him such deputy, to execute the office and receive the fees, and pay a yearly sum of —— l. to the plaintiff thereout, but the condition was for payment of that sum absolutely; held that it was competent to the defendant to plead, and the jury to find, the fact that the sum was to be paid out of the fees, and that they exceeded the amount, in order to show the illegality of the bond; the fact not being so inconsistent with the bond that it must be rejected. Greville v. Atkins,[3] 9 B. & C. 462. And see Collins v. Blantern, 2 Wils. 347, and Paxton v. Popham, 9 East, 408. The condition of a bond given by the collector of taxes, contained also a distinct clause for accounting and paying over to the commissioners, which was not authorized by the 43 Geo. 3, c. 99; held, that it might be rejected as surplusage, and did not vitiate the bond, being neither contrary to the statute, nor malum in se. Collins v. Gwynne,[4] 7 Bing. 423. Fraud also must be pleaded. Edwards v. Brown, 1 Cr. & J. 307; 1 Tyrw. 182. Turk v. Tooke, 4 Mann. & Ry. 393;[5] 12 Moore, 435. Greville v. Atkins,[3] 9 B. & C. 462.

(f) Where a party indemnified by bond is sued in respect of the matter of the indemnity, and damages recovered against him, the defendant in his suit on the bond is bound to assign not only the damages and costs so recovered against him, but also the costs incurred by him in consequence, although he may not have actually paid them; and he cannot upon a scire facias suggest them as a further breach, being precluded by 8 & 9 W. 3, c. 11. Harrap v. Armitage, 11 Pri. 441.

(g) 2 B. & P. 446. Tidd's Prac. 507, 4th edit. In debt on bond, where the breaches are assigned in the replication under the statute, the jury may assess the damages without any special venire. Scott v. Staley,[6] 4 Bing. N. C. 724; 6 Sc. 598; and 6 Dowl. (P. C.) 714. And see Quin v. King, 1 M. & W. 42.

(h) Smithey v. Edmondson, 3 East, 22.

(i) And therefore unnecessary in an action on a post obit bond for a precise sum. Murray v. Earl of Stair,[7] 2 B. & C. 82.

(j) Debt on bond, the defendant pleaded, inter alia, by way of set off, a bond given to him by the plaintiff, conditioned for payment of an annuity granted by the defendant to a third party, and for indemnifying the defendants therefrom; held that the onus of proving performance of that condition was on the plaintiff, and not on the defendant, to show the breach. Penny v. Foy,[8] 8 B. & C. 11, and 2 Mann. & R. 181.

(A) (That a bond was delivered as an escrow cannot be given in evidence under a general plea of non est factum. It must be specially pleaded. Smallwood v. Clarke, Tay. 281, S. C. 2 Hay. 146. S. P. per Hall, Anon. 2 Hay. 327. Contra, Moore v. Parker, Conference Reps. 553. Delivery is a question of fact for the decision of a jury, and the circumstances from which it is to be inferred must be left to them. It is error in the court to say what circumstances constitute a delivery. Vanhook v. Barnett, 4 Dev. 268. A bond is not valid that is written over a signature and seal made upon a blank sheet of paper. Ayres v. Harness, 1 Ohio Rep. 372. Where, in a suit on a bond in Indiana, attesting witnesses reside in another state, the bond will be received in evidence upon proof of their hand-writing. Jones v. Cooprider, 1 Blackf. 47.)

(B) (In an action on a bond conditioned to perform the decree in a suit in which A. & B. were defendants,

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps, xv. 299. [2]Id. xix. 21. [3]Id. xvii. 421. [4]Id. xx. 187. [5]Id. xiii. 407. [6]Id. xxxiii. 509. [7]Id. ix. 33. [8]Id. xv. 146.

Where a sum by the condition is payable by instalments, with a stipulation that on default of payment of interest the whole shall become payable, on such default the whole may be recovered (k).

In an action on an annuity-bond, the plaintiff must prove that the party during whose life the annuity is granted is still living. If the bond be conditioned for the performance of covenants in some other deed, the plaintiff must prove the execution of the latter deed, as well as of the bond, and also that the covenant has been broken (l). Annuity-bond.

The plaintiff, in cases where breaches are assigned under the statute, must give evidence of the amount of his damages (m).

Upon an engagement to replace stock, the plaintiff may estimate his damages, either according to the price of stock at the day appointed for replacing it, or on the day of the trial (n).

A bond conditioned for the payment of a smaller sum bears interest from the day of payment, although it be given voluntarily (o); and where no day of payment is expressed, interest is payable from the time of execution.

Damages may, it seems, be recovered for more than the amount of the penalty (p); a jury, in assessing damages on a registration bond, are not confined to the diminution of the value of the advowson to the plaintiff by the defendant's life interest, nor in estimating the annual value are they bound to deduct the curate's stipend (q). Where in debt on a bond with a condition, the condition is not set out in the pleadings, the plaintiff must prove that the bond mentioned in the suggestion and produced to the jury is that on which the action is brought (r).

*Upon a plea of non est factum to a bond with conditions, breaches of which are assigned in the declaration, the jury who try the issue may also assess the damages under the common venire. (s). *270

For the proofs by the defendant under the plea of non est factum, see tit. DEED.

Where the defence is that the consideration of the bond was illegal, and the illegality does not appear on the face of the bond, it should be shown by means of a special plea, and is not evidence under the plea of non est

(k) James v. Thomas,[1] 5 B. & Ad. 40.

(l) If the defendant let judgment go by default in an action on a bond, and the plaintiff makes a suggestion in which he sets out the condition of the bond, and that appears to be for the performance of an award, or of articles of agreement, or the like, the plaintiff must prove the condition of the bond, the award, indenture or articles, as well as the breaches suggested. Edwards v. Stone, Cor. Lawrence, J. 1 Will. Saund. 58, e. (n.)

(m) See 2 Will. Saund. 187, a. 2 N. R. 362.

(n) Downes v. Back,[2] 1 Starkie's C. 318. Macarthur v. Ld. Seaforth, 2 Taunt. 257. In a late case it was held to be proper to take the price at the day of trial. Harrison v. Harrison,[3] 1 C. & P. 413.

(o) Hellier v. Franklin,[4] 1 Starkie's C. 291. Farquhar v. Morris, 7 T. R. 124. Aliter, in case of a single bond. Hogan v. Page, 1 B. & P. 337.

(p) Lonsdale v. Church, 2 T. R. 388. M'Clure v. Dunkin, 1 East, 436. Francis v. Wilson,[5] 1 R. & M. 105.

(q) Sondes v. Fletcher,[6] 5 B. & A. 835.

(r) Hodgkinson v. Marsden, 2 Camp. 121. It will be sufficient if the attorney for the plaintiff swear that the bond produced is the instrument delivered to him for the purpose of bringing the action, and that he knows no other of the same date, without calling the attesting witnesses. Ib. In an action on a bond for performance of covenants in a lease, the defendant's plea to the bond being overruled on demurrer, he is estopped from saying he did not execute the lease. Collins v. Rybot, 1 Esp. C. 157.

(s) Parkins v. Hawkshaw,[7] 2 Starkie's C. 381. Scott v. Staley,[8] 4 Bing. N. C. 724. Quin v. King, 1 M. & W. 42, 189. As to the plea of the Statute of Limitations, see tit. LIMITATIONS.

held that the record of a suit in which B. & C. were defendants, did not support the breach assigned. Coleman v. Crumpler & al. 2 Dev. 508.)

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxvii. 26. [2]Id. ii. 407. [3]Id. xi. 436. [4]Id. ii. 394. [5]Id. xxi. 391. [6]Id. vii. 276. [7]Id. iii. 392. [8]Id. xxxiii. 509.

factum, whether the bond be avoided by the common or only by the statute law (t) (A).

Plea of payment.

Proof of the payment of the principal only, will, it is said, support a plea of solvit post diem (u).

After a lapse of twenty years without demand of payment, or of acknowledgement by the obligor, a presumption arises that the bond has been satisfied (x); and such presumption is not rebutted by proof of the obligor's poverty (y). But it is otherwise where the obligor has resided abroad during the whole of the time (z). So, on the other hand, satisfaction may be presumed from the lapse of a space less than twenty years, if other circumstances render it probable that the bond has been satisfied; as, if there has in the meantime been a settlement of accounts between the parties (a) (1).

(t) Harmer v. Wright,[1] 2 Starkie's C. 35.
(u) Dixon v. Parkes, 1 Esp. C. 110. dub. Hellier v. Franklin,[2] 1 Starkie's C. 292. See tit. PAYMENT.
(x) Oswald v. Leigh, 1 T. R. 270. Colsell v. Budd, 1 Camp. 27.
(y) Willaume v. Gorges, 1 Camp. 217. (z) Newman v. Newman,[3] 1 Starkie's C. 101.
(a) 1 T. R. 270. Colsell v. Budd, 1 Camp. 27.

(A) (The consideration of a bond can be impeached at law only upon the ground that it is against an express enactment or against the policy of the law. Where a bond is fairly executed, proof of fraud or misrepresentation as to the subject matter of the consideration is inadmissible at law. Guy v. McLean, 1 Dev. 46. See, also, Lester v. Zachary, 1 Car. L. R. 380. A bond is not invalidated by being made without consideration or upon an inadequate consideration. Lester v. Zachary, 1 Car. L. R. 380. Nor can a party to a bond object that it is irregular; the principle of law is that in whatever manner a party thinks proper to bind himself he shall be bound. Lartigue v. Baldwin, 5 Mart. R. 194. Duchamp v. Nicholson, 2 Mart. N. S. 672. Villere v. Armstrong, 4 Mart. N. S. 21. Morgan v. Furst, 4 Mart. N. S. 116. Reynolds v. Ex'rs of Rogers, 5 Ohio Rep. 177. To an action of debt upon a bond, it may be pleaded, that the bond was given upon the consideration of the plaintiff's using his influence to procure a certain marriage for the defendant; and if the issue upon such plea be found for the defendant, it will avoid the bond. Overman v. Clemmons, 2 Dev. & Bat. 185.)

(1) [In the case of Executors of Clark v. Hopkins, 7 Johns. 556, it is said that after eighteen or twenty years, a bond will be presumed to have been paid, and that to rebut the presumption, the obligee ought to show a demand of payment and acknowledgement of the debt, within that time. See also Shepherd's Executors v. Cook's Executors, 2 Hayw. 238. In Boltz & al. v Ballman, 1 Yeates, 584, a lapse of eighteen years and a half was ruled not to be sufficient to found a presumption of payment of a bond, under circumstances that tended to repel the presumption: and in Goldhawk v. Duane, Circuit Court, April, 1809, Wharton's Digest, 91, {reported, 2 Wash. C. C. Rep. 323,} it was held that if the period be shorter than twenty years, the presumption of payment must be supported by circumstances. S. P. Palmer v. Dubois, 1 Rep. Con. Ct. 180. Cottle v. Payne, 3 Day, 289. (Henderson v. Lewis, 9 Serg. & Rawle, 379. See also 14 Serg. & Rawle, 21.) Where no interest had been paid for 23 years, proof of a suit having been commenced and abandoned during that period, was held not to weaken the presumption of payment. Palmer v. Dubois, ubi. sup. A confession by one co-obligor that he had never paid, and that he believed the other had not, is not sufficient after a lapse of twenty years, to rebut the presumption. Haskell v. Keen, 2 Nott & McCord, 160. The existence of a civil war, &c. is sufficient to repel the presumption of payment of a bond, though twenty years have elapsed, and no interest has been paid. Brewton v. Cannon, 1 Bay, 482. And in Pennsylvania, in an action tried in 1794, on a bond conditioned for the payment of money in 1769, on which no receipts had been indorsed, it was ruled that the period of time between 1776 and 1784, during which the limitation acts had been suspended, ought to be taken out of the calculation. Penrose & al. v. King, 1 Yeates, 344. See also Conn. & al. v. Penn & al. 1 Peters' Rep. 524. Jackson v. Pierce, 10 Johns. 414. Bailey v. Jackson, 16 ib. 210. Dunlop & Co. v. Ball, 2 Cranch, 180. Higginson v. Mein, 4 Cranch, 415. Quince's Administrotors v. Ross's Administrators, 1 Taylor, 155. S. C. 2 Hayw. 180. Rearden v. Searcy's Heirs, 3 Marsh. 544. S. C. 1 Littell's Rep. 53.

Acknowledging a bond and apologizing for not paying it will rebut the presumption of payment arising from not paying interest for twenty-five years. Smedes v. Hooghtuling & al. 3 Cames' Rep. 48. An entry made nineteen years before, in the books of the defendant's testator, that a promissory note of twenty-three years' standing was paid, was allowed to be read to support the presumption of payment. Rodman v. Hoop's Executor, 1 Dallas, 85. See also Cohen v. Thompson, 2 Rep Con. Ct. 146. Levy v. Hampton, 1 M'Cord, 145.

A statute of Connecticut limits the payment of bonds of a certain description to seventeen years: and neither an indorsement nor payment on such bonds will save them from the operation of the statute. Gates v. Brattle, 1 Root, 187. Fuller v. Hancock, ibid. 238. Whether the rule of not presuming payment within twenty years applies in that state to bonds not within the statute—Quære—Gottle v. Payne, ubi sup. In Maryland, a statute limits suits on bonds to twelve years. See Hammond v. Denton, 1 Har. & M'Hen. 200.

The presumption, from lapse of time, that a bond has been paid, unless the delay is accounted for, is allowed to prevail in a court of chancery, in the same manner as in a court of law. Giles v. Baremore, 5 Johns. Ch. Rep.]

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. iii. 233. [2]Id. ii. 394. [3]Id. ii. 314.

Indorsements on the bond, although in the hand-writing of the obligee, acknowledging the receipt of interest within the space of twenty years, have been admitted for the purpose of rebutting the presumption of satisfaction, arising from the lapse of twenty years, although no evidence was given to prove that the indorsements existed before the twenty years had elapsed (b); but the admissibility of such evidence appears to be very doubtful in principle, and the contrary has been ruled at Nisi Prius (c). Parishioners at a vestry agreed that the overseers should give their bond for a debt due from the parish, and by a minute resolved that they should be indemnified out of the rates; the obligee, a parishioner, signed the agreement and resolution of the vestry; he subsequently received for many years the interest out of the rates, without calling on the obligors for the principal; held, that the parishioners having no power to bind the parish, and the obligee having acceded to the resolutions only so far as they would bind the parish, the liability of the obligors, who undertook personally to pay, was not affected thereby (d).

*BOUNDARY ACT, 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 103. See CORPORATION. *271

BREACH OF PROMISE OF MARRIAGE. See tit. MARRIAGE.

BRIBERY.

Proof in action for.

UPON a trial for bribery under the stat. 2 Geo. 2, c. 24 (e), although the defendant took the note of the voter to whom the money was paid, and insists that it was a mere loan, it is a question for the jury whether it was not a gift (f).

To prove the allegation that A. B. was a candidate, where the bribery was previous to the election, it is sufficient to show that a poll was demanded for him, for till then every one is a candidate for whom a poll is asked; and that fact makes the person on whose behalf the bribe was given a candidate (g); but after the time of election the poll-books are the proper evidence to prove that a particular person was a candidate (h) (1). The time of delivering the precept to the returning officer need not be proved (i).

Where the declaration alleged that the party was bribed to vote for L. and E., and it was proved that he was bribed to vote for L. and his friend, it was held that the variance was not fatal, since the material fact is that (b) Searle v. Ld. Barrington, 2 Str. 826. Glynn v. Bank of England, 2 Ves. 42. Saunders v. Meredith, 3 M. & R. 120.

(c) Rose v. Bryant, 2 Camp. 321; see tit. LIMITATIONS, and Append. Vol. II. 270.

(d) Jaquet v. Lewis, 8 Sim. 480.

(e) This act is to be construed prospectively. Lord Huntingtower v. Ireland,[1] 1 B. & C. 297; 2 D. & R. 450. An offender discovering another, so that he be convicted, and not being himself convicted, is indemnified. See Sutton v. Bishop, 4 Burr. 2283. Making an affidavit is a sufficient discovery, Sutton v. Bishop, 1 Bl. 665, and a verdict without judgment a sufficient conviction; and it is sufficient though the witness be convicted after discovery, Ib. As to delay in going to trial, see Talmash v. Gardiner,[2] 1 D. & R. 512. Petrie v. White, 3 T. R. 5.

(f) 1 Bl. R. 317, 318. A wager with a voter that he does not vote for a particular candidate is within the statute. Anon. Lofft. 552.

(g) Ibid. 523. (h) Ibid.

(i) Grey v. Smithyes, 4 Burr. 2273. Where the declaration set forth the precept from the sheriff to the portreeve of a borough, it was held that the improper insertion of the if in the declaration, which was not in the precept, was immaterial. King v. Pippit, 1 T. R. 235. See Dickson v. Fisher, 4 Burr. 2267.

(1) [In an information for bribery in an election, it ought to appear certainly that an election was held, and that the vote was given at that election. Newell v. Commonwealth, 2 Wash. 88.]

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. viii. 83. [2]Id. xvi. 54.

the party was bribed to vote (k). The plaintiff must prove some bribe, or promise, or agreement, previous to the election (l).

On a declaration for corrupting one Moor, and bribing him to vote for the defendant, it is no defence to show that Moor did not vote for the defendant (m) (1). The person who took the bribe is a competent witness (n).

If an offender who makes a discovery be sued, he may give his defence in *272 *evidence under the plea of nil debet (o). No damages are recoverable for the detention of the debt (p).

BRIDGE.

Indictment against a county.

On an indictment against a county (q) for not repairing a bridge, the prosecutor must prove, 1st, that it is a public bridge; 2dly, that it is situate within the county; 3dly, that it is out of repair.

That it is a public bridge.

1st. That it is a public bridge.—The principal evidence to prove this is that of the actual use of the bridge by the public, and that it is of public convenience and has been repaired at the public expense. It is not necessary to prove that it is an ancient bridge, or that it was originally built with the concurrence of the public. Where a bridge had been originally erected by a private person forty years ago, but had been since used by the public, it was held that it was a public bridge (r).

About forty-five years ago there was a ford through the river where the bridge was built, which was part of a highway from London to Maidstone. The river was deep; at flood-times up to the middle, at ordinary times up to the knee. A miller erected a dam across the river, which raised the water about three inches, and five years afterwards built the bridge in question. In this case much reliance was placed on the dictum in Rolle's Ab. 368; viz.

(k) Coombe v. Pitt, 3 Burr. 1586.

(l) Lord Huntingtower v. Gardiner,[1] 1 B. & C. 297; 2 D. & R. 450. Note, that the declaration alleged that the defendant received a large sum for giving his vote for, &c., a second class of counts charged a previous agreement; it appeared that the defendant received money after the election for giving his vote for, &c. but no evidence was given of any pre-existing agreement. The learned judge reserved the point, and left the case to the jury, who found for the defendant on all the counts which charged a previous agreement. On motion for a nonsuit, this court held that the words of the statute were to be construed prospectively; that the terms of the first class of counts were ambiguous, and might after verdict be construed either prospectively or retrospectively, so as to support the verdict, and therefore that the question arose, not upon the record, but on the evidence, and a nonsuit was accordingly directed. See Avery v. Hoole, 2 Cowp. 825.

(m) Sulston v. Norton, 1 Bl. 317; 3 Burr. 1235. Bush v. Rawlins, Say. 280. Phillips v. Fowler, Pasch. 7 Geo. 2, C. B. It is immaterial whether he had in fact a right to vote if he claimed the right, and the defendant thought he had such right. Lilley v. Corrie, 1 Sel. N. P. 650, n. And such right of voting need not be proved. Coombe, q. t. v. Pitt, 1 Bl. 523; 3 Burr. 1586.

(n) 4 Burr. 2285, 2469. Edwards v. Evans, 3 East, 451. Heward v. Shipley, 4 East, 180.

(o) Davy v. Baker, 4 Burr. 2471. The court, after a verdict given against him, will not interpose on motion that judgment may be staid for the discovery and conviction of another person. Pugh v. Curgenvan, 3 Will. 35.

(p) Cuming v. Sibley, 4 Burr. 2489.

(q) The county is liable for such bridges only as are over "water flowing in a channel between banks more or less defined;" they are not liable for the repair of arches forming a causeway and easier access to the main bridge and passage of flood water, the channel of which was occasionally dry. R. v. Oxfordshire,[2] 1 B. & Ad. 289. And see S. P. ib. in notis, and Bridges & Nichols' Case, Godb. 346, pl. 441.

(r) R. v. Inhab. of Kent, 2 M. & S. 513; 1 Roll. Ab. 368. R. v. Inhab. of Wilts, 6 Mod. 307; 3 Salk. 359. Case of Glusburne Bridge, 5 Burr. 2594; 2 Bl. R. 386, n. 685. R. v. Inhab. of the W. R. of York, 2 East, 353. R. v. Inhab. of Glamorgan, 2 East, 356. Lord Portman's Case, 13 East, 225. Case of the Medway Canal, 13 East, 220. A. licenses B. to build a bridge on his land; B. covenants to repair; the property in the materials, subject to the public right of passage after dedication to the public, continues in B., who may maintain trespass against a wrongdoer who severs them. Harrison v. Parker, 6 East, 154; and see Spooner v. Brewster,[3] 3 Bing. 139.

(1) [An offer to bribe is indictable, though the bribe is not accepted. United States v. Worrall, 2 Dallas, 384.]

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. viii. 83. [2]Id. xx. 389. [3]Id. xi. 69.

"that if a man erect a mill for his own profit, and make a new cut for the water to come to it, and make a new bridge over it, and the subjects used to go over this as a common bridge, the bridge ought to be repaired by him who has the mill, and not by the county, because he erected it for his own benefit," for which he cites 8 Edw. 2, the case of the Prior of Stratford. But on referring to that case, it appeared that the liability there was ratione tenuræ (s), and the court laid down the rule broadly, in conformity with all the authorities, except that in Rolle, that if a private person build a private bridge, which afterwards becomes of public convenience, the county is bound to repair it (t). The circumstance that the bridge is of private convenience and utility to the party who built it, makes no difference (u). The test is not, as it seems, any adoption of the bridge by the public, but its *becomiag useful to the county in general (x): if the bridge be of public utility, the county who derives advantage from it must support it (1). *273

A bridge may be a public carriage-bridge, although used but occasionally by carriages, except in times of flood and frosts, when it is dangerous to pass the river (y).

Where the Medway Navigation Company, under an Act, which enabled them to amend or alter such bridges or highways as might hinder the passage or navigation, leaving them, or others as convenient, in their room, forty years ago destroyed a ford across the river in a public highway, by deepening its bed, and built a bridge over the same place, it was held that they were bound to keep it in repair under the conditions of the Act (z). So, where a canal-company cut and deepened a ford across a highway, and thereby rendered a bridge necessary for the use of the public, which they built, it was held that they were bound to repair it; the bridge being necessary for the purposes of the company, and not for the purposes of the public (a). Public bridge.

Where a parish wooden bridge, used occasionally by light carriages, had been replaced by a spacious stone bridge, built by the trustees of a road, it was held that the county was bound to repair it, and that the inhabitants of the county could not plead that it had been repaired immemorially by the parish (b).

(s) See a copy of the curious record in this case, 2 M. & S. 520.

(t) R. v. Inhab. of Kent, 2 M. & S. 513. And see R. v. Inhab. of Wilts, 1 Salk. 359. And see the rule laid down by Aston, J. in the Glusburne Bridge Case, Burr. 2594. R. v. Inhab. of Lancashire, cited by Lawrence, J., 2 East, 352.

(u) R. v. Inhab. of Glamorganshire, 2 East, 356, in note.

(x) Per Lord Ellenborough, R. v. W. R. of Yorkshire, 2 East, 349: and per Aston, J. in the Glusburne Bridge Case, Burr. 2594; and Lord Coke's Comment. on the Stat. of Bridges, 2 Inst. 700. Where a bridge is in a highway, the forbearing to prosecute it as a nuisance is evidence of acquiescence by the county. Per Bayley, J. Rex v. Inhabitants of St. Benedict,[1] 4 B. & A. 450. R. v. Devon,[2] 1 R. & M. 144.

(y) R. v. Inhab. of Co. of Northampton, 2 M. & S. 262.

(z) R. v. Inhab. of the Co. of Kent, 13 East, 219. [See Inhab. of Waterbury v. Clark, 4 Day, 198.]

(a) R. v. Inhab. of the parts of Lindsey, in the Co. of Lincoln, 14 East, 317. See also R. v. Inhab. of Somerset, 16 East, 305.

(b) R. v. Inhab. of Surrey, 2 Camp. 455. R. v. Inhab. of Cumberland, 6 T. R. 194; S. C. in error, 3 B. & P. 354. Where townships have so enlarged a bridge which they were before liable to repair as a foot-bridge, they are still liable pro rata. R. v. W. R. of Yorkshire, 2 East, 353.

(1) [In the case of The State v. The Town of Campton, 2 N. Hamp. Rep. 513, it was decided that a bridge, although erected by individuals, yet if dedicated to the public and used freely by them so long as to evince its public usefulness, must be repaired by them. {In Massachusetts it has been held, that a public Townway can be established only in the mode prescribed by Stat. 1786, c. 67; and a record of the establishment of such a way cannot, it seems, be presumed from an user for any length of time. Comm. v. Low, 4 Pick. Rep. 408.}

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. vi. 482. [2]Id. xxi. 401.

By the stat. 43 Geo. 3, c. 59, s. 5 (c), no bridge shall be deemed and taken to be a county bridge, or a bridge which the inhabitants of any county shall be compellable or liable to maintain or repair, unless such bridge shall be erected (d) in a substantial or commodious manner, under the direction or to the satisfaction of the county-surveyor, or person appointed by the justices of the peace at their general quarter sessions assembled, or by the justices of the peace of the county of Lancaster at their general annual sessions.

The inhabitants of a county are also bound to repair to the extent of 300 feet of the highway at each end of the bridge (e).

The inhabitants of a county are not bound to widen a public bridge, though it be too small for the measured breadth of modern carriages (f).

*274 *But those who are bound to repair must make it of such height and strength as is answerable to the course of the water (g).

Proof in defence by a county.

The inhabitants (h) of a county, upon the plea not guilty, cannot throw the onus of repairing the bridge upon any other parties; to do this, a special plea is necessary, setting forth the obligation of such other parties specially (i). Under the general plea the defendants cannot adduce evidence, except in denial of one or more of the points which must be established on the part of the prosecution; viz. 1st, that the bridge is a public one; 2ndly, situate within the county; and 3dly, out of repair.

But a county on the plea of not guilty, may prove the repair of the bridge by individuals (k), as a medium of proof that the bridge is not a public bridge. As that the feoffees of certain estates had repaired it (l); for repairs done by an individual are primâ facie to be ascribed rather to motives of private interest in his own property, than presumed to have been done for the public benefit (m). But it seems that such evidence is of little weight (n) when placed in competition with evidence of user by the public. Evidence that a bar across a public bridge is kept locked except in times of flood, is conclusive to show that the public have no more than a limited right to use it on those occasions; and in such a case, if the indictment should aver that the bridge was a public bridge, used by the King's subjects at their free will and pleasure, the variance would be fatal (o).

Where an indictment alleged that a bridge was a public carriage-bridge, and also for the King's subjects passing and repassing on foot; and upon the evidence it appeared that it had been used by passengers on horseback and on foot, and not with carriages, it was held that the defendants could not be convicted of any part of the charge (p).

(c) By this stat. s. 4, the surveyor may sue or be sued.

(d) This applies only to bridges newly built, not to a bridge merely widened or repaired since the passing of the statute. Trustees under a Turnpike Act having built a bridge across a stream where a culvert would have been sufficient, but a bridge was better for the public, the county cannot refuse to repair such a bridge on the ground that it was not absolutely necessary. R. v. Inhab. of Lancashire,[1] 2 B. & Ad. 813.

(e) R. v. Inhab. of W. R. of Yorkshire, 7 East, 588; and in Dom. Proc. 5 Taunt. 284.

(f) R. v. Inhab. of Devon,[2] 4 B. & C. 670; 7 D. & R. 147. R. v. Inhab. of Cumberland, 3 B. & P. 354.

(g) 1 Haw. C. 77, s. 1.

(h) A particular inhabitant or tenant of land charged to the repairs, may be made defendant to an indictment, and be liable to the whole fine, and must sue at law for contribution. 1 Haw. C. 77, s. 2. And now see the stat.

(i) See the stat. 22 Hen. 8, c. 5. R. v. Inhab. of W. R. of Yorkshire,[3] 7 East's R. 558. 5 Taunt. 284. R. v. Inhab. of Bucks, 12 East, 192.

(k) 2 M. & S. 262. R. v. Inhab. of Co. of Northampton.

(l) Ibid.

(m) Per Ld. Ellenborough, 2 M. & S. 264.

(n) Ibid.

(o) R. v. The Marquis of Buckingham, 4 Camp. 189.

(p) Per Bayley, J., R. v. Inhab. of Lancashire, Lancaster Summer Assizes, 1820.

(1) [The inhabitants of a town where a bridge has recently been built without any authority are not obliged to repair it. Commonwealth v. Inhabitants of Charlestown, 1 Pick. 180.]

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxii. 189. [2]Id. x. 411. [3]Id. i. 111.

Upon a special plea by a county that some smaller district, or some individual, is liable to the repairs of the bridge, the evidence on the part of the county to prove the obligation, seems to be the same as upon an indictment against the smaller district or individual. Special plea.

Upon an indictment against a less district than a county, or against an individual, the prosecutor must also prove the liability of the defendants to repair, either from the prescription (q) generally, or ratione tenuræ (r), as alleged in the indictment. Against individuals, &c. Prescription.

A plea by the inhabitants of a county, that certain townships had immemorially used to repair a bridge, is disproved by evidence that the townships had enlarged the bridge to a carriage-bridge which they had before been bound to repair as a foot-bridge (s). Where, upon a similar plea, it *appeared that a parish was bound by prescription to repair a wooden foot- *275 bridge, used by carriages only in time of flood, and that forty years ago the trustees of a turnpike-road had built upon the same site a wider bridge of brick, which had since been constantly used by all carriages passing that way, it was held that the plea was not sustained by the evidence (t).

Upon an indictment against a county, the defendants pleaded that J. S. was liable ratione tenuræ. It appeared that J. S. had purchased part of an estate, the owner of which, both before and after the purchase, had repaired the bridge, and it was held that this was not sufficient evidence to support the plea (u). But where an entire estate or manor is liable to the repair of a bridge, and the estate or manor is afterwards divided amongst several, they are each severally liable to the whole charge (x). Ratione tenuræ.

Where the indictment charged a corporation with a prescriptive obligation to repair a bridge, and a charter of incorporation granted by Edw. 6, was given in evidence, from the terms of which it appeared to be doubtful whether the corporation had before existed immemorially, and whether lands had not been given for the repair of the bridge (y), but parol evidence was given that the corporation had in fact repaired the bridge as far back as living memory could go, it was held that the parol evidence and the charter might be taken in aid of each other, and that the preponderance of evidence was, that this was a corporation by prescription, although words of incorporation were used in the incorporating part of the charter only; and that the corporation were still bound to repair by prescription, and not by tenure (z). Corporation.

On an indictment for not repairing a bridge, ratione tenuræ, it was held, that in order to negative any such immemorial liability, a record of a pre(q) See R. v. Hendon,[1] 4 B. & Ad. 628.

(r) See tit. Prescription and Highways.

(s) R. v. Inhab. of W. R. of Yorkshire, 2 East, 353. See also R. v. Inhab. of the County of Surrey, 2 Camp. 455. Where an Act made a town part and parcel of a hundred, and directed that the inhabitants of the town should do everything with the inhabitants of the hundred which the latter did or were bound to do, held that a presentment against the inhabitants of the hundred for the non-repair of a bridge within the town was good, although charging them as liable by prescription. R. v. Oswestry, 6 M. & S. 361.

(t) R. v. Inhab. of the County of Surrey, 2 Camp. 455.

(u) R. v. Inhab. of Oxfordshire, 16 East, 223. There was no evidence to show in respect of what lands the former owner of the whole (Ld. Cadogan) repaired the bridge; and as he still retained part of the estate, and continued to repair the bridge, there was no evidence to charge J. S., except that Ld. Cadogan had sold him some lands, which the Court held to be insufficient to charge him with the obligation to repair. Where an individual ratione tenuræ is bound to repair a carriage bridge, he is not bound to repair a foot-bridge, though it be annexed to and connected with the carriage bridge. R. v. Inhab. of Middlesex,[2] 3 B. & Ad. 201.

(x) R. v. Duchess of Buccleugh, 1 Salk. 357; 3 Salk. 77; 6 Mod. 150; Holt, 128.

(y) R. v. The Mayor, &c. of Stratford-upon-Avon, 14 East, 348. The terms of the charter itself are too long to be introduced here, and the case is cited merely for the purpose of showing how far parol evidence of the cause may be given as explanatory of the doubtful terms of a charter.

(z) 14 East, 348.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxiv. 128. [2]Id. xxiii. 57.

sentment in the 18th of Edw. 3, by the men of K. against the bishop of L., for the non-repairs of the bridge, on which the jury negatived the liability of the bishop, and went on to find that the bridge had been built about sixty years, and that they were wholly ignorant who of right was bound to repair it, the verdict being followed soon after by a grant of pontage to the men of K. for the same repairs, were admissible documents, as material to the issue (a) (A).

Defence. An individual, or the inhabitants of any district inferior to a county, may give any matter in evidence in their own discharge under the general issue (b).

Competency. *276 The stat. 1 Anne, c. 18, s. 13, reciting that many private persons, and *bodies politic or corporate, are of right liable to the repair of decayed bridges, and the highways thereto adjoining, but that because the inhabitants of the county, riding or division in which such decayed bridge or highways lie, have not been admitted as legal witnesses against such persons, enacts that the evidence of the inhabitants shall be taken and admitted in all such cases. Previous to this statute such witnesses were in some instances held to be competent on the ground of necessity (c).

BURGLARY (d).

Breaking. On an indictment for burglary it is essential to prove, 1st, a felonious breaking and entering; 2dly, of the dwelling-house; 3dly, in the night-time; 4thly, with intent to commit a felony.

In the first place, it is a question of fact for the jury, whether the prisoner has been guilty of any act of breaking; but whether that act amounts to a burglarious breaking, is a pure question of law. There must be evidence of an actual or constructive breaking, for if the entry was obtained

Proof of breaking. through an open door or window, it is no burglary (e). But the lifting of a latch (f) (1); taking out a pane of glass; lifting up of folding-doors (g);

(a) R. v. Lady Sutton, 3 Nev. & P. 569. (b) See tit. Highway and Prescription.

(c) See R. v. Carpenter, 2 Show. 47. It has been said that inhabitants are competent witnesses on indictments against the county, because they stand indifferent, every man being for his own convenience concerned to uphold the bridge, and, on the other hand, being interested not to subject himself to an useless charge. Gilb. L. E. 240, Lofft's ed. It is, however, obvious that this reason is applicable only in cases where the mere fact of repairs is disputed. Ibid.

(d) See the form of the indictment, and the necessary averments, Crim. Pleadings.

(e) Fost. 107; 1 And. 114; Saville, 59; 1 Hale's P. C. 551, 553, 556; Summ. 81; 3 Ins. 64; 1 Haw. c. 38. The breaking, which is sufficient in an action of clausum fregit, will not always be sufficient to constitute a burglary. 1 Haw. c. 38; 1 Hale, 508, 527, 551.

(f) East's P. C. 487.

(g) Brown's Case, East's P. C. 487. In this case the doors, which were horizontal, were closed by their own natural weight, without any interior fastening; but in Callam's Case, (Russel, 903, cor. Ld. Ellenborough, O. B. 1809,) which was similar, except that the trap-door had an internal bolt, which was not in; it seems that the Judges were of opinion that the lifting up of the door was not a sufficient breaking. Lifting up the flap of a trap-door which had no fastening, but was kept in its place by its own weight merely, was held not to be a breaking; but the unlocking and opening a door, was held a sufficient breaking out.

(A) (The responsibilities of the proprietors of a toll-bridge, are not the same as those of common carriers. The latter having the custody, care, and control of the goods they carry, have peculiar opportunities for combinations and collusions with robbers, thieves, &c., and are therefore held to a responsibility so high that nothing but an act of God, or the enemies of the country will excuse them from liability for the loss of, or injury to the goods. The persons and property passing a bridge are not subject to the control, nor under the care of the proprietors of the bridge, and are not exposed to all the dangers to which goods in the hands of common carriers are liable. The proprietors therefore are not liable to the same extent. But they are bound to use at least ordinary care and diligence in the construction of the bridge, and in keeping it in proper order, and for any injury which may result from their negligence in this respect, they are liable in damages. And, query, whether they are not bound to the utmost care and vigilance, and liable for even slight negligence. Bridge Company v. Williams, 9 Dana, 404.) [Every city, county and district in South Carolina is bound to lay off and keep in repair its own roads, bridges and causeways, and to defray the expense thereof. Shoolbred v. Corporation, &c. 2 Bay. 63.]

(1) [See The State v. Wilson, 1 Coxe's Rep. 429, acc.]

breaking of a wall or gates which protect the house (h); the descent down a chimney (i); the turning of a key where the door is locked on the inside (k), constitutes a sufficient breaking.

Where the glass of the window was broken, but the shutter within was not broken, it was doubted whether the breaking was sufficient, and no judgment was given (l).

Where an entry has been gained without any breaking, a subsequent breaking will constitute the offence; as where the party lifts the latch of a chamber-door (m), or a servant raises the latch of his master's door with intent to murder or rob his master (n).

*It has been doubted, whether a guest at an inn can be guilty of burglary, in respect of breaking his own chamber door, since he has a special property in the chamber (o). Most of these observations apply also to an indictment for breaking out, under the stat. 12 Ann. c. 7, s. 3, which was a declaratory Act, and for which the stat. 7 & 8 G. 4, c. 29, s. 13, is now substituted. *277

Some part of the house must be broken; it is not sufficient to show that a box was broken (p); and it seems, that in favour of life, cupboards, presses, lockers, and other fixtures, which merely supply the place of chests, and other ordinary utensils of household, are to be considered as mere moveables, although in questions between the heir or devisee and the executor, they may with propriety be considered as parts of the freehold (q) (A).

A constructive breaking may be proved; as where entrance was gained by means of fraud, stratagem, or threats, with a felonious design, for the law regards such means in as heinous a point of view as actual violence (r). Hence, the gaining admission by raising a hue and cry, and bringing a constable, to whom the owner opens the door (s), under pretence of business (t); under pretence of taking lodgings (u); under a judgment against the casual ejector obtained by false affidavits and without any colour of title (x); by fraudulently persuading an inmate to give admission (y); by Breaking, constructive.

R. v. Lawrence,[1] 4 C. & P. 231. Raising a sash partly before open, was held not to amount to a breaking, to sustain a conviction for house-breaking. Smith's Case, 1 Ry. & M. C. C. L. 178. Where the sash-window was closed down, not fastened, and was thrown up by the prisoner, and a crow-bar introduced to force the shutters, but there was no proof that any part of the hand was within the window; held not to amount to an entering sufficient to constitute burglary. Rust's Case, 1 Ry. & M. C. C. L. 183.

(h) 1 Hale's P. C. 559.
(i) East's P. C. 485; Cromp. 32; Dalt. 253.
(k) Ibid. 487; 1 Hale, 552.
(l) Chambers's Case, East's P. C. 487.
(m) R. v. Johnson, East's P. C. 484; 1 Hale's P. C. 553.
(n) Kel. 67; Pop. 14; Hutt. 20. R. v. Binglose, East's P. C. 488. R. v. Gray, Str. 481; Dy. 99.
(o) Haw. c. 38. But if the chamber of the guest be broken by another, the dwelling-house must be alleged to be the innkeeper's, and a guest may be guilty of larceny in respect of goods entrusted to him as a guest.
(p) Foster, 108. [The State v. Wilson, 1 Coxe's Rep. 439.]
(q) Ibid. 109, in Gibbon's Case.
(r) 1 Haw. c. 38; 1 Hale's P. C. 508, 527, 551.
(s) East's P. C. 405; 1 Haw. c. 38, s. 5; 3 Inst. 64; Summ. 81.
(t) Le Mott's Case, Kel. 40; 1 Haw. c. 38, s. 8.
(u) R. v. Cassey & Cotter, Kel. 63. And see Semple's Case, 1 Leach, 484.
(x) R. v. Farre, Kel. 43.
(y) R. v. Ann Hawkins, East's P. C. 485, MS. Tracy 80, & MS. Sum. The prisoner, in the absence of the family, persuaded the boy, who kept the key of the house, to let her in, by a promise of a pot of ale; and after admission, and whilst the boy was gone for the ale, she robbed the house. See R. v. Le Mott, Kel. 42; East's P. C. 486, 494.

(A) (The window of a dwelling-house being covered with a netting of double twine nailed to the sides, top, and bottom, it was held, that cutting and tearing down the netting, and entering the house through the window were a sufficient entry and breaking to constitute burglary. Commonwealth v. Stephenson, 8 Pick. 354.)

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. xix. 360.

conspiracy with a servant (z); or lastly, by threats of violence to the owner who opens the door of his house (a), is sufficient to constitute the offence.

Entry. Some entry must be proved. If thieves by threats of violence induce the owner of a house to throw out his money to them in the night time, which they take up in the owner's presence, the offence would be a robbery, but not a burglary (b). But any the least entry is sufficient, by means of the hand (c) or foot, or even by an instrument, such as a pistol or hook (d). So, it seems, that the discharging a loaded gun through the window of a dwelling-house is a sufficient entry (e).

But the entry must appear to have been made with the immediate intent *278 *to commit a felony, as distinguished from the previous intent to procure admission to the dwelling-house. Where it appeared that a centre-bit had penetrated through the door, chips being found in the inside of the house, yet, as the instrument had been introduced for the purpose of breaking, and not for the purpose of taking the property, or committing any other felony, it was held that the entry was incomplete (f).

If A. send in a child of seven or eight years old at the window, who takes goods out and delivers them to A., who carries them away, it is a burglary by A., though the child, for want of discretion, be not guilty (g).

It is not essential to prove that the entry was on the same night with the breaking (h), provided both were in the night.

Dwelling-house, what is. Secondly, of the dwelling-house of another (i). It is to be considered, 1st, what constitutes a dwelling-house; 2dly, its extent; 3dly, proof of ownership.

Inhabitancy. 1st. A dwelling-house is constituted by a permanent inhabitancy of the house. Mere inclosed ground, or a booth, or tent, is not a dwelling-house (k); but a hay-loft above a stable is, if inhabited, although it be rated as appurtenant to the stable (l). Chambers in the inns of court, and in colleges within the Universities, are dwelling-houses (m).

An actual inhabitancy previous to the offence is essential; and therefore, although goods have been brought into a house, and possession taken with a view to inhabitancy, yet no burglary can be committed by breaking into the house previous to actual residence by the owner or some of his family (n).

(z) Where a servant lets another in to commit a burglary, it is burglary in both. Cornwall's Case, East's P. C. 486; 2 Str. 881; 4 Bl. Comm. 227; 10 Str. 433; 1 Hale, 553.

(a) East's P. C. 486; 2 MS. Sum. 298; 1 Hale, 553; 1 Haw. c. 38, s. 4; East's P. C. 491. Where, however, the servant, by the assent of the master, lets in robbers, under an agreement with them to rob the house, it seems to be doubtful whether the act be burglarious. See East's P. C. 486; and Eggington's Case, Ibid. 494.

(b) 1 Hale, 505; East's P. C. 486; 1 Haw. c. 38, s. 3; Sav. 59; Cromp. 31, contra. Dalt c. 151, s. 3.

(c) R. v. Gibbons, Fost. 107. East's P. C. 490; where the prisoner cut a hole in the shutters of a dwelling-house, through which he put his hand and took out watches.

(d) 3 Inst. 64; East's P. C. 490.

(e) See East's P. C. 490; 1 Haw. c. 38, s. 7; 1 And. 115; Ld. Hale, (1 P. C. 555,) says that it does not make a burglary; but adds a quære.

(f) R. v. Hughes and others, 1 Leach, 452; East's P. C. 491.

(g) 1 Hale, 565, 6.

(h) Ibid. 551, 557; East's P. C. 491. An entry sufficient to constitute a burglary is also sufficient under the statutes against housebreaking in the day-time, under the stat. 1 Edw. 6, c. 12, s. 6; 39 Eliz. c. 15. Fost. 108. See the late stat. 7 & 8 G. 4, c. 29, s. 12 & 14.

(i) A mansion, the breaking which may constitute a burglary, includes the walls or gates of a town and churches.

(k) Haw. c. 39, s. 17.

(l) Turner's Case, East's P. C. 492.

(m) Hale, 556; Haw. c. 38, s. 1.

(n) R. v. Lyon and Miller, Leach, 221. East's P. C. 497; Haw. c. 38, s. 11. Hallard's Case, East's P. C. 498, where the former tenant had quitted the house, and the in-coming tenant had put all his goods into the house, and had frequently been there in the day-time, but neither he nor any part of his family had ever

(1) [In an indictment for burglary, the words "mansion house" sufficiently describe a dwelling-house. Commonwealth v. Pennock, 3 Serg. & Rawle, 199.]

Nor where the inhabitancy is casual, and for a particular purpose, as, where a workman sleeps in an unfinished house (o), or an agent is placed in the house to watch thieves or goods (p).

But where there has been an actual inhabitancy, by the owner or his servants sleeping in the house, a burglary may be committed in the absence of the owner and all his family, provided the house has not been abandoned, and there be an intention to return to the house (q). But in all such cases *the inquiry as to the intention to return is material, and should be distinctly proved. Animus revertendi. *279

Where the owner of the house, at the latter end of the summer quitted the house, which he had generally used for a summer residence, and took away great part of the furniture, and had not then come to any settled resolution whether he would return or not, but said that he was rather inclined totally to quit the house, and let it for the remainder of the term, and the house was broken and robbed the January following, the Court held, that under the circumstances the house could not be considered as his dwelling-house (r).

2dly. Extent of the dwelling-house.—The term dwelling-house comprehends all buildings within the curtilage or enclosure (s), all under the same range of building and roof, such as the buttery of a college (t); and it was formerly sufficient if the building adjoined the dwelling-house, and it appeared to the jury that it was occupied as parcel of the dwelling-house, although there were no common curtilage and enclosure, or internal communication (u), such as a barn, stable, cow-house, dairy-house or the like, or a back house eight or nine yards distant from the dwelling-house, and connected only by a pale extending between them (x). But now by the stat. 7 & 8 G. 4, c. 29, s. 13, no building, although within the same curtilage with the dwelling-house, and occupied therewith, shall be deemed to be part of such dwelling-house for the purpose of burglary, or for any of the purposes aforesaid, unless there shall be a communication between such building and dwelling-house, either immediate or by means of a covered and inclosed passage leading from the one to the other (A). Extent.

slept there; it was held by Buller, J. that no burglary could be committed there. The same point was decided by Grose, J. in another case. See East's P. C. 498.

(o) Where an executor puts servants into the house which belonged to him, as executor, it seems that burglary may be committed there. R. v. Jones and Longman, East's P. C. 499. If a servant live in a house of the master at a yearly rent, it is the house of the servant, though he has it by reason of the service. R. v. Jervis, 1 R. & M. 7.

(p) Brown's Case, East's P. C. 501. Smith's Case, East's P. C. 497; 1 Hale, 557. Harris's Case, Leach, 808; East's P. C. 498. R. v. Davis, East's P. C. 499. Where a servant with his family inhabited part of the house of business of a company, the whole being open to him, and he and his family were the only persons dwelling there, held that it might properly be described as his dwelling-house; and semble, it might also have been laid as the house of the company. Witt's Case, 1 R. & M. C. C. L. 248.

(q) 1 Hale, 550; 1 Haw. c. 38; East's P. C. 496; Summ. 82. R. v. Murray and Harris, East's P. C. 496; Fost. 77; J. Nicholls, the owner of the house at Westminster, took a journey into Cornwall, with intent to return, and sent his wife and family out of town, and left the key with a friend to look after the house; after he had been gone a month, the house was broken and robbed in the night-time; in a month afterwards he returned with his family and inhabited the house; and adjudged to be burglary, O. B. 10 Will. 3. In the case of R. v. Kirkham and Ellison (Lanc. Sp. Ass. 1817), Wood, B. held that the offence of stealing in a dwelling-house, under the stat. 12 Anne, had been committed, although the owner and his family had left the house six months before, having left the furniture, and intending to return.

(r) Nutbrown's Cases, Fost. 176; East's P. C. 496.

(s) 1 Hale, 558, 559; Haw. c. 38, s. 12; East's P. C. 492.

(t) R. v. Maynard, East's P. C. 501. (u) Brown's Case, East's P. C. 493.

(x) So held by all the Judges in 1665. See 1 Hale, 558, 559; 1 Haw. c. 38, s. 12; 3 Inst. 64, 65; 4 Bl. Comm. 225; Dalt. c. 151, s. 4; East's P. C. 492.

(A) (Burglary can only be committed in a dwelling-house, or such out buildings as are necessary to it as a dwelling. Therefore it is not burglary to break the door of a store situate within three feet of the dwelling, and inclosed in the same yard. State v. Langford, 1 Dev. 253. But burglary may be committed

In Garland's Case (y) the jury found specially that the prisoner in the night-time broke into an out-house in the possession of G. S., and occupied by him with his dwelling-house, and separated therefrom by an open passage eight feet wide, and that the said out-house was not connected with the said dwelling-house by any fence inclosing both. And the Judges were of opinion that there should be judgment for the prisoner, for the jury should have found it parcel of the dwelling-house if it were so (z).

In Eggington's Case (a) it appeared that a manufactory was carried on *280 *in the centre of a large pile of building, in the wings of which several persons lived, but they had no internal communication; that the roofs were connected, and the entrances to all were from the same common enclosure. And all the Judges held that the centre building could not be considered as parcel of any of the dwelling-houses, and could not be considered as under the same roof, although the roofs were connected.

Ownership. The ownership and situation of the dwelling-house must be proved as it is laid in the indictment, and in the proper county. Since the consideration of ownership is sometimes rendered complicated by the circumstances of the number of owners, and the nature of their interests, it will be desirable to class the cases as follow:

The first, including those cases where one person alone, by himself or his agents, occupies the whole dwelling-house or curtilage:

2dly. Where several persons severally occupy distinct parts of the same dwelling-house:

3dly. Where several persons jointly occupy the same dwelling-house.

1st. Where a person in his own right, by himself or his agents, occupies the dwelling-house.—In such case, the ownership must be laid in the suo jure occupant, and the inhabitancy by his family, his servants, or even his guests in his own absence, will support the allegation that the dwelling-house is his (b). And even where a feme covert lives apart from her husband, the dwelling-house must be laid as his (c). And this rule holds in the case of all persons who occupy as mere agents or servants of another. Apartments in the King's palaces, or in the houses of noblemen for their stewards or chief servants, must be laid as the mansion-houses of the King or noblemen, as has been long ago adjudged in the instances of Somerset-house and White-hall, and more recently in that of Chelsea Hospital; for in all such cases the occupation is in a representative capacity, and in point

(y) East's P. C. 493, Som. Lent. Ass. 1776.

(z) Ld. Hale seems to intimate, that if the prosecutor were to hold the out-house as tenant to one, and the dwelling-house as tenant to another, burglary could not be committed in the out-house, however proximate to the dwelling-house its situation might be (1 Hale, 559); but this doctrine is justly questioned by Mr. East in his P. C. 493. It is difficult to conceive how the title under which the legal occupant of an out-house holds it can affect the question whether it be or be not a parcel of the dwelling-house. It is very possible that a man may hold different parts of the same entire dwelling-house under different owners; and the principle, if well founded, would equally apply to such a case.

(a) Staff. Spring. Ass. 1801, East's P. C. 494.

(b) East's P. C. 500; Haw. c. 38, s. 13, 14; 1 Hale, 522, 557; Kel. 27.

(c) Farr's Case, Kel. 43.

---

in a house in the city, in which the prosecutor intended to reside on his return from his summer residence in the country, and to which on going into the country he had removed his furniture from his former residence in town, though neither the prosecutor nor his family had ever lodged in the house in which the crime was charged to have been committed, but merely visited it occasionally. Com'th v. Brown, 3 Rawle, 207. See also State v. Mabney, Charlton's Rep. 84. [In North Carolina, burglary may be committed in a house standing near enough to the dwelling-house to be used with it as appurtenant to it, or standing in the same yard, whether the yard be open or enclosed. The State v. Twitty, 1 Hayw. 102. The State v. Wilson, ibid. 242.

In South Carolina, to break and enter by night into a store-house in which no one sleeps, which has no internal communication with the dwelling-house, and is not connected with it, except by a fence, is not burglary. The State v. Ginns, 1 Nott & M'Cord, 583.]) of law, is not the inhabitancy of the servant or agent, but of the lord or proprietor of the mansion (d).

2dly. Where several are severally possessed of distinct parts of the same dwelling-house:

Where a house once entire is actually converted into two by partitions, without internal communication, and the parts are inhabited by different persons, they are distinct dwelling-houses.

In Jones's case, a house was so divided for the purpose of accommodating two partners, each of whom paid his own separate household expenses, but the rent and taxes were paid jointly out of the partnership fund. A burglary having been committed in one part, it was laid in the indictment to be the dwelling-house of the partners jointly; and the Court held that it ought to have been laid in the separate occupant, and the jury were directed to acquit the prisoner of the capital part of the charge (e).

If the owner of an entire house inhabit part, and let part to a lodger, and there be a common entrance for both, the whole remains the dwelling-house of the owner, and must be so laid, although the part occupied by the lodger or lessee be broken (f). But if the owner inhabit part, and let another part *to a tenant, and the part so let be entirely separted from the rest of *281 the dwelling-house, then if the tenant inhabit the part so separated, and it be broken into, it must be laid to be his dwelling-house (g). And if in such case the tenant did not inhabit his part so separated, either by himself or by his servant or family, the breaking that part would not amount to a burglary (h).

Where A. let off a cellar from the house, to which there was no entrance but from the street, to B., and also let a chamber to B., which was part of the remainder of the house inhabited by A., and the cellar was broken in the night-time, it was held that the ownership was to be laid in A. (i). And this seems to be the necessary consequence of two former rules considered in connection; for, in the first place, B.'s occupation of the cellar, together with the chamber which he inhabited, rendered the breaking burglarious as far as regarded the inhabitancy, or in other words, it was parcel of a dwelling-house; and according to another rule, the ownership of that dwelling-house was not in B. but in A., who continued to occupy part.

A guest at an inn has no possession as distinct from that of the landlord, and therefore if his chamber be broken it must be laid to the dwelling-house of the landlord (k).

If a lodger at an inn open the latch of his own chamber-door with a felonious intent in the night-time, it is said that he does not commit a burglary (l); but that if he break the chamber-door of another lodger or guest, he is guilty of burglary (m).

Where a house is let to several lodgers or inmates, and the owner inhabits elsewhere, each separate apartment is the dwelling-house of the lodger by reason of his separate inhabitancy. So burglary may be committed by breaking into chambers in the inns of court, or in colleges, and (d) East's P. C. 500. Ann Hawkins's Case, Fost. 38. Pickett's Case, East's P. C. 501.

(e) R. v. Jones, Leach, 607; East's P. C. 504. As to the rating houses separated or united as distinct houses, see Tracy v. Talbot, Salk. 532.

(f) Kel. 84; 4 Bl. Comm. 225. Lee v. Gansel, Cowp. 1; East's P. C. 505, 6. Dictum of Holt, C. J. R. v. Carroll, East's P. C. 586; Leach, 273.

(g) East's P. C. 507.

(h) Ibid.

(i) Gibson's Case, East's P. C. 508.

(k) 1 Hale, 554, 557. R. v. Prosser, East's P. C. 502; where it seems that a landlord cannot be guilty of burglary in breaking open the chamber of his guest. East's P. C. 502; Kel. 84. But see Dalton.

(l) 1 Hale, 554. Qu. Kel. 69.

(m) Ibid.

each must be laid to be the dwelling-house of him who inhabits it suo jure (n).

3dly. Where several are in joint occupation of the dwelling-house suo jure, the dwelling-house is that of all, and must be so laid.

Where the buttery of a college is burglariously broken, it must be laid to be the dwelling-house of the master, fellows and scholars (o).

In the night-time.

Thirdly, in the night-time.—That is where there is not sufficient day-light for discerning the face of a man (p). The light of the moon is immaterial (q). Both the breaking and entering must, it is said, be in the night (r), but it is not essential that both should be done on the same night.

Intent.

Fourthly, with a felonious intent.—This may be to commit a felony at common law, as a murder, larceny or rape (s), or a felony by statute; for such a felony possesses all the incidents of a felony at common law (t).

*282

*Evidence that larceny was committed is primâ facie evidence of an entry with a felonious intent (u). The felony, or the intent, must be proved as laid.

If an intent to steal be alleged, it is not sufficient to prove an intent to rescue goods seized by an excise officer (x). If the intent be alleged to kill, it is insufficient to prove an intent to maim (y). If an intent be laid to steal the goods of A. it is not sufficient to prove an intention to steal the goods of B. (z). If an actual larceny be alleged, it is not sufficient to prove a mere intention to steal (a).

Principal and accessory.

If a servant in conspiracy with another let him into the house, it is burglary in both (b). Where several are concerned, the entry of one is the entry of all; and although some stand on the outside to keep watch, all are equally guilty of burglary (c).

Evidence in case of larceny.

If a burglar in one county convey the goods into another county, where he is convicted of larceny, he may be ousted of his clergy by proof of the burglary in the former county (d).

BYE-LAW.

Debt for penalty on. See Butchers' Company v. Money, 1 H. B. 370. Willis, 384. Wentw. Ind., 501. Com. Dig. tit. Bye-Law.

CANCELLATION. See DEED.

CAPTION. See REPLEVIN.

CARRIERS.

Proof in action against.

In an action against carriers for negligence or other improper conduct, in respect of the carriage of goods or persons, whether the declaration be founded in assumpsit for breach of the defendant's undertaking, or in tort for breach of duty, it is necessary to prove, 1st, a contract express or (n) Trapshaw's Case, Leach, 478; East's P. C. 506. (o) R. v. Maynard, East's P. C. 501.

(p) Haw. c. 38; 3 Inst. 63; Sav. 47; 1 Hale, 550; 9 Co. 66; Cro. Eliz. 583. Formerly it was held to be burglary if committed between sunset and sunrise. East's P. C. 509; Haw. c. 38.

(q) East's P. C. 509. (r) Cromp. 33; 8 Edw. 2. East's P. C. 509.

(s) East's P. C. 509; 1 Hale, 559, 561; Kel. 67; 1 Show. 53. As to a rape, see R. v. Locost and Villers, Kel. 30; 1 Hale, 560, 562. Gray's Case, Str. 481.

(t) R. v. Dobbs, East's P. C. 513; 1 Hale, 561. (u) Kel. 30; 1 Hale, 560.

(x) R. v. Knight and Roffey, East's P. C. 510. (y) East's P. C. 513.

(z) R. v. Jenks, Leach, 896; East's P. C. 514. (a) R. v. Vandercomb and Abbott, East's P. C. 514.

(b) Cornwall's Case, East's P. C. 486; 1 Str. 881; 1 Hale, 555; 1 Haw. C. 38; 10 St. Tr. 433. It has been said that the servant in such case is guilty of larceny only (Dalt. c. 151); but since they both act in the commission of the same crime, it seems that it must be burglary in both or neither, and the breaking and entry by one is the act of both.

(c) 1 Hale, 439, 555; 1 Haw. c. 38; Kel. 111, 161; Fost. 350, 353.

(d) See tit. Certificate.

implied; 2dly, the delivery of the goods; and 3dly, the defendant's breach of promise or duty.

1st. The action is founded either upon an express and special contract, or an implied one. Where an express contract exists, it must be relied upon and proved; for where there is an express contract, none can be implied (e). Proof of contract.

*The plaintiff usually relies upon an implied contract, proving that the defendant is a common carrier as alleged in the declaration, and that the goods in question were delivered to one acting as his agent at the office, warehouse, or other place of business, or to an agent conducting his coach or waggon in its usual course (f) (A) (1). *283 Implied contract.

Where there is but one contract for the carriage, and the carrier receives the whole consideration, he is liable for the loss of goods arising before the delivery, although it takes place whilst the goods are in the possession of another for the purpose of custody or of cartage, although the profits in respect of such custody or cartage are allowed to the latter by the carrier, and although that fact be known to the owner; for as between the owner and the carrier, such third person is merely the agent of the carrier (g).

(e) See tit. Assumpsit. [Whiting v. Sullivan, 7 Mass. Rep. 107.] Where the plaintiffs declared in the general form, and it appeared that the course of dealing was, that the plaintiffs paid an annual sum for the carriage of parcels between London and Dover, and that on the delivery of each parcel the defendants gave a written acknowledgement, stating their undertaking to carry and deliver the same safely, fire and robbery excepted, it was held to be a fatal variance. Latham v. Ruttey,[1] 2 B. & C. 20; 3 D. & R. 211; 3 Starkie's C. 143. As to the right of a vendor or vendee to maintain the action, see tit. Vendor. In the case of Swain v. Shepherd, cor. Parke, J., York Summ. Assizes, 1832, there was an order in writing for goods to be sent by a particular carrier; the goods being lost the vendor brought the action, and his agent swore that the course of dealing was that the vendee had a right to return all goods which did not suit him, and that the vendor paid for the carriage; Parke, J., held that it was a question for the jury whether the property passed by the delivery to the carrier.

(f) Where the only proof of the defendant's being a carrier from London was that he kept a booking-office, and that on a board at the door were painted the words "conveyances to all parts of the world," Lord Tenterden was of opinion that this was not sufficient, there being in London booking-offices not belonging to carriers. Upstone v. Stark,[2] 2 C. & P. 598. Qu. whether this was not sufficient evidence to go to a jury. See further, Gilbert v. Dale,[3] 5 Ad. & Ell. 543. Where a railroad Act enabled the company to carry passengers and goods, and contained also a clause requiring notice of action to be given in respect of anything done in pursuance of such Act, a loss having arisen by the carriages getting off the railroad, in consequence of cattle having strayed thereon, through the insufficiency of the fences made by the company, it was held, that having availed themselves of the permission given by the Act to carry goods, they thereby became common carriers, and liable as such, and that the action being brought against them as such, no notice of action was necessary. Palmer v. Grand Junction Railway Company, 4 Mee. & W. 747; 7 Dowl. 232.

(g) Hyde and another v. The Mersey and Trent Navigation Company, 5 T. R. 389. The defendants, carriers from A. to B., charged and received for the amount of cartage from a warehouse at B., where they usually unloaded, but which did not belong to them, to the consignee's house; and it was held, that they were responsible for the loss of the goods destroyed in that warehouse by an accidental fire, although they allowed (with the knowledge of the consignee) all the profits of the cartage to another person. But where the contract was to carry goods from S. to M., to be forwarded from M. to N.; and according to the course of business such goods were, on their arrival at M., immediately delivered to a carrier to be carried to N. on payment of the carriage to M., and if no carrier were ready, were deposited in the carrier's warehouse at M., for which no charge was made, till they could be delivered to a carrier to N.; and no carrier to N. being ready on the particular occasion, the goods were deposited in the warehouse, and destroyed by an accidental fire; it was held, that the defendants were not liable. Garside v. Proprietor of Trent and Mersey Navigation, 4 T. R. 582. So where A. B. C. & D. agreed to carry goods from London to France, and there to

(A) (The owners of a steamboat undertaking to tow a freight boat for hire, are not quoad hoc, common carriers. Caton v. Bunney, 13 Wend. 387. A person once a common carrier, ceases to be liable in that character if it be shown that he has abandoned the business. Satterlee v. Groat, 1 Wend. 272. The proprietors of steamboats are common carriers—but may exclude all persons of bad character or habits, or who refuse to obey the regulations for the government of the steamboat, and they may rightfully inquire into the habits or motives of passengers who offer themselves. Jencks v. Coleman, 2 Sumner, C. C. R. 221.)

(1) [Where A. agreed with B. a common carrier, for the carriage of goods, and B. without A.'s direction agreed for the carriage with C., who without A.'s knowledge agreed with D. a third carrier; it was held that A. might maintain an action against D. for not delivering the goods, and that by bringing the action he affirmed the contract made with D. by C. and could not afterwards recover from B. Sanderson v. Lamberton, 6 Binney, 129.]

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. ix. 10. [2]Id. xii. 280. [3]Id. xxxi. 393.

Where A., a part-owner in several coaches, made a contract with B. for the carriage of parcels which he was in the habit of sending to various places, it was held that this was binding on all the co-part-owners, as well those who became partners after the contract, as those who were partners before (h).

Express contract.

Where the defendant is not a common carrier, it is necessary to prove what the terms of the defendant's undertaking were. If, although he was not a carrier, he expressly undertook to carry the goods safely and securely, he will be liable for any damage which they sustain (i) (1).

If any receipt was given on the delivery of the goods, it should be produced (k); and if an entry was made in the defendant's book, notice should *284 *be given to produce it, and also the way-bill, if the goods were sent by a coach. It should also be proved what orders were given at the time, as to the carriage of the goods, and place of destination, and what was the written direction upon them.

Where there is no privity of contract other than arises from ownership, it should appear from the evidence that the plaintiff was the owner of the goods, for if the vendor of goods deliver them to the carrier by order of the vendee, at whose risk they are sent, the vendor is the mere agent of the vendee, and the action should be brought by the latter (l); and if the action were brought by the vendor, he would be nonsuited. Where goods were shipped and described in the bill of lading to have been shipped by order and on account of the consignee, it was held that no property could be recognized but that specified in the bill of lading, and as that showed the property to be in the consignee, the consignor, who brought the action, was nonsuited (m). Where, on the other hand, the bill of lading stated that the deposit them in the warehouse of A.; held that their liability as carriers ceased on the arrival of the goods in France, and that A. having paid the amount of a loss of the goods, after they had been deposited in the warehouse, could not recover contribution from B. C. & D. In re Webb,[1] 8 Taunt. 443.

(h) Helsby v. Mears,[2] 5 B. & C. 504.

(i) Robinson v. Dunmore, 2 B. & P. 416.

(k) Latham v. Rutley,[3] R. & M. 13. It does not require a stamp if the carriage does not exceed 20*l.*, although the goods be of greater value.

(l) Dawes v. Peck, 8 T. R. 330. Dutton v. Solomonson, 3 B. & P. 582. Jacobs v. Nelson, 3 Taunt. 423. Davis v. James, 5 Burr. 2680. Moore v. Wilson, 1 T. R. 659. Although the carrier is to be paid by the vendor. King v. Meredith, 2 Camp. 639. And see tit. GOODS SOLD AND DELIVERED. But where the consignor makes the contract with the carrier, and is to pay him, he ought to bring the action. Davis v. James, 5 Burr. 2680. Where the plaintiffs consigned goods according to an order received, and the party who ordered them turned out to be a swindler, who got possession of them by the carrier's negligence; it was held that they might maintain the action, as no property had passed to the consignee. Duff v. Budd,[4] 3 B. & B. 177. And see Brooke v. Pickwick,[5] 4 Bing. 218. Middleton v. Fowler, 1 Salk, 282. It is otherwise where the owner has undertaken to watch his property. Brind v. Dale, 2 M. & W. 775. Or where it appears that a consignor does not intend to trust a shipowner with the custody, as where he is in the habit of sending his own servant in charge of the goods, who has the exclusive management of them. East India Company v. Pullen, 2 Str. 690. Where goods are forwarded on approval, the consignor should sue. Swain v. Shephard, 1 Mo. & R. 223.

(m) Brown v. Hodgson, 2 Camp. 36. A special property is sufficient, as in the case of a laundress returning clothes. Freeman v. Birch,[6] 1 N. & M. 420. [See Moore v. Sheredine, 2 Har. & M'Hen. 453.]

(1) [In North Carolina, to render a man liable as a common carrier, he must make the carriage of goods his constant employment,—that by which he obtains his livelihood: One employed pro hac vice, though for a reward, is not liable as a common carrier. Anon. v. Jackson, 1 Hayw. 14. In South Carolina, whoever carries goods for hire makes himself a common carrier under the custom, and is chargeable with all faults arising from want of skill, care, or diligence. M'Clures v. Hammond, 1 Bay, 99. The practice of conveying for hire, in a stage-coach, parcels not belonging to passengers, constitutes the proprietors of the coach common carriers. Dwight & al. v. Brewster & al. 1 Pick. 50. One who receives and forwards goods, taking upon himself all the expenses of transportation, for which he receives a compensation from the owners of the goods, but who has no concern in the vessels by which they are forwarded, or interest in the freight, is not a common carrier. Roberts v. Turner, 12 Johns. 232.] {As to the liability in Pennsylvania of persons engaged in the transportation of goods upon the Ohio and Mississippi rivers. Gordon et al. v. Little, 8 Serg. & Rawle, 533.}

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. iv. 159. [2]Id. xi. 288. [3]Id. xxi. 371. [4]Id. vii. 399. [5]Id. xiii. 404. [6]Id. xxviii. 326.

goods were shipped by the plaintiffs (in England), to be delivered to L. D. in Surinam, and freight was to be paid in London, and the plaintiffs were in fact the agents of L. D., who resided abroad, it was held that a sufficient privity of contract had been established (n).

An action for negligence of this nature must be brought against the principal, and not against an agent employed in the conduct of the master's business, although the loss has resulted from the negligence of the latter.

Where it appeared, in an action against the defendant as a common carrier, that he was the mere driver of the coach, and not the owner, and that he had before carried parcels for the plaintiff, and it did not appear that in this or any other instance any contract had been made for any reward to be paid for conveyance, it was held that the action should have been brought against the principal. The loss in this case resulted from the negligence of the master through the medium of the servant (o). It would have been otherwise if the servant had undertaken to carry for hire on his own account, although in fraud of his master (p). So where a parcel carried from Bristol to Bath was delivered by the mail-guard to a porter, who received a proportion of the porterage, the rest being paid to the proprietors *of the inn where the coach stopped, for booking, it was held that the porter being a mere servant was not liable for the loss (q) *285

Where two are jointly interested in a waggon, each is liable for the negligence of an agent in conducting it, although by a subordinate arrangement between themselves, each undertakes the conduct and management of the waggon by his own driver and his own horses, for specified distances (r). Parties.

Where the declaration is in assumpsit, the plaintiff must, as in other cases, prove a joint promise, as by proof that all the defendants were proprietors, or otherwise; and it is no ground of nonsuit that there are other partners or proprietors who have not been made defendants.

Where the action is laid in tort, there has been some difference of opinion whether, inasmuch as the action is virtually founded upon a contract either express or implied, a verdict may be given against one defendant, and in favour of another (s). But it is now settled, that where the action is founded on a misfeasance, a breach of common law duty, it is several in its nature, and maintainable against some only of those against whom the action is brought (t).

In a late case where the action was against eleven, as coach-owners, for negligence, in consequence of which the coach was overturned and the plaintiff injured, and there were two counts, both of which specified a contract to carry the plaintiff; and upon the trial the plaintiff proved the partnership of all but two, and had a verdict against them, the Court of King's Bench afterwards refused a motion for a new trial, or a nonsuit, observing, that the application was contrary to the justice of the case, and (n) Joseph v. Knox, 3 Camp. 320.

(o) Per Ld. Ellenborough, Williams v. Cranston,[1] 2 Starkie's C. 82. But a stage-coachman is responsible for the loss of a parcel which he receives to carry without reward, if it is lost through gross negligence on his part. Beauchamp v. Powley, 1 Mo. & R. 38. [Dwight et al. v. Brewster et al. 1 Pick. 54.]

(p) Beauchamp v. Powley, 1 Mo. & R. 38.

(q) Cavenagh v. Such, 1 Price, 328. The coach proprietors in this case had protected themselves by a notice.

(r) Waland v. Elkins,[2] 1 Starkie's C. 272. As to their liability for goods supplied in such a case, see Barton v. Hanson, 2 Taunt. 49.

(s) On the one hand, see Boson v. Sanford, Salk. 440; 3 Lev. 258; Carth. 58; 3 Mod. 321. Powell v. Layton, 2 N. R. 365. Max v. Roberts, 2 N. R. 454. Buddle v. Wilson, 6 T. R. 369. On the other, Govett v. Radnidge, 3 East, 62. Dickon v. Clifton, 2 Wils. 319. Coggs v. Bernard, 2 Ld. Raym. 909. Weall v. King, 12 East, 452. See tit. VARIANCE.

(t) Bretherton v. Wood,[3] 3 B. & B. 54; 9 Price, 408; see Ansell v. Waterhouse, 2 Ch. 1.

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. iii. 256. [2] Id. ii. 387. [3] Id. vii. 345.

that as the objection was on the record, the defendants might take it by means of a writ of error (u). The judgment was afterwards affirmed.

Variance. Where the declaration (in assumpsit) alleged that the defendant undertook to carry goods in consideration of certain hire and reward to be paid by the plaintiff, the consignor, and it appeared in evidence that the consignee of the goods had agreed with the plaintiffs to pay for the carriage, it was held to be no variance; for as between the carrier and the plaintiff the latter was liable (x).

Where the plaintiff declares in assumpsit in the common form, proof of notice to him of special terms of contract contained in a notice by the defendant, by which he has limited his responsibility, does not occasion a variance (y).

A mis-description of the termini in the contract of carriage is fatal (z).

*286 *2dly. Delivery.—It is sufficient to prove a delivery either to an agent

Proof of delivery. of the defendant's at the usual place of receipt or to an agent who has authority to receive them, driving the coach or waggon on the course of conveyance (a) (A).

If the master of a vessel receive goods at the quay or beach, or send his boat for them, the owners' liability commences with such receipt (b).

Of loss. 3dly. Proof of loss.—The plaintiff having proved the defendant's receipt of goods on a contract to deliver them safely at some other place, it seems to be incumbent on the defendant to prove the performance of his promise. To support an averment of loss, it is enough for the plaintiff to show that the goods in fact have not arrived (c).

A promise by a book-keeper to make compensation for the loss of a parcel is not binding upon the master, unless he be proved to be a general agent of the master for such purposes (d).

(u) Wood v. Bretherton, cor. Park, J., Lancaster Sum. Ass. 1820, 3 B. & B. 54.

(x) Moore v. Wilson, 1 T. R. 659. (y) Clarke v. Gray, 6 East, 564.

(z) Tucker v. Cracklin,[1] 2 Starkie's C. 385, cor. Abbott, J. But in Woodward v. Booth,[2] 7 B. & C. 301, where it was averred that the plaintiff delivered to the defendant a trunk to be put into a coach at Chester, in the county of Chester, to wit, at, &c., and safely carried to Shrewsbury, and the proof was, that the trunk was delivered to the defendant at the city of Chester (being a county of itself, but within the ambit of the county of Chester), it was held that the variance was not material. And see Beckford v. Crutwell, 1 Mo. & R. 187, where the terminus a quo being stated to be London, Ld. Tenterden held, that it was sufficient to prove that the coach went from a part of the town usually called London, as Piccadilly.

(a) Gouger v. Jolly,[3] Holt's C. 317; Williams v. Cranston,[4] 2 Starkie's C. 82. Secus, if such delivery were not in the ordinary course of business, but for the driver's own gain. Butler v. Baring,[5] 2 C. & P. 613. The merely leaving goods in the yard of an inn where the defendant and other carriers put up, is insufficient. Sclway v. Holloway, 1 Ld. Ray. 46. So, if goods be left at a wharf piled up among other goods without communication to any one there. Buckmore v. Levi, 3 Camp. 414. The delivery on board ship should be to the mate, or other accredited officer. Cobham v. Downe, 5 Esp. C. 43.

(b) Fragano v. Long,[6] 4 B. & C. 219; Boys v. Pink,[7] 8 C. & P. 361.

(c) Tucker v. Cracklin,[8] 2 Starkie's C. 385. The delivery must be according to the contract, if there be a special contract, or according to the course of trade, where such a known course exists; see Golden v. Manning, 2 Bl. 916; 3 Wils. 429; Stoer v. Crowley, 1 M'Clel. & Y. 129. He is bound to deliver a parcel at the place to which it is directed. Bodenham v. Bennett, 4 Price, 31. Where a parcel was directed to 'J. Worthy, Exeter,' and the carrier delivered it to one who told him he had been sent for it by a person whom he did not know, but who was in the street, it was held that he was guilty of gross negligence and liable, notwithstanding the notice of non-liability which had been given. Birkett v. Willan, 2 B. & A. 356. So where a parcel was delivered to the carrier, directed 'Mr. Parker, High-street, Oxford,' and after the parcel had been refused by Mr. Parker, was delivered to a stranger calling himself Parker, whose residence was unknown to the carrier. Duff v. Budd,[9] 3 B. & B. 177. In general, carriers are bound to carry the goods to the residence of the consignee, wherever they are directed. Stoer v. Crowley, 1 M'Clel. & Y. 129, infra note (l).

(d) Olive v. Eames,[10] 2 Starkie's C. 281.

(A) (When a common carrier on a canal is prevented by the ice from completing the voyage, he is bound on the opening of the navigation to fulfil his contract, but is discharged from further liability by the owner accepting them at the place of interruption, and is entitled to freight pro rata. Parsons v. Hardy, 14 Wend. 215.)

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. iii. 394. [2]Id. xiv. 48. [3]Id. iii. 119. [4]Id. iii. 256. [5]Id. xii. 287. [6]Id. x. 313. [7]Id. xxxiv. 429. [8]Id. iii. 394. [9]Id. vii. 399. [10]Id. iii. 304.

Where the plaintiff's shopman stated that he did not know of the delivery of the goods, and that they could not have been delivered without his knowledge, it was held to be sufficient (e).

The declarations of a coachman relating to the loss have been held to be admissible against the carrier (f).

Proof of the loss of goods by a carrier will not be sufficient to maintain a count in trover (g); but trover lies against a carrier who delivers the goods to a wrong person, although by mistake (h). And if a carrier refuse to deliver goods in his possession to the owner after demand, it will be evidence of a conversion (i) (1).

If the plaintiff declare on a loss in negligently carrying, &c., he cannot insist on a loss of the goods in the defendant's warehouse previous to the commencement of the carriage (k).

*By the rules of Hilary term, 4 Will. 4, the plea of not guilty operates as a denial of the loss or damage, but not of the receipt of the goods by the defendant as a carrier for hire, or of the purpose for which they were received. *287 Proof in defence.

The delivery must be according to the contract, if there be a special contract, or according to the course of trade where a known course exists (l).

According to the well known rule of law, a carrier is liable for all losses and injuries to the goods, except such as arise from the act of God, or the king's enemies (m) (A); as by lightning, or by a hostile invading force.

(e) Griffiths v. Lee,[1] 1 C. & P. 110. (f) Mayhew v. Nelson,[2] 6 C. & P. 58.

(g) Ross v. Johnson, 5 Burr. 2825. [1 Vent. 223. Owen v. Lewyn.] Kirkman v. Hargreaves, Lanc. Sum. Ass. 1800, cor. Graham, B. cited in Selwyn's Ni. Pri. tit. CARRIERS.

(h) Youle v. Harbottle, Peake's C. 49. Syeds v. Hay, 4 T. R. 260. Ross v. Johnson, 5 Burr. 2825; Stephenson v. Hart, 4 Bing. 583. [Devereux v. Barclay, 2 B. & A. 702, S. P.]

(i) Salk. 655.

(k) Roskell v. Waterhouse,[3] 2 Starkie's C. 461. See also In re Webb,[4] 2 Moore, 500; 8 Taunt. 443.

(l) Golden v. Manning, 2 Bl. 916. 3 Wils. 429; Stoer v. Crowley, 1 M'Clel. & Y. 129. In the absence of any express contract or usage, a carrier is bound to deliver the goods at the house of the consignee. Hyde v. Trent and Mersey Navigation Company, 5 T. R. 389; Duff v. Budd,[5] 3 B. & B. 182. If it be according to the carrier's course of trade that he should deliver the goods at the consignee's residence, he is bound to do so. Golden v. Manning, 2 W. B. 916. Where goods are carried by sea, it seems to be sufficient that the captain should deposit them in a place of safety, and give notice to the consignee. Hyde v. Trent and Mersey Navigation Company, 5 T. R. 398. And see Gatliffe v. Bourne,[6] 4 Bing. N. C. 314.

(m) 1 T. R. 27; 5 T. R. 389; 2 B. & P. 416; 1 East, 604; 3 Esp. C. 127.

(1) [Where goods were put on board the defendant's vessel to be carried to A., and on arriving there, were by the defendant's direction, put on the wharf, it was held that this was not a delivery to the consignee, and that evidence of a usage to deliver goods in this manner was immaterial, but that the defendant was liable in trover for such part of the goods as was not actually delivered to the consignee. Ostrander v. Brown & ul. 15 Johns. 39.]

(A) (The ancient rule of the law of carriers, that a carrier is liable only for ordinary neglect, does not apply to the conveyance of slaves. It seems that his responsibility should be measured by the law as applicable to the carrying of passengers. Boyce v. Anderson, 2 Peters, 155. The words "dangers of the river only excepted," used in a bill of lading, embrace such dangers as could not be guarded against by human skill or foresight. Johnson v. Fryer, 4 Yerger's R. 48; Hunt v. Norris, 6 Mart. 680. Nor will proof of a custom or usage of trade existing among the freighters and owners of boats on a navigable river, excuse them from the operation of the law governing common carriers. Adam v. Hay, 3 Mur. 149; Rapp v. Palmer, 3 Watts, 178. See also Hart v. Allen, 2 Watts, 114. The master of a vessel is liable upon the bill of lading signed by him, though the goods are damaged by the unskilfulness of the pilot. Harvey v. Pike, N. Car. Term R. 82. The owners of a vessel lying in the river T., undertook for hire to carry certain goods from U. to N. L. and deliver them there in safety. In the passage the river was obstructed by the ice, which formed during the night previous to sailing; the vessel became injured and leaky, by which the goods were spoiled—held, that the owners of the vessel were liable as common carriers for the damage sustained. Richards v. Gilbert, 5 Day. 415. See also,

[Coit v. M'Mechen, 6 Johns. 160. Elliott v. Rossell, 10 Johns. 1. Murphy & al. v. Staton, 3 Munf. 239, acc. Where the master of a vessel plying between New York and Albany received flour on board to be carried to New York and there sold in the usual course of business, for the ordinary freight, and having sold the flour at New York for cash, was robbed of the money; the owners of the vessel were held answer-

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xi. 333. [2]Id. xxv. 281. [3]Id. iii. 432. [4]Id. iv. 159. [5]Id. vii. 399. [6]Id. xxxiii. 364.

He is liable, therefore, although it appear that the goods were destroyed in consequence of a casual fire which broke out in a booth at the distance of a hundred yards from the place where the defendant had deposited the goods to be ready for carriage, although the jury negative any negligence on the part of the defendant (n); so where the goods had been carried from A. to B., where the plaintiff lived, and were accidentally burnt in a warehouse there before they had been carted to the plaintiff's house, the carriers were held to be liable, although the warehouse did not belong to them, and although they allowed the profits of cartage which they received to another person (o).

A carrier is liable, although the plaintiff sends a servant of his own with the defendant's cart to guard the goods, and although he is not a common carrier if he undertakes for the safety of the goods (p). So it is no defence that the damage was occasioned by the wrongful act or negligence of a third person (q). This is a rule of policy and convenience in order to make carriers more careful; for if a carrier were to be excused where the damage was occasioned by the misconduct or negligence of strangers, when he found that to be the case he would give himself no more trouble about the goods. He is liable, although the goods were taken by robbers, using force which he could not resist (r).

*288 Loss by the act of God.

*But it is a good defence to show that the goods were sunk in the vessel in which they were sent, in consequence of a sudden squall of wind, or that they were thrown overboard to lighten the vessel in order to save the passengers in a storm (s) (A).

(n) Forward v. Pittard, 1 T. R. 27. See also Hyde v. The Trent Navigation Company, 5 T. R. 389. So of a hoyman. Dale v. Hall, 1 Wils. 281. He continues liable until delivery to the party, and is not discharged by delivery at a wharf which he uses. Wardell v. Mourillyan, 2 Esp. C. 693. An exception of losses, by the perils of the sea, includes a loss from the vessels running foul of another. Bullen v. Fisher, 3 Esp. C. 67.

(o) Hyde v. The Trent Navigation Company, 5 T. R. 389. Declaration on a contract by the owners of a steam vessel to carry goods from Dublin to London, and to deliver the same at the port of London to the plaintiff or his assigns. A plea, that after the arrival of the vessel at London the defendant caused the goods to be deposited on a wharf, to remain there until they could be delivered to the plaintiff, the wharf being a place where goods from Dublin were accustomed to be landed, and fit and proper for such purposes, and that before a reasonable time for delivery had elapsed they were destroyed there by fire, was held to be bad. Gatliffe v. Bourne, 4 Bing. N. C. 314.

(p) Robinson v. Dunmore, 2 B. & P. 416. So, though a man travel in a stage-coach, and take his portmanteau with him, although he has his eye upon the portmanteau, the carrier will be responsible if the portmanteau be lost. Per Chambre, J. 2 B. & P. 419.

(q) Per Ashurst, J. 3 Esp. C. 131. (r) Per Ld. Mansfield, C. J., and Buller, J. 3 Esp. C. 131.

(s) 1 Roll. Abr. 79. [Smith v. Wright, 1 Caine's Rep. 43.]

able for the money to the shippers of the flour. Kemp v. Coughtry, 11 Johns. 107. The master and owner of a ship are responsible for the goods they have undertaken to carry, if stolen or embezzled by the crew, or any other person, though no fault or negligence may be imputable to them. Schieffelin v. Harvey, 6 Johns. 170. Watkinson v. Laughton, 8 Johns. 213. Foster & al. v. Essex Bank, 17 Mass. Rep. 510, per Parker, C. J. See Walter v. Brewer, 11 Mass. Rep. 99. Dean v. Swoop, 2 Binney, 72. In Richards v. Gilbert, 5 Day, 415, it was held that where the owners of a vessel undertook to carry goods for hire from one port to another, and during the passage, the river became obstructed with ice, they were liable as common carriers for the damages sustained.

Where a vessel was beating up the Hudson, against a light and variable wind, and being near shore, and while changing her tack, the wind suddenly failed, in consequence of which she ran aground and sunk; it was held that the carrier was excused, the accident not being imputable to his negligence. Colt v. M'Mechen, ubi. sup. If the vessel of a common carrier strike on a rock not generally known, and not known to the master, and if he conduct himself properly and no fault be imputable to him, he is not liable. Williams v. Grant, 1 Conn. Rep. 487. Secus, if he be ignorant of the navigation of the river, and have no pilot on board. Ibid.]

But if a carrier know of an obstruction before an injury is sustained by it, not known before, he must use increased caution and vigilance to avoid it, and if by any means he could remove it, he must do so or he will be in default. Gardon & Waker v. Buchanan & Porterfield, 5 Yerger's R. 71.]

(A) (In an action against a common carrier for a loss, it is not sufficient to entitle the plaintiff to recover, that there was a defect about the vessel, or want of skill in the carrier; but it must also appear that such

In order to prove a destruction or loss by the king's enemies, the goods having been taken by an armed force, it must be proved that they were taken by robbers or pirates (t).

There is no distinction between a land and water carrier (u) (A); and the rule extends to a wharfinger who conveys goods from a wharf to vessels in his own lighters (x).

Proof of notice.

The most common defence in actions of this nature is by proof that the defendant has limited his common-law responsibility, by notice to that effect to the plaintiff; for since, in point of law, it is competent to a carrier so to limit his liability, if he can show that the plaintiff had previous notice of the terms on which the defendant undertook to deal, there is an end of his common-law liability, and the notice of those terms constitutes a special and particular contract between the parties (y).

To establish a defence of this nature, the defendant must prove, in the first place, that the plaintiff had notice of the defendant's terms. The burthen of proof lies upon the defendant; it is not sufficient to show that he has used means to give notice, he must prove that such means have been effectual. The most usual evidence to show this is by proof that a notice was put up in the office, where goods are received and entered for the purpose of carriage, in so conspicuous a situation that it must (unless he were guilty of wilful negligence) have attracted the attention of the plaintiff or his agent, for a notice to the agent under such circumstances is notice to the plaintiff himself (z). This proof fails where the party who delivers the goods at the office cannot read (a); and where the goods were delivered by a porter who admitted that he had frequently been at the defendant's office, and that he had seen a painted board, but did not suppose that it contained anything material, and in fact had never read it, it was held, (t) 1 T. R. 33. 2 Vent. 109.

(u) 3 Esp. C. 127. A water-carrier impliedly undertakes that the vessel shall be tight and fit for the purpose, and is answerable for damage arising from leakage, Lyon v. Mills, 5 East, 428. Even although notice be given that he will not be answerable for any damage unless occasioned by want of ordinary care in the master or crew of the vessel. For a loss by the personal default of the carrier is not within the scope of such a notice. Ib.

(x) Maving v. Todd,[1] 1 Starkie's C. 72. Rich v. Howland, Cor. J. 330. So also are the proprietors of stage-coaches carrying goods, and owners and masters of vessels and hoymen. Wordell v. Mourillyan, 2 Esp. C. 693. Morse v. Slue, 2 Lev. 69. Goods made to order are delivered by the tradesman at a booking-office to be forwarded to the customer, without specifying any particular conveyance; qu. whether the consignor can maintain an action against the office-keeper, for the loss of the goods whilst under his charge. Gilbert v. Dale,[2] 5 Ad. & Ell. 543.

(y) Where one of several partners in a stage had agreed to carry the parcels of the plaintiff gratis, but the co-partners had no knowledge of the agreement, and the ordinary notice of non-responsibility was given, it was held that the defendants were not liable for the loss of a parcel, where the value exceeded 5*l.*, no notice of value having been given. Bignold v. Waterhouse, 1 M. & S. 255.

(z) Notice to the principal in London is sufficient, though the goods were delivered by his agent to the carrier in the country. Mayhew v. Eames,[3] 3 B. & C. 601.

(a) Davis v. Willan,[4] 2 Starkie's C. 279.

---

defect or want of skill contributed, or may have contributed in some measure to occasion the loss. It is the consequence of negligence, not the abstract existence of it, for which a carrier is answerable. Hart v. Allen et al. 2 Watts, 114.)

(A) (A carrier is bound to have a vessel or carriage suitably provided for the undertaking, and failing to do so, shall not set up a providential calamity to protect himself from what has been occasioned by his own folly. Hart v. Allen, 2 Watts, 114.)

[Bell v. Read & al. 4 Binney, 127. If there be a want of seaworthiness, it renders the carrier liable, though the loss does not proceed from that cause; but if it appear that the loss may fairly be attributed to inevitable accident, the onus probandi of unseaworthiness lies on the owner of the goods. Ibid. Where, however, a vessel founders, the carrier must prove that she was seaworthy, before he can bring himself within the excuse of its being an inevitable accident. Ibid. S. P. Murphy & al. v. Staton, 3 Munf. 239. See Putnam v. Wood, 3 Mass. Rep. 481. Wallis & al. v. Cook, 10 Mass. Rep. 510.]

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. ii. 301. [2]Id. xxxi. 393. [3]Id. x. 195. [4]Id. iii. 346.

that although the board in fact contained a notice of limitation, the evidence of notice was insufficient, and that it was incumbent on a party who wished to rid himself of his common-law responsibility, to give effectual *289 *notice (b). So, the proof failed where the notice at the office at Cheltenham stated the advantages of carriage by the particular waggon in large letters, and the notice of non-responsibility in small characters (c), although at the termini of the carrier's route, notice was given at the offices by means of a board inscribed with large letters. So also where the goods are not delivered at the office where the notice is exhibited, but are delivered into a cart sent round to receive goods (d), or at an intermediate stage between the two places, from each of which the carrier conveys goods to the other, if there be no notice at the place of delivery, although notices are suspended at the two termini (e).

By advertisement. Another usual mode of proof is by evidence that notice was given by means of printed cards, or by advertisements in the public newspapers; but this is insufficient, unless it be proved that the plaintiff has seen such cards, or read the newspapers (f). And even then it is a question of fact for the jury (g).

Where it appeared on cross-examination of one of the plaintiff's witnesses, that the plaintiff had been in the habit of sending parcels by that conveyance, and that two parcels had at different times been lost, and that the plaintiff had acquiesced in those losses, desiring the witness for the future to insure the parcels sent, it was held to be evidence of the plaintiff's knowledge that the defendants limited their responsibility (h).

In the next place, if the notice be brought home to the plaintiff, it must appear, that in point of law it is sufficient to protect the defendant in the particular instance, either in toto, or pro tanto. This of course is a matter of pure legal consideration for the decision of the Court (i) (A).

(b) Kerr v. Willan,[1] 2 Starkie's C. 53, cor. Ld. Ellenborough, C. J., and afterwards by the Court of K. B.
(c) Butler v. Heane, 2 Camp. 415. (d) Clayton v. Hunt, 3 Camp. 27.
(e) Gouger v. Jolly,[2] 1 Holt's C. 317.
(f) Clayton v. Hunt, 3 Camp. 27. As to proof of notice in an advertisement, see Jenkins v. Blizard,[3] 1 Starkie's C. 418. Leeson v. Holt,[4] 1 Starkie's C. 186. Evidence is requisite to identify E. F., who gives the notice, with the defendant, and in the absence of such evidence, the allegation of negligence need not be proved. Macklin v. Waterhouse,[5] 5 Bing. 212 and 224, and 2 M. & P. 319. It is not sufficient to show that the notice was inserted in a paper which circulates in the place in which a party lives, without some proof that he took in the newspaper. Proprietors of the Norwich Navigation v. Theobald,[6] M. & M. 153. See Boydell v. Drummond, 11 East, 144, n. An advertisement in the Gazette is not per se receivable for this purpose, for although a party might be expected to look into the Gazette for notices of dissolution of partnership, he could not be expected to do so for notice by carriers. Munn v. Baker,[7] 2 Starkie's C. 255.
(g) Rowley v. Horne,[8] 3 Bingh. 2. It was proved that the plaintiff had taken in for three years, a weekly newspaper, in which the defendant's restrictive notice had been always advertised, and the jury, notwithstanding, found a verdict for the plaintiff, the Court of Common Pleas thought the verdict perfectly right, and that it could not be intended that a party read all the contents of any newspaper he might chance to take in. They said that carriers who wished, by means of notice, to divest themselves of a common law responsibility, were bound to fix upon their employers a knowledge of such notice, and that they might easily do so by delivering to every person, who brought a parcel for conveyance, a printed paper containing the notice; and a new trial was refused.
(h) Roskell v. Waterhouse, cor. Abbott, L. C. J.[9] 2 Starkie's C. 461. The defendant may show that when other parcels were delivered to him by the plaintiff, a ticket was delivered containing the notice. Mayhew v. Eames,[10] 3 B. & C. 603.
(i) Where the notice was, "that cash, plate, jewels, &c. will not be accounted for, if lost, of more than 5*l.* value, unless entered as such, and a penny insurance paid for each pound value:" the court held that the defendants were not liable to any extent, the parcel (containing light guineas) not having been entered and paid for as valuable (Clay v. Willan, 1 H. B. 298). Where the notice was, "that the proprietors of coaches transacting business at this office will not be accountable for any passenger's luggage, money, &c. or

(A) (The term "baggage" used in the advertisement of a common carrier limiting his responsibility, is

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. iii. 241. [2]Id. iii. 119. [3]Id. ii. 451. [4]Id. ii. 349. [5]Id. xv. 421. [6]Id. xxii. 272. [7]Id. iii. 339. [8]Id. xi. 3. [9]Id. iii. 432. [10]Id. x. 195.

*Where a carrier affixes one notice to his counting-house, and delivers another to the party, he is bound by that which is the least beneficial to himself (k). So if he circulate hand-bills, limiting his liability, he cannot further restrain it by evidence of a notice upon a board in his office (l).

Where the plaintiff declared in assumpsit for not safely carrying, and the defendant proved a notice to the plaintiff, couched in the usual form, it was held that the plaintiff could not (as the declaration was framed, at all events,) insist that the loss was not protected by the notice; the goods having been stolen from the defendant's warehouse before the carriage of the goods commenced, the plaintiff ought for that purpose to have charged the defendants as warehousemen, and not as carriers (m).

any package whatsoever, if lost or damaged, above the value of 5*l*., unless insured and paid for at the time of delivery; it was held that the plaintiff having delivered goods of a greater value than 5*l*. without insuring or paying for them when delivered, could not recover even to the amount of 5*l*. Nicholson v. Willan, 5 East, 507. See also Izett v. Mountain, 4 East, 371; where the notice was nearly in the same terms.

In Beck v. Evans, 16 East, 244, where the proprietors of a public waggon gave notice that they would not be answerable for cash, bank-notes, writings, jewels, plate, watches, lace, silk hose, wool, muslins, china, glass, paintings, or any other goods of what nature or kind soever, above the value of 5*l*., if lost, stolen, or damaged; it was held that the notice did not extend to goods of large bulk and known quality, where the value must be obvious, such as a large cask of brandy. There was, however, in the above case, proof of gross negligence. Bayley, J. doubted whether the words of the contract extended to a case of gross negligence.

Where a carrier by water had given notice that he would not be answerable for any damage, unless occasioned by want of ordinary care in the master or crew of the vessel, in which case he would pay 10 per cent. on the damage, so as the whole did not exceed the value of the vessel and freight, it was held that he was answerable for a damage arising from a leakage, on the ground that it was a personal default in the carrier himself in not providing a sufficient vessel, and that the loss was not within the scope of the notice. Lyon v. Mells, 5 East, 428.

C., one of several coach-proprietors, in consideration of a favour conferred upon himself, undertook that he and his partners would carry the plaintiff's own family and private parcels free of expense, and they were so carried for two years, and the word "banking," which was usually written upon the parcels, was omitted on the suggestion of C., and the word "carrier" written in its place, to which C. or his son usually added the word "free;" there was no evidence that the other proprietors (partners with C.) had notice of this agreement. The defendants had given notice that they would not be liable for any parcels of above the value of 5*l*., unless entered and paid for, &c. A parcel of the plaintiff's delivered under these circumstances, of considerable value, having been lost, it was held that the plaintiff was not entitled to recover against the partners. For even where the carrier under such circumstances undertakes to carry without reward, notice of value ought to be given, in order to point his attention to the particular goods; he does not dispense with notice in toto, but only with payment; also, because there was no notice to the other partners; and notice to one partner is not notice to all, unless the transaction be bona fide. There was no consideration between the plaintiff and the other partners, and therefore no contract. Bignold v. Waterhouse, 1 M. & S. 255. A notice from the proprietors of a coach going from A. to B. extends to the return-journey; but it must be proved that the party sending on the return-journey knew that the coach was one that started from it. Rowley v. Horne,[1] 5 Bing. 227, and 2 M. & P. 333.

(k) Munn v. Baker,[2] 2 Starkie's C. 255. (l) Cobden v. Bolton, 2 Camp. 108.

(m) Roskell v. Waterhouse,[3] 2 Starkie's C. 461.

---

to be strictly applied to the "baggage of passengers;" parcels not belonging to passengers are not included under the meaning of that term. Beckman et al. v. Shouse et al., 5 Rawle, 179. [Dwight et al. v. Brewster et al., 1 Pick. 50.] And though a stage owner posted notices that he would not be accountable for baggage, unless the fare was paid, and the same entered on the way-bill, he was held liable for the loss of a trunk through negligence, though the fare was not paid; notice not having been brought home to the owner, nor to his servant who carried it to the stage office. Bean v. Green, 3 Fairf. 422. Walker v. Skipwith, Meigs Rep. 502. The advertisements of common carriers, in order to relieve them from liability, must be plain and explicit, and are to be strictly interpreted. Barney v. Prentiss, 4 Har. & I. 317. Atwood v. The Reliance Trans. Co., 9 Watts, 87. See also Camden & Amboy R. R. v. Burke, 13 Wend. 611. Halstead v. Nowlen, 19 Wend. 234. Cole v. Godwin, id. 251. Camden Transp. Co. v. Belknap, 12 Wend. 354. Clark v. Faxton, id. 153. Large sums of money in the trunk of a passenger are not to be regarded as within the term baggage, in order to render the carrier liable for the loss. Orange County Bank v. Brown, 9 Wend. 85. See also Malpica v. McKown, 1 Louis. Rep. 254. If the baggage of a passenger is lost, through any defect in the vehicles or machinery used, although no negligence, or want of care, or skill can be charged, a notice in the usual form, "all baggage at the risk of the owners," though brought home to the knowledge of the passengers, will not in such case excuse the company. Camden & Amboy R. R. Co. v. Burke, 13 Wend. 611.)

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xi. 3. [2]Id. iii. 339. [3]Id. iii. 432.

Proof in reply to notice.

A party, after notice that the carrier will not be responsible for goods of above a specified value, unless they be entered and paid for according to their value, cannot recover in respect of goods of greater value which have not been so entered and paid for; for the notice throws upon him the duty of communicating the value, and the concealment is a fraud on the carrier, both because it deprives him of the compensation for which he has a right to stipulate, and also because it precludes him from exercising a degree of vigilance and caution proportioned to the increased risk (n) (A). The *291 proof of *misfeasance in such case would of course be incumbent on the plaintiff (o). Notwithstanding this the carrier will still be liable for any actual misfeasance, or even for gross negligence, through which the goods are destroyed or lost (p) (B); for this is a substantive wrong, independently of the contract, in respect of which the plaintiff would be entitled to recover on a declaration stating, that having delivered the goods to the plaintiff for one purpose he had converted them to another. And where the concealment is not the cause of non-performance, the contract is not so wholly avoided but that the plaintiff in such a case may still sue on the contract, notwithstanding the fraud; and thus, proof of a direct misfeasance or gross negligence is in effect an answer to proof of notice. The question of gross negligence is usually a question for the jury (q). The defendant was held to be liable, notwithstanding such notice, where his agent knew that a cask of brandy was leaking fast in the course of the carriage, and yet took no pains to stop it (r) (C).

(n) And in such a case the owner cannot recover even the amount of the value specified, as the minimum for which no extra price is payable. Harris v. Packwood, 3 Taunt. 264.

(o) Marsh v. Horne,[1] 4 B. & C. 322.

(p) Conditions of this nature were introduced for the purpose of protecting carriers against extraordinary events, and not to exempt them from due and ordinary care. Per Wood, B. 4 Price, 34; and see the cases cited, note (r).

(q) Beck v. Evans, 16 East, 244. Duff v. Budd,[2] 3 B. & B. 177; 6 Moore, 469. Batson v. Donovan,[3] 4 B. & A. 21.

(r) Beck v. Evans, 16 East, 244; supra, 295. In the case of Batson v. Donovan,[3] 4 B. & A. 21, the plaintiffs, after notice by the carrier, delivered a parcel of bank-notes to a large amount to the carrier, without informing him of its contents; the coach in which the parcel was conveyed, was left at midnight in the middle of a very large street with a porter, who was ordered to watch it; during this time the parcel was stolen. The court held that it had been properly left to the jury to say, first, whether the plaintiffs had been guilty of any unfair concealment of the value of the property; secondly, whether the carrier had been guilty of gross negligence. The jury found for the defendants, and the court of King's Bench on a special case refused a new trial. Best, J. dissentiente. So in Duff v. Budd,[2] 3 B. & B. 177, where a parcel directed to a particular place had been mis-delivered, it was left to the jury to say whether the defendants had been guilty of gross negligence; and it was held, that the usual carrier's notice, and a subsequent correspondence with the carrier, with a view to detect and punish the fraud by which he had been misled, did not amount to a bar or waver of the action. So also, where goods sent to A. and B. to be carried by a mail-coach, were taken out and left to be forwarded by a coach, of which B. alone was the proprietor, and were lost. Garnett v. Willan,[4] 5 B. & A. 53; for this was not a loss within the terms of the notice, but a consequence of a wrongful act, by which the defendants divested themselves of the charge which they had undertaken. So in Sleat v. Fagg,[5] 5 B. & A. 342, where a parcel of notes packed in brown paper was sent without any communication as to value, to be conveyed by the mail, but was forwarded by a light coach, from which it was stolen; where the jury found that the risk had been increased by altering the mode of conveyance contracted for. Note, that this case was distinguished from that of Batson v. Donovan,[3] 4 B. & A. 21; for it was not merely the case of a negligent performance of a contract, but a refusal to perform it altogether. It is to be observed, that the effect of giving notice to throw the obligation of giving information as to the value of the subject-matter upon the owner, whereas where no notice is given, the duty of making inquiry with a view to claim a remuneration adequate to the risk is incumbent on the carrier; and where the owner having such notice, conceals the value, he is not, in the absence of misfeasance or of gross negligence,

(A) A bailor is not bound to state the value of a package delivered to a carrier, unless inquiry is made —if on inquiry being made he answers falsely, or attempts fraudulently to conceal the value, the carrier it seems will not be liable for the value in case of loss without his default. Phillips v. Earl, 8 Pick. 182.

(B) (Hastings v. Pepper, 11 Pick. 41.)

(C) (Warden v. Greer, 6 Watts, 424.)

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xi. 243. [2]Id. vii. 399. [3]Id. vi. 333. [4]Id. vii. 19. [5]Id. vii. 123.

*A parcel of bank-notes had been sent by a coach from Hereford to Brecon, and their value was known to the agent of the defendants; on the arrival of the coach at Brecon, the book-keeper, who usually unloaded the coach, received the way-bill in which the parcel was entered, but supposing that the coachman had the parcel about his person, did not ask him about it, or look for it in the coach, in the back seat of which the parcel had been deposited; it was left to the jury to say whether the defendants had not been guilty of gross negligence, the jury found for the plaintiffs, and the Court of Exchequer afterwards held, that in such a case a notice of non-liability, which the defendants had given, did not protect them (s). Proof in reply to notice, &c.

Where the defendant's agent, in the course of delivering out parcels in London, carried in a cart, left the cart in the street, and the plaintiff's parcel was stolen out in his absence, the jury found it be gross negligence in the defendant (t).

Where the owner of vessels navigating from A. to C. gave notice that he would not be answerable for losses, received goods at A. to be carried to B., an intermediate place, and instead of delivering them at B., took them on towards C., and before their arrival at C. the goods were sunk, without any want of care in the master, it was held that the defendant, who ought to have delivered the goods at B., was liable to the full amount (u).

Where a box was sent from London directed to 'J. W.' Exeter, and was delivered at the coach-office in Exeter on a Sunday evening to a stranger, who said that he had been employed by a man in the street to call for W.'s box, it was held that there was sufficient evidence of gross negligence to go to a jury (x).

Evidence may also be given, in answer to proof of notice, to show that in the particular case the defendant waived or dispensed with the entry or payment according to value.

Where the defendant's agent was informed of the nature and value of the article, and told to charge what he pleased for it, it was held that the defendant was answerable for the loss, notwithstanding the notice in the usual form, on the ground that the payment on delivery had been dispensed with (y). But the usual notice will exempt the carrier from liability, notwithstanding the bulk of the package, unless the nature of the goods be known to the carrier, and is such that the value of the goods must necessaentitled to recover. See the observations of the Court in Batson v. Donovan,[1] 4 B. & A. 21. For the concealment of the real value in such a case is as much a fraud on the carrier as if the owner had used an active artifice for the purpose of deceit, as in Gibbon v. Paynton, 4 Burr. 2298; where a person knowing that the carrier had given notice that he would not be responsible for money, sent money hid in hay, in an old nail bag, without disclosing the contents. The general principle applies "ex dolo malo non oritur actio." A carrier is in the situation of an insurer, and concealment of that which will enhance the risk discharges the insurer. See also Harris v. Packwood, 3 Taunt. 266. Where, Lawrence, J. observed, "that there was nothing unreasonable in a carrier requiring a greater sum when he carried goods of greater value, for he was to be paid not only for his labour in carrying, but for the risk he runs." See also Clark v. Gray, 6 East, 595; Izett v. Mountain, 4 East, 371. As the owners in such cases, by their misconduct, deprive the carriers of the compensation which they ought to receive, and withhold that information which would reasonably render a greater degree of caution necessary, they are not entitled to recover. But though in such cases a plaintiff is not entitled to recover for a mere breach of contract, still the defendant is liable for a misfeasance, where he acts in direct contravention of the contract; as in Ellis v. Turner, 8 T. R. 531; Beck v. Evans, 16 East, 244; Birkett v. Willan, 2 B. & A. 356; Bodenham v. Bennett, 4 Price, 31. It seems that in some cases the plaintiff may still declare in assumpsit, although he may declare on the misfeasance. See the observations of Holroyd, J. in Sleat v. Fagg,[2] 3 B. & A. 349.

(s) Bodenham v. Bennett, 4 Price, 31. See also Tyly v. Morris, Carth. 485. Gibbon v. Paynton, 4 Burr. 2298; 3 Taunt. 264.

(t) Smith v. Horne,[3] Holt's C. 643; 2 Moore, 18; 8 Taunt. 144.

(u) Ellis v. Turner, 8 T. R. 531.

(x) Birkett v. Willan, 2 B. & A. 356. The defendants had proved the usual notice.

(y) Wilson v. Freeman, 3 Camp. 527; and see Vent. 238.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. vi. 333. [2]Id. vii. 19. [3]Id. iii. 210.

rily exceed the value specified in the notice (z) (1). And even where it was proved that the defendant's book-keeper knew the value of the parcel *293 (containing *200 guineas), but nothing was said to him as to the contents or value, and the parcel was lost, it was held that mere knowledge of the value did not defeat the notice of non-liability (a).

Proof of fraud.

The defendant may also in this, as in other cases, set up fraud on the part of the plaintiff, as an answer to the action. Thus, where the plaintiff at W. apprehending, from the disturbed state of the country, that his corn was in danger of being seized by a mob, after having written to the defendant, a carrier by water, to send a private boat, stopped a boat by the defendant, passing from R. to B., which was not one of the boats employed in carrying goods from W. to B., and, without communicating the circumstances to the boatmen, prevailed upon them to take the goods on board, and the corn was seized by the rioters, and lost; it was held, principally on the ground of fraud apparent in the transaction, the circumstances and urgency of the case not having been communicated to the boatmen, that the plaintiff was not entitled to recover (b).

Where a plaintiff, a passenger by the defendant's coach, having received a parcel of value from a friend, to be booked and conveyed by the same coach, and instead of doing so, places it in his own bag, which is subsequently lost; being a wrong doer towards the defendants, the loss is imputable to his own misfeasance, and he cannot sue them for the value (c).

Where, on the delivery of a box to the carrier, he asked what was in it, and the owner answered "a book and tobacco," as in fact so there was, but there was also 100*l.* besides, and the carrier was robbed, Rolle, C. J., is reported to have held at Nisi Prius, that the defendant was answerable, for the other was not bound to tell him all the particulars in the box, and it was the business of the carrier to have made a special acceptance (d). But where a carrier received two bags of money sealed up, and was told that they contained 200*l.*, and a receipt was given, charging 10*s.* per cent. for carriage and risk, and the bags, of which the carrier was robbed, contained 400*l.*, it was held that the plaintiff could not recover more than 200*l.* (e); and it may be doubted whether the defendant would now be considered as liable even to that extent, and whether the whole contract would not be considered as avoided by the fraud (f) (A).

(z) Down v. Fromont, 4 Camp. 40; and see Thorogood v. Marsh,[1] 1 Gow. 105.

(a) Levi v. Waterhouse, 1 Price, 280. Marsh v. Horne,[2] 5 B. & C. 322. Neither will the fact, that the defendants have made allowance for damage on former occasions, without inquiring into the cause of such damage. Evans v. Soule, 2 M. & S. 1.

(b) Edwards v. Sherratt, 1 East, 604. It was left by Rooke, J. to the jury to say whether the goods were put on board according to the usual course of dealing with a common carrier; the Court held that the direction was proper, and that it was in effect a question whether the boatman acted under the proper authority of his employer when he took the corn on board.

(c) Miles v. Cattle,[3] 6 Bing. 743.

(d) 1 Bac. Ab. 556; and see Mayhew v. Eames, 1 C. & P. 550.

(e) B. N. P. 71; 1 Bac. Ab. 346.

(f) Where the plaintiff adopts a disguise for his parcel, calculated to prevent the carrier from taking any particular care of it, and so as not to give due information or protection to him, he cannot recover. Bradley v. Waterhouse,[4] 1 M. & M. 154.

(1) [The responsibility is the same, whether they are informed that a package contains money, or papers as valuable as money. Dwight & al. v. Brewster & al. 1 Pick. 50.]

(A) (Where a carrier is told that a packet containing money, which is delivered to him, is very valuable, though he is not informed that it contains money, there is no ground for imputation of fraud or concealment. Allen v. Sewall, 2 Wend. 327. And in an action against a common carrier by a consignee, for not delivering goods in good order, the defendant will not be permitted to contradict the bill of lading signed by him, unless it be to prove fraud or imposition practised on him. Warden v. Greer, 6 Watts, 424.)

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. v. 476. [2]Id. xi. 243. [3]Id. xix. 219. [4]Id. xiv. 326.

The defendant may also show in defence that the loss has resulted from the improper and negligent manner in which the goods have been packed or delivered by the plaintiff. Where a carrier gave a receipt for a dog, which was afterwards lost, it was held to be no defence that the dog had not been delivered in a state of security, there being no collar about his neck, but only a cord. Lord Ellenborough ruled, that after a complete delivery to the defendant, the property remained at his risk, and he was bound to use *proper means for securing it (g) (A). If the defendant insist that the contract was void for illegality, it lies on him to prove it; for illegality will not be presumed (h). Negligence. *294

The responsibility of carriers of goods is further limited by the provisions of the statute 11 G. 4, and 1 W. 4, c. 68, s. 1 (i).

(g) Stuart v. Crawley,[1] 2 Starkie's C. 323.

(h) Sissons v. Dixon,[2] 5 B. & C. 758; where the illegality insisted on was, that the goods had not been entered at the custom-house. But a carrier may show, in defence to an action of trover, that he delivered the goods to one who had a legal right to the custody of them; as that he delivered the clothes of a female minor, who had eloped, to her guardian. Barker v. Taylor,[3] 1 C. & P. 101. Where the parcel contained bank-notes, stamps, and a letter, it was held that the fact that the letter accompanied the stamps, was prima facie evidence that it related to them, so as to bring the case within the stat. 42 G. 3, c. 81, s. 6. Bennett v. Clough, 1 B. & A. 461.

(i) By that stat. no mail-contractor, stage-coach proprietor, or other common carrier by land for hire, shall be liable for the loss of, or injury to, any article or articles, or property, of the descriptions following; (that is to say), gold or silver coin of this realm or of any foreign state, or any gold or silver in a manufactured or unmanufactured state, or any precious stones, jewellery, watches, clocks, or time-pieces of any description; trinkets, bills, notes of the Governor and Company of the Banks of England, Scotland, or Ireland respectively, or of any other bank in Great Britain or Ireland; orders, notes, or securities for payment of money, English or foreign; stamps, maps, writings, title-deeds, paintings, engravings, pictures, gold or silver plate, or plated articles; glass, china, silks in a manufactured or unmanufactured state, and whether wrought up or not wrought up with other materials; furs or lace, or any of them, contained in any parcel or package which shall have been delivered either to be carried for hire or to accompany the person of any passenger in any mail or stage-coach, or other public conveyance, when the value of such article or articles, or property aforesaid, contained in such parcel or package, shall exceed the sum of 10*l.*, unless, at the time of the delivery thereof at the office, warehouse, or receiving-house of such mail-contractor, stage-coach proprietor, or other common carrier, or to his, her, or their book-keeper, coachman, or other servant, for the purpose of being carried or of accompanying the person of any passenger as aforesaid, the value and nature of such article or articles, or property, shall have been declared by the person or persons sending or delivering the same, and such increased charge as hereinafter mentioned, or an engagement to pay the same, be accepted by the person receiving such parcel or package.

Section 2. When any parcel or package, containing any of the articles above specified, shall be so delivered, and its value and contents declared as aforesaid, and such value shall exceed the sum of 10*l.*, it shall be lawful for such common carrier, &c. to demand an increased rate of charge, to be notified by some notice affixed in legible characters in some public part of the office, &c. stating the increased rates of charges required to be paid as a compensation for the greater risk and care to be taken for the safe conveyance of such valuable articles; and all persons shall be bound by such notice, without further proof of knowledge.

Section 3. When the value shall have been so declared, and the increased rate of charge paid, or an engagement accepted for the same, the person receiving such increased rate of charge or accepting such agreement shall, if required, sign a receipt for such package or parcel, acknowledging the same to have been insured, such receipt not to be liable to any stamp-duty; and if such receipt shall not be given when required, or such notice as aforesaid shall not have been affixed, such common carrier, &c. shall not be entitled to any benefit under this Act, but shall be liable as at common law, and to refund the increased rate of charge.

Section 4. From and after the 1st day of September then next, no public notice heretofore or hereafter made shall be deemed to limit or affect the liability at common law of any such common carriers as aforesaid, in respect of any goods to be carried by them, but that all such common carriers shall, after the said 1st day of September, be liable, as at common law, to answer for the loss of, or any injury to, any goods in respect whereof they may not be entitled to the benefit of this Act, any notice by them made contrary thereto or limiting such liability notwithstanding.

Section 5. For the purposes of this Act, every office, warehouse, or receiving-house appointed by such

(A) (A carrier is not justified by the inability or refusal of the consignee to receive the goods, to leave them exposed on the wharf, but it is his duty to secure them for the owner. Ostrander v. Brown, 15 Johns. R. 39. See also Eagle v. White, 6 Whart. 505. But if an injury happen to property in the hands of a bailee, the interference of the bailor to remedy the evil, will not release the bailee from liability for the consequence of his negligence. Tod v. Figley, 7 Watts, 542.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. iii. 364. [2]Id. xii. 371. [3]Id. xi. 330.

Carriers of persons.

*In an action against a coach-owner for an injury sustained by a passenger, the plaintiff must prove, not only the usual engagement to carry him, by proof that he has taken his place, &c. (k), but must prove negligence; for coach-owners do not insure the persons of passengers against accidental injuries (l) (A). But upon general principles, the owners of mail and other common carrier as aforesaid for receiving parcels shall be deemed the receiving-house, &c. of such common carrier; any one of such common carriers may be sued, and no action shall abate for want of joining any co-partner.

Section 6. No special contract between any such common carriers and other parties shall be affected by this Act.

Section 7. Where any parcel shall be delivered at any such office, and the value and contents declared as aforesaid, and increased rate of charges paid, and such parcel shall have been lost, the party entitled to recover damages in respect of such loss shall also be entitled to recover back such increased charges so paid as aforesaid.

Section 8. That nothing in this Act shall be deemed to protect such common carriers from liability for loss arising from the felonious acts of any servant, nor to protect any such servant from liability for loss occasioned by their own neglect.

Section 9. Such common carriers shall not be concluded as to the value of any such parcel by the value so declared as aforesaid, but shall be entitled to require from the party suing proof of the value, by ordinary legal evidence, and shall be liable to such damages only as shall be so proved as aforesaid, not exceeding the declared value, together with the increased charges.

Section 10. That in all actions brought against such common carriers for loss, &c., whether the value of such goods shall have been declared or not, the defendants may pay money into court, as in any other action.

The Act extends to all articles comprised within Section 1, although not within the terms of the preamble, viz. an article of great value in small compass. A looking-glass of above 10*l.* value was packed up and sent to be carried from the carrier's office in London to the house of S. near Lymington. A notice pursuant to the statute was fixed up in the office. The words "plate-glass," "looking-glass," "keep this edge upwards," were written on the case, but no declaration was made of the nature and value of the article, and no increased rate of carriage paid. The parcel was conveyed from Lymington to the place of its ultimate destination on a brewer's truck, that being the usual mode in which parcels were conveyed in that part of the country. When the glass was unpacked it was found to be broken. It was held that the carrier was not liable for the damage occasioned by the breaking of the glass. Owen v. Burnett, 2 C. & M. 353; 4 Tyr. 133, S. C. The plaintiff sent a parcel, directed to one in London, to the postmaster of Bradford, to be forwarded to M. The postmaster received 2*d.* to book the parcel, and sent it by a mail-cart to the King's Arms inn at M. He was accustomed so to take in parcels for the mail-cart. The innkeeper at M. booked the parcel for London, charging 2*d.* as "booking" for his trouble, and also charging on the parcel the demand for carriage from Bradford, which he had paid. He forwarded the parcel by a mail-coach, of which the defendants were proprietors, to London. Several coaches used to stop at the King's Arms; the mail pulled up there, but did not change horses. The innkeeper had no express authority from the defendants to take in parcels, and used his discretion in sending them by mail or any other coach. No regular booking-office was kept at the King's Arms. The parcel was lost, and it was held, first, that for the purpose of taking in the above parcel, the King's Arms was a receiving-house of the defendants, within the stat. 11 G. 4 & 1 W. 4, c. 68; secondly, that the plaintiff might properly sue the defendants on a contract to carry from M. to London. Syms v. Chaplin,[1] 5 Ad. & Ell. 634.

Value.—The notification as to the value must be express. Boys v. Pinks,[2] 8 C. & P. 361.

Shall have been declared.—A defence that no notice was affixed at the receiving-house pursuant to the statute, must be specially pleaded. Syms v. Chaplin,[1] 5 Ad. & Ell. 634.

On a plea that the property was not delivered at a receiving-house, but to the defendant's servant, and that the plaintiff did not at the time of delivery declare the value, &c., replication de injuria, and verdict for the plaintiff, it is no ground for a new trial that no notice was affixed. Ibid.

(k) See the observations, supra, as to the contract.

(l) Aston v. Heaven, 2 Esp. C. 533. Christie v. Griggs, 2 Camp. 79.

(A) (A carrier of passengers is bound to use the highest degree of care that a reasonable man would use. Hall v. The Connecticut River Steamboat Co., 13 Conn. Rep. 319. The burden of proof is on the defendants to show that there was no negligence in every case where an injury results to passengers from an accident; the fact that the carriage was upset and the plaintiff's wife injured; or that while the carriage was driven at a moderate rate, on a plain good level road, and that in coming in contact with any other object, one of the wheels came off, whereby it was overturned, imply negligence. Ware v. Gay, 11 Pick. 106. Stokes v. Saltonstall, 13 Peters Rep. 181. The carriers are discharged from liability if the driver was a person of competent skill, and the accident was occasioned by no fault or want of skill on his part, but by physical disability arising from extreme and unusual cold, which rendered him incapable for the time to do his duty. Stokes v. Saltonstall, 13 Peters Rep. 181. Camden and Amboy R. R. Co. v. Burke, 13 Wend. 611. Where the plaintiff, a passenger in a steamboat from Hartford to New York, in an action against the owner for injuries sustained by him through the negligence of the master, having proved that on the arrival of the boat in the dock at New York, the chainbox used to keep the boat in trim was so insufficiently coaches are liable for injuries occasioned by the negligence of their agents (m). The liability continues till the passengers are safely set down, though beyond the place of destination (n). The breaking down or overturning of a stage-coach is primâ facie evidence of negligence (o). Where the road was such as to require an extraordinary degree of caution on the *part of the passengers, a driver was held to have been guilty of negligence in not warning them of the full extent of the danger (p). Evidence that the coach at the time of the overturning was carrying a greater number of passengers than are allowed by the Act of Parliament (q), has been held to be conclusive to show that the accident arose from the overloading of the coach (r); on the other hand, if it appear that a coach is loaded with more passengers than its construction will bear, it is no excuse that the number did not exceed the statutory allowance (s). If the driver of a coach may adopt either of two courses, one of which is safe and the other hazardous, and he elects the latter, he is responsible for the mischief which ensues (t).

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxxi. 403. [2]Id. xxxiv. 429.

*296

If through the default of a coach-proprietor in neglecting to provide proper means of conveyance, a passenger be placed in so perilous a situation as to render it prudent for him to leap from the coach, and in consequence his leg be broken, the proprietor will be responsible in damages, although the coach was not actually overturned (u). It is no defence that the contract was for travelling on a Sunday (x). A party who pays his whole fare is entitled to take his seat at any stage of the journey (y); secus, if he pay a deposit only (z). A postmaster is not compellable to let a chaise,

(m) White v. Boulton and others, Peake's C. 81. Brucker v. Fromont, 6 T. R. 659; 2 Salk. 441. Michael v. Allestree, 2 Lev. 172.

(n) Dudley v. Smith, 1 Camp. 167.

(o) Christie v. Griggs, 2 Camp. 79, 345, note (m); see also Dudley v. Smith, 1 Camp. 167.

(p) Christie v. Griggs, 2 Camp. 79. As where the coach, before it reached its usual destination, had to pass under a low gateway, and it was scarcely practicable for a passenger on the roof of the coach to pass without injury, and the coachman merely informed the passenger that the passage was very awkward. See also Dudley v. Smith, 1 Camp. 167.

(q) 50 G. 3, c. 48, s. 2.

(r) Israel v. Clarke, 4 Esp. C. 259.

(s) Ibid.

(t) Mayhew v. Boyce,[1] 1 Starkie's C. 423.

(u) Jones v. Boyce,[2] Ibid. 493. In an action against a coach proprietor for negligence, it appeared that the coach travelled from the county of O. to the county of W., that the plaintiff became an outside passenger for hire, that there was luggage on the roof of the coach, and no iron railing between the luggage and the passengers, and that the plaintiff being seated with her back to the luggage, was by a sudden jolt thrown from the coach, and her leg was thereby broken in the county of O., where she remained some time to be cured, but before she was fully recovered she removed to the county of W., where further medical attendance became necessary, and expense was consequently incurred. The learned Judge directed the jury to find for the plaintiffs, if they were of opinion that the injury was occasioned by the negligence of the defendant. The jury found for the plaintiff, and stated that they so found on account of the improper construction of the coach, and of the luggage being on the seat. It was held that the case was properly submitted to the jury, and that the facts found specially by them amounted to negligence in the defendant; also, that the inconvenience suffered and expense incurred by the plaintiff in the county of W. was material evidence of a matter in issue arising there, within the meaning of the undertaking given by the plaintiff, in answer to motion to change the venue. Curtis and Wife v. Drinkwater,[3] 2 B. & Ad. 169.

(x) Sandiman v. Breach,[4] 7 B. & C. 96. Under the stat. 3 Car. 1, c. 1, and 29 Car. 2, c. 7. But the driver of a stage van is a common carrier, and subject to penalties for travelling on a Sunday. P. v. Middleton,[5] 3 B. & C. 164; 4 D. & R. 824.

(y) Ker v. Mountain, 1 Esp. C. 27.

(z) Ibid.

secured, that it rolled across the deck, and striking against the plaintiff threw him overboard, whereby one of his legs was broken, and his body bruised; offered further evidence to prove that after he was taken from the water, and while sitting upon the wharf, he applied to the master for some of his men to assist him into a carriage, who refused, saying that he had enough for his men to do on board; it was held, that such evidence was admissible; because such conduct of the master was part of the transaction in question; and also for the purpose of showing the damage sustained. Hall v. The Connecticut River Steamboat Company, 13 Conn. R. 319.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. ii. 454. [2]Id. ii. 482. [3]Id. xxii. 51. [4]Id. xiv. 22. [5]Id. x. 41.

but if he do so, and the passenger take his seat, the postmaster is bound to proceed if the fare be tendered (a).

CASE, ACTION ON.

Effect of the new rules.

Previously to the new rules of pleading, the whole of the material allegations on the record were put in issue by the plea of not guilty. The new rules of H. T. 4 Will. 4, have in ordinary cases, made great alteration in this respect, and the proofs now requisite on the part, as well of the plaintiff as the defendant, are regulated by the form of pleading and the

*297 *issues taken. As the new rules affect only the mode of making the de-

New rules. fence, leaving the proof of material facts put in issue as before, and, indeed, still allow the plea of the general issue as before, where it is given by a particular statute (b), the proofs will be stated as before, subject to the observation, that their materiality must depend on the issue taken.

For the prooofs in particular actions of this class, see the different heads Carriers.—Criminal Conversation.—False Representation.—Disturbance.—Libel and Slander.—Lights.—Malicious Arrests and Prosecutions.—Negligence.—Nuisance.—Reversion.—Seduction.—Sheriff.—Trover.—Watercourse.—Way.

The proof of the different averments essential to support an action on the case in tort, and the necessity of the correspondence of such proofs with the allegations upon the record, are severally considered under the respective appropriate titles, and under the general head of Variance.

Parties.

Some points will now be considered which are particularly applicable to the present form of action.

Plaintiffs.

The action must in general be brought by the party whose person or property has sustained the injury complained of. Thus the vendor of goods cannot maintain an action for their loss against the carrier where the property has vested in the vendee by the delivery to the carrier on his behalf (c). So where A. chartered the whole of the defendant's ship, the defendant agreeing to receive a full cargo, and to deliver the same to A. or his assigns, and the plaintiff, to whose order the goods were consigned, brought an action against the defendant for negligence in stowing the goods, and it appeared that the plaintiff was the mere agent of A., he was nonsuited (d).

If it appear that some of the plaintiffs are not entitled to support the action, it will be a ground of nonsuit; they must recover, if at all, in respect of a general joint damage, for the Courts will not take cognizance of separate and distinct injuries in one and the same action (e). The plaintiffs must therefore prove a joint cause of action, such as damage done to joint property (f); joint slander of the plaintiffs in their trade or business (g); and two persons may join, although their interests be several, if the injury complained of were a joint damage to both (h). Where the damage is laid as a joint damage to several plaintiffs, and appear in evidence to be a separate damage to some of them only, they must be nonsuited; as, where the declaration alleged a slander of the plaintiffs in their joint trade, and it

(a) Massiter v. Cooper, 4 Esp. C. 260.

(b) The intention to rely on the statute, under the general issue, must be notified by inserting the words "By statute" in the margin of the plea.

(c) Supra, tit. Carrier.

(d) Moores v. Hopper, 2 N. R. 411.

(e) 1 Saund. 291, g.; Bac. Ab. Action, [C.]; 2 Saund. 116, n. 2; 2 Wils. 423; 3 Lev. 362.

(f) If one tenant in common only be sued in trespass, trover or case, for anything concerning the land held in common, the defendant may plead the tenancy in common in abatement. 2 Saund. 291, d.

(g) 3 B. & P. 150; 2 East, 426.

(h) 2 Saund. 116, a; 3 Lev. 362.

appeared in evidence that the words were addressed personally to one only (i).

It is a general rule, that in actions of tort one defendant may be acquit- Defend-ted and another found guilty, torts being several in their nature (k); where, ants.
however, the action is virtually founded upon a breach of contract, doubts *have been entertained upon this point. In a late case in an action against *298 carriers, the Court of King's Bench refused a new trial, leaving the defendant to take his objection, which was upon the record, by writ of error (l), and the judgment was afterwards affirmed.

The allegation of the particular day on which an injury was committed Time.
is not material, and the plaintiff may prove it to have been committed on any day before or after the day laid in the declaration, provided it be before the commencement of the action (m) (1), whether the form of action be trespass or case. But if the injury be continuous in its nature, or has been repeated, it seems that the plaintiff, if there be but one count alleging a continuance or repeated acts within a time specified, may either give in evidence upon that count one act anterior to the first day specified in the declaration, or any number within the limits assigned (n) (2). But if the declaration contain several counts, he may give in evidence so many acts, each anterior to the first day specified in each respective count (o).

Where in an action on a policy of insurance, the declaration alleged, that after the making the policy the ship sailed, and it appeared in evidence that she sailed before, the variance was held to be immaterial (p).

Where the injury is of a transitory nature, and the place is merely Place.
alleged by way of venue, a variance is immaterial; and, as will be seen in actions for nuisances to real property, where there is a doubt whether the place was introduced by way of venue, or of local description, it will be ascribed to venue (q). Where however a precise local description is given of such an injury, it must be proved as laid (r).

If the injury be the immediate result of force used by the plaintiff and Means and not the mere remote consequence of his wrongful act, trespass is the proper manner.
form of action. The distinction between such injuries as are to be laid in trespass, and consequential injuries, for which an action on the case is the proper remedy, is frequently very nice. The general rule is, that if the injury result immediately from force applied by the defendant, trespass is the proper form of action (s), and it is immaterial whether the trespass be wilful or not (t) (A).

(i) Solomons and others v. Medex,[1] 1 Starkie's C. 191. And see Barnes v. Holloway, 8 T. R. 150. Hawkes v. Hawkey, 8 East, 427. Helly v. Hender, 3 Bulst. 83.

(k) 1 Will. Saund. 291, d., where the cases on the subject are collected.

(l) Wood v. Bretherton, K. B. Mich. 1820; vide tit. Carriers. And see 1 Will. Saund. 291, d.; and supra, 201, and the cases there referred to.

(m) 1 Will. Saund. 24, n. Brook v. Bishop, 7 Mod. 152; Ld. Raym. 823, 974, 976; 2 Salk. 639. Hume v. Oldacre,[2] 1 Starkie's C. 351.

(n) Ibid. (o) Ibid.

(p) Peppin v. Solomons, 5 T. R. 496. Matthie v. Potts, 1 B. & P. 23.

(q) Supra, 201. (r) See tit. Variance.—Venue.

(s) Per De Grey, C. J. in Scott v. Shepherd, 3 Wils. 403; 2 Bl. R. 892.

(t) Per Ld. Ellenborough, Leame v. Bray, 3 East, 599. For the decisions on this head, see Trespass.

(1) [See Yelv. 71, note Amer. ed.]

(2) [See Pierce v. Pickens, 16 Mass. Rep. 470.]

(A) (See Gates v. Miles, 3 Conn. R. 64. Case et al. v. Mark, 2 Ohio R. 170. Johnson v. Castleman, 2 Dana, 377. Where the defendant, through neglect and for want of due caution, but without a design to injure, discharged a loaded gun in a public place where many people were assembled; the contents of which gun struck the plaintiff's leg and wounded him severely; in consequence of which wound the plaintiff lost his leg, and incurred great expense in effecting his cure, besides being disabled from carrying on his business,

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. ii. 351. [2]Id. ii. 422.

Negligence of agent.

In actions for the negligence of an agent, it is a general rule that an allegation of negligence by the defendant is supported by proof of negligence in his agent, for the negligence of the latter is the negligence of the principal who employed him (u). A declaration alleging that the defendant so negligently drove his cart that the plaintiff's horse was killed, is supported by proof that the defendant's servant drove the cart and occasioned the injury (x). And it is a general rule in civil actions, and also in cases of indictments for treason and misdemeanors, and in some cases for felony, *299 *that the act of the agent may be alleged to be the act of the principal who gave him directions (y).

Proof of agency.

Where in an action against A. for damage to the plaintiff's window, occasioned by the negligence of the defendant's servant in driving his waggon, it appeared that A. and B. were in partnership as carriers, and that by a private agreement inter se each undertook the conveyance of goods by his own waggons, horses and drivers, for specified distances, and that the damage in question had been effected within B.'s division, and by his waggon and driver, it was held that A. was liable, for since the waggon was to be drawn for his benefit, for all legal purposes the servant was his, although for inferior purposes, and, as between A. and B., he was considered as the servant of B. (z).

Sums, &c.

A variance from sums and quantities will not be material, unless they constitute part of a contract, or other entire subject-matter. It is unnecessary to prove the precise sum as laid in support of an averment that so much was due for rent in an action to recover double the value of goods removed to prevent a distress (a).

In an action on the Post-horse Act, for letting and not accounting for divers, to wit, eight post-horses, proof of letting and not accounting for five, was held to support the declaration (b).

(u) Supra, tit. AGENT, 31. Michael v. Allestree, 2 Lev. 172; supra, 55. But the plaintiff may usually waive a trespass and bring case, infra, 212, note (x).

(x) Brucker v. Fromont, 6 T. R. 659. And see Turberville v. Stamp, 1 Ld. Raym. 264; Skinn. 681; Carth. 425; Salk. 13.

(y) Supra, tit. ACCESSORY.—AGENT.

(z) Waland v. Elkins,[1] 1 Starkie's C. 272.

(a) Gwynnet v. Phillips, 3 T. R. 646.

(b) Radford v. M'Intosh, 3 T. R. 632.

---

an action on the case for consequential damages was held not to lie, but that the proper form of action was trespass vi et armis. Taylor v. Rainbow, 2 Hen. & Mun. 423. If an injury be inflicted on a child whilst in the service of its father, trespass vi et armis is the proper form of action; but if the child be hired to, and in the service of another, an action on the case is the proper remedy. Wilt v. Vickers, 8 Watts, 227. Where a house under lease is pulled down by a trespasser, case is the proper form of action for the injury done to the freehold. Olt v. Grice, 4 Devereux's Law Reps. 477. A husband may maintain an action on the case against the parent of his wife for inducing her to live separate from him, and in such action it is not necessary to prove malice. Park v. Hopkins, 2 Bailey, 408. [Mr. Angell, in his "Treatise on the Common Law, in relation to Water-courses," p. 76, 80—gives the following extract from the manuscript letters of Judge Gould of Connecticut:

"When the original act occasioning the injury was forcible, the remedy is in some cases trespass, in others trespass on the case. If the forcible act is immediately injurious, trespass is the proper action; if, on the contrary, the injury for which redress is sought, is the remote or consequential effect of the forcible act, the remedy is trespass on the case. As if A. throws a log across a highway, and B. injures himself by falling over it, here the injury to B. is consequential, and the remedy is trespass on the case.

"The difficulty is in applying the last rule, and in distinguishing what is the immediate and what the consequential effect of any forcible act. The injury to be immediate within the rule, need not be the instantaneous effect of the forcible act. When it is instantaneous, there is no difficulty in the application.

"Injuries, which are not the instantaneous effect of some forcible act, are in some cases regarded as immediate, in others consequential.

"1. When the immediate or proximate cause of the injury produced is but a continuation of the original force, the effect is immediate.

"2. On the other hand, when the original force ceases before the injury or damage commences, such injury or damage is consequential, and the author of it is liable in trespass on the case only."] {See also Mr. Day's note to Huggett v. Montgomery, 2 New. Rep. 447.}

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. ii. 387.

Under a count for a total loss it is sufficient to prove an average loss (c).

In covenant, evidence of part of the breach will enable the plaintiff to recover pro tanto. Where the plaintiff alleged, by way of breach, that the defendant had pulled down the whole house, it was held that he was entitled to recover damages for pulling down half the house (d). Damages.

It is always essential to prove the allegation that the particular damage alleged was the immediate and natural result of the wrongful act of the defendant stated in the declaration. Thus in an action for slander, by means of which the plaintiff lost his situation as a journeyman to a third person, it is not sufficient to prove, that in consequence of the wrongful act of the defendant, the master dismissed the plaintiff from his employment before the end of the term for which he had contracted with him, for the dismissal was not the legal and natural consequence of the words, but the mere wrongful act of the master (e).

No evidence can in general be given of damage which is not specially alleged in the declaration. But where special damage is laid, the plaintiff may frequently recover in respect of that damage in this form of action, where he could not have recovered for it in trover. As, where the plaintiff alleged that the defendant wrongfully had detained the tools used by him in his trade, for the space of two months, whereby he had lost the benefit of his trade, it was held that a special action on the case was the proper form of action, for the damages being special, the action ought to be special (f) (A).

It is sufficient, in many instances, to give presumptive evidence of the loss sustained; as, in an action for firing guns so near the plaintiff's decoy-pond, *that it causes the birds to take flight (g); or prevents the wild ducks from coming there (h); or for hindering horses from being brought to the plaintiff's market, in consequence of which he lost the toll payable upon the sale (i). So the law will presume some damage where the defendant has been guilty of a breach of legal duty to the plaintiff (k). As where the sheriff has not a prisoner in custody on the return of the writ, although the plaintiff can prove no damage (l). The variance from the amount of the damages laid in the declaration is immaterial. *300

As this action is founded on the plaintiff's title in justice and equity to receive a compensation in damages, the defendant may under the general issue, except in some instances depending on peculiar circumstances, give in evidence any facts or circumstances which in equity and conscience are Proof in bar.

(c) Nicholson v. Croft, Burr. 1188. (d) Burr. 1907. Bl. 200.

(e) Vicars v. Wilcocks, 8 East, 1. See also Ashley v. Harrison, Peake's C. 194; 1 Esp. C. 48; Taylor v. Neri, 1 Esp. C. 386; where it was held that a manager of a theatre could not sustain an action for beating a performer, per quod he was prevented from performing.

(f) Kettle v. Hunt, B. N. P. 78.

(g) Carrington v. Taylor, 11 East, 571. The defendant had before fired at a greater distance and brought out some of the birds, and though he did not fire into the decoy pond, it was held to be evidence of a wilful disturbance of, and damage to the decoy. Ibid.

(h) Keble v. Hickringill, 11 Mod. 73, 130. So an action lies for firing a cannon at negroes, and thereby preventing them from trading with the plaintiff; Tarleton v. M'Gawley, Peake's C. 205; and it is no defence that the plaintiff had not paid duty to the king of the country for a license to trade. Ibid.

(i) Per Holt, C. J. Ibid. (k) Barker v. Green,[1] 2 Bingh. 317.

(l) It may, perhaps, be more properly stated, that the breach of legal duty is in itself a damage in law sufficient to support the action. See Pindar v. Wadsworth, 2 East, 154; and infra, tit. DISTURBANCE.—DAMAGE.

(A) (In assessing the damages in actions for injuries to personal property, the jury are not restricted to the pecuniary loss of the plaintiff, but may take into view the circumstances of aggravation attending the transaction alleged and proved. And it makes no difference, in this respect, whether the form of the action is trespass or case. Merrils v. The Tariff Manufacturing Company, 10 Connecticut Reps. 384.)

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. ix. 419.

sufficient to bar the plaintiff's claim (m). The excepted defences are, that of a justification, in an action for slander or libel, of the truth of the words; this rests on peculiar grounds; a special plea is necessary in order to apprize the plaintiff that evidence will be adduced to prove the truth of the charge of which he complains. So, perhaps, where the defendant had published a true account of a judicial proceeding. So again where the defence is founded upon the statute of limitations. The stat. 8 & 9 Will. 3, c. 27, s. 6, enacts, that in an action of escape against the keeper of any prison, no retaking on fresh pursuit shall be admitted in evidence under the general issue, or without a special plea verified by affidavit.

Evidence in defence.

In an action for beating the plaintiff's horse, per quod he was deprived the use of it, the defendant was admitted to prove that the horse and cart of the plaintiff were before the defendant's door, and hindered him from coming to load, wherefore he whipped the horse in order to remove it (n). So in an action for obstructing the plaintiff's lights, it was held that the defendant might, under the general issue, prove that he had built upon an ancient foundation according to the custom of the city of London (o). So a release is evidence (p). So in an action for the seduction of a servant, evidence that the plaintiff had recovered a penalty against the servant, is evidence in bar of the action under the same plea (q). The defendant may, under the general issue, give in evidence a verdict and judgment in a former action as to the same subject-matter between the same parties; but if he mean to rely on it as an estoppel he should plead it; if he merely give it in evidence it will not be conclusive (r) (1).

It is an answer to the action to show that the profits, of which the plaintiff complains he has been deprived, were to be derived through the medium of *301 *an illegal transaction (s), or that the thing destroyed was a nuisance (t). It seems to be no objection that trespass might have been sustained, for the plaintiff may waive the trespass, and rely on the consequential injury (u).

Rules H.T. 4 W. 4.

By the new rules of Hil. T. 4 W. 4:—1. In actions on the case, the plea of not guilty shall operate as a denial only of the breach of duty or wrongful act alleged to have been committed by the defendant, and not of the facts stated in the inducement, and no other defence than such denial shall be admissible under that plea; all other pleas in denial shall take issue on some particular matter of fact alleged in the declaration. Ex. gr.: In an action on the case for a nuisance to the occupation of a house, by carrying on an offensive trade, the plea of not guilty will operate as a denial only that the defendant carried on the alleged trade in such a way as to be a nuisance to the occupation of the house, and will not operate as a denial of the plain-

(m) Per Ld. Mansfield, Burr. 1353. [Yelv. 174, note (b).]
(n) Slater v. Swann, Str. 872. (o) Anon. Com. 273.
(p) Burr. 1353.
(q) Bird v. Randall, Burr. 1345. P. C. Bl. 373, 387. But qu. whether this ought not to have been pleaded, vide supra, Vol. I. Ind. tit. JUDGMENT, and Stra. 701.
(r) Vooght v. Winch, 2 B. & A. 662, Ind. tit. JUDGMENT.
(s) But Ld. Kenyon held that the plaintiff might recover against the defendant for preventing him from carrying on a foreign trade, although he had not conformed to the law of the country. Tarleton v. M'Gawley, Peake's C. 205.
(t) Hannam v. Mockett,[1] 2 B. & C. 934; where the action was brought for disturbing plaintiff's rookery. See Du Bost v. Beresford, 1 Camp, 511. Keeble v. Hickeringill, 11 East, 574.
(u) Thus where a distress is made after tender of the rent, the plaintiff may waive the trespass and bring case. Branscomb v. Bridges,[2] 1 B. & C. 145; 3 Starkie's C. 171; and in general the plaintiff it seems may waive a trespass committed in taking goods, and bring trover. See Moreton v. Harden,[3] 4 B. & C. 223.

(1) [Stafford et al. v. Clark, 2 Bingh. Rep. 377. See particularly the opinion of Gaselee, J. page 382.]

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. ix. 280. [2]Id. viii. 43. [3]Id. x. 316.

tiff's occupation of the house. In an action on the case for obstructing a right of way, such plea will operate as a denial of the obstruction only, and not of the plaintiff's right of way; and in an action for converting the plaintiff's goods, the conversion only, and not the plaintiff's title to the goods. In an action of slander of the plaintiff in his office, profession, or trade, the plea of not guilty will operate to the same extent precisely as at present, in denial of speaking the words, of speaking them maliciously and in the sense imputed, and with reference to the plaintiff's office, profession, or trade; but it will not operate as a denial of the fact of the plaintiff holding the office, or being of the profession or trade alleged. In actions for an escape, it will operate as a denial of the neglect or default of the sheriff or his officers, but not of the debt, judgment, or preliminary proceedings. In this form of action against a carrier, the plea of not guilty will operate as a denial of the loss or damage, but not of the receipt of the goods by the defendant as a carrier for hire, or of the purpose for which they were received.

2. All matters in confession or avoidance shall be pleaded specially, as in actions of assumpsit.

CERTIFICATE.

For PARISH CERTIFICATE, vide INDEX.

Conviction of felony.

OF a Conviction of Felony. By the stat. 3 & 4 W. & M. c. 9, s. 7, a transcript certified by the clerk of the crown, peace, or assizes, of the conviction of a man who has the benefit of clergy, or of a woman who has the benefit of the statute, containing the effect and tenor of the indictment and conviction, to the Judges and justices in any other county where such man or woman shall be indicted, on being produced in court, shall be evidence of the fact of admission to the benefit of clergy or of the statute. Provisions nearly similar are made by the stat. 15 G. 2, c. 28, s. 9, in case of a conviction for uttering counterfeit coin (x).

*302

Certificate of conviction in case of felony.

*By the stat. 6 G. 1, c. 23, s. 6, a transcript of the indictment, conviction, and order for transportation of a felon, certified by a clerk of assize or of the peace, is evidence, under an indictment against a felon ordered to be transported, for being at large before the expiration of his term.

By the stat. 7 & 8 G. 4, c. 28, s. 11, in an indictment for any felony committed after a previous conviction for felony, it shall be sufficient to state that the offender was at a certain time and place convicted of felony, without otherwise describing the previous felony; and a certificate containing the substance and effect only (omitting the formal part) of the indictment and conviction for the previous felony, purporting to be signed by the clerk of the court, or other officer having the custody of the records of the court where the offender was first convicted, or by the deputy of such clerk or officer, (for which certificate a fee of 6*s.* 8*d.*, and no more, shall be demanded or taken,) shall, upon proof of the identity (y) of the person of the offender, be sufficient evidence of the first conviction, without proof of the signature or official character of the person appearing to have signed the same.

So in some other cases, which will be noticed in their proper places, certificates by authorized officers are admissible in evidence; so also are certificates, in some instances, by public notaries (z) (1). In other instances, where the certificate is not made by an accredited agent of the law, to whom authority is delegated for the purpose, such as a chirographer (a), the general rule is, that his statement or certificate of a fact is inadmissible (b) (2). The certificate of a British vice-consul abroad is not evidence to prove any fact, even such as the amount of a sale, although he is by the law of the country where he resides, constituted the general agent for absent owners of goods, and was obliged to make the sale in question (c) (3). The certificate of the Secretary at War, relating to the office of a sergeant in the army, has, it seems, been admitted in evidence (d); but this decision does not appear to be founded in principle (4).

(x) See tit. COIN.

(y) In order to prove a former conviction it is sufficient to prove that the prisoner was the party who underwent the sentence, in the certificate of the clerk of the peace; it is not necessary to call a witness who was present at the trial. R. v. Crofts, 9 C. & P. 220.

Certificate in the nature of an adjudication.

In general, where the certificate is in the nature of an adjudication by a Court of competent jurisdiction, it is receivable in evidence, when properly authenticated, of the fact itself. As for instance, a certificate by commissioners appointed by a statute to inquire into and state the debts of the army (e); or a record by a magistrate of a forcible entry, and detainer (f).

The certificate of a Bishop in a case of bastardy or marriage, when entered of record, is in general conclusive upon the fact (g); but this is a regular legal adjudication upon the fact by a competent tribunal. It has in one instance, it seems, been held, that a certificate under the seal of a minister resident abroad, that a particular marriage was solemnized by him (h), was admissible; but this was when the rules of evidence were in *303 a *crude and unsettled state (i). Even the King himself, it has been held, (z) See Vol. I. Index, tit. CERTIFICATE. (a) See BILLS OF EXCHANGE.

(b) Vide Index, tit. CERTIFICATE.
(c) Waldron v. Coombe, 3 Taunt. 162. Roberts v. Eddington, 4 Esp. C. 88. R. v. Vyse, Forrest, 35. See further on the subject of certificates, Omichund v. Barker, Willes, 550; I Blacks. 29.
(d) Lloyd v. Woodall, 1 Bl. R. 29. (e) Str. 481; supra, Vol. 1. Index, tit. JUDGMENT.
(f) See the stat. 15 Rich. 2, c. 2; 8 Hen. 6, c. 9, s. 2; Burn's J. tit. Forcible Entry and Detainer. 2 Rol. R. 39. Dalt. c. 44.
(g) See tit. BASTARDY, supra; and tit. MARRIAGE, infra.
(h) Alsop v. Bowtrell, Cro. J. 541.
(i) See Willes's R. 549, where the decision is questioned.

(1) [The mere certificate of a notary, that a release was acknowledged by the party to be his act and deed, is not evidence in Virginia. Kidd v. Alexander, 1 Randolph, 456. In Massachusetts, such a certificate of a justice of the peace, made on a deed, is constantly received in evidence, without further proof. {But in Pennsylvania a certificate of a notary in a foreign country of the proof before him, by two witnesses, of a power of attorney for the sale of lands in that state, is not sufficient under the Act of Assembly of 1705. Griffith v. Black, 10 Serg. & Rawle, 160.}

A notarial certificate is not evidence that a person was preparing to leave the country. Foster v. Davis, 1 Littell's Rep. 71.]

{In Pennsylvania, by the act of 2d Jan. 1815, (Purd. Dig. 603,) the "official acts, protests, and attestations of all notaries public, acting under the authority of that commonwealth, certified according to law, under their respective hands and seals of office, may be read and received in evidence of the facts therein certified, in all suits depending; provided that any party may be permitted to contradict, by other evidence, any such certificate." Under this act it has been decided, that in a suit against the indorser of a promissory note, the defendant may call the notary to explain the protest, and even, it seems, to contradict it. Craig v. Shallcross, 10 Serg. & Rawle, 277.}

(2) [A certificate of a clerk in chancery in Holland, in return of a commission, stating that a list of names was signed by "the late directors of the Spiel house," in his presence, was ruled to be inadmissible, the testimony not having been taken on oath, and the report not being official. Jones v. Ross, 2 Dallas, 143. A certificate of the Collector-General of the customs at Havanna, under his seal of office, stating that a cargo insured was decreed by the Intendant to be sold, is not good evidence—as it relates to the transactions of another tribunal, which are presumed to be in writing. Wood v. Pleasants, Circuit Court, April, 1813, Wharton's Digest, 231.]

(3) [See as to admissibility of certificates of land officers, &c. in Pennsylvania, and other states—Cluggage v. Swan, 4 Binney, 150. Lessee of Brown v. Galloway, 1 Peters' Rep. 291. Morris's Lessee v. Vanderen, 1 Dallas, 64. Garwood v. Dennis, 4 Binney, 314. Penn's Lessee v. Hartman, 2 Dallas, 230. Lessee of Todd v. Ockerman & al. 1 Yeates, 295. Master's Lessee v. Shute, 2 Dallas, 81. Neilson v. Mott, 2 Binney, 301. Thornton v. Edwards, 1 Har. & M'Hen. 158. Seward v. Hicks, ibid. 22. Ayres v. Stewart, 1 Overton's Rep. 221. Governor v. Jeffreys, 1 Hawks. 207. Rochell v. Holmes, 2 Bay, 487.]

(4) [See Wickliffe v. Hill, 3 Littell's Rep. 330.]

cannot give evidence in a cause by letters under his sign manual (k) (1).

Where a parish has pleaded guilty to an indictment for not repairing a highway, a certificate, signed by two magistrates, is received as evidence by the Court, to advise them to discharge the defendants; and the practice is of ancient date (l). It does not, however, appear, that such certificates have been used as evidence before a jury. So the Courts, in some instances, receive certificates from other Courts as to the particular laws and customs. The customs of the city of London are ascertained by the Courts at Westminster by means of a certificate by the recorder of London (m). So, certificates are received from the Courts in Wales as to their practice (n).

It has been held that a certificate of the discharge of an insolvent debtor under the stat. 2 G. 2, c. 20, is admissible to prove the discharge (o).

CHARACTER.

HERE may be considered the proof,—

I. Of the moral character and conduct of a person in society:

II. Of an allegation that a party holds an office, or fills a particular situation.

Moral character in society.

There are three classes of cases in which the moral character and conduct of a person in society may be used in proof before a jury, each resting upon peculiar and distinct grounds.

Such evidence is admissible,—1st. To afford a presumption that a particular party has or has not been guilty of a criminal act. 2dly. To affect the damages in particular cases, where their amount depends upon the character and conduct of any individual; and, 3dly. To impeach or confirm the veracity of a witness.

Evidence of the character which a person bears in society is in many instances admissible, as affording a presumption that he did or did not commit a particular act.

Presumptive evidence of innocence.

Where the guilt of an accused party is doubtful, and the character of the supposed agent is involved in the question, a presumption of innocence arises from his former conduct in society, as evidenced by his general character, since it is not probable that a person of known probity or humanity would commit a dishonest or cruel act in the particular instance. Such presumptions are, however, so remote from the fact, and it is frequently so difficult to estimate a person's real character, that they are entitled to little weight, except in doubtful cases (A). Since the law considers a presump-

(k) 2 Roll. Ab. 686; and per Willes, C. J. in Omichund v. Barker, Willes R. 550; notwithstanding the case of Aubignye v. Clifton, Hob. 213, contra; vide Vol. I. 3 Woodeson, 376. Com. Dig. Testmoigne, [A.] 1; 1 Parl. Hist. 43.

(l) Per Ashurst, J. in R. v. Mawbey, 6 T. R. 619; 2 Roll. R. 412. Leyton's Case, Cro. Car. 584. Randall's Case, 1 Keb. 256; 2 Keb. 221; T. Raym. 215; Salk. 358; 1 Str. 688. [Salk. 183.]

(m) 1 Burr. 251. (n) Cro. Eliz. 503.

(o) Guillum v. Stirrup, C. T. Hardw. 144. This statute has expired. Qu. as to the provisions of the statute. It seems that such a certificate would not be evidence, unless it was the original entry of the adjudication, or an examined copy of it; or unless it was made evidence by the express provisions of the statute.

(1) [The certificate of the governor of a West India island, stating that the defendant had applied for leave to take away his cargo, to save the penalty of an embargo bond, and which permission he had refused, was allowed to be given in evidence. U. S. v. Mitchell, Circuit Court, Jan. 1811. Wharton's Digest, 230, 231.] [Reported, 3 Wash. C. C. Rep. 95.]

(A) (When a prisoner introduces evidence for the purpose of proving his general good character, previous to the date of the transaction charged against him, and the attorney for the commonwealth introduces evidence to impeach his general character, the latter shall not be allowed to inquire of the witness what he

tion of this nature to be admissible, such evidence is in principle admissible wherever a reasonable presumption arises from it, as to the facts in question; in practice it is admitted whenever, technically speaking, the character of the party is involved in the issue.

*304 When evidence in criminal cases.

*Formerly, evidence of the defendant's good character, in criminal proceedings, was admitted in capital cases only (p), and that in favorem vitæ; but such evidence is now admissible in all cases of misdemeanors, where the character of the defendant is in jeopardy (q).

Upon indictments for larceny, or fraud of any description, the general character of the defendant for honesty is admissible; and where the indictment charges upon the defendant any violence committed against the person of an individual, or against the public peace, evidence may be adduced by him of his general character for humanity, and peaceable conduct. Such evidence is also admissible upon an indictment for libel (r).

Usual questions.

It is a general rule, that evidence must be given of the general character of the party, and not of particular acts (s), for the presumption in favour of the prisoner arises from the general uniform tenor of his conduct, and not from particular isolated facts (A). The questions usually put for this purpose are, how long the witness has known the prisoner, and what his general character has been for honesty, humanity, or loyalty (according to the nature of the charge), during that period.

A prosecutor cannot impeach the character of a defendant until the latter has adduced evidence to support it (t); and although such evidence is warranted in principle, it is not resorted to in practice; he may cross-examine the witnesses as to the grounds of their belief, and as to particular facts, and may bring evidence in contradiction to impeach the general character of the defendant (u).

Civil proceedings.

In civil proceedings, unless the character of a party be put directly in issue by the nature of the proceeding, evidence of his character is not in general admissible (B).

(p) R. v. Harris, 2 St. Tr. 1033. R. v. Carr, 32 G. 2; 3 St. Tr. 57.

(q) R. v. Harris, 2 St. Tr. 1038. Attorney-General v. Bowman, 2 B. & P. 532, a. [Commonweath v. Hardey, 2 Mass. Rep. 317.]

(r) R. v. Harris, 2 St. Tr. 1038.

(s) 1 T. R. 754. See Vin. Ab. Evidence, M. a. 1, 6.

(t) B. N. P. 296. In the case of barratry, the prosecutor may examine as to particular facts, for otherwise the case cannot be proved; but then particular notice is requisite as to the facts to be proved.

(u) 2 Atk. 339. Clarke v. Periam.

---

had learned of the character of the prisoner, previous to the date of the transaction, by conversation had since the said date, with persons acquainted with the prisoner. Carter v. Commonwealth, 2 Virg. Cas. 169.) [The State v. Wells, 1 Coxe's Rep. 424.]

(A) Ramsey v. Johnson, 3 Penns. Rep. 293.

(B) (Evidence of good character is not admissible to repel the imputation of fraud in civil proceedings. Aliter, where character is directly put in issue, or on a trial of an offence against the state, involving moral turpitude, or on an indictment for a breach of the peace. Ward et al. v. Harndon, 5 Porter, 382. But where a defendant is improperly permitted to assail the character of the plaintiff, there is no error in permitting the plaintiff to countervail it by evidence of good character. Findlay v. Pruitt, 9 Porter, 195. In an action for a malicious prosecution, the defendant's character is not in issue, and he cannot call witnesses to support it. Rogers v. Lamb, 3 Blackf. 155. In an action for criminal conversation with the plaintiff's wife, the plaintiff's general character is not in issue. Norton v. Warner, 9 Day's R. 172. It is not competent for a plaintiff in an action for seduction to give evidence of the good character of the seduced, unless it be first attacked by the defendant. Wilson v. Sproul, 3 Penns. R. 49.) See United States v. Freeman, 4 Mason, 505. Douglass v. Tousey, 2 Wendell, 352. [In tresspass, assault and battery, the plaintiff ought not to be permitted to give evidence of his general character. Gevins v. Badley, 3 Bibb, 195. In assumpsit for money had and received, the defendant cannot give evidence of his general character, though he is incidentally charged by the evidence with committing a particular fraud. Nash v. Gilkeson, 5 Serg. & Rawle, 352. {Anderson's Ex. v. Long et al. 10 Serg. & Rawle, 55.} The plea of probable cause to an action for malicious prosecution, does not put the plaintiff's general character in issue. Gregory v. Thomas, 2 Bibb, 286. Where the character of the party is not immediately in issue, yet if he introduce evidence in support of it, the

Upon an ejectment brought by an heir-at-law to set aside the will, for fraud committed by the defendant, evidence of the defendant's good character was rejected as inadmissible (x). And even upon an information to recover a penalty from the defendant for keeping false weights, such evidence was rejected, because the prosecution was not directly for the crime, but to recover a penalty (y). The principle of this distinction is not very intelligible; the good character of the defendant in a prosecution for keeping false weights can be admitted on no ground, except that it affords a presumption that the fact imputed has not been committed, and this is the very fact which is in issue in the former case. The effect of the distinction is, to make the admissibility of evidence to prove a fact to depend, not upon its tendency to prove it, but upon the consequences which result from the fact when proved.

In an action of slander, imputing dishonesty to the plaintiff, who was the defendant's servant, the plaintiff may, it has been held, adduce evidence of *general good character, even before any evidence to the contrary has been given on the other side (z). The words, it is observable in that case, were published in giving a character of the servant upon the application of one who required the character, and consequently where, according to the ordinary rule by which such actions are governed, the plaintiff would be bound to prove the falsity of the words, and malice of the defendant. In other cases, and where no justification is pleaded, it seems that such evidence would not be admissible, for the truth of the charge imputed by the slander could not come in issue. Where, indeed, the defendant justifies the slander which conveys an imputation of dishonesty, the case may admit of a very different consideration, for there the party is charged with a crime, and in such a case, character affords just the same presumption of innocence as if the party had been tried for the offence (a). And next, although, as will be seen, a defendant may in some instances impeach the plaintiff's character, or even that of a third person, in order to mitigate the damages, and where he does so, it is clear that the plaintiff may, on the other hand, prove the goodness of his character, yet, in general, a plaintiff is not allowed to adduce such evidence in the first instance (b); such evidence is unnecessary till the character has been impeached; for the law presumes a person's character to be good till the contrary be proved. *305

The character of third persons is also in some instances admissible, as affording a presumption with respect to the disputed fact.

Upon the question of illegitimacy, it has been held, that after probable evidence of non-access has been adduced, evidence may be given that the mother was a woman of bad character (c). So upon an indictment for a rape, or for an attempt to commit a rape, general evidence is admissible to (x) Goodright v. Hicks, 1 Phill. L. Ev. 174, 5th edit.

(y) On an information in the Exchequer by the Attorney-general, to recover a penalty. Attorney-General v. Bowman, cor. Eyre, C. B., 2 B. & P. 532.

(z) King v. Waring, 5 Esp. C. 13.

(a) In Cornwall v. Richardson,[1] 1 Ry. & M. 305, it is said to have been held that though the plea justified a charge of felony, the plaintiff could not give evidence of good character; yet, qu. might he not go into any evidence to rebut the justification?

(b) Dodd v. Norris, 3 Camp. 519. Bamfield v. Massey, 1 Camp. 460.

(c) Pendrell v. Pendrell, Str. 925.

opposite party may rebut the evidence by impeaching his general character. Grannis v. Brandon, 5 Day, 260.

Evidence of general character, derived from the common report of the neighbourhood, is admissible. Kimmel v. Kimmel, 3 Serg. & Rawle, 336. See also Boynton v. Kellogg, 3 Mass. Rep. 192. Foulkes v. Sellway, 3 Esp. C. 236.]

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxi. 446.

impeach the character of the woman for chastity and decency (d). And in such a case evidence is admissible that the woman has formerly been connected with the prisoner, although it cannot be shown that she has been criminally connected with other persons (e).

General evidence to impeach the character of a prosecutrix for chastity, is admissible upon an indictment for a rape (1), or for an assault to commit a rape, although she has been examined as a witness, and has not been asked questions on cross-examination tending to impeach her character for chastity (f) (A).

Damages. 2dly. In some instances, evidence in disparagement of character is admissible, not in order to prove or disprove the commission of a particular fact, but with a view to damages. In actions for criminal conversation with the plaintiff's wife, evidence may be given of the wife's general bad character for want of chastity, and even of particular acts of adultery committed by her previous to her intercourse with the defendant (g) (2). So in actions *306 for *slander and libel, where the defendant has not justified, evidence of the plaintiff's bad character has also been admitted (h) (B).

The grounds of admitting such evidence is, that a person of disparaged fame is not entitled to the same measure of damages with one whose character is unblemished (i). Where, however, the defendant justifies the slander, it seems to be doubtful whether evidence of reports as to the conduct and character of the plaintiff can be received (k) (3).

(d) Hodgson's Case; by a majority of the Judges, on a case reserved, 1812; and cor. Wood, B. York Summer Assizes, 1812. And see[1] 2 Starkie's C. 241.

(e) Ibid.

(f) R. v. Clarke,[1] 2 Starkie's C. 241. The prosecutrix is not bound to answer the question whether she has had connection with other men. 3 Camp. 515.

(g) B. N. P. 27, 296. Coote v. Berty, 12 Mod. 232. See Foulkes v. Selway, 3 Esp. 236; Roberts v. Mulston, Sel. N. P. 25. [See Ligon v. Ford, 5 Munf. 10.]

(h) Ld. Leicester v. Walter, 2 Camp. 251; 1 M. & S. 284. Rodriguez v. Tadmire, 2 Esp. C. 720.

(i) —— v. Moor, 1 M. & S. 284. See Snowden v. Davis, 1 M. & S. 286; and tit. Libel and Slander. King v. Francis, 3 Esp. C. 116. And see tit. Damages.—Trespass; and Watson v. Christie, 2 B. & P. 224.

(k) In the case of Snowden v. Smith, (Devon Lent Ass. 1811), Chambre, J. rejected such evidence; and the case of the Earl of Leicester v. Walter being cited, said that it did not govern a case like the present, where the defendant justified. See 1 M. & S. 286, a. But in the subsequent case of Kirkman v. Oxley, (cited Phillips on Evidence, 189,) Heath, J., in an action for slander imputing larceny, allowed the defend-

(1) [Such evidence was admitted in The Commonwealth v. Murphy, though it does not so appear in the case, as reported, 14 Mass. Rep. 387.]

(A) (In an action by a father for debauching his daughter, her general character cannot be proved, and it is not material whether the child was got at her father's or elsewhere. Wallace v. Clark, 2 Tennessee R. 93. But evidence of the general character of a female witness in respect to chastity is not admissible to affect her character for veracity. Gilchrist v. M'Kee, 4 Watts, 380. See also Com'th v. Moore, 3 Pick. 194. Contra, Com'th v. Murphy, 14 Mass. Rep. 387. Where the person injured and the principal witness in a prosecution for an attempt to commit a rape was deaf and dumb, and the public prosecutor offered evidence to prove that her general character for truth was good; it was held that such evidence was admissible, though no impeachment of character had been attempted. The State v. De Wolf, 8 Con. Rep. 93.)

(2) [In an action by a woman for a breach of promise of marriage, and for seduction, the defendant shall not be permitted to give in evidence, in mitigation of damages, the general bad reputation of the plaintiff, as to chastity, which she acquired after the seduction. Boynton v. Kellogg, 3 Mass. Rep. 189. But see Johnson v. Caulkins, 1 Johns. Cas. 116. Woodward v. Bellamy, 2 Root, 354.]

(B) (In an action of slander evidence of the general bad character of the plaintiff is admissible. Waters v. Jones, 9 Porter's Reps. 442. Wolcott v. Hull, 6 Mass. Rep. 514. Ross v. Lapham, 14 Mass. Rep. 275. Sawyer v. Eifert, 2 Nott & McCord, 511. Buford v. M'Luny, 1 Nott & McCord, 268. {Bodwell v. Swan, 3 Pick. Rep. 376.} But evidence of a particular crime, of a nature different from that with which he is charged, is inadmissible. Sawyer v. Eifert, ubi sup. Andrews v. Vanduzor, 11 Johns. 31. Seymour v. Merrills, 1 Root, 459. Where the defendant pleads in justification the truth of the words alleged to have been spoken, the plaintiff may give in evidence his general good character, before it is impeached by the defendant, otherwise than by his plea of justification. Harding v. Brooks, 5 Pick. 244. [See Grunnis v. Brandon, 5 Day, 260].)

(3) [In Foot v. Tracy, 1 Johns. 46, the court of New York was divided on the question whether in an

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. iii. 303.

And in an action for a malicious prosecution on a charge of felony, it was held, that a witness could not be asked on cross-examination whether the plaintiff's house had not been searched on a former occasion, and whether he was not a person of suspicious character, in order to prove that there was probable cause for the charge; for in an action of slander, such proof is given to mitigate the damages, and not to bar the action; and such evidence affords no proof of probable cause (l).

But it seems, that in general a plaintiff cannot go into evidence of good character to increase the damages, until evidence has been given to impeach it (1). The plaintiff in an action for adultery with his wife, or for the seduction of his daughter, cannot give evidence of the good character of the one or the other, until the defendant has given evidence to impeach it (m); for till the contrary appear, their previous characters are presumed to be good, and that presumption is very forcibly confirmed by the consideration that the defendant is at liberty, if there be ground for it, to impeach the character by evidence.

It has even been held, that where the defendant has attempted to impeach the plaintiff's character on cross-examination of his witnesses, and has palpably failed, the plaintiff cannot call witnesses to his own good character (n). It may be doubted whether this is not carrying the general rule too far; such evidence is in general inadmissible, because the law presumes that the party's conduct has been correct and proper, a presumption which is strongly confirmed by the silence of the adversary upon the subject; but where he attempts to impeach the character of the party by evidence, the presumption from acquiescence ceases. Besides, although the witnesses deny the facts, it is very possible that the insinuation conveyed *by the questions, and the mode of answering them, may have produced an *307 effect upon the jury which ought to be removed.

It has been held in one instance, that in an action for the seduction of a daughter, evidence on the part of the defendant, in mitigation of damages, that the daughter had previously had a child by another man, did not warrant the admission of general evidence of good conduct (o), but that the ant, who had justified, to go into evidence of the plaintiff's bad character in mitigation of damages. The latter decision appears to be better founded in principle, from this consideration: if the issue on the justification, and the question as to the quantum of damages, were to be tried separately, such evidence would clearly be admissible on behalf of the defendant after the issue on the plea of justification had been decided against him; and if so, it is difficult to say that such evidence can be rejected, although both questions are tried together; for although the defendant gives evidence tending to prove his justification, he is still entitled to give evidence in reduction of damages, in case the jury decide against him on the justification. It would be for the Court, in such a case, to advise the jury to apply such evidence to the reduction of damages only, and not to consider it as subsidiary to the proof of the justification.

(l) Newsam v. Carr, cor. Wood, B.[1] 2 Starkie's C. 69.

(m) Bamfield v. Massey, 1 Camp. 460; 3 Camp. 519.

(n) King v. Francis, 3 Esp. C. 116, cor. Ld. Kenyon.

(o) Bamfield v. Massey, 1 Camp. 460. [Wallace v. Clark, 2 Overton's Reps. 93.] See Dodd v. Norris, 3 Camp. 519. Vide infra, tit. SEDUCTION. In an action on the case for the seduction of the plaintiff's sister, action for libel, the defendant might give in evidence, under the general issue, the general character of the plaintiff, in mitigation of damages. In the case of Larned v. Buffington, 3 Mass. Rep. 553, Parsons, C. J. says, "when through the fault of the plaintiff, the defendant, as well at the time of speaking the words, as when he pleaded his justification, had good cause to believe they were true, it appears reasonable that the jury should take into consideration this misconduct of the plaintiff, to mitigate damages." But in Alderman v. French, 1 Pick. 19, Jackson, J. says, "we do not find this doctrine supported by any authority; and think whenever such evidence is admitted, it will be when the defendant, instead of making it a ground of defence under the pretence of mitigating the damages, will admit that he was mistaken, and thus afford all the relief he can against the calumny he has published."]

(1) [Ketland v. Bisset, Circuit Court, Oct. 1804. Wharton's Digest, 251, acc. See Grunnis v. Brandon, 5 Day, 260.]

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. iii. 249.

plaintiff was confined to evidence to disprove the specific breach of chastity. And yet it should seem, upon principle, that as the fact was offered in evidence by the defendant, in order to diminish the value of that which the plaintiff had lost, and to show that the injury to his feelings and his comforts was less than might otherwise have been presumed, evidence was admissible on the other hand to show that the subsequent conduct of the daughter had been correct, and to prove in fact what degree of injury had been sustained.

In the subsequent case of Dodd v. Norris (p), where the daughter was cross-examined in order to show that in her intercourse with the defendant she had been guilty of great indelicacy and levity, evidence of good character was held to be inadmissible, no evidence of bad character having been given by the defendant. This case, it is to be remarked, differs essentially from the former, inasmuch as no evidence was given to impeach the daughter's character, and consequently to diminish the damages, except so far as it arose out of the very transaction itself; and if that were to be a sufficient ground for the admission of such evidence, it would be admissible in every such action, since the very nature of the action involves improper conduct on the part of the wife or daughter.

3dly. Evidence offered to impeach the character of a witness has already been considered (q).

Special character or office.

II. In order to prove a general allegation that a party holds a particular office or situation, it is usually sufficient to prove his acting in that capacity. (A).

In the case of all peace officers, justices of the peace, and constables, it is sufficient to prove that they acted in those capacities, even upon an indictment for murder (r). And prior to the statute 11 G. 2, c. 30, s. 32, which directs, that excise and custom-house officers acting in the execution of their duty, shall be taken to be such till the contrary appears, evidence was admitted, both in criminal and civil proceedings, to show that they were reputed officers (s). So upon an indictment for perjury, in taking an oath before a surrogate in the Ecclesiastical Court, evidence that he has acted as a surrogate is primâ facie evidence of his authority (t). But where a plaintiff, in an action for slander, avers that he is a physician, and has regularly taken his degree as a doctor of physic, he must prove that he is such, by producing the books of the University containing the act which *308 conferred *the degree, or by proof of an examined copy of such act, or by the sister was cross-examined by the defendant's counsel as to her having had criminal intercourse with other men; Bayley, J. held that general evidence of good character was admissible. Murgatroyd v. Murgatroyd, York Sum. Ass. 1828.

(p) 3 Camp. 519. (q) See Vol. I. 211, and tit. WITNESS.

(r) Per Buller, J., Berryman v. Wise, 4 T. R. 366. Gordon's Case, Leach, 581. R. v. Shelley, Leach, 381, (n). Upon an indictment for sacrilege, alleging the property in the custody of A. and B. churchwardens, it is sufficient to show that A. and B. have acted in that capacity. R. v. Mitchell, cor. Abbott, J., Salisbury Spring Assizes, 1818. {Per Abbott, C. J. Snow v. Peacock,[1] 2 Carr. & Payne, 217.} [Potter v. Luther, 3 Johns. 431.]

(s) Per Buller, J. 4 T. R. 366. See also R. v. Bigg, supra, tit. AGENT.

(t) R. v. Verelst, 3 Camp. 432.

(A) (General reputation merely is inadmissible to prove who are the officers of a corporation; though semble, it may be received in connection with their acts performed as officers. Litchfield Iron Company v. Bennett, 7 Cow. 234. On a question involving the fact of a man's being a constable, it is competent to prove that he is generally reputed to be a constable and acts in that capacity. Johnson v. Stedman, 3 Ohio, 97. And where a tax collector justifies his acts as such collector, proof of his acting in that capacity and general reputation, is prima facie evidence of his authority, and unless contradicted is conclusive. Eldred v. Sexton, 5 Ohio, 216.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xii. 95.

the production of a diploma, with proof of the seal of the court (u). But in such case, to prove a general averment that the party is a physician, it seems to be sufficient to show that he has acted as such (x) (1).

In an action by an attorney for fees, an allegation that he is an attorney of the Court of King's Bench, is evidenced by proof that he has acted as such (y). So it has been seen, that on an indictment for forgery, where it was necessary to prove that Adams was the agent of the Governor and Company of the Bank of England, it was held that this was sufficiently proved by evidence that Adams had been used to sign bills and notes as such agent, which from time to time had been duly paid and answered by the Bank (z).

In cases where, from the precise and special nature of the allegation, the due appointment of the party to an office or situation must be proved, then according to the general rule, it must be proved by the best evidence which the case admits of; that is, by the production and due proof of the original appointment, where it is in writing. Appointment, proof of.

Upon an indictment against overseers, alleging that they were duly appointed, their appointment must be proved by the production of that appointment under the hands and seals of two justices, as the statute requires (a).

On an indictment against an apprentice for a fraudulent enlistment, the indentures must be produced and proved by the attesting witness in the usual way (b).

Where an indictment for stealing a letter alleged that the prisoner was a sorter and charger, proof that he was a sorter only was held to be insufficient (c).

It is a general rule, that where a party has assumed to act in a particular character or situation, or has represented himself as such, the assumption or representation is evidence of the fact against himself, since it operates by way of admission (A). Proof by admission.

In an action against an incumbent for non-residence, it is sufficient to (u) Moises v. Thornton, 8 T. R. 303. So a barrister is proved to be such by the order-book of the society to which he belongs. Savage's Case, Doug. 342.

(x) Moises v. Thornton, 8 T. R. 307. Berryman v. Wise, 4 T. R. 366. But see Pickford v. Gutch, cor. Buller, J., Dorchester Summer Ass. 1787; which was an action for calling the plaintiff a quack. The declaration alleged that the plaintiff had used and exercised the profession, &c. of a physician; and Buller, J., held that proof of the plaintiff's acting as a physician was insufficient, and that it was necessary to produce a diploma; on which the diploma was produced in court, and the plaintiff recovered. In Smith v. Taylor, (1 N. R. 196,) in a similar action, the allegation was, that the plaintiff at the time of speaking the words was a physician; and the plaintiff having obtained a verdict without any documentary proof of his degree, the Judges of the Common Pleas were, upon a motion to set aside the verdict, equally divided in opinion upon the question whether regular proof of the degree was necessary.

(y) Berryman v. Wise, 4 T. R. 366.

(z) R. v. Bigg, 3 P. Wms. 427; supra, 41. But where a declaration for slander alleged that the plaintiff was a physician, and exercised that profession in England, it was held that proof of a diploma from St. Andrew's, and of having acted as a physician in England, was not sufficient; for such a person cannot legally exercise his profession in England. Collins v. Carnegie,[1] 1 Ad. & Ell. 695.

(a) R. v. Arnold, Str. 101. In this case parol evidence of the appointment was offered.

(b) R. v. Jones, 1 Leach, 208. The indictment alleged that the defendant was an apprentice bound by indenture to L. W.

(c) R. v. Shaw, 1 Leach, 79; 2 Bl. 789; 2 East's P. C. 580. See R. v. Ellins, Russ. & R. 188; Sellers v. Till, 4 B. & C. 655; and infra, tit. VARIANCE.

(1) [Brown v. Minns, 2 Rep. Con. Ct. 235, acc.] {The defendant said of the plaintiff, "the Reverend Thomas Smith is a perjured man;" and it was held in an action for slander for so saying, that parol evidence that the plaintiff was a minister was admissible. Cummin v. Smith, 2 Serg. & Rawle, 440.}

(A) (The declarations and statements of a deceased individual that he was agent, are not admissible testimony to prove the agency. There must be other proof showing the fact of agency, before his statements can be received. Floyd v. Woods & Co., 4 Yerger's R. 165.)

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxviii. 180.

*prove that he is in possession, without proving his presentation, institution and induction (d).

Proof that a man had acted in this country as a priest of the see of Rome, was held to be evidence against himself, upon the trial of an indictment, that he had been ordained by the see of Rome (e) (1).

Special character.

In an action for penalties under the Post-horse Act, proof that the defendant had previously accounted with the plaintiff as farmer-general, was held to be primâ facie evidence of the appointment of the latter to that situation (f).

Upon an indictment for bigamy, actual proof of the marriage is requisite, although the prisoner has by cohabitation, and otherwise, acknowledged the first marriage, and although such proof would be sufficient for the purpose of a civil action (g), except for adultery.

CHURCHES.

Act for building, 1 & 2 W. 4, c. 38.

CHURCHWARDENS (h).

Two churchwardens elected for the township, B. may maintain an action against the late churchwardens of that township for money remaining in their hands, without joining the other late or present churchwardens for the rest of the parish, separate rates being made for the several townships (i).

COIN.

Proof of currency.

To prove the allegation that the coin specified was the current coin of the realm, it is not in general necessary to prove either the indenture *between the king and the master of the mint (k), or the king's proclamation (l), to give it currency. For the fact, that the money is the king's (d) Bevan v. Williams, 3 T. R. 635, (n). (e) R. v. Lewis, 2 St. Tr. 801.

*310

(f) Radford, qui tam. v. Mackintosh, qu. 3 T. R. 632, against the opinion of Chambre, J. 1 N. R. 211. See other instances, tit. Admission; and see Phill. 181.

(g) Vid. infra, tit. Polygamy.—Criminal Conversation.

(h) Churchwardens are a quasi corporatum to take goods for the use of the poor, Vin. Ab. tit. Churchwardens; or of the parish, 12 H. 7, 29, a. But they are incapable of purchasing lands, except by particular statutes, or by special custom, Co. Litt. 3, a; as by 9 G. 1, c. 7, for workhouses; by 59 G. 3, c. 12, s. 12, the churchwardens and overseers may provide land for the employment of the poor. By the stat. 55 G. 3, c. 137, property in goods provided for the use of the poor is vested in the overseers. As to the actions which they may maintain, see Com. Dig. Eglise, [F.] 3. By the statute 54 G. 3, c. 170, s. 8, overseers may sue on securities to indemnify against bastards. Where land belonging to a parish was occupied by A., who paid rent to the churchwardens, and they executed a lease of the same land to B., and gave notice of the lease to A., it was held that B. could not recover against A. for use and occupation. For they are not by law a corporation to hold lands, and the stat. 59 G. 3, c. 12, s. 17, which enacts, that the churchwardens and overseers, shall accept, take, and hold in the nature of a body corporate, for and on the behalf of the parish, all buildings, lands, and hereditaments belonging to such parish, does not extend to such a case. Philips v. Pearce,[1] 5 B. & C. 433; and held that A. was not estopped from denying B.'s title. Ibid. It is contrary to the duty of an overseer to borrow money for parochial purposes. Massey v. Knowles and others,[2] 3 Starkie's C. 65. They are a corporation at common law, Str. 52. The canons say they shall be chosen by the parson and the parishioners; and if they disagree, then one by the parson and one by the parishioners, Ib. Burn's Eccl. Law, tit. Churchwardens. One alone cannot release, nor give away the goods of the church. Cro. J. 234; Burn's Eccl. Law, tit. Churchwardens. Both together cannot dispose of goods, or do any other act to the disadvantage of the church. Com. Dig. Eglise, [F.] 3; 1 Rol. 893, l, 20; Ib. 426.

(i) Astle v. Thomas,[3] 2 B. & C. 271; and see 4 Sid. 281–2; Com. Dig. tit. Eglise, [F.] 2; Turner v. Baynes, 2 H. B. 559.

(k) The weight, alloy, impression, and denomination of money are regularly settled by indenture between the king and the master of the mint, which has been sometimes followed by a proclamation as a more solemn mode of giving it currency. East's P. C. 149; 1 Hale, 101, et seq.; MS. 46.

(l) East's P. C. 149; 1 Hale, 101, 6, 7, 8, 204.

(1) [In Connecticut a clergyman in the celebration of marriage is a public civil officer; and his acts in that capacity are admissible, as prima facie evidence of his official character. Goshen v. Stonington, 3 Conn. Rep. 209.]

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xi. 264. [2]Id. xiv. 164. [3]Id. ix. 83.

money, and current within the realm, is one of general notoriety, and may be found, it seems, on evidence of common usage (m). Where, however, a new species of coin has lately been issued with a new impression, which is not familiar to the people, it may be desirable to give more precise evidence of the fact, by means of the indentures, or by the testimony of an officer of the mint cognizant of the new coin, and of the stamps used, or by similar evidence (n). And where by any statute, such as the stat. 37 Geo. 3, c. 126, s. 1, relative to a new coinage, the king's proclamation is essential, it ought to be proved (o).

Any coin once legally made and issued by the king's authority, continues to be the current coin of the country until it be recalled, notwithstanding any change in the authority by which it was so constituted (p).

A recall is proved by proclamation, or by an act of parliament enacting it; and it seems that long disuse is presumptive evidence of a recall (q). And on the other hand, where a proclamation is essential, long-continued and approved usage of the coin would be evidence of a legal commencement by proclamation (r).

Proof of the counterfeiting.

Whether there has been a counterfeiting of real coin is a matter of fact for the consideration of the jury; in consideration of law there should be such a resemblance as may in the ordinary course of circulation impose upon the king's subjects; a variation in the inscription, effigies, or arms, done probably with intent to evade the law, is yet within it, and so is the counterfeiting in a different metal, if in appearance it be made to resemble the true coin (s) (A). It is even unnecessary that there should be any impression upon the counterfeit coin, if there be evidence to the jury in fact that the counterfeit is of the likeness and similitude of the lawful current coin (t). It must, however, appear that the coin was perfected sufficiently for circulation; and therefore, where a stamp had been impressed on an irregular piece of metal not rounded, and in an unfinished and incomplete state for currency, it was held that the offence had not been consummated (u).

Under the stat. 8 & 9 Will. 3, c. 26, it was held, that the colouring blanks with such materials that when rubbed they resembled coin, was a colouring within the statute, before the resemblance had been actually produced by so rubbing the coin (x).

In the case of treasons relating to the coin, one witness was sufficient (y).

*Upon an indictment for having in possession implements for coining (a), *311

(m) Ibid. 1 Hale, 192, 197, 213.
(n) East's P. C. 149.
(o) Ibid.
(p) 1 Hale, 122; East's P. C. 148.
(q) East's P. C. 149.
(r) East's P. C. 150. For the various instances in which a proclamation is necessary, see East's P. C. 149. It is unnecessary to mention any of them here, except the stat. 37 Geo. 3, c. 126, s. 1, relative to new copper coinage, which renders a proclamation essential.
(s) East's P. C. 164. See Ridgeley's Case, East's P. C. 171; Lennard's Case, Leach, 85; East's P. C. 170.
(t) R. v. Welsh, Leach, 293; East's P. C. 164.
(u) Varley's Case, Leach, 71; 2 Bl. 632; East's P. C. 164. See R. v. Harris, Leach, 126.
(x) R. v. Case, East's P. C. 165.
(y) 1 Hale, 221; Fost. 239; East's P. C. 187. Such offences are no longer treasons. See st. 2 W. 4, c. 34, and 7 W. 4, and 1 Vict. c. 90; and see the Appendix, tit. COIN.
(a) See the stat. 8 & 9 Will. 3, c. 26, s. 1, 5, 7; and now the stat. 2 W. 4, c. 34.

(A) (One who brightens base pieces (which are brought to him, ready formed with the impression and appearance of dollars, except that they are of a lead colour, and not then passable) by boiling them in ley, and rubbing them with a woollen cloth, and subjecting them to other processes, thereby rendering them, by their resemblance to real dollars, more fit for circulation, is guilty of forgery. He completes the offence, and thereby subjects to the operation of the law, not only himself, but all those who acted a part, and were present assisting at the transaction from beginning to end, or who did anything thought necessary by themselves, to impose on the public by making the base coin resemble the true. Raswick v. Commonwealth, 2 Virg. Cas. 356.)

it is not necessary to prove that they have been actually used for making money (b).

Where it appeared that the object of the prisoner was to coin foreign money, and not the current coin of the realm, a majority of the Judges held that the fact amounted to a sufficient excuse, but Mr. J. Foster and Lord Hardwicke were of a different opinion (c).

Proof of putting off, &c.

Upon an indictment for knowingly uttering counterfeit coin (d), it was not sufficient upon an indictment under the stat. 8 & 9 Will. 3, c. 26, to prove a mere tender or attempt to get rid of money, which had not been accomplished, for the words of the statute, pay or put off, denote an actual passing of the money (e). Where the indictment charged the putting off various counterfeit money "for the sum of 5*s*.;" it was held to be well supported by proof that it was paid for by two half-crowns, although the agreement was for a sovereign for 4*s*., and 3*s*. for 1*s*.; it being all one contract and one transaction (f). Under the same statute it was unnecessary, in order to satisfy the allegation that the money was milled money, to show that the money was actually milled, that is, that it was passed through a mill or press to be formed into a plate of proper thickness, to be cut into pieces for stamping; it is sufficient if the money resemble genuine milled money, all money being now milled and not hammered (g).

Scienter.

In order to show the guilty knowledge of the defendant, evidence is admissible that the defendant uttered base coin (h) to other persons on the same day, or perhaps on other days near the time of committing the offence (A). And this, upon the general principle, that the conduct of a prisoner is admissible in evidence to prove a guilty knowledge or intention (i). In such cases, indeed, where the intention does not appear from the transaction itself, it must be inferred from other facts and circumstances. Such other utterings are therefore evidence, although they may be in themselves substantive offences. The whole demeanor of the prisoner may afford pregnant evidence of his mind and intention; for it is a general rule, that where crimes intermix, and one is evidence to prove another, the Court must go through the whole detail.

In one instance, where a man committed three burglaries on the same night, which were all connected, the prisoner having left at one place property which he stole at another, evidence was given as to all three (j).

*312 *There must, however, in such cases, be such a connection as to warrant

(b) By all the Judges, Ridgeley's Case, Leach, 172; East's P. C. 171. An instrument for making the edges, although of modern invention, but producing the same result, is an instrument within the meaning of the 8 & 9 W. 3, c. 26. Moore's Case, 1 Ry. & M. C. C. L. 122.

(c) R. v. Bell, Fost. 430; East's P. C. 169.

(d) See the form of the indictment, CRIM. PLEAD. 531, &c.

(e) Woodbridge's Case, East's P. C. 179; Leach, 251. The prisoner there had brought the coin to the house of the intended buyer, to be sold at a certain rate, and had laid them down upon the table for the buyer to count them out, and she had counted part, when the officers entered and apprehended them, before the buyer could pay for those selected; and it was held that the offence had not been completed.

(f) R. v. Hedges,[1] 3 C. & P. 411.

(g) R. v. Bunning, Leach, 708; East's P. C. 183. R. v. Dorrington, and R. v. Lazarus, Ibid.

(h) See R. v. Wylie, 1 N. R. 92. R. v. Tattersall, 1 N. R. 93, u. See tit. KNOWLEDGE.

(i) Upon an indictment for robbery in extorting money by threats, subsequent attempts are evidence to prove the quo animo. Donally's Case.

(j) Cited by Ld. Ellenborough, R. v. Wylie, 1 N. R. 94.

(A) (Where the public prosecutor on an information for passing a counterfeit coin, purporting to be a half dollar, knowing it to be counterfeit, offered evidence of the prisoner's having in his possession, at the same time an engraved paper, having the appearance of a bank-note, but not purporting to be signed or countersigned, for the purpose of showing the guilty knowledge of the prisoner charged in the information, it was held, that such evidence was inadmissible. Stalker v. The State, 9 Day's Reps. 341.)

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. xiv. 374.

the inference of knowledge in the principal case. This may arise, in the case of uttering, from proximity of time, but the more detached in point of time the previous utterings are, the less relation will they bear to that stated in the indictment. The fact that all the money uttered is from the same die, or, in the case of uttering forged notes, that they are all impressions from the same plate, is important to connect the utterings, and to indicate a guilty knowledge. The circumstance that the prisoner at the time of uttering had other counterfeit coin, (especially if it be of the same description with that uttered,) is also evidence for the same purpose (k), although not alleged in the indictment. It is, however, to be observed, that to make such circumstances evidence, there must be a strong connection in the subject-matter.

Upon an indictment for forging and uttering a bill of exchange, it was held that the prosecutor was not at liberty to prove that a bank-note which was found in the pocket of the prisoner was forged (l).

Other indications of guilty knowledge and intention, such as the taking precautions to prevent a quantity of base coin from being injured by rubbing, and the possession of powder or pith used to give to the base coin the usual appearance of coin which has been in circulation, are too obvious to require remark.

The information and proceedings before the magistrates were deemed the commencement of the suit under the 9th sect. of the stat. 8 & 9 Will. 3, c. 26, s. 6, and should be produced (m), although the indictment were for colouring, and the commitment were for counterfeiting, when the time was material.

In order to oust the prisoner of his clergy under the stat. 15 Geo. 2, c. 28, s. 23, the record of the former conviction must be proved (n). And where the second conviction is in a different county or city, it is sufficient under the 9th section of that statute to produce a transcript containing the effect and tenor of the former conviction made by the clerk of the assize, or clerk of the peace in the county or city where the first conviction was had.

And by the stat. 37 Geo. 3, c. 126, s. 5, such a transcript of conviction so certified (in case of uttering coin not current here), shall be evidence of such conviction in any other county, city or place.

The having counterfeit coin in possession, is evidence of procuring it with intent to circulate it, which is a misdemeanor (o).

COLLATERAL FACTS.

Collateral facts.

It has been seen that all facts and circumstances are admissible in evidence which are in their nature capable of affording a reasonable presumption or inference as to the disputed fact (p); and that, on the other hand, remote and collateral facts, from which no fair and reasonable inference can be drawn, are inadmissible, for they are at best useless, and may be mischievous, because they tend to abstract the attention of the jury, and frequently to prejudice and mislead them (q). It seems to be the province of the Judge, *in the exercise of a sound discretion, to discriminate between *313 such facts as are connected with the issue, and such as are merely collateral.

It is, however, frequently difficult to ascertain à priori, whether proof of a particular fact offered in evidence will or will not become material, and (k) Per Thompson, B., 1 N. R. 95.

(l) By Bayley, J., Lancaster Summ. Ass. 1820.
(m) East's P. C. 168. R. v. Willace. Ib.
(n) R. v. Rothwell, Add. Pen. St. 122.
(o) R. v. Fuller, Russ. & Ry. 308.
(p) Supra, Vol. I.
(q) Nothing is inadmissible which is material to the issue joined, to prove or disprove it (per Blackstone, J., Bl. 1169). No new matter foreign to the issue joined is admissible in evidence. Per De Grey, J. Bl. 1165. And vide Vol. I.

in such cases it is usual in practice for the Court to give credit to the assertion of the counsel who tenders such evidence, that the fact will turn out to be material.

The following are instances where the facts have been held to be insufficient to afford any inference as to the fact in dispute.

The time at which one tenant pays his rent is not evidence to show at what time another tenant pays his rent (r).

A custom in one parish, archdeaconry, or manor, is no evidence of the same custom in another (s). For in these and other such cases there is no such connection between the fact and the issue as to afford a reasonable inference from the one to the other. Where, on the other hand, such facts are by any general link connected with the issue, they become evidence. Thus, where all the manors within a particular district are held under the same tenure, and the issue is upon some incident to that tenure, the custom of one manor is evidence to prove that the same custom exists in another (t).

Where the issue is as to a particular right upon a common, evidence is inadmissible of the existence of such right on an adjoining piece of common, unless a connection between them be proved, and the right be claimed on both (u).

Where the question is one of skill and judgment, evidence may be given of other facts, which, although in other respects collateral, are, by means of the skill and judgment of the witness, connected with and tend to elucidate the issue (x).

A collateral fact is not in general evidence to discredit a witness (y). But where a witness swore that a party had acknowledged two intruments to have been made by him, evidence was admitted that one of them was forged (z). So evidence of character is in many instances admissible (a). So collateral facts are admissible to prove intention, malice, or guilty knowledge (b).

In an action for a malicious prosecution, a publication by the defendant, on the subject of the prosecution, is evidence to prove the malice. So, although acts done subsequent to a contract cannot alter the nature of the contract, they may be adduced to show what the contract was, if it be doubtful (c); therefore an admission of a debt by the acceptance of bills of exchange by partners, in payment of goods sold, is evidence to show the fact of a sale to the partners (d). So where the meaning of the terms of an agreement is doubtful, and depends on custom or usage, collateral evidence is admissible to explain them (e). So collateral evidence is admissible to show the probability of a surrender by a tenant for life, where the possession has long accompanied the recovery (f) (A).

*314 *In order to prove that the acceptor of a bill of exchange knew the payee to be a fictitious person, evidence is admissible to show that the acceptor

(r) Carter v. Pryke, Peake's C. 95.
(s) Cowp. 808. Ruding v. Newell, Str. 957, 601, 662; Fort. 41; Doug. 425. Unless the custom be general.
(t) Str. 652. Duke of Somerset v. France, 3 Keb. 90; Fost. 41, 44; Doug. 495; Cowp. 808.
(u) 4 T. R. 157. Morewood v. Wood.
(x) The Wells Harbour Case, M. 23 G. 3.
(y) See Vol. I.; and R. v. Watson,[1] 2 Starkie's C. 116.
(z) Ann. 311.
(a) See tit. CHARACTER.
(b) See tit. COIN.
(c) Saville v. Robertson, 4 T. R. 720.
(d) 1 T. R. 720.
(e) See tit. CUSTOM.
(f) See 2 Saund. 42, 7.

(A) (The character of a creditor for strictness and closeness in the collection of his debts, may be given in evidence as a circumstance to show that a debt has been paid, after eight years have elapsed. Leiper v. Erwin, 5 Yerger, 37.)

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. iii. 273.

had accepted similar bills before they could, according to their date, have arrived from the place of date (g). And similar evidence is admissible to prove that the indorsee had a general authority from the acceptor to fill up bills with the name of a fictitious payee (h).

COMMENCEMENT OF ACTION. See TIME.

COMMON.

Common, or right of common, is an incorporeal hereditament, which consists in a profit which a man has in the lands of another.

Common is chiefly of four sorts: of pasture, piscary, turbary, and estovers (i).

Common of pasture, is a right of feeding one's beasts in another's land; and it is either appendant, appurtenant, or in gross (j).

Common appendant is of common right (k), and it may be claimed in pleading as appendant, without laying a prescription. But appendancy implies a prescription (l). It cannot be claimed, except in the lord's wastes (m), for the claimant's own commonable cattle, levant and couchant, upon the land (n). Appendant.

Rights of common appurtenant to the claimant's land are altogether independent of tenure; they may be claimed in other lordships; and for cattle not commonable; may be claimed by grant as well as by prescription, and either for cattle levant and couchant, or for a stinted number not levant and couchant (o). And may be claimed as well by grant within legal memory as by prescription (p). Appurtenant.

Common in gross may also be claimed by either grant or prescription. In gross.

As all these rights depend either upon a prescription or a grant (q) actually proved or presumed, much of the evidence on this subject is referable to the more general heads of evidence of grants and prescriptions. It is obvious, that unless a grant can be expressly proved, such rights must in general be *supported by evidence of usage (r). No such right of common appendant exists but for such cattle as are levant and couchant (s). So many are levant and couchant as the land, to which the common is appurtenant, will maintain in winter (t); and the common cannot be claimed as appendant to a house without any curtilage or land (u). And therefore, *315 Levancy and couchancy.

(g) 2 H. B. 288. (h) Ibid.

(i) Finch's L. 157; Co. Litt. 122; 2 Inst. 86; 2 Com. 32.

(j) Co. Litt. 122; 2 Com. 33. Common pur cause of vicinage is not strictly a right of common. It happens where the inhabitants of contiguous townships have usually intercommuned with each other, the beasts of the one straying mutually into the other's fields, without any molestation from either. It is a permissive right, intended to excuse what is, in strictness, a trespass in both, and to prevent a multiplicity of suits. 2 Com. 33. Musgrave v. Cave, Willes, 322.

(k) See 2 Inst. 86; 2 Com. 33. When the lords of manors originally granted out parcels of lands to tenants, the latter could not plough or manure the land without beasts; the beasts could not be sustained without pasture; and pasture could not be had but in the lands, wastes, and in the fallow lands of other tenants; and therefore the law annexed the right of common as inseparably incident to a grant of the lands for commonable cattle, i. e. beasts of the plough, or such as manure the ground. 2 Com. 33.

(l) Hargrave's note, 2 Inst. 122, a, n. A copyholder who has common in a waste without the manor, has it annexed to the land, and not to his customary estate, and must prescribe in a que estate through his lord. Berwick v. Matthews,[1] 5 Taunt. 365.

(m) 2 Inst. 85; 1 Roll. 396; 4 Co. 37. (n) Ibid. and Burr. 320. Benson v. Chester, 8 T. R. 396.

(o) 4 Burr. 2431; 1 Rol. 401, l. 15; 2 Cro. 27; 2 Mod. 185. (p) Cowlam v. Slack, 15 East, 108.

(q) Cro. Car. 482; F. N. B. 180: Bac. Ab. Common, [A.] 2.

(r) See 12 Vin. Ab. [T.] b. 18, pl. 3. Litt. R. 295.

(s) Bac. Ab. Common, [A.] 2.

(t) Per Coke, J. Noy, 30; Vent. 54; 5 T. R. 46. Shakespear v. Peppin, 6 T. R. 741.

(u) Scholes v. Hargrave, 5 T. R. 46; and per Buller, J. Ibid. The cases, Salk. 169, 2 Brownl. 101, Emerton v. Selby, 2 Ld. Raym. 1015, Noy, 30, are consistent with this doctrine, for in all of them the Courts say that they will intend that messuage or cottage includes land.

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. i. 135.

where a plaintiff in an action for the disturbance of his right of common, claimed the right for all commonable catttle levant and couchant, and it appeared that the house of which he was the owner had neither land, curtilage, nor stable, belonging to it, the plaintiff was nonsuited (x). And so, although the declaration, or plea of justification, allege the right of common to be appendant to a messuage, it must be proved that there is at least a curtilage belonging to it, on which the cattle may be levant and couchant (y).

But an allegation of right of common for all the plaintiff's cattle levant and couchant is supported although the common be not sufficient to feed all the cattle for a length of time (z).

Where the declaration in an action for disturbance of the plaintiff's right of common alleged that he was possessed of a messuage and land, with the appurtenances, and by reason thereof ought to have common of pasture, it was held that he was entitled to recover pro tanto, although it appeared that he was possessed of land only (a).

But in order to prove that the cattle in question are levant and couchant, it must be proved on an issue taken on the fact that they are connected with the land on which they are so alleged to be levant and couchant (b). In the case of a distress, those cattle only are said to be levant and couchant which have been there for a space of time long enough for them to have lain down and risen up again. But in a case of right of common appendant, levancy and couchancy is merely a mode of ascertaining the number of cattle which are entitled to the right of common (c), and actual levancy and couchancy need not be proved in an action for disturbance.

The plaintiff alleged a right of common of pasture for all commonable cattle levant and couchant on 100 acres of land in the plaintiff's possession, part of a certain common field over the said common field, every year when the same was sown with corn, after the corn was reaped, gathered, and carried away, until the said field, or some part thereof, was again sown with corn. This was held to be supported by proof that the plaintiff was a part-owner with the defendant and others, of a common field upon which, as stated in the declaration, the occupiers turned their cattle, the number being in proportion to the extent of their respective lands within the common field, although such cattle were not maintained upon the land during *316 *winter, and although the number was in proportion to the extent, and not the produce, of the land in respect of which the right was claimed (d). A right for all commonable cattle is proved by evidence of use by all the cattle which the party had, although he never had any sheep (e). It must also be proved that the cattle are the party's own cattle, or at least that he has a special property in them (f); and, in the case of common appendant, that they are commonable cattle.

Where the right of common is claimed by an inhabitant of a particular place in right of inhabitancy, he can claim for such only as are levant and couchant (g).

(x) Scholes v. Hargreaves, 5 T. R. 46, by Ld. Kenyon, C. J.; and the Court of K. B. afterwards approved of the nonsuit.

(y) Sir W. Jones, 227.

(z) Willis v. Ward,[1] 2 Chitty, 297.

(a) Ricketts v. Salwey, 2 B. & A. 360. And see Bower v. Hill, 2 Scott, 535.

(b) 1 Will. Saund. 346, c, in note.

(c) See the judgment of Bayley, J., Cheeseman v. Hardham, 1 B. & A. 706. It need not be proved that the land was actually used for supporting the cattle. Bolam v. Atkinson, cor. Bayley, J., Northd. Summ. Ass. 1827, i. e. in an action for disturbance. An allegation of a right of common for all commonable cattle "levant and couchant," is proved by a grant of reasonable common of pasture.

(d) Cheeseman v. Hardham, 1 B. & A. 706.

(e) Manifold v. Pennington,[2] 4 B. & C. 161.

(f) Bro. Common, 47; 2 Show. 328; 1 Wil. Saund. 346, c.

(g) 1 Roll. Ab. 308; 1 Will. Saund. 346, e, (3).

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xviii. 341. [2]Id. x. 301.

Although a plaintiff in an action for disturbance of his right of common, whether against a commoner or stranger, may declare upon his possession only (h), (for possession is sufficient against a wrong-doer,) he must on the trial prove his right of common (i), such as he has alleged it to be in the declaration (j). And if the right to use the common for commonable cattle be subject to a condition precedent of making a money payment to the lord of the manor, it must be so alleged; for although the title need not be shown, the right must be stated (k). Disturbance—Title.

Proof of the uninterrupted enjoyment of a common for twenty years will in general, as in the case of other easements, be evidence to raise a legal presumption of a right by prescription, or at least by grant (l). An enjoyment for a shorter period may or may not afford such a presumption, according to the circumstances which support or rebut the right (m).

If the plaintiff should unnecessarily state his title to the right in the declaration, it seems that, provided he prove a title to the particular right claimed, the variance will not be fatal; for the disturbance is the gist of the action, and the title is mere inducement, and not traversable (n).

*In such an action against a stranger, or against a commoner for depasturing supernumerary cattle (o), it does not appear to be necessary for the plaintiff to prove that he has sustained any specific injury; for the consumption of the grass by the other cattle is in itself a diminution of the right and profit of the commoner, and considered to be sufficient proof of the damage alleged in the declaration; for if the other cattle had not been there, the plaintiff's cattle might have eaten every blade of grass which was consumed by the other; besides, the law considers that the right of the commoner is injured by the act, and therefore allows him to bring an action for it, to prevent a wrong-doer from gaining a right by repeated acts of encroachment (p). *317 Proof of damage.

It is said to be a general rule, that wherever an act injures another's right, and would be evidence in future in favour of the wrong-doer, an (h) Saunders v. Williams, 1 Vent. 319. Strode v. Byrt, 4 Mod. 418. Atkinson v. Teasdale, 2 Bl. R. 817; 3 Wils. 278.

(i) B. N. P. 76; 1 Will. Saund. 346, (z). (j) Ibid.

(k) Bolam v. Atkinson, cor. Bayley, J. Northd. Summ. Ass. 1827.

(l) See tit. Disturbance—Grant—Prescription. Also 2 Will. Saund. 175, d. Lewis v. Price, cor. Wilmot, J. Worcester Spring Ass. 1761; 2 Will. Saund. 175, a. Darwin v. Upton, Ibid. Bealy v. Shaw, 6 East, 214. Martin v. Goble, 1 Camp. 323. The plaintiff being possessed of a house and land in E., uses right of common in the manor of W. for sixty years, the common in W. being adjacent to the common in E., it is a question of fact for the jury to determine, whether the user be referable to a mistake of the boundary, or to a legal right of common in W.; Hethcrington v. Vane,[1] 4 B. & B. 428. An inclosure made from a common twelve or thirteen years ago, with the knowledge of the steward and without objection, is evidence of a license by the lord, and ejectment cannot be brought against the tenant without previous notice to give up the land. Doe d. Foley v. Wilson, 11 East, 56. Common appurtenant may be claimed as well by grant within the time of legal memory, as by prescription, and after an unity of possession in the lord of the land in respect of which the right of common was claimed with the soil and freehold of the waste. Evidence that the lord's tenant had for fifty years past enjoyed the waste, was held to be evidence sufficient to warrant the jury in presuming a new grant of common as appurtenant, so as to support an action by the tenant for surcharging the common, and declaring on his possession of the messuage and land with the appurtenances, and that, by reason thereof, he was entitled of right to the common of pasture, as belonging and appertaining to his messuage and land; and also to support another count, in substance the same, alleging his possession of the messuage and land, and that by reason thereof he was entitled to common of pasture. Cowlam v. Slack, 15 East, 108. See also Clements v. Lambert, 1 Taunt. 205.

(m) Per Ld. Ellenborough, Bealy v. Shaw, 6 East, 214.

(n) B. N. P. 76; 4 Mod. 424; 1 Saund. 346, a, (n); Ricketts v. Salwey, 2 B. & A. 360. Yet if the plaintiff should set out an insufficient title, the declaration, it is said, would be bad. 1 Salk. 363; 2 Ld. Raym. 1230.

(o) See Atkinson v. Teasdale, 2 W. Bl. 817. Such action is maintainable although the plaintiff himself has been guilty of a surcharge. Hobson v. Todd, 4 T. R. 71.

(p) Wells v. Watling, 2 Bl. Rep. 1233. Hobson v. Todd, 4 T. R. 71. Taking away the manure dropped by the cattle is a sufficient damage. Pindar v. Wadsworth, 2 East, 254.

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. vi. 473.

action may be maintained for the invasion of the right, without proof of any specific damage (q); and this has been laid down by a writer of authority (r) to be a governing principle in these cases. As for instance, an action may be maintained for fishing in the plaintiff's several fishery, although it be neither alleged nor proved that the defendant caught any fish (s).

But if the defendant be the lord of the manor (t), or put his cattle upon the common with the lord's license, the plaintiff must prove a specific injury; and it would be insufficient to show that the cattle consumed the grass, as in an action against a stranger, without also proving that there was not a sufficiency of common left in order to support the action (u), for the lord is entitled to what remains of the gross, and may either consume it by his own cattle, or license another to depasture it; although in the case of a stranger it seems to lie on the defendant to show that a sufficiency of common is left for the plaintiff (x).

Defence. It is no defence to an action for surcharging the common that the plaintiff has also been guilty of a surcharge (y). A right of common is extin-

*318 guished *by unity of possession. A grant of land, &c. with common appurtenant, does not pass a right of common after the extinction by unity of possession, although those who have occupied the tenement since the extinction have used the common. Secus, if there had been a grant of all commons used therewith (z).

Proof under plea of justification. A plea of justification, claiming a right of common appendant for the defendant's commonable cattle levant and couchant, may be put in issue by a general replication, for it is but one entire title (a); or the plaintiff may specially traverse that they were the cattle of the defendant levant and couchant (b); and in either case the defendant must prove that the cattle are his own, or that he has a special property in them (c), for a man has no right to use the common with the cattle of a stranger, or with his own cattle levant and couchant, upon some other land, and not upon the land to which the right is appendant or appurtenant; but if he borrow cattle to compester his land, they may be put upon the common, for he has a special property in them (d). And where a man has common appurtenant for a specific number of cattle as appurtenant, it may be severed by grant and converted into a right of common in gross.

If the defendant justify under an alleged right of common, and it appear (q) 1 Will. Saund. 346, a, in note. (r) Mr. Serj. Williams, 1 Will. Saund. 346, a.

(s) Patrick v. Greenway, cor. Lawrence, J., Oxford Spring Ass. 1796; cited 1 Will. Saund. 346, b.

(t) See the observations of Buller, J., in Hobson v. Todd, 4 T. R. 73; Smith v. Feverell, 2 Mod. 6; and 1 Will. Saund, 346, b, in note.

(u) Smith v. Peverell, 2 Mod. 6; 1 Saund. 346, b, (n). The plaintiff may declare against a license of the lord, as a stranger. Hobson v. Todd, 4 T. R. 71. And it lies on the defendant to prove the license, and sufficiency of common left. 1 Saund. 346, b. The lord may, by special custom, dig clay-pits, or do other acts in diminution of the right of common, or empower others to do so, without showing a sufficiency of common left. Bateson v. Green, 5 T. R. 411. Clarkson v. Woodhouse, 5 T. R. 412. Place v. Jackson,[1] 4 D. & R. 418. So by special custom he may, by consent of the homage, let parts for building. Folkard v. Hemmett, 5 T. R. 417. A commoner cannot justify cutting trees planted by the lord on the waste; he must bring case or an assize. Kirby v. Sadgrove, 1 B. & P. 13; 3 Anstr. 892; 6 T. R. 483. As to the right of the lord of a manor to approve wastes under the Statute of Merton, see Duberly v. Page, 2 T. R. 391; Glover v. Lane, 3 T. R. 445; Shakespear v. Peppin, 6 T. R. 741. There can be no approvement in derogation of a right of common of fishery; Grant v. Gunner, 1 Taunt. 435; nor where the tenants have a right to dig for gravel, or take estovers. Duberly v. Page, 2 T. R. 391.

(x) See the form of declaration, Herne, 125; 2 Mod. 6; 1 Lutw. 107; 3 Wils. 290; 1 Will. Saund. 146, a.; 9 Rep. 113, a.

(y) Hobson v. Todd, 4 T. R. 71.

(z) Clements v. Lambert, 1 Taunt. 205. See also Morris v. Edgington, 3 Taunt. 24.

(a) Skinn. 137; 2 Show. 328; Robinson v. Raley, 1 Burr. 316.

(b) Ibid. and Bennet v. Reeves, Willes, 227. (c) Bro. Common, 47; 2 Show. 328.

(d) Mollitor v. Trevilian, Skinn. 137; F. N. B. 180; Roll. Common, 402.

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. xvi. 204.

that the common has been inclosed for twenty years, the justification cannot be supported (e).

A plea claiming a prescriptive right of common for a certain number of beasts, generally, is not supported by evidence of a right of common of vicinage (f). Variance.

Proof of a prescription limited by an exception will not support a general prescription. Thus, proof of a prescription for all cattle, at all times of the year, (sheep only excepted for a certain time), will not support a prescription claimed for all cattle, &c. at all times of the year (g).

On issue joined, as to a right of common, the defendant may give in evidence a release of the right of common, although he might have pleaded it (h). Such a release however will not avail where the common belongs to land which is entailed, and which cannot pass by release any more than the land itself (i). Proof on issue joined on the right.

Upon issue taken in replevin on a replication by the plaintiff, alleging a prescription for commonable cattle levant and couchant, and averring that the cattle in question were levant and couchant, the burthen of proof lies on the plaintiff. If in such case the cattle have been distrained by the lord (k), and on the trial it appeared that some of the cattle were levant and couchant, *and that others were not, the issue would be found for the lord (l); and so it would be in trespass (m) for taking the cattle. But if in such a case the lord brought an action of trespass quare clausum fregit, and the defendant prescribed for his commonable cattle levant and couchant, and averred that he put such his commonable cattle levant and couchant upon the common, and upon issue taken, it appeared that some were and some were not levant and couchant, the defendant would be entitled to a verdict, the plaintiff having traversed the levancy and couchancy, instead of new assigning the trespass, by stating that he brought his action for depasturing the common with other cattle; and this upon the general principle, that in trespass it is sufficient for the defendant to prove that which excuses the trespass, although not to the extent of the number or amount specified in the declaration (n). Levant and Couchant. *319

The defendant cannot give his right of common in evidence under the general issue in trespass (o).

It has already been seen, that evidence of reputation is admissible to prove customary rights where many are interested (p), although such evidence be not admissible to prove a private prescriptive right. Reputation.

On issue joined on a custom pleaded that a customary tenant shall have common of pasture on the plaintiff's land, evidence is admissible of a cus-

(e) Creach v. Wilmot, 2 Taunt. 160, cited by Lawrence, J. Hawke v. Baron, 2 Taunt. 156. And see tit. Trespass.

(f) 12 Vin. Ab. Common, T. b. 18. L. E. 235, pl. 37; 13 Hen. 7, 13; supra, and tit. Variance.—Prescription.

(g) Carth. 241.

(h) Clayton, 9—8, C. 1, Atkinson's Case.

(i) Clayton, 9—8, C. 1, Atkinson's Case.

(k) A commoner cannot distrain the surplusage where another commoner puts more cattle on the common than are levant and couchant; 1 Roll. Ab. 320, 405, pl. 5; Yelv. 104; 2 Bulst. 117; and semble, he cannot, although none of the cattle have been levant and couchant. 1 Will. Saund. 346, d. Yet qu. where the right is limited to a certain number. Hall v. Harding, 4 Burr. 2431. Levancy and couchancy are incident to common appendant as well as appurtenant, and can be claimed only in respect of cattle sufficient to plough and manure the tenant's arable land. Bennett v. Reeve, Willes, 227; Co. Litt. 122, a.

(l) 2 Roll. Ab. 706, p. 41. Sloper v. Allen, 1 Brownl. 171; 1 Will. Saund. 346, d.

(m) But qu. whether in such case the commoner might not help himself, by entering a nolle prosequi as to the cattle which were not levant and couchant, and proceed for the rest?

(n) See tit. Trespass; and 2 Will. Saund. 346, d.

(o) Co. Litt. 283, a; Gil. Ev. 216.

(p) Vol. I. tit. Refutation. Weeks v. Sparke, 1 M. & S. 679; Carth. 181. For further observations, see tit. Custom.

tom for the lord to inclose parcels, and of a grant to the plaintiff under such circumstances (q).

Competency. The general rule is, that if the issue be on a customary right of common, by the establishment of which the witness would be benefited, he is incompetent; but that where he gives evidence to establish the private prescriptive right of another, he is competent (r). Thus, if the issue be on a right of common which depends upon a custom pervading the whole manor, the evidence of the commoner is inadmissible, because, as the right depends upon the custom, the record in that action would be evidence in another action brought by that very witness to try the same right (s) (1). In such a case, although the witness be not a party to the action, yet he claims under the same title with the party whose witness he is, and thereby immediately establishes his own title (t). So where the issue was upon the question whether the defendant was bound ratione tenuræ to repair a fence contiguous to a common on which the plaintiff prescribed for common appurtenant, it was held that another commoner was not a competent witness (u). Neither is a commoner competent to extend the limits of such rights. But the same reason does not apply where common is claimed by prescription in right of a particular estate; for if A. has a prescriptive right of common belonging to his estate, it does not follow that B., who has also an estate in the same manor, has the same right; and the judgment for A. would not be evidence for B. (x). So if A., B., C. and D., claim common in Dale, exclusively of *all other persons, and the right of A. comes in dispute, B. may be a witness to prove A.'s right of common there, for in effect he charges himself by proving that another has a right of common there (y).

*320

One who claims common pur cause of vicinage is not, it is said, incompetent; for this is no interest, but only an excuse for a trespass (z).

CONFESSION. See ADMISSION.

CONFIDENTIAL COMMUNICATION.

General rule. THE rule that a counsel, solicitor or attorney, shall not be permitted to divulge any matter which has been communicated to him in professional confidence, has already been adverted to as one that is founded on the most obvious principles of convenience (a). That is the privilege of the client, and is founded on the policy of the law, which will not permit a person to betray a secret which the law has entrusted to him (b). To allow such an (q) Arlett v. Ellis,[1] 7 B. & C. 346. See further, The Attorney General v. Gauntlett, 3 Y. & J. 93.

(r) 3 T. R. 32; 1 T. R. 302. (s) Per Buller, J., 1 T. R. 302.
(t) B. N. P. 283; and see The Duke of Somerset v. France, 1 Str. 658.
(u) Anscombe v. Shore, 1 Taunt. 261.
(x) Per Buller, J., 1 T. R. 303. "And yet," adds the learned Judge, "there are cases which lay it down as a general rule, that one commoner cannot be a witness for another."
(y) Per Holt, L. C. J., in Hockley v. Lamb, 1 Ld. Raym. 731.
(z) B. N. P. 285. Where one of two adjoining commons, with common of vicinage, is fenced off but incompletely, so as still to admit of cattle straying from one to the other by means of a highway, the common by vicinage still continues. Gullett v. Lopez, 13 East, 348.
(a) Vol. I. tit. PRINCIPLES OF EVIDENCE.
(b) B. N. P. 284; Rayner Read. 111; 9 St. Tr. 387. R. v. Earl of Anglesea.

(1) [In trespass quare clausum fregit, where the defence was that the locus in quo was, and had been for sixty years, used by the inhabitants of Staten Island as a free and common fishery; an inhabitant of the island was held not to be a competent witness for the defendant. Jacobson v. Fountain & al. 2 Johns. 170. And a release by such inhabitant of his right to the fishery will not restore his competency, Ibid.] examination would be a manifest hindrance to all society, commerce, and conversation (c) (1).

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. xiv. 53.

With respect to such communications, the mouth of the witness is for ever sealed, and he cannot reveal them at any time or in any proceeding, although the client be no party to it, however improbable it may be under the circumstances that any injury can result to him from the disclosure (d), and although the relation of attorney and client has ceased by the dismissal of the attorney (e).

The rule is strictly confined to counsel (f), solicitors and attornies (g) (2). It has even been held at Nisi Prius, that where a communication was made to the witness under the mistaken idea that he was an attorney, when the fact was otherwise, the witness was bound to reveal it. It extends, indeed, to a communication made to the clerk of an attorney (h); to an interpreter between a client and his counsel or attorney, for this may be essential to the communication between the parties, and the privilege rests upon the same grounds (i). But it does not, it seems, extend to a communication made to an attorney, which has been accidentally overheard by another witness (k), for this is owing to the negligence of the client himself (l). Nor to a letter written by the attorney to the client, and indorsed by the client (m). Nor to a communication made to an interpreter in the absence of the *attorney (n). Nor to what took place at the execution of a deed (o). Nor to an admission of a debt made by the attorney to the adverse party by direction of his client (p). Nor to proof of indentity (q).

To what persons the rule is confined.

*321

(c) See 12 Vin. Ab. B. a. pl. 1.

(d) Wilson v. Rastall, 4 T. R. 753. Per Buller, J., 4 T. R. 759. Vide etiam, Sloman v. Herne, 2 Esp. C. 695. Rex v. Withers, 2 Camp. 579. Maddock v. Maddock, 1 Ves. 262. Bishop of Winton v. Fournier, 2 Ves. 446.

(e) R. v. Withers, 2 Camp. 178; [6 Ves. 280.]

(f) In the case of Foote v. Hayne, 1 R. & M. 165, in an action for breach of promise of marriage, the L. C. J. would not allow the law-clerk of defendant's counsel to be examined, to prove the fact of the counsel's retainer by the defendant.

(g) R. v. Duchess of Kingston, 11 St. Tr. 246. [Mills v. Griswold, 1 Root. 388.]

(h) Taylor v. Foster,[1] 2 C. & P. 195.

(i) Madame Du Barré's Case, cited 4 T. R. 756.

(k) Wilson v. Rastall, 4 T. R. 753.

(l) Gainsford v. Grammar, 2 Camp. 10.

(m) Meyer v. Sefton,[2] 2 Starkie's C. 274.

(n) Du Barré v. Livette, Peake's C. 77.

(o) 5 Esp. C. 52. See Bicknell v. Keppell, 1 N. R. 21.

(p) Turner v. Railton, 2 Esp. C. 474.

(q) 2 D. & R. 347.

(1) [The earliest case that has been found on this subject is Berd v. Lovelace, 19 Eliz. Cary's Rep. 88, thus—Thomas Hawtry was served with a subpœna to testify his knowledge touching the cause in variance; and made oath that he had been and yet is a solicitor in this suit, and hath received several fees of the defendant; which being informed to the Master of the Rolls, it is ordered that the said Thomas Hawtry shall not be compelled to be deposed touching the same; and that he shall be in no danger of any contempt touching the not executing of the said process. In Austen v. Vesey, Cary's Rep. 89, for that it appeared by affidavit, that the witness was solicitor in the same cause to one of the parties, he was discharged, and not admitted to be examined. In Kelway v. Kelway, Cary's Rep. 126, upon certificate that Roger Taylor refused to be examined, because he solicits the plaintiff's cause; it is therefore ordered, that the defendant shall examine, before one of the commissioners of the court, the said Roger Taylor upon any interrogatory, which shall not be touching the secrecy of the title, or of any other matter which he knoweth as solicitor only. In Dennis v. Codrington, Cary's Rep. 143, the plaintant seeks to have Master Oldsworth examined touching a matter in variance, wherein he hath been of counsel; it is ordered he shall not be compelled by subpœna, or otherwise, to be examined upon any matter concerning the same, wherein he the said Mr. Oldsworth was of counsel, either by the indifferent choice of both parties, or with either of them by reason of any annuity or fee. See also Wilson v. Grove, Tothill, 177. These early decisions in chancery, though they seem to have been generally overlooked, contain the principles which are applied at this day.]

(2) [The rule does not apply to a student in the office of an attorney or counsellor. Andrews & al. v. Solomon & al. 1 Peters' Rep. 356.] {But it has been lately decided in England, that the rule respecting privileged communications extends to an attorney's clerk acting on behalf of his master, as well as to the attorney himself. Taylor v. Foster, 2 Carr. & Payne, 195.}

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xii. 85. [2]Id. iii. 343.

To what communications.

The rule is not confined to communications made in the course of a cause, or with a view to a cause (r); but extends to all cases where the party applies for professional assistance (s), in respect of a cause contemplated, or matter in dispute or controversy (A). Though not to cases where the attorney is employed in matters which are not professional, as in a treaty for the purchase of an estate. The rule extends to facts which the attorney becomes acquainted with in the character of an attorney, although the communication was not made by his client (t). Such as *322 communications made *by third persons who accompanied the client when he came to consult the attorney (u); and to the contents of a written instrument, which he has by delivery from his client (x). No other commu-

(r) Cromacke v. Heathcote,[1] 2 B. & B. 4. Gainsford v. Grammar, 2 Camp. 9; 6 Madd. 47. But see below note (e); and Wadsworth v. Hamshaw,[2] 2 B. & B. 5, in the note, where the contrary is said to have been decided in the Court of K. B.

(s) In Williams v. Mundie,[3] 1 Ry. & M. 34, Lord Tenterden is said to have held, that the rule extended to such communications only as were made pending a cause. In Broad v. Pitt,[4] 1 M. & M. 233, Best, C. J. said, that when called upon he should rule conformably with Lord Tenterden's ruling; but in the case of Clarke v. Clarke, 2 M. & M. 3, Lord Tenterden, C. J. held, that communications made to an attorney respecting a matter in dispute and controversy are privileged, though no cause was then commenced. His lordship, referring to what he had been supposed to have said in the case of Williams v. Mundie, observed, "I think I could not have said that it must relate to matters communicated strictly for the purpose of bringing an action, or to a cause actually existing. I certainly have been more inclined to restrict the privilege more than many other Judges; and I have been so very much in consequence of a cause to which my attention was drawn at a very early period of my professional life (before I was at the bar), which was tried on the Midland circuit, and in which Serjeant Adair went specially as counsel. It was an action for bribery; and on its appearing that a witness, who was called to prove conversations, was the attorney of the party, the Judge at once refused to allow the evidence to be gone into, and nonsuited the plaintiff. The nonsuit was set aside and a new trial had, on the ground that though the witness was the defendant's attorney, the communication was not made to him in his professional character. Bramwell v. Lucas,[5] 2 B. & C. 745, proceeded on the same principle; and accordingly an attorney there was held to be at liberty to give evidence of inquiries made of him by his client as to a mere matter of fact, for that his professional character was not then concerned. Suppose a party to consult his attorney whether or not he should bring or resist an action, I cannot doubt that such a communication would be privileged, though no suit was pending at the time. In the present case no suit was pending at the time; but after dispute had arisen, the plaintiff consulted an attorney on the subject, put documents into his hands, and steps were taken on them to render them effectual. I think that was a communication made to the attorney in his professional character, with respect to a matter then in dispute and controversy, although no cause was in existence with respect to it, and I think that such a communication is privileged." See Parkhurst v. Lowton, 2 Swanst. 199. In Hargreave v. Hutchinson, York Sum. Ass. 1834, Lyndhurst, L. C. B. said, that it had been held by the Judges, after consideration, that the rule was, that a communication to an attorney is privileged, if an action be pending or contemplated; and see 6 Madd. 47.—The Court (of Chancery) discharged so much of an order to produce papers as were sworn to be communications between the defendant and her country solicitor, and between her and her town solicitor, or between those persons either during the cause, or with reference to it, though previous to its commencement. Hughes v. Biddulph, 5 Russ. 190. So where the papers were written after the dispute had arisen, with a view to taking the opinion of counsel upon the matter in question, and which afterwards became the subject of suit. Vent v. Pacey, 4 Russ. 193. The attorney in a cause may be called on the opposite side, and asked who is his employer, in order to let in his acts and declarations. Levy v. Pope,[6] 1 M. & M. 410. Where the defendant's attorney's clerk was called merely to prove the fact of the receipt of a particular paper from the defendant, held that it was not a privileged communication. Eicke v. Nokes,[7] 1 M. & M. 305. The attorney cannot be asked whether, before the action brought, his client, the plaintiff, did not say that he would waive it. Goodlight v. Bridge, Loffft, 27.

(t) Robson v. Kemp, 5 Esp. C. 52. (u) R. v. Withers, 2 Camp. 579.

(x) Beard v. Ackerman, 5 Esp. 120.

(A) (Bailly v. Robles, 4 Mart. N. S. 362. The rule of law that counsel and attornies are not to be permitted to give evidence of facts imparted to them by their clients when acting in their professional character, is not confined to facts disclosed in relation to suits actually pending, but extends to all cases in which the counsel or attorney is applied to in the line of his profession, whether such facts were communicated with an injunction of secrecy, or for the purpose of asking advice or otherwise, unless indeed the client seemed to make his disclosures to the public, and, as it were, challenge the bystanders to hear him. Parker v. Carter et al. 4 Munf. 273. But the rule which excludes the proof of communications by a client to his counsel, is confined to cases in which the client is interested. Hamilton v. Neel, 7 Watts, 517. So also a person in no way connected with the counsel, present at a communication made to him by a client, is bound to testify. Jackson v. French, 3 Wend. 337. See note (A), Vol. I. pages 69 and 70.)

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. vi. 1. [2]Id. vi. 2. [3]Id. xxi. 375. [4]Id. xxii. 300. [5]Id. ix. 233. [6]Id. xxii. 343. [7]Id. xxii. 314.

nication, however confidential in its nature, is privileged, either by the relation or rank of the parties.

All other professional persons, whether physicians, surgeons, or divines, are bound to disclose the secrets which have been reposed in them in the practice of their profession, when called upon to do so for the purposes of justice (y). It has been held that a Roman catholic priest is bound to reveal secrets confided to him in the course of confession (z) (1). So a steward, servant, or private friend is bound to disclose a communication, however confidential it may be in its nature (a) (2). And a peer has no greater privilege in this respect than a commoner (b). In one case, indeed, it is reported that Lord Holt would not permit a trustee for the plaintiff and defendant, who had been employed by them in the purchase of offices, to be examined, on the ground that he should not be allowed to betray his trust (c). This, however, seems to be inconsistent with later authorities.

In a late case, where a clerk to the commissioners of the property-tax was required to prove the defendant to be a collector, and he objected, because he had taken an oath of office not to disclose what he should learn as clerk concerning the property-tax, except with the consent of the commissioners, or by force of an Act of Parliament, it was held that he was bound to give his testimony; and that the evidence which a witness was called upon to give in a court of justice was to be considered as an implied exception in the Act (d).

Time of the communication.

As the rule is one of policy or necessity, and operates to the exclusion of evidence, its operation is strictly limited to communications made in the course of professional business, pending the relation of counsel or attorney, and client; for the policy on which the rule is founded extends no farther; and therefore it does not extend to any communication, although made to an attorney, if he was not employed as such, but only as a mere agent at the time (e); nor to any which was made before the commencement of the suit, whilst the witness did not act in the capacity of an attorney or clerk in court (f); nor to a gratuitous communication made to an attorney after the termination of the suit. Thus, upon an action brought to recover a sum paid on the compromise of a cause after interlocutory judgment, and the execution of an inquiry, it was held that the attorney in the first cause might be called upon to disclose, that his client, after the termination of that (y) Wilson v. Rastall, 4 T. R. 753. R. v. Duch. of Kingston, 11 St. Tr. 243; Keb. 505; Vent. 197; Bac. Ab. Ev. A. 2; Skinn. 404.

(z) Peake's C. 77. Butler v. Moore, cor. Sir Mich. Smith, bart. Master of the Rolls, Macnall. 253. Vaillant v. Dodemead, 2 Atk. 524.

(a) 2 Atk. 524. (b) 11 St. Tr. 246.

(c) Ld. Raym. 783. His giving such evidence would have been objectionable on another ground, since it exposed him to penalties.

(d) Lee, q. t., v. Birrell, 3 Camp. 337.

(e) Wilson v. Rastall, 4 T. R. 753; B. N. P. 284. Crofts v. Pickering, Vent. 197; 12 Vin. Ab. 38, B. a.

(f) Vaillant v. Dodemead, 2 Atk. 524.

(1) [A contrary decision was made by a court in New York. Smith's case, 2 New York City Hall Recorder, 77. See note, ibid. p. and Phillip's case, reported by W. Sampson, Esq. Confession made to a protestant divine will be received in evidence. Smith's case, ubi sup.] }Comm. v. Drake, 15 Mass. Rep. 161.{

(2) [A confidential agent or factor may be compelled to give evidence of matters confidentially communicated to him. Holmes v. Comegys, 1 Dallas, 439. {The banker of one of the parties in a cause is bound to answer what such party's balance was on a given day, as it is not a privileged communication. Lloyd v. Freshfield, 2 Carr. & Payne, 325.} So of a confidential clerk, as to facts which his situation brings to his knowledge. Corp v. Robinson, Circuit Court, Oct. 1809. Wharton's Digest, 275. {Reported 2 Wash. C. C. Rep. 289.} And any extraneous or impertinent communications, which are not instructions for conducting a case, are not privileged from disclosure, though made to counsel. Riggs v. Denniston, 3 Johns. Cas. 198. Nor information imparted to a counsellor in the character of a friend and not as counsel. Hoffman & al. v. Smith, 1 Caines's Rep. 157. See Calkins v. Lee, 2 Root, 363. Sherman v. Sherman, 1 Root, 486.]

cause, said that his demand arose upon a lottery transaction (g) (1). Nor in general to any communication, although made to an attorney, which is not made in professional confidence. In the case of Annesley v. The Earl of Anglesea, it was held, that a conversation which had been held twenty years ago between the Earl of Anglesea and his attorney, as to the prosecution *of the plaintiff for murder, might be inquired into, since it was not matter of professional confidence (h). Nor to any fact which the attorney acquired by any other means than by the confidential communication by the client. Thus, an attorney is compellable to identify the person of his client (i); to prove that his client swore to and signed an answer in Chancery, upon which he is indicted for perjury (k); to prove the execution of an instrument by his client, to which he is an attesting witness (l); to prove any collateral fact within his own knowledge, independently of any professional communication; as, to prove the hand-writing of his client (m), in an action of debt upon a bond, to prove that the consideration was usurious (n); to prove, where the question is as to an erasure in a deed or will, any facts as to the state of the instrument which he knows independently of a professional communication by his client (o): or to prove the contents of a written notice to produce papers (p): in short, the attorney may disclose any matter except that which has been confidentially and professionally entrusted to him by a client (q) (2).

Nature of the communication.

*323

Waver, &c.

The privilege is that of the client, and not of the witness (r); and therefore the Court will interfere to protect the client. although the witness be willing to betray his trust (s); and a Court of Equity has ordered such (g) Cobden v. Kendrick, 4 T. R. 431.

(h) Annesley v. Earl of Anglesea, 8 St. Tr. 380. See Crofts v. Pickering, 1 Vent. 197. Oneby's Case, 12 Vin. Ab. B. a. pl. 2; March, 13; L. E. 81.

(i) R. v. Watkinson, 2 Str. 1122; B. N. P. 284; Cowp. 846.

(k) Per Ld. Mansfield, Cowp. 845.

(l) Doe v. Andrews, Cowp. 846. Every man, by attesting an instrument, pledges himself to come forward to prove it. Ibid. and Ld. Say and Sele's Case, 10 Mod. 40.

(m) 2 Haw. c. 46, s. 89.

(n) Duffin v. Smith, Peake's C. 108.

(o) B. N. P. 284; 1 Vent. 197.

(p) Spenceley v. Schullenberg, 7 East, 357. [And Mr. Day's note to that case.]

(q) It has been said that it does not extend to a communication made by a client to his counsel, where it is mere conveyance. South Sea Company v. Jolliffe, cited 2 Atk. 522.

(r) B. N. P. 284; Petrie's Case, cited 4 T. R. 751, 759.

(s) 9 T. R. 759; 2 Ves. jun. 189.

(1) [If after the relation of attorney and client has ceased, the latter voluntarily repeat what he had communicated while the relation existed, the attorney is not privileged from disclosing it. Jordan v. Hess, 13 Johns. 492.]

(2) [Where an attorney or counsellor, after the commencement of the suit, and without any communication from his client, acquires a knowledge of his hand-writing, he may be called upon to testify to its identity. Johnson v. Daverne, 19 Johns. 134. An attorney may be called upon to prove the execution of a deed intrusted to him by his client, and that it is in his possession, so as to entitle the opposite party, on his refusing to produce it after notice, to give parol evidence of its contents: But the attorney cannot be compelled to produce such deed, nor to disclose its date or contents. Brandt v. Klein, 17 Johns. 335. S. P. Jackson v. M'Vey & al. 18 Johns 330.

An attorney may give evidence that a bond was lodged with his client, by way of indemnity, or that his client expressed himself satisfied with a certain security—or any collateral facts. Heister v. Davis, 3 Yeates, 4. He may be examined whether a note put into his hands to collect was indorsed or not. Baker v. Arnold, 1 Caines' Rep. 258. So he may be compelled to disclose terms of compromise offered by him to his client's creditors. M'Tavish v. Dunning, Anthon's N. P. C. 82.

One who has signed a note as attorney for another, and had afterwards given bond for his principal to prosecute an appeal from a judgment on the note, was held not to be privileged thereby from giving evidence for the payee to prove its execution. Phelps v. Riley, 3 Conn. Rep. 266. See Caniff v. Myers, 15 Johns. 246.

An attorney or counsellor is not obliged to produce a paper, intrusted to him by his client, in order that the grand jury may inspect it on a charge of forgery against the client. Anon. 8 Mass. Rep. 370. The State v. Squires, 1 Tyler, 147. R. v. Dixon, 3 Bur. 1687. See 12 Mod. 391.][a] matter to be expunged (t). But the client may, if he will, wave this privilege, as he may any other (u). And if a counsel or attorney be called as a witness by his client, he is not protected from cross-examination as to the point upon which he has been examined in chief, although it was matter of confidential communication. But such cross-examination must be confined to the same matter, and must not be extended to other points in the cause (x).

[a] See Lessee of Rhoades v. Selin, 4 Wash. C. C. R. 715.

The rule applies, whether the question be asked upon an examination in chief, or upon cross-examination (y).

Form of the oath.

The course of proceeding in Mr. Aylott's Case was somewhat singular. He had been counsel for the defendant, and being called as a witness for the plaintiff, the Court acceded to his request that he might not be sworn in the usual way on the general oath, but only to reveal such things as he knew before he was counsel, or as had come to his knowledge since by other persons, and the particulars to which he was to be sworn were specifically proposed; viz. what he knew concerning the will in question (z). Such a precaution, however, seems to arise out of an excessive tenderness of conscience. The general obligation of the oath to declare the whole truth, must, with reference to the subject-matter and occasion of the oath, be *necessarily understood to mean the truth, so far as it ought legally to be made known (a). *324

Exceptions.

It has been seen, that where an informer makes a disclosure to a magistrate, or agent of government, neither the names of the parties to whom the information has been given, nor the nature of the communication itself, is allowed to be revealed (b).

A clerk attending on a grand jury was not allowed to reveal what was given in evidence before the inquest, the jurors themselves being sworn to keep secret all that passes before them (c.) (1).

CONFIRMATION.

If the issue in tail does any act towards carrying an agreement or contract of his ancestor, into execution, it will become binding on him, and he will be compelled in equity to perform it (d).

CONSPIRACY.

Direct evidence. Circumstantial evidence.

Upon an indictment for a conspiracy, the evidence is either direct, of a meeting and consultation for the illegal purpose charged, or more usually, from the very nature of the offence, is circumstantial. It is not necessary to prove any direct concert, or even meeting, of the conspirators (e). If several persons meet from different motives, and then join in effecting one common and illegal object, it is a conspiracy (f) (A).

(t) Sandford v. Kensington, 2 Ves. jun. 189.
(u) Phil. Ev. 108. {Merle v. Moore,[1] 2 Carr. and Payne, 275.}
(x) Vaillant v. Dodemead, 2 Atk. 524. (y) Waldron v. Ward, Styl. 449; 12 Vin. Ab. a.
(z) Sparke v. Sir Hugh Middleton, 1 Keb. 505, pl. 68; 12 Vin. Ab. B. a. pl. 4.
(a) See Paley's Moral Philosophy.
(b) Vol. I. Witness. On the trial of Stone for high treason (6 T. R. 527), Lord Grenville produced a letter of Jackson's, a fellow-conspirator, which had been transmitted to him from abroad in a confidential way, and stated that he could not possibly divulge by whom it had been communicated.
(c) Vin. Ab. Ev. 38.
(d) Com. Dig. Estate, b. 22; Co. Litt. 32; 3 Com. Dig. 41, 85. See also Doe v. Morse,[2] 1 B. & Ad. 365.
(e) 1 Bl. R. 392, 401. R. v. Cope, Str. 144. (f) R. v. Lee, MS.

(1) [In The Commonwealth v. Tilden, Feb. 1823, Norfolk County (Mass.), it was ruled by Putnam, J. that the attorney for the Commonwealth could not be called upon to testify to what passed in the grand jury's room.]

(A) (In an indictment for a conspiracy to defraud by means of false pretences, no overt act need be set

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xii. 127. [2]Id. xx. 398.

A concert may be proved by evidence of a concurrence of the acts of the defendant with those of others, connected together by a correspondence in point of time, and in their manifest adaptation to effect the same object. Such evidence is more or less strong, according to the danger, publicity, or privacy of the object of concurrence, and according to the greater or less degree of similarity in the means and measures adopted by the parties; the more secret the one, and the greater the coincidence in the other, the stronger is the evidence of the conspiracy. In general, proof of concert and connection must be given before the prisoner can be affected by the acts of others (g).

Where it appeared that there was a conspiracy to levy war in the North Riding of Yorkshire, and that there was at the same time a similar conspiracy in the West Riding, in which latter only it took place, and there was no evidence to show that those in the one Riding knew of the conspiracy in the other, it was held that the former could not be implicated in the acts of the latter (h), although they concurred at the same time to the same object.

Upon an indictment against a card-maker, his wife and family, for a conspiracy to ruin another card-maker, it was proved that each had given *325 money *to the apprentices of the prosecutor to put grease into the paste which he used, in order to spoil the cards; it was objected that no two of the defendants were ever together when this was done; but Pratt, C. J., said, that as they were all of one family, and concerned in making cards, this was evidence to go to a jury (i).

Upon the trial of an information for a conspiracy to take away a man's character, by means of a pretended communication with a ghost in Cock-lane, Lord Mansfield informed the jury that it was not necessary to prove the actual fact of conspiracy, but that it might be collected from collateral circumstances (j).

Where the charge of conspiracy is in its nature cumulative, it may be proved by evidence of repeated acts. Thus, where the charge was of a conspiracy by the defendants, to cause themselves to be believed persons of large property, for the purpose of defrauding tradesmen, and evidence was given of their having hired a house in a fashionable street, and that they represented themselves to a tradesman employed in furnishing it, as persons

(g) East's P. C. 97. A prisoner against whom the bill was ignored may, if not discharged, be called into the dock to be identified as one in company with the other prisoners (cor. Garrow, B.), R. v. Deering,[1] 5 C. & P. 165.

(h) Kel. 19; East's P. C. 97.

(i) R. v. Cope, Str. 144.

(j) R. v. Parsons, 1 Bl. B. 392.

forth, it is sufficient if the act is laid to be done for the purpose of defrauding. Collins v. The Commonwealth, 3 Serg. & R. 220. Commonwealth v. M'Kisson, 8 Serg. & R. 420. The People v. Mather, 4 Wend. 229. The gist of a conspiracy is the unlawful confederacy to do an unlawful act, or even a lawful act for an unlawful purpose. The offence is complete when the confederacy is made, and any act done in pursuance of it is no constituent part of the offence, but merely an aggravation of it. Commonwealth v. Judd & al. 2 Mass. Rep. 329. Same v. Tibbetts & al. 2 Mass. Rep. 536. Same v. Warren & al. 6 Mass. Rep. 74. Same v. Davis, 9 Mass. Rep. 415. State v. Rowley, 12 Conn. Rep. 101. Commonwealth v. Carlisle, 1 Journal of Jurisprudence, 225. State v. Buchanan, 5 Har. & Johns. 317. Thus a conspiracy to manufacture any base and spurious commodity, with the intent to sell the same at public auction as good and genuine for the purpose of defrauding the purchasers of their money, although no sale be made, is an indictable offence. Commonwealth v. Judd. So also it is indictable as a conspiracy to charge any person with a crime and in pursuance thereof, falsely to affirm that he is guilty without procuring or intending to procure any indictment or any process civil or criminal against such persons. Commonwealth v. Tibbetts, 11 Mass. Rep. 536; or to commence suits against a person with the view of extorting money. Leggett v. Postley, 2 Paige, 599. But it is not an indictable offence for several persons to conspire to obtain money from a bank by drawing their checks on the bank when they have no funds there. State v. Rickie, 4 Halst. 223.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxiv. 257.

of large fortune, evidence of a similar representation to another tradesman having been objected to, Lord Ellenborough admitted the evidence, saying, that as it was an indictment for a conspiracy to carry on the business of common cheats, cumulative instances were necessary to prove the offence (k).

Upon an indictment which charged the defendants with a conspiracy to cheat and defraud the prosecutor, General Maclean, by selling him an unsound horse, it appeared that one of the defendants (Pywell) had advertised the sale of certain horses, with a warranty of their soundness; and that another of the defendants, upon an application by the prosecutor at Pywell's stables, stated that he had lived with the owner of a horse then shown to the prosecutor, and that he knew him to be perfectly sound, and, as the agent of Pywell, would warrant him to be sound; the prosecutor purchased the horse, and discovered, soon after the sale, that he was nearly worthless. Lord Ellenborough held that no indictment in such a case could be maintained without evidence of concert between the parties to effectuate a fraud; and the defendants were acquitted (l).

Acts of conspiracy.

Where several conspire to procure an employment under government by corrupt means, it seems that a banker who receives the money in order to pay it over for that purpose, becomes a party to the conspiracy (m).

Act of one, evidence against the rest.

Where several combine together for the same illegal purpose, each is the agent of all the rest, and any act done by one in furtherance of the unlawful design, is, in consideration of law, the act of all (n) (A). And as a declaration accompanying an act strongly indicates the nature and intention of the act, or, more properly, perhaps, is to be considered as part of the act, a declaration made by one conspirator at the time of doing an act in furtherance of the general design, is evidence against the other conspirators. It is for the Court to judge whether a sufficient connection has been established to affect one person with the acts of others (o).

In Stone's Case (p), the defendant was indicted for treason, and charged with conspiracy with Jackson to collect and communicate intelligence to *326 the French government, in order to assist the King's enemies, &c.; after evidence has been given of a conspiracy for this purpose, a letter of Jackson's containing treasonable information, which had been transmitted to Lord Grenville from abroad, was admitted in evidence against the prisoner; and the case of The King v. Bowes and others was cited, where Buller, J., upon an indictment against the defendants for a conspiracy to carry away

(k) R. v. Roberts and others, 1 Camp. C. 399.
(l) R. v. Pywell and others,[1] 1 Starkie's C. 402.
(m) R. v. Pollman and others, 2 Camp. 233.
(n) R. v. Stone, O. B. 1796. (o) East's P. C. 97.
(p) 6 T. R. 527. Note, in this case Ld. Kenyon said that he should have doubted as to the admissibility of such evidence, if it had not been sanctioned by the authority of the Judges who sat at the Old Bailey on the late trials for treason; but he afterwards said that, on consideration, he thought they had done right in admitting the evidence.

(A) (To make the actions and declarations of a conspirator in furtherance of the common object, admissible in evidence against a co-conspirator, it is sufficient that the conspiracy has been proved by a competent witness. The court will not decide on his credibility. Commonwealth v. Crowninshield, 10 Pick. R. 497. Where on an indictment for a conspiracy to cheat a person out of his property, the guilt of one of the conspirators as to the fraudulent design was clearly proved, evidence that the other conspirator was present at the time the fraudulent design was carried into execution, and that he received a part of the property and sold it under a fictitious name, was considered sufficient for the jury to infer from it that he was an associate and confederate in the fraud by which it was obtained. Com'th v. Warren, 6 Mass. Rep. 74.) [Collins v. Commonwealth, 3 Serg. & Rawle, 220. See also Ex parte Bollman v. Swartwout, 4 Cranch, 75. 1 Robinson's Report of Burr's Trial, 21. 2 Ibid. 401, & seq.]

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. ii. 444.

Lady Strathmore, had laid down the same doctrine (q). So in the cases of murder and burglary, the acts of one are frequently received against another engaged in the same design.

In Watson's Case (r), after evidence of a treasonable conspiracy, to which the prisoner, who was upon his trial, was a party, it was held that papers found in the lodgings of a fellow-conspirator, at a period subsequent to the apprehension of the prisoner, might be read in evidence, although no absolute proof had been given of their previous existence, strong presumptive evidence having been adduced to show that the lodgings had not been entered by any one in the interval between the apprehension of the prisoner and the finding of the papers (s). The papers in this case were proved to be intimately and immediately connected with the objects of the conspiracy, as detailed in evidence. Upon the same trial, evidence having been given that a paper containing seditious questions and answers had been found in the possession of a fellow-conspirator, but had not been published, the Court doubted whether the paper was sufficiently connected by evidence with the object of the conspiracy to render it admissible, and it was not read; but they held, that if proof were to be given that the instrument was to be used for the purposes of the conspiracy, it would clearly be admissible (t).

It seems, however, on the other hand, that a mere gratuitous assertion inculpating himself and others, although made by a fellow-conspirator, would not be evidence against any one but himself. As against himself it would be evidence, upon the general ground that any declaration or admission connected with the charge, be it oral or written, is admissible in evidence against the party who makes it (u); but, as against another person, it is no more than the mere gratuitous declaration of a stranger not upon oath.

Evidence to prove the existence of a conspiracy.

Although in general, upon principles already adverted to (x), the act or declaration of one man is not evidence against another who is charged as a fellow-conspirator, until such a privity and community of design has been established between them as affords a reasonable presumption that the act or declaration of one is the act or declaration of the other, made with his sanction, and therefore indicating his mind and intention; and although it follows, from these principles, that such a connection must be established *327 *before the acts and declarations of one man can properly be used as evidence to show the designs of another, yet, in some peculiar instances, where it would be difficult to establish the defendant's privity without first proving the existence of a conspiracy, a deviation has been made from this rule, and evidence of the acts and conduct of others has been admitted to prove the existence of a conspiracy, previous to the proof of the defendant's privity.

In Hardy's Case (y), Buller, J., said, "In an indictment of this sort there are two things to be considered: first, whether any conspiracy exists; next, what share the prisoner took in that conspiracy." But the same learned (q) 30th May, 1787. The cases of The King v. Hardy and Tooke, O. B. 1794, were also cited. See also R. v. Salter, 5 Esp. C. 125; where, on an indictment for a conspiracy to procure the discharge of a coachman, after proof was given of a meeting and conspiracy, at which the defendants were present, it was held that declarations made by others who had been so present were admissible.

(r) 2 Starkie's C. 140.[1]

(s) But it would be otherwise, if, as in Hardy's Case, the papers were found in the possession of persons after the prisoner's apprehension; those persons might have obtained possession of them after his apprehension. 2 Starkie's C. 141.[1]

(t) Watson's Case,[1] 2 Starkie's C. 141.

(u) See tit. Admissions.

(x) Supra, tit. Admissions; and see below, 328.

(y) Gurney's edition, vol. i. p. 360 to 369.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. iii. 273.

Judge afterwards added, "Before the evidence (that is, of the conspiracy so proved to exist) can affect the prisoner materially, it is necessary to make out another point, namely, that he consented to the extent that the others did" (z).

The rule that one man is not to be affected by the acts and declarations of a stranger, rests on the principles of the purest justice; and although the Courts, in cases of conspiracy, have, out of convenience, and on account of the difficulty in otherwise proving the guilt of the parties, admitted the acts and declarations of strangers to be given in evidence in order to establish the fact of a conspiracy, it is to be remembered that this is an inversion of the usual order, for the sake of convenience; and that such evidence is, in the result, material so far only as the assent of the accused to what has been done by others is proved.

The case admits of this illustration:—Suppose a witness to overhear a conspiracy actually entered into between three persons whom he cannot identify; if there be circumstantial evidence to prove that C. D., the defendant, was one of those conspirators, proof of the fact of conspiracy would first be admitted, and then the question would be, upon the circumstantial evidence, whether C. D. was one of the parties who so conspired.

It seems, however, that mere detached declarations and confessions of persons not defendants, not made in the prosecution of the object of the conspiracy, are not evidence even to prove the existence of a conspiracy (a), although consultations for the purpose (b), and letters written in prosecution of the design, though not sent (c), are admissible.

Mere declarations.

Mr. J. Buller, indeed, in Hardy's Case, seems to have considered mere declarations of strangers to be evidence to prove the existence of a conspiracy, upon the ground of necessity. There appears, however, to be no authority for admitting such evidence in criminal cases upon the plea of necessity, which, in principle, is inadmissible.

The existence of a conspiracy is a fact, and the declaration of a stranger is but hearsay, unsanctioned by either of the two great tests of truth. The mere assertion of a stranger that a conspiracy existed amongst others, to which he was not a party, would clearly be inadmissible; and although the person making the assertion confessed that he was a party to it, this, on *principles fully established, would not make the assertion evidence of the fact against strangers (d). *328

These positions are illustrated by the following authorities:

In the case of Lord Stafford (e) evidence was first given of a general conspiracy, before any proof of the particular part which the accused took in that conspiracy. And a similar course was adopted upon the trial of Lord Lovat (f).

Acts to prove a conspiracy.

In Lord William Russel's Case (g), Lord Howard was permitted to go into evidence of a conversation between himself and Lord Shaftesbury, as to the number of forces which he had in readiness, and (as observed by Mr. J. Buller) the Chief Justice repeated this to the jury as evidence of a consult, but not as affecting Lord Russel.

In Hardy's Case, upon an indictment for high treason, in conspiring the death of the King, it was proved that Thelwall (who was indicted for the (z) See also the observations of Eyre, C. J., in the course of the same trial; where he says, "In the case of a conspiracy, general evidence of the thing conspired is received, and then the party before the court is to be affected for his share of it."

(a) Infra, 328.

(b) Lord Russel's Case; and see the observations of Buller, J., in Hardy's Case, upon that case.

(c) Infra, 328.

(d) Supra, tit. Admissions. Infra, 328.

(e) 32 Car. 2, 3 St. Tr. 101.

(f) 19 Geo. 2, 9 St. Tr. 616.

(g) 35 Car. 2, 3 St. Tr. 306.

same offence, but was not upon his trial,) and the prisoner, were both members of the Corresponding Society. Evidence was admitted to prove that Thelwall brought a paper with him to a printer, and desired him to print it, on the ground that both being members of the society (of which the prisoner was secretary), and the paper having been produced by one of them, it was evidence to prove a circumstance in the conspiracy, although whether it would ultimately be so brought home to the prisoner, that he should be responsible for the guilt of publishing it, might be another question (h).

In the same case it was proposed to read a letter written by Thelwall to a private friend, containing several of the addresses of the society, and three of the Judges (i) were of opinion that the evidence was inadmissible, since the letter amounted to nothing more than a declaration, or mere recital of a fact, and did not amount to any transaction done in the course of the plot, for the furtherance of the plot; it was a sort of confession by T., and not like a fact done by him; as in carrying papers and delivering them to a printer, which would be a part of the transaction. Two of the Judges (k) were of opinion that the evidence was admissible, on the ground that everything said, and à fortiori, everything done by the conspirators, was evidence to show what the design was.

In the same case it was proposed to read a letter written by Martin in London, and addressed, but not sent, to Margarot in Edinburgh (both being members of the Corresponding Society), on political subjects calculated to inflame the minds of the people in the North. Eyre, C. J., was of opinion that this letter was not admissible in evidence, being in the nature of a confession only, and therefore not evidence against any but the party confessing; two of the Judges (l) agreed that a bare relation of facts by a conspirator to a stranger was merely an admission which might affect himself, but which could not affect a conspirator, since it was not an act done in the prosecution of that conspiracy; but that in the present instance the writing of a letter by one conspirator, having a relation to the subject of the conspiracy, was admissible, as an act to show the nature and tendency *329 of *the conspiracy alleged, and which therefore might be proved as the foundation for affecting the prisoner with a share of the conspiracy.

Buller, J., was of opinion, that evidence of conversations and declarations by parties to a conspiracy, were in general, and of necessity, evidence to prove the existence of the combination; Grose, J., was of the same opinion, but added, that he considered the writing as an act which showed the extent of the plan.

Upon the last point it is observable, that of the five learned judges who gave their opinions, three of them considered the writing of the letter to be an act done; and that three of them declared their opinion, that a mere declaration or confession, unconnected with any act, would not have been admissible.

In the case of Horne Tooke, who was afterwards tried upon the same indictment, the draught of a letter intended to have been sent by Hardy, in answer to a letter, as secretary to the Corresponding Society, and found in his possession, was admitted in evidence (m).

Upon the same trial, a letter, purporting to have been written by the secretary of a society in Sheffield, and addressed to the prisoner, the secretary of the London Corresponding Society, but found in the possession of (h) Per Eyre, C. B., to which the other Judges assented.

(i) Eyre, C. J., Macdonald, C. B., and Hotham, B.
(k) Buller and Grose, Js.
(l) Macdonald and Hotham, Bs.
(m) O. B. 1794.

Thelwall, another member of the society, who also acted as agent for the society, was admitted in evidence (n) without dissent.

Upon an indictment against the defendants, who were journeymen shoemakers, charging them with a conspiracy to raise their wages, evidence was admitted of a plan for a combination of journeymen shoemakers, formed and printed several years before; and it was proved by a witness who was a party to the association, that he and others acted upon the rules and regulations so proved in execution of the conspiracy; and this evidence was admitted by Lord Kenyon as introductory to the proof that the defendants were members of the society, and equally concerned; but he stated, that this would not be evidence against the defendants until it was proved that they were parties to the conspiracy (o).

Where one of several charged with a conspiracy has been acquitted, the record of acquittal is evidence for another defendant subsequently tried (p).

It seems to make no difference as to the admissibility of the act or declaration of a fellow-conspirator against a defendant, whether the former be indicted or not, or tried or not, with the latter, for the making one a co-defendant does not make his acts or declarations evidence against another, any more than they were before; the principle upon which they are admissible at all is, that the act or declaration of one is that of both united in one common design, a principle which is wholly unaffected by the consideration of their being jointly indicted.

Neither does it appear to be material what the nature of the indictment is, provided the offence involve a conspiracy. Thus, upon an indictment for murder, if it appeared that others, together with the prisoner, conspired to perpetrate the crime, the act of one done in pursuance of that intention would be evidence against the rest (q).

Where part of a correspondence between two defendants, indicted for a *conspiracy to defraud the prosecutor in the sale of an annuity, had been *330 read upon the trial against the party on trial, whose defence was that he had been deceived by the other party, it was held that the whole of the correspondence previous to the consummation of the purchase, was admissible, but not the subsequent part (r).

Evidence is admissible of a conspiracy either before or after the day laid in the indictment (s).

Upon the trial of an indictment for a conspiracy to marry a poor couple in order to charge a parish, it must be proved that the husband is unable to maintain himself and his family; and it is not sufficient to show that he was a servant employed in husbandry (t). An averment that J. S. is now legally settled in a particular parish, is supported by evidence that he was settled there shortly before the finding of the indictment (u). It has been said, that it is necessary to show that the marriage was against the will of the parties (x). Conspiracy to marry paupers.

(n) Hardy's Trial, by Gurney, vol. i. 412, 413.

(o) R. v. Hammond and Webb, 2 Esp. C. 718.

(p) R. v. Horne Tooke, O. B. 1794. During the same sittings the indictment itself, with the officer's notes, are evidence, without the record formally drawn up. Ib.

(q) See 6 T. R. 528. See Lord Ellenborough's observations, 11 East, 584, infra, tit. TRESPASS.

(r) R. v. Whitehead,[1] 1 D. & R. 61.

(s) R. v. Charnock & Keys, 4 St. Tr. 570.

(t) 1 Esp. C. 304; and per Ashurst, J., indictments which have been sustained for injuries of this nature have been for procuring a marriage where the man was a pauper, and actually chargeable.

(u) R. v. Tanner et al. 1 Esp. C. 304.

(x) 4 Burr. 2106. In R. v. Edwards (8 Mod. 320), this offence seems to have been considered as indictable on the ground of conspiracy only; but in R. v. Turrant, (Burr. 2106), an information was granted against a single overseer.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xi. 316.

To marry paupers.

Buller, J., held, that the procuring the marriage by the gift of money was insufficient, without proof that some threat or contrivance was used for the purpose (y), and that it was against their consent.

Proof as to the means used.

In the case of Lord Grey and others, who were tried upon an information, which charged them with conspiring and intending to ruin Lady Henrietta Berkeley, a virgin, unmarried, and within the age of eighteen years, she being under the custody, &c. of the Earl of Berkeley, her father, and with soliciting her to desert her father, and commit whoredom and adultery with Lord Grey; and which also charged, that in prosecution of such conspiracy, they took away the Lady Henrietta at night from her father's house and custody, and against his will, the defendants were found guilty, although there was no proof that any force was used, and although it appeared, on the contrary, that Lady Henrietta, who was examined as a witness, concurred in the measures which were taken for her removal (z) (1).

Competency.

The wife of one defendant, in a case of conspiracy, is not a competent witness for another defendant, since an acquittal of the other defendants would occasion the acquittal of her husband (a) (2).

Varianee.

The indictment alleged that A., B., C. and D., conspired together to obtain to the use of them, the said A., B., C. and D., and certain other persons to the jurors unknown, a sum of money for procuring an appointment under government, the evidence negatived D.'s knowledge that C. was to have any part of it; the money having been lodged in his hands to be paid over to B.: it was held, that the averment as to the application of money was material, and that as to D., the conspiracy was not proved as laid. (b).

Where the indictment charged a conspiracy to prevent masters from taking into their employment any apprentices, and the evidence was, that *331 *the defendants attempted to prevent the masters from taking any apprentices in addition to those which they then had, it was held that the indictment was sufficiently supported by the evidence, since the effect was to prevent the masters from taking any apprentice into their service, as alleged in the indictment (c).

Where on an indictment for a conspiracy against A., B. and C., C. called a witness, and examined him as to a conversation between himself (C.) and A., it was held that the counsel for the prosecution were at liberty to examine as to other conversations between A. and C., although they tended chiefly to criminate A., who had called no witnesses (d).

(y) R v. Fowler and others, East's P. C. 461. See CRIM. PLEAD. 2d edit. 685, 6.

(z) R. v. Lord Grey and others, East's P. C. 460: 3 St. Tr. 519.

(a) R. v. Locker and others, cor. Lord Ellenborough, 5 Esp. C. 107; 2 Stra. 1094. As to the competency of a person convicted of a conspiracy, see tit. INFAMOUS WITNESS.

(b) R. v. Pollman, 2 Camp. 231.

(c) R. v. Ferguson and Edge,[1] 2 Starkie's C. 489. See further, VARIANCE; and 1 Esp. C. 304. [Commonwealth v. Ward, 1 Mass. Rep. 473.]

(d) R. v. Kroehl and others,[2] 2 Starkie's C. 343. Qu. whether in such case the counsel for A. would be entitled to address the jury in answer to such fresh evidence?

(1) [On an indictment for a conspiracy in inveigling a young girl from her mother's house, and reciting the marriage ceremony between her and one of the defendants, a subsequent carrying her off, with force and threats, after she had been relieved on habeas corpus, was allowed to be given in evidence. Commonwealth v. Hevice & al. 2 Yeates, 114.]

(2) [Swift's Ev. 92. Commonwealth v. Easland & al. 1 Mass. Rep. 15, acc. But in South Carolina, where father and son were indicted for murder—the father being charged with having given the mortal wound, and the son with having been present, aiding and assisting—on the separate trial of the father, (who was first tried), the son's wife was held to be a competent witness for the defendant. The State v. Anthony, 1 M'Cord, 285.]

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. iii. 442. [2]Id. iii. 375.

CONSTABLE.

The regular proof that A. B. is a constable, is by the production and proof of his appointment, and swearing at the court-leet (e), or by justices of the peace (f) (1), on default of an appointment by the leet (g). It has, however, been seen, that even on a trial for murder, evidence that a party has acted as a constable is evidence to prove that he is one (h).

Where a constable acts under a warrant from a magistrate, it seems that he ought to keep the warrant for his own justification (i). For the proofs in actions against constables, see tit. Justices.

CONVICTION.

For the proof of a conviction, see Vol. I. and Index tit. Conviction.

For the effect of a conviction in proof, as a judgment, see Vol. I. Index tit. Conviction; and see also below tit. Justices.

A conviction is no evidence in a collateral proceeding for the party on whose evidence it has been obtained, although his name does not appear on the face of it (k); nor is it evidence to contradict the witnesses in a collateral proceeding, by showing that they had before given a different account before the committing magistrate (l).

Upon summary proceedings before magistrates, they are placed in the situation of a jury, and the degree of credit to be attached to the evidence is for their consideration and judgment. Since, however, the proceedings before them are usually of a criminal and penal nature, and as they are substituted for a jury of twelve men, who must, in order to convict, have all been satisfied by the evidence of the criminality of the defendant, the evidence ought to be fully satisfactory and convincing to the mind and conscience of the magistrate, before he pronounces the party to have been guilty. If any reasonable doubt exist in his mind, the party charged is entitled to the benefit of that doubt. Such cases, it is to be recollected, differ very *materially indeed from those where mere civil rights are concerned, and where the mere preponderance of evidence may be sufficient to decide the question (m). *332

In point of law, the evidence will support a conviction by a magistrate, if there was such evidence before him as would have been sufficient to have been left to a jury. If such evidence appear on the face of a conviction removed into the Court of King's Bench, the Court will not disturb the magistrate's decision, or examine to see whether the conclusion drawn by him be, or be not, the inevitable conclusion to be drawn from the evidence (n). So if the magistrate acquit, where there seems to be (e) The wardmote-book, containing the entry of the election, should be produced. Underhill v. Watts, 3 Esp. C. 56.

(f) See the stat. 13 & 14 Ch. 2, c. 12, s. 15; 2 Haw. B. 2, c. 10, s. 37; Str. 1149; 1 Bac. Ab. 439; 5 & 6 W. 4, c. 49.

(g) Haw. B. 2, c. 10, s. 49.

(h) Supra, tit. Character. R. v. Gordon, Leach, 581. Berryman v. Wise, 4 T. R. 366; and supra, tit. Agent, R. v. Verelst, 3 Camp. 432. R. v. Gardner, 2 Camp. 531. Lister v. Priestly, Wightwick, 67.

(i) See Burn's J. tit. Constable, sec. 6, 24 Geo. 2, c. 44, s. 6.

(k) Smith v. Rummens, 1 Camp. 9. Burdon v. Browning, 1 Taunt. 520.

(l) R. v. Howe, 1 Camp. C. 461. [6 Esp. 124, S. C.]

(m) Vide supra, Vol. I.

(n) R. v. Davis, 6 T. R. 178. Paley on Convictions, 37; R. v. Reason, 6 T. R. 376; where, on a conviction for having in his possession a private and concealed still for the purpose of distillation, the evidence was that the still was found in the garden of the defendant's house, and that the house was in the county, but there was no evidence that the garden was in the county, the conviction was held to be bad. R. v. Chandler, 24 East, 267.

(1) [See Wood v. Peake, 8 Johns. 69. Miller's Case, 1 Browne's Rep. 349. Chambers v. Thomas, 1 Littell's Rep. 268. 3 Marsh. 538. Johnston v. Wilson & al. 2 N. Hamp. Rep. 202.]

primâ facie evidence to convict, his judgment cannot be questioned; for no other court can judge of the credit due to witnesses which are not examined there (o).

Though the commitment be under a defective warrant, the Court, if there was a precedent conviction, will, on a motion for a certiorari, presume a conviction sufficient to support the warrant (p).

Although a conviction may be formally drawn after the time of conviction, a different information cannot be substituted (q).

COPYHOLD.

Proof of title.

A COPYHOLD tenant proves his title by evidence of his own admittance, upon the surrender of a former tenant, by the production of the court-rolls, or by examined copies of them (r). These are the public rolls by which the inheritance of every tenant is preserved, and are the proceedings of the Manor-Court, which was formerly a court of justice (s). And they are evidence even for one who claims under the lord (t); but they are not conclusive to the exclusion of evidence or mistake (u). And it is not necessary to produce a copy of the entries of the surrender and admittance stamped according to the stat. 48 Geo. 3, c. 149 (x).

Title of tenant.

The legal title is completed by the admittance of the tenant; till the admittance, the legal title remains in the surrenderor, who is a trustee for the surrenderee (y). But after admittance, the title of the tenant has relation to the time of the surrender, as against all but the lord, and consequently after admittance the tenant may recover in ejectment on a demise laid on a day subsequent to the surrender, but before the admittance (z). A copy of the copyholder's admittance of thirty years standing is evidence, although not signed by the steward (a).

*333 *Where the tenant brings ejectment, it is necessary to give some evidence to establish his identity with the party admitted (b).

Where a surrender has been made to the use of one for life, with remainder over to another, it is sufficient for the latter to prove the surrender, the admittance of the tenant for life, and his death; for the several interests constitute but one entire estate, and the admittance of the tenant for life enures to the benefit of the remainder-man (c). So if a copyholder devise to one for life, remainder over in fee.

Title of tenant by devise.

Formerly the practice was for the owner to surrender to the use of his will, and upon this surrender the will operated as a declaration of the use, and not as a devise, of the land. Hence, a devise of copyhold lands or of customary lands which passed by surrender or admittance, did not require any attestation under the Statute of Frauds, nor any signature, unless the signature were rendered necessary by the terms of the surrender to the use of the will (d). But by the stat. 55 Geo. 3, c. 192, it is enacted, that the (o) R. v. Reason, 6 T. R. 376. Paley on Convictions, 38. For the evidence in particular cases, see their respective titles, GAME, &c.

Surrender.

(p) R. v. Taylor,[1] 7 D. & R. 623. See tit. JUSTICES.

(q) K. B. Mich. T. 1827.

(r) B. N. P. 247.

(s) Ib.

(t) Roe v. Hellier, 3 T. R. 162.

(u) 25 Coke's Copyholder, sec. 40. Ld. Ray. 735. Burgess v. Foster, 1 Leon. 189. Doe d. Priestly v. Calloway,[2] 6 B. & C. 484

(x) Doe ex dem. Bennington v. Hall, 16 East, 208.

(y) 5 T. R 132.

(z) Holdfast v. Clapham, 1 T. R. 600.

(a) Dean of Ely v. Stewart, 2 Atk. 44. As to presumptive evidence of a surrender, see Wilson v. Allen, 1 J. & W. 620

(b) Doe d. Hanson v. Smith, 1 Camp. 197.

(c) 5 Mod. 306; Cro. Jac. 31; 1 Saund. 151; Com. Dig. Copyhold, [C.] 11.

(d) Tuffnell v. Page, 2 Atk. 37. Carey v. Askew, 2 Bro. Ch. Rep. 58. Wagstaff v. Wagstaff, 2 P. Wms. 258. Doe d. Cooke v. Danvers, 7 East, 299, 322.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xvi. 306. [2]Id. xiii. 238.

disposal of copyhold estates by will shall be effectual, without a previous surrender to the use of the will (e). The will must be produced and proved. And now by the late statute 7 W. 4, and 1 V. c. 20, a will of copyhold, properly executed, is good, although the testator may not have surrendered to the use of his will, and though being entitled as heir, devisee, or otherwise, to be admitted, he may not have been admitted, and though there may be no custom, or only a limited custom, to devise or surrender to the use of the will. Although copyhold rolls mention a surrender to the use of the tenant's last will (f), and the admittance of A. as devisee under the will, it is no evidence of the title of A. without producing the will, because the land does not pass by surrender without the will, which must be shown as the best evidence of A.'s title (g).

Instructions for a will of copyhold lands, or of a customary estate passing by surrender and admittance, taken in writing by another in the presence and from the oral dictation of the party, although without the signature of the party, or any attestation, constitute a sufficient devise of the copyhold estate, and a good will under the statute of wills (h). So also, short notes of a will taken by a lawyer from the testator's mouth, have been held to be a good will in writing, although the testator died before they could be reduced to form (i). So is a draft of a will, the signing and publication of *which have been prevented by the testator's death (k). But now by the late st. 7 W. 4, 1 Vict. c. 20, s. 1, wills of copyhold and customary lands must be executed with the formalities which are requisite for the devising of freehold lands. *334

Proof of admittance.

After proof of the will, the claimant must prove the admittance of the testator, as also his own admittance; for till admittance, although after the surrender, the legal estate remains in the surrenderor, and descends to his heir (l). Some evidence of identity is requisite (m). The surrender by the testator to the use of his will is not evidence of seisin (n).

(e) Copyholds do not, under the 53 Geo. 3, c. 192, pass under the will of a devisor who died before admittance; the statute applies only to cases where a surrender alone would have made good the will. King v. Turner, 2 Sim. 547. Where a testator, possessed of freeholds and copyholds, after a specific devise of part of his copyhold to R., devised all his real estates to the lessor of the plaintiff, held that as since the 55 Geo. 3, c. 192, where a surrender alone is necessary to the validity of the devise, validity to that extent is supplied by the Act, the copyhold passed under the residuary clause, independently of any question of intention. Doe d. Clarke v. Ludlam,[1] 7 Bing. 275, and 5 M. & P. 46.

(f) It is said that, previous to the late statute, the will need not have been in writing. 1 Watk. Cop. 130.

(g) Jenkins v. Barker, per Tracy, 1705. Bac. Ab. Ev. F. 632. The probate is no evidence of the devise of a copyhold. Jervoise v. The Duke of Northumberland, 1 J. & W. 520.

(h) Doe v. Danvers, 7 East, 299. There had been in that case (which was before the stat. 55 Geo. 3, c. 192) a surrender to the use of the will, and a probate had been granted in the Ecclesiastical Court.

(i) 1 Anderson, 34. See also 3 Leon. 79; 2 Keb. 128.

(k) Wagstaff v. Wagstaff, 2 P. Wms. 259. Carey v. Askew, 2 Bro. C. C. 58, cited by Lord Ellenborough, in Doe v. Danvers, 7 East, 324.

(l) Roe v. Wroot, 5 East, 137. Roe v. Hicks, 2 Wils. 15; Cro. Eliz. 148; 1 T. R. 600; Com. Dig. Copyhold, D. 2. Wilson v. Weddell, Yelv. 144. The admittance of tenant for life being the admittance of him in remainder, a devisee in remainder, after proof of the admission of the tenant for life, need not prove his own admittance. See Auncelme v. Auncelme, Cro. J. 31. An heir might before admittance devise copyholds descending to him. King v. Turner, 1 M. & R. 456. Although an unadmitted devisee or surrenderee (previously to the late stat.) would not. See Doe v. Lawes,[2] 7 Ad. & Ell. 211. Upon a devise of copyhold for life, remainder to the devisor's heir at law, who died intestate, and without ever having entered or in any way dealt with the reversion; held, that the right heir of the devisor was entitled to maintain ejectment without admittance. Doe v. Crisp, 1 P. & D. 37. Where, upon a devise of copyhold for life, and a full fine paid upon the admission of the tenant for life, the heir of the devisor had surrendered his reversion; held, that the lord might refuse admittance to the surrenderee, unless on payment of the fines payable in respect of the descent on the heir. R. v. Dullingham, Lady of the Manor of, 1 P. & D. 172. The words "lands of any tenure" in 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 74, s. 77, extend to copyholds. Shirly, ex parte, 7 Dowl. 258.

(m) Doe v. Smith, 1 Camp. 197.

(n) Per Taunton, J., Win. Sum. Assizes, 1831. Roscoe on Ev. 456.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xx. 130. [2]Id. xxxiv. 81.

Surrenders and admittances are proved either by the original entries on the court-rolls, or by copies (o). Or, where there is no entry on the roll, by collateral evidence. Thus a surrender duly presented by the homage, but of which there is no entry on the roll, may be proved by extrinsic evidence (p). The surrender and admittance constitute but one entire conveyance, and the admittance has relation back to the time of the surrender, so as to vest the title in the surrenderee from that time (q). But now by the statute 7 Will. 4, & 1 Vict. c. 26, above cited, a will of copyhold properly executed is good, although the devisor, being entitled, as heir, devisee, or otherwise, to be admitted, may not have been admitted, and although there be no custom, or merely a limited custom, to devise or surrender to the use of the will. One who claims as grantee by the lord is tenant before admittance (r).

Title of tenant by descent or custom.

Custom is the very essence of copyhold tenures, and frequently regulates the course of descent; but where custom is silent, the descent is according *to the course of the common law (s), and therefore, upon the death of the tenant, if no custom intervene, the legal estate descends to the heir-at-law (t), who by the general law of copyhold may maintain an ejectment before admittance (u). His title is proved by evidence of the admission of the ancestor, his death, and the fact of heirship (x).

*335

Heir at law.

Customary heir.

If the party claim as customary heir he must show his title by proof of the custom (y). He must prove that the usage has existed time out of mind (z); and such usages are construed strictly (a). The most usual evidence to prove the custom are the court-rolls of the manor. Entries by the homage on these rolls are evidence, as between tenants of the manor, to prove the mode of descent, although no instances can be proved in which persons have taken according to that course (b). So the customary of a manor handed down with the court-rolls from steward to steward, is evidence of the course of descent within the manor, although not signed by any one (c).

(o) These must be duly stamped. Doe d. Bennington v. Hall, 16 East, 208. The lord may admit to a copyhold out of the manor even at a void court. The steward cannot without special authority. But an admittance by the latter at a void court, the proceedings being entered on the rolls, was held to be sufficient, as at the next court the tenants would have information of the fact. Doe v. Whitaker,[1] 5 B. & Ad. 409.

(p) As by the draft of the surrender from the muniments of the court, and the testimony of the foreman of the homage jury, who made the presentment. Doe d. Priestly v. Calloway,[2] 6 B. & C. 484. An entry on the roll is not conclusive, and a new title may be shown by averment or by evidence. Burgess v. Foster, 1 Leon. 289. Brend v. Brend, Cas. T. Finch, 254; Coke's Copyholder, s. 40. Lord Holt at Nisi Prius held that the rough draft of the steward was good evidence of admittance. Ld. Ray. 785.

(q) Doe d. Bennington v. Hall, 16 East, 208. Holdfast d. Williams v. Clapham, 1 T. R. 600. Vaughan v. Atkins, 5 Burr. 2764. Roe v. Hickes, 2 Wils. 15. In the case of bargainor and bargainee, the estate is in the bargainee before enrolment. Com. Dig. Bargain and Sale, B. 9.

(r) Doe v. Whitaker,[1] 5 B. & Ad. 409.

(s) Doe v. Mason, 3 Wils. 63. Denn v. Spray, 1 T. R. 466.

(t) Denn v. Spray, 1 T. R. 466. The succeeding lord of a manor is entitled to avail himself of a custom to seize copyhold lands quousque, which accrued to the preceding lord in default of the heir coming in to be admitted, and that although he be only devisee and not heir to the late lord; to entitle him however to enter and seize, the law requires that, on the death of the tenant, there shall be three proclamations for the heir to come in and be admitted, and that such should be made at three consecutive courts; and there is no distinction between proclamations in cases of seisure for a forfeiture, and for seisure of a copyhold quousque. Doe v. Truman,[3] 1 B. & Ad. 736.

(u) See Doe v. Brightwen, 10 East, 583. Doe v. Hellier, 5 T. R. 169. Roe v. Hickes, 2 Wils. 13. So in ejectment by the grantee of the reversion of a copyhold from the lord. Doe v. Loveless, 2 B. & A. 453.

(x) See tit. EJECTMENT BY HEIR—PEDIGREE.

(y) Co. Copyhold, 43; 3 Wils. 63. A custom to present a surrender at an indefinite period is void; semble, per Lord Tenterden. K. B. Easter T. 1827.

(z) 4 Leon. 242.

(a) 1 Roll. Ab. 624, pl. 1; 2 T. R. 466.

(b) Roe v. Parker, 5 T. R. 26.

(c) Denn v. Spray, 1 T. R. 466; 5 T. R. 26; 12 Vin. Ab. 215.

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxvii. 103. [2] Id. xiii. 338. [3] Id. xx. 485.

Entries on the rolls of a manor-court of the admissions of tenants in remainder, after the estate of the last tenant's widow, who held during her chaste viduity, are evidence of a custom for a widow to hold on that condition, so that ejectment may be maintained against her, as for a forfeiture on proof of incontinence, although no instances are in fact stated on the rolls, or proved, that such a forfeiture had ever been enforced (d). Three instances on the rolls, of husbands having been admitted as tenants by the curtesy, according to the custom, whose wives had been admitted during their lives, were held to be evidence to prove the custom, so as to entitle the husband of a deceased wife, who was heir-at-law, but who died before admittance (having first borne a child to her husband which died an infant), to hold for his life (e). Title of tenant by custom, &c.

A single instance of a surrender in fee by a tenant in special tail of a copyhold, has been held to be evidence of a custom within the manor, to bar entails by surrender, although the surrenderor had not been dead twenty *years, and although one instance was proved of a recovery suffered by a tenant in tail to bar the entail (f). *336

A paper signed by many deceased copyholders of a manor, stating what was the general right of common in each copyholder, and agreeing to restrict it, is evidence against other copyholders who do not claim under those who signed it (g), for it is at least evidence of the reputation which existed at the time within the manor. The custom of one manor is evidence to prove the custom in another, where both are subject to one common law of tenure (h).

Evidence of reputation is admissible to prove the existence of a manor; a great number of manors rest upon no other evidence (i); but it is in itself very weak evidence to establish any right, without proof of an enjoyment consistent with it (k). Evidence of manorial rights.

The general presumption is, that the waste land which adjoins to a road belongs to the owner of the adjoining freehold, and not to the lord of the manor; this of course is liable to be rebutted by evidence of acts of dominion and ownership (l) by the lord.

Where the question was, whether certain common land was the soil and freehold of the plaintiff, who had a right of common there, or of the defendant, who was the lord of the manor, it was held that counterparts of leases, by which the lord granted minerals to other persons in other parts of the uninclosed waste, were not admissible in evidence, without preparatory evidence by the defendant that the locus in quo was part of the entire (d) Doe d. Askew v. Askew, 10 East, 520.

(e) Doe v. Brightwen, 10 East, 583. For the title of the wife as heir was complete without admittance, and that of the husband was also complete by operation of law; and the possession of the copyhold by the husband after the death of the wife, was referred to that title, and not to an adverse title, although he had been admitted after the death of the wife to hold to him, pursuant to a settlement, by which the estate of the wife was limited to the survivor in fee, so as to let in the title of the heir-at-law of the wife in ejectment brought within twenty years after the husband's death.

(f) Roe d. Bennett v. Jeffery, 2 M. & S. 92.

(g) Chapman v. Cowlan, 13 East, 8.

(h) 5 T. R. 26, per Lord Kenyon. See tit. Custom; and Clarkson v. Woodhouse, 5 T. R. 412.

(i) Per Abbott, L. C. J., Steele v. Prickett,[1] 2 Starkie's C. 466.

(k) Vide Vol. I. Index, tit. Reputation.

(l) Steele v. Prickett,[1] 2 Starkie's C. 463. Abbott, L. C. J., observed, "In some of the more ancient books of law a difference of opinion appears to have existed as to the right to the waste lands adjoining to public highways; but as far as my own experience goes, (and I have heard the opinions of many learned judges on the subject,) it has uniformly been laid down, that land under such circumstances is presumed, in the first instance, to belong to the owner of the adjoining freehold, and not to the lord of the manor." See Grose v. West,[2] 7 Taunt. 39; infra, tit. Trespass, Liberum Tenementum.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. iii. 433. [2]Id. ii. 19.

waste, to parts of which those leases were applicable (m). And it was also held, that if the leases had been admissible in evidence, they would merely have shown the lord's title to the minerals, and not to the surface (n).

It has already been seen, that licences on the court-rolls granted by the lords of the manor to fish in a particular fishery, are evidence for one who claims under the lord, evidence having been given of the payment of the reserved rents, and of acts of enjoyment by the lords of the manor in modern times (o).

Title of the lord. Where the tenant holds according to the custom of husbandry of the manor, evidence that the lord has leased, for more than a century past, the coal and limestone in different parts of the manor, and has received rent for it, is evidence to explain the nature of the tenure, and to show that the freehold is in the lord, and not in the tenant (p).

Ancient admissions of the copyholder to tres acras prati, may be ex-*337 plained *to mean the fore-crop, or primâ tonsura only, by evidence that no more has been enjoyed under such admissions (q).

The enfranchisement of a copyhold may be presumed from the long possession of the premises as freehold, and other circumstances, even as against the Crown (r). A copyholder in the manor A. has common in the wastes of the same lord's manor of B., for cattle levant and couchant on his tenement in A.; this is evidence that the manors were formerly in different hands, for the estate of a copyholder is too weak to support a grant of common appurtenant in another manor (s).

Under a custom that the remainder-man coming into possession on the death of the tenant for life must be admitted, and pay a fine, if on the death of the tenant for life the next in remainder does not come in to be admitted and pay his fine, after proclamations made, and presentment made to a jury, the lord, it was held, may seize quousque, and maintain ejectment to recover possession in the meantime (t). The court-rolls are evidence of the proclamations recited to have been made in them (u). But where on the death of a copyholder of inheritance, the lord, after three proclamations to the heir to come in and be admitted, seized the estate into his hands, and afterwards granted it in fee to another, it was considered as an absolute seizure, and there being no custom to warrant it, it was held that it was irregular, and that the lord could not afterwards insist upon it as a seizure merely quousque (x).

To a fine. The lord may recover from a copyholder the fine assessed by him upon admittance, not exceeding two years value of the tenement, although there be no entry of the assessment of such fine on the court-rolls, but only a demand of such sum for a fine, after the value of the tenement has been found by the homage (y).

(m) Tyrwhitt v. Wynn, 2 B. & A. 554. (n) Ibid.

(o) Supra, Vol. I. Index, tit. PRESCRIPTION. Rogers v. Allen, 1 Camp. 309.

(p) Brown v. Rawlins, 7 East, 409. As to title under a power of appointment, see the case of The Lord of the Manor of Oundle,[1] 1 Ad. & Ell. 283.

(q) Stammers v. Dixon, 7 East, 200.

(r) Roe v. Ireland, 11 East, 280. A surrender had been made of the premises to churchwardens and their successors in 1636, without naming any rent. In 1649 the Parliamentary survey charged the churchwardens 6*d.* rent, under the head of freehold rents: and there was no evidence of any different rent having been paid since that time; and receipts had been given as for a freehold rent by the steward of the manor from 1803 to 1805 (the trial was in 1809). Lord Ellenborough, in giving judgment, said, "I would presume anything capable of being presumed, in order to support an enjoyment of so long a period. As Lord Kenyon once said, on a similar occasion, that he would presume not only one, but a hundred grants, if necessary, to support such a long enjoyment." See tit. PRESUMPTION; and see Cowlam v. Slack, 15 East, 108.

(s) Barwick v. Matthews,[2] 5 Taunt. 365. (t) Doe v. Jenny, 5 East, 522.

(u) Roe v. Hellier, 3 T. R. 162. (x) Ibid.

(y) Lord Northwick Stanway, 6 East, 56.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxviii. 89. [2]Id. i. 135.

An assessment of a copyhold fine entered on the court-rolls as 100*l.*, cannot be reduced to 60*l.* by the lord's favour, without a new assessment (z); and therefore in such a case, where the lord sued for the fine, and the jury found the annual value of the premises to be 30*l.*, and gave a verdict for 60*l.*, it was held that the lord could not retain his verdict for 60*l.* (a).

Where the lord insists that the tenant has committed a forfeiture (b) by cutting down trees, and the tenant insists that they were cut down for the purpose of repairs, it is a question for the jury whether they were cut down with a bonâ fide intention so to apply them (c), although in fact none have been actually so applied till the expiration of several months after they were *cut down, and until after an action of ejectment has been brought by the lord for a forfeiture, and although many of them still remain unapplied, part of the premises being still out of repair (d). An appointment of one as steward may be proved to have been by parol (e). Proof of forfeiture. *338

COPYRIGHT. See PRIVILEGE.

CORPORATION (f).

A MISTAKE in the name of a corporation, who are plaintiffs, will not be material as a variance in evidence under the plea of the general issue (1). Where the corporation were sued in the names of "the mayor and burgesses of the borough of Stafford," and it appeared in evidence from the charter that they were incorporated by the name of "the mayor and burgesses of the borough of Stafford in the county of Stafford," it was held that the variance could not be objected to except by plea in abatement; and that to make it pleadable in bar, it should appear that there is no such corporation (g) (A). Variance in name.

Where a party had granted to a corporation certain rights, it was held, (z) Ibid.; and 3 B. & P. 346.

(a) Ibid.

(b) The estate of a copyholder (semble) is not forfeitable for the act of his lessee, Clifton's Case, 4 Co. 27, a.; 1 Roll. Ab. 408, Copyhold (D.) pl. 17; 4 Leon. 241; Co. Litt. 63, a.

(c) Doe v. Wilson, 11 East, 56.

(d) The jury found for the defendant; and there being no evidence that the trees were to be applied otherwise than for repairs, the Court refused to disturb the verdict. 11 East, 56. See also Blackett v. Lowes, 2 M. & S. 494, where it was held that if a copyholder entitled to estovers cut down trees for aliene purposes, the lord will be entitled to them.

(e) Co. Litt. 61, b.; Dyer, 248, a.; Com. Dig. Copyhold, R. 5. But see Carmarthen, Mayor, &c. of v. Linns, 6 C. & P. 608, where it was held that the corporation might sue for tolls, although no interest passed by grant under seal.

(f) See as to municipal corporations, the stat. 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76; 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 103; 7 Will. 4 & 1 Vict. c. 78; 1 Vict. c. 84. As to the oaths of allegiance and supremacy to be taken with oath of office, 13 C. 2; stat. 2, c. 1. The declaration in lieu of the sacramental test, 9 Geo. 4, c. 17. See OATH. Conservators were empowered to purchase lands in fee to them and their successors, to make bye-laws affecting strangers using the navigation, and the acts of any five of the committee appointed by the majority, under their hands and seals, were to bind the whole, and they were directed also to sue and be sued by the name of the conservators in the county of S.; held, that as it clearly appeared that they should take such lands by succession, and not by inheritance, although not created a corporation by express words, they were so by implication, and were therefore entitled to sue in their corporate name for injuries done to their lands, and were also entitled to receive the tolls as part of the profits of the lands of which an account was to be rendered. Tone, Conservators of, v. Ash,[1] 10 B. & C. 340. A bond by mayor and commonalty to the mayor is not good. Bro. Corp. pl. 63; 21 E. 4, 7, 12, 27, 69. So of presentation to living. Bro. Corp. pl. 63; 14 H. 8; Vin. Ab. tit. Corp. G. 2; Watson's Parson's Counsellor. And see Salter v. Grosvenor, 8 Mod. 303; Burn's E. L. tit. Dean and Chapter.

(g) Mayor and Burgesses of Stafford v. Bolton, 1 B. & P. 40; Bro. Misno. 73; 22 Edw. 4, c. 34. Mayor, &c. of Lynn's Case, 10 Coke, 122.

(1) [See Medway Cotton Manufactory v. Adams & al. 10 Mass. Rep. 360.]

(A) (Concord v. M'Intire, 6 N. Hamp. 527. Methodist Episcopal Church v. City of Cincinnati, 5 Har. 286. Contra, Agnew v. Bank of Gettysburg, 2 Harr. & Gill. 478. Wood v. Jefferson County Bank, 9 Cow. 205. United States Bank v. Stearns, 15 Wend. 314.)

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxi. 97.

in an action brought by the corporation against an assignee of the grantor, that the grant was evidence that the corporation was known by the name and description specified in the grant at the time of the grant, issue having been joined upon that fact (h).

Evidence of title.

The payment of rent to the bailiffs of a borough by the party, as tenant to a corporation, admits a tenancy from year to year, although a deed of demise has been prepared and executed by the bailiffs and some of the aldermen of the corporation, but has not been sealed with the corporation

*339 *seal (i) (A). If in ejectment by a corporation a demise by deed be alleged, it need not be proved (k).

The payment of rent by the predecessors of bailiffs of a corporation as bailiffs, is evidence of a tenancy by the corporation, and not by the bailiffs, and consequently an ejectment cannot be maintained against the two existing bailiffs (who have not paid rent) without notice to the corporation, in order to determine the tenancy (l).

On an election of town councillors, under the statute 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, the returning officer's duty is only ministerial, to return the candidate who has the actual majority, and the elector must take it upon himself to decide whether the candidate for whom he votes is properly qualified or not; the voting papers are the proper evidence of the election, although not the record of it; but when produced, they must be proved to be the same that were given in at the election (m).

Actions against.

An action of trespass or trover lies against a corporation (n) (B). In an action of trover for a detention by the servants of a corporation within the scope of their employment (as where the agents of the Bank of England detain a number of bank-notes), it appears to be unnecessary to prove that the detention was authorized by the corporation under their seal (o); at all events, an authority will be presumed after a verdict which finds the fact of a conversion by the corporation. So they may be guilty of a disseisin (p), or false return (q).

Assumpsit lies against a corporation whose power of drawing and ac-

(h) Mayor, &c. of Carlisle v. Blamire, 8 East, 487; vide supra, Vol. I. Index, tit. ESTOPPEL. [See also, Dutchess Cotton Manufacturing Company v. Davis, 14 Johns. 238.]

(i) Wood v. Tate, 2 N. R. 247; and see tit. EJECTMENT. An entry in the minutes of a corporation, not being under seal, is not evidence of an agreement with a tenant as to allowance in respect of rent. Ludlow Corporation v. Charleton, 9 C. & P. 242.

(k) Furley v. Wood, 1 Esp. C. 198.

(l) Doe v. Woodman, 8 East, 228. See Goodtitle v. Wilson, 11 East, 334.

(m) R. v. Ledgard, 3 N. & P. 513.

(n) See the authorities, Yarborough v. The Bank of England, 16 East, 6. Where the mayor de facto ordered weights and measures, which were afterwards examined at a full meeting of the corporation, and used to regulate those in the market, held that the corporation was liable, although there was no contract under the corporate seal, and the mayor was subsequently displaced. De Grave v. Monmouth, Corp. of,[1] 4 C. & P. 111.

(o) Ibid. And see tit. AGENT; and R. v. Bigg, 3 P. Wms. 427. [See Garvey v. Colcock, 1 Nott. & M'Cord, 231. Bank of Columbia v. Patterson's Ex'ors, 7 Cranch, 299.] And Smith v. Birmingham Gas Comp.[2] 1 Ad. & Ell. 526. Tolson v. Warwick G. L. Comp.[3] 4 B. & C. 962. Doe v. Pearce, 2 Camp. 96.

(p) Bro. Corp. pl. 24; and Lord Ellenborough's judgment, 16 East, 9. [See Weston v. Hunt, 2 Mass. Rep. 502.]

(q) 16 East, 7, and the cases there cited.

(A) (The seal of a private corporation is not evidence of its own authenticity, but must be proved. Jackson v. Pratt, 10 Johns. 381. Den v. Vreelandt, 2 Halst. 352. Foster v. Shaw, 7 Serg. & R. 163. But the affixing of the seal need not be proved by a witness who saw it done. Foster v. Shaw.)

(B) (Hawkins v. Dutchess and Orange Steamboat Company, 2 Wend. 452. Goodloe et al. v. City of Cincinnati, 4 Har. 500. Chesnut Hill Turnpike v. Rutter, 4 Serg. & Rawle, 16. Riddle v. Proprietors of Locks and Canals, 7 Mass. 187. So also trespass for mesne profits lies against a corporation. M'Cready v. Guardians of the poor, 9 Serg. & R. 94.)

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xix. 300. [2]Id. xxviii. 140. [3]Id. x. 482.

cepting bills has been recognized by a statute (r). But unless authorized by a statute an action of assumpsit does not lie either by or against a corporation (s).

A bye-law may narrow the number of electors, but cannot limit the number of the eligible, nor disqualify an integral part of the electors (t.)

Where a member of a corporate body can derive any personal advantage from the verdict, he is excluded by the general principle; accordingly upon an issue on a mandamus, whether the election of common councilmen in a borough was not confined to persons of a particular description, it was held that one who fell within that description was not competent, since the limitation enhanced the value of his own situation (u). Competency.

*But upon the question, whether to qualify a man to be a common councilman it was not necessary that he should be an inhabitant, and also have a burgage tenement, the Court held that one who was an inhabitant only was competent, because he came to disqualify himself (x). *340

Where an action was brought by a corporation on a custom, it was held that one who had acted in defiance of the custom was not competent to disprove it (y).

A freeman is not competent to support a corporate title to rent, where the rent is reserved to the use of the corporation (z). The corporation of Kingston being lords of a manor, approved part of the common, reserving a rent to the use of the corporation, and a freeman was held to be incompetent (a). But where the question was, whether the defendants had a right to be freemen, and it appeared that there were commons belonging to the freemen, an alderman was permitted to prove the negative, none but aldermen being privy to the making persons free (b). Where the members of a corporation cannot derive any private advantage from the subject-matter which concerns the public only, they are competent witnesses, and, therefore, although the mayor and commonalty of the city of London are entitled to tonnage on coal, but the mayor and sheriffs have the toll for the benefit of the corporation at large, and no particular individual is benefited by it, the freemen, it has been held, are competent witnesses to support the privilege (c). Where a freeman of a corporation is interested, the usual mode of removing the objection is by disfranchisement (d) (1). A release to the corporation of his interest in the subject-matter of the suit is insufficient when he has still an interest in the general funds (e).

(r) Murray v. East India Comp.[1] 5 B. & A. 204. See Slarke v. Highgate Archway Comp.[2] 5 Taunt. 792. Broughton v. Manchester Waterworks Comp.[3] 3 B. & A. 1.

(s) East London Waterworks Comp. v. Bailey,[4] 4 Bing. 283.

(t) Per Lord Mansfield, R. v. Spencer, 3 Burr. 1827. As to notice of meeting, see R. v. Kynaston, 2 Selw. 1143.

(u) Stevenson v. Nevinson, Lord Raym. 1353. (x) Ld. Raym. 1353. Str. 583.

(y) Company of Carpenters v. Hayward, Doug. 60. (z) Burton v. Hinde, 5 T. R. 174.

(a) Ibid. (b) R. v. Phillips & Archer, per Lee, C. J., B. N. P. 289.

(c) R. v. Mayor, &c. of London, 2 Lev. 231; Vent. 351; 1 Vern. 254; 1 Burn's Ecc. Law, 94. R. v. Carpenter, 2 Show. 47. But see Dowdeswell v. Nott, 2 Vern. 217; and the observations of Buller, J., B. N. P. 290. And see tit. Interest; Witness; and Append. Vol. II. 340.

(d) 2 Jones, 116; 2 Lev. 236. A judgment of disfranchisement on a scire facias in the Mayor's Court, and two nihils returned, the witness not having been summoned, and knowing nothing of his disfranchisement, does not render him competent, the corporation being interested. Brown v. Corporation of London, 11 Mod. 225; and see The Saddlers' Company v. Jones, 6 Mod. 166. Weller v. Governors of the Foundling Hospital, Peake's C. 153.

(e) Doe v. Tooth, 3 Y. & J. 19. A corporator is not competent to prove a custom which excludes foreigners. Davis v. Morgan, 1 C. & J. 587.

(1) [See Digest of cases, as to the competency of corporators as witnesses, in Peake on Evidence, Ch. III. sect. 3.]

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. vii. 66. [2]Id. i. 268. [3]Id. v. 215. [4]Id. xiii. 435.

An admission by an indifferent member of a corporation is not evidence against the corporation (f). But what is said by an officer respecting his office in a corporation is evidence against the corporation in an action of disturbance of office (g). And so are admissions by the surveyor of a corporation, in respect of a house belonging to a corporation (h) (A).

COSTS.

Costs must be included in the amount for which the debtor is in execution, under the compulsory clause in stat. 33 Geo. 3, c. 5, s. 3 (i).

Costs are not to be allowed to any plaintiff upon any counts or issues on *341 *which he has not succeeded, and the costs of all issues found for the defendant shall be deducted from the plaintiff's costs (k).

COUNSEL.

Defence by. See Stat. 6 & 7 W. 4, c. 114.

COUNTY. See VENUE.

In general, by the common law, it is necessary to prove the offence to have been committed within the county or division where the indictment is found, and for which the jurors are returned.

By the 5 & 6 Edw. 6, c. 10, upon an indictment for homicide where the death happens, the jurors may inquire as to the stroke, though given in another county. And by a number of other statutes, offences under particular circumstances may be inquired of in other counties than those in which they are committed (l).

Locality of crimes. The common-law rule, that the offence must be proved to have been committed in the county where the indictment is laid, does not exclude collateral evidence, although arising in another county, tending to show the commission of the crime in the first. Thus, proof of possession of stolen goods by the prisoner in one county, is evidence on a charge of his having stolen them in another (m). And in the case of treason, it seems, that after evidence given of the treason in the county in which it is laid, evidence may be given of other instances of the same crime committed in another county, as explanatory of the acts committed in the first (n). Thus where a levying war is laid as the treason, the levying war in another county is evidence to show the nature of the acts in the county in which treason is laid (o). So in the case of conspiracy, evidence of acts done in any other county may be adduced tending to prove the existence of a conspiracy, provided an overt act be proved in the county in which the indictment is laid (p).

By the stat. 7 G. 4, c. 64, s. 12, felonies or misdemeanors committed on the boundaries of two or more counties, or within the distance of 500 yards (f) Mayor of London v. Long, 1 Camp. 23. (g) Ibid. 25. Per Lord Ellenborough.

(h) Peyton v. Governors of St. Thomas's Hospital, 4 M. & R. 625.
(i) Robins v. Creswell,[1] 2 Ad. & Ell. 23.
(k) R. G. Hill. T., 2 Will. 4. A distinct issue is raised on each count by the general issue pleaded to the whole. Cox v. Thompson, 2 C. & J. 498. Bright v. Bevan, 1 D. P. 730.
(l) See Crim. Plead. C. 1.
(m) Butler's Case, East's P. C. 776. Although the contrary has been held, Evans's Case, East's P. C. 776, per Holt, C. J.
(n) Kel. 33; 4 St. Tr. 410. R. v. Hensay, Burr. 650; 2 Haw. c. 46, s. 183.
(o) Cases of Damaree, Purchase, and Willes, 8 St. Tr. 218. Deacon's Case, Fost. 8.
(p) R. v. Brisac, 4 East, 164. R. v. De Berenger and others, 3 M. & S. 67.

(A) (See Williams v. Bank of Michigan, 7 Wend. 540. Scarsburgh Turnpike Co. v. Cutler, 6 Verm. 315.)

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxix. 18.

of any such boundary, or begun in one county and completed in another, may be tried in any or either. And by s. 13, offences committed on any person, or in respect of any property in or upon any coach, waggon, cart, or other carriage employed in any journey, or on board any vessel employed in any voyage, may be tried in any county through any part of which such coach, &c. shall have passed in the course of such journey or voyage; and in all cases where the side, centre, or other part of any highway, or the side, centre, or other part of any river, canal, or navigation, shall constitute the boundary between any two counties, the felony or misdemeanor may be tried in either of those counties through or adjoining to, or by the boundary *whereof such waggon, &c. shall have passed in the course of the journey or voyage. *342

See further, tit. False Pretences.—Forgery.—Larceny, &c.

COVENANT.

The evidence in an action of covenant is closely confined by the nature of the pleadings; the plaintiff is bound to show his title to sue, and to point out the particular breaches of covenant of which he complains, and the defendant is obliged to show the grounds of his defence specially upon the record. The most usual pleas are the—

1. Plea of non est factum.
2. That the deed was obtained by duress.
3. Denial of the plaintiff's performance of a condition precedent.
4. Denial of the breach of a covenant.
   { not to assign without license;
   { for quiet enjoyment.
5. Of entry and eviction.
6. Denial of plaintiff's title as assignee.
7. Denial of the defendant's liability as assignee.
8. A release, &c. (q).

Non est factum.

By the rules of Hill. Term, 4 W. 4, in covenant, the plea of non est factum shall operate as a denial of the execution of the deed in point of fact only, and all other defences shall be specially pleaded, including matters which make the deed absolutely void, as well as those which make it voidable (A).

Upon the plea of non est factum the plaintiff must produce the deed, if pleaded with a profert, and prove the execution in the usual way (r). If (q) See Ind. tit. Deed.—Release.

(r) See Ind. tit. Deed. A party named in a deed of covenant may sue, though he does not execute the deed. If there be mutual covenants between A. and B. on the one part, and C. and D. on the other, and B. does not seal the deed, yet covenant lies by him against C. and D. 2 Roll. 22, l. 35; Com. Dig. tit. Fait. (A. 2.) (G. 2.) See also Cooper v. Child, 2 Lev. 74; Gilly v. Copley, 8 Lev. 138. Abbott on Shipp. 166, 5th edit. Secus, where the party who sues is a stranger to the deed. Where an indenture of lease was made between A. for and on behalf of B. on the one part, and C. on the other part; A. being authorized by a writing, but not under seal, and A. executed the deed in his own name; it was held, that B. could not maintain covenant on the deed, although C.'s covenant purported to be made with B. Berkeley v. Hardy,[1] 5 B. & C. 355. Note, that the execution of a counterpart by a lessee is but evidence of his execution of the original. Ibid. As to the construction of covenants, see Barton v. Fitzgerald, 15 East, 530; Gainsford v. Griffiths, 1 Saund. 59; Howell v. Richards, 11 East, 633; Browning v. Wright, 2 Bos. & Pull. 13. A recital in a lease of mines of an agreement to pull down a smelting-house and rebuild it larger, followed by express covenants to maintain and leave it in good and sufficient repair, amount to a covenant in law to erect the building, and the covenant tending to the support and maintenance of the thing demised passes with the reversion, and the assignee may therefore maintain the action. The agreement appearing to have been between the assignor of the plaintiff and two others, reciting that he had an interest of one undivided third

(A) (Under a statute of Ohio, non est factum is a plea of the general issue in covenant, to which a notice of set-off may be appended. Granger v. Granger, 6 Har. 41. See also Provost v. Calder, 2 Wend. 517.)

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. xi. 251.

*there be no other plea on the record, all the other averments stand admitted (A); and after proof of the defendant's execution of the deed, nothing remains on the part of the plaintiff but to prove the amount of his damages (s). It may be observed that the deed itself, when proved, is evidence against the defendant who has executed it, of all the facts recited in the deed. If, for instance, a lease describe the demised land as meadow-land, this is evidence that it was such at the commencement of the term (t). And an assignment of the original lease by the lessor, executed on the back of the original deed, is evidence against the assignee of such original deed (u). But if the defendant by his plea admit the execution of the deed, he admits so much of the deed as is stated in the declaration, but no more; and if the plaintiff seeks to prove some other recital of the deed not specified in the declaration, he must prove the execution of the deed (x).

Variance. If there be any material variance between the declaration and the deed proved, it will be fatal under this plea. The declaration stated, that by a certain indenture it was witnessed, that as well in consideration of certain furnaces to be erected by the plaintiff, A. B. did demise, &c.; but on the production of the deed, it appeared to be as follows, "That as well in consideration of the erecting the furnaces, as also of building certain houses and payment of rent, A. B. did demise," &c.; and it was held that the variance was fatal (y).

of the premises; held, that it was to be considered as a separate contract with him according to his interest, and the covenants were to be construed with reference to such separate and limited interest. Simpson v. Easterby,[1] 9 B. & C. 505, and judgment was affirmed in error,[2] 6 Bing. 645. And see Saltoun v. Houston,[3] 1 Bing. 433; Bulby v. Wells, Wilmot, 346. Spencer's Case, 5 Co. 16 b. Shep. Touch. (Preston's edit.) 171.

Where the tenant for life, with remainder over, by indenture demised to the plaintiff, his executors, &c. for a term of 15 years without any express covenant for quiet enjoyment, and died before the term expired, the plaintiff was evicted by the remainder-man; held, that the executor of the tenant for life was not chargeable with the covenaat at law, and that no covenant could be implied from the recital of the agreement for a lease for 15 years, subject to the covenants thereinafter contained, the demise by indenture being the completion and performance of that agreement. Adam v. Gibney,[4] 6 Bing. 656. And see Swan v. Searles, Dyer, 257, and Bendl. 150; Hyde v. Canons of Windsor, Cro. Ell. 553; Shep. Touch. 160, and Com. Dig. 100. An action of covenant does not lie against a subsequent chairman of a board of directors on a deed under the seal of the former one, although executed by him for and on behalf of the company. Hall v. Bainbridge, 1 M. & G. 42; 1 Sc. N. R. 151; and 8 Dowl. 583.

(s) B. N. P. 172. Michael v. Stockwith, Cro. Eliz. 120.

(t) Smith v. Woodward, 4 East, 585. (u) Nash v. Turner, 1 Esp. C. 217.

(x) Williams v. Sills, 2 Camp. 519. Watson v. King, 4 Camp. 272.

(y) Swallow v. Beaumont, 2 B. & A. 765. See tit. DEED. 2 Ld. Raym. 792. Howell v. Richards, 11 East, 633. See also tit. VARIANCE. A covenant by articles of agreement, between the commander of a post-office packet with the several owners, to pay the yearly sum of —l., or such other sum as should be allowed by Government, to each and their several and respective executors, &c. in such parts and proportions as were set against their respective names, was held to be a several covenant, and that each was entitled to sue in respect of his separate interest, and that they could not maintain a joint action. Servante v. James,[5] 10 B. & C. 410.

Where in covenant the allegation was, that four "demised by indenture;" held, that it imported a sealing and delivery by the four; and that, upon the issue "non est factum," after proof by the plaintiff of the execution of the counterpart by the defendant, the latter might produce the lease, and show that it was executed by two only, and that it was a fatal variance between the proof and the declaration. Wilson v. Wolfryes, 6 M. & S. 341.

Covenant by the reversioner against the assignee of the grantee. The declaration stated, that A. and B. did grant license for a term of years to C. to continue a channel open through the bank of a navigation, in order that the waste water might pass through the channel to the mills of C., the latter paying a certain annual sum therein mentioned. Breach, non-payment of that annual sum. Semble, that upon the face of the declaration A. and B. must be considered as having the sole ownership of the navigation, and the sole power of granting this privilege; and in that case, that the deed would operate as the grant of an interest in an hereditament, and that the assignee of the grantee would be liable to an action by the reversioner, within the statute 32 Henry 8. By the deed produced in evidence, A. and B. were described as persons having the greatest proportion or share in the profits of the navigation. Held, that by this deed it appeared that

(A) (M'Neish v. Stewart, 7 Cow. 474. Thomas v. Woods, 4 Cow. 173. Legg v. Robinson, 7 Wend. 194. Cooper v. Watson, 10 Wend. 202.)

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xvii. 428. [2]Id. xix. 188. [3]Id. viii. 368. [4]Id. xix. 194. [5]Id. xxi. 98.

*In covenant by a lessor against lessee it is no variance if the plaintiff makes profert of the said indenture, and at the trial produces the counterpart executed by the lessee (z).

For the defendant's evidence under this plea, see tit. DEED.

The proof of this plea lies upon the defendant (a); and it has been said that it is sufficient, in support of such a plea, to prove that the deed was given under an arrest made by the plaintiff without any cause of action, or under an arrest without good authority, though for a just debt; or under an arrest by warrant from a justice for felony, where no felony has been committed; or that a felony having been committed, the arrest was unlawfully made use of to procure the execution of the deed (b). There are contradictory decisions upon the question, whether duress of the goods as well as of the person will avoid a deed (c); since, however, duress must be specially pleaded, the question cannot well arise upon the evidence in an action upon the deed. It is however to be observed, that in the case of Astley v. Reynolds (d), it was held that assumpsit would lie to recover money paid under duress of goods. Plea of duress.

It is laid down in Buller's Nisi Prius, that if A. menace me, except I make unto him a bond of 40*l.*, and I tell him I will not do it, but I will make unto him a bond of 20*l.*, the Court will not expound this bond to be voluntary upon the maxim: "Non videtur consensum retinnuisse si quis ex præscripto minantis aliquid immutavit (e).

Proof of the performance of a condition precedent, when put in issue by the defendant's plea, cannot be dispensed with, although the condition has been performed according to a subsequent parol agreement. The plaintiff covenanted to build two houses for 500*l.*, and in an action for the money, averred that he had built the houses within the time. It was held that he could not be admitted to show that the time had been enlarged by a subsequent parol agreement, and that the houses had been built within the enlarged time (g). Condition precedent.*

Proof of the breach.—The breach must be proved as it is laid in the declaration (h). Breach, &c.

the grantors had not the power of granting the privilege of which the deed, as set out in the declaration, purported to be a grant, and therefore that there was a variance. Held also, that the deed showed that the assignee of the grantee was not bound by the covenants, inasmuch as it appeared that the grantors had not any legal or equitable estate in an hereditament. Earl of Portmore v. Bunn,[1] 1 B. & C. 694.

(z) Pearse v. Morrice, 3 B. & Ad. 396.

(a) 5 Co. 119; B. N. P. 172. See tit. DURESS.

(b) B. N. P. 172; Aleyn, 92. Wooden v. Collins, Mich. 9 Geo. 2. See tit. DURESS. [16 Mass. Rep. 511.]

(c) This is affirmed in 1 Roll. Ab. 687, and denied in Sumner v. Feryman, Hil. 1708. 11 Mod. 201. But in Astley v. Reynolds, Str. 915, it was held that assumpsit would lie for money obtained under duress of goods.

(d) Stra. 915. But see Lindon v. Hooper, Cowp. 414. Vide supra.

(e) B. N. P. 173; Bac. Reg. 22.

(g) Littler v. Holland, 3 T. R. 590.

(h) Where the lessee of premises, demised as a public-house, covenanted that he would use his best endeavours to keep it open as a licensed house, and it having been underlet to several tenants, at length, through the misconduct of one, the license was refused by the magistrates; held, that it lay on the defendant to show that after the withdrawal of it, he did some act to obtain the renewal of the license, but that it was for the jury to say whether the plaintiff, in never having himself taken any steps to obtain the grant of the license, had sustained any substantial damage, and if not, that he was entitled only to nominal damages. Linder v. Pryor,[2] 8 C. & P. 518. Upon a covenant in the assignment of a lease, that the assignor would not keep any licensed victualling house, &c. within the distance of half a mile from the premises assigned; held that

* See tit. ASSUMPSIT, 67. Where the declaration stated an agreement by the plaintiff's testator to sell premises and the defendant to purchase, and that by the indenture of bargain and sale the defendant did covenant to pay the purchase-money on a day stated, "as the consideration of such sale and purchase, with interest, to the completion of the purchase;" held, to be an independent covenant, and that the money might be recovered without tender of a conveyance. Muttock v. Kinglake, 2 P. & D. 343; and 10 Ad. & Ell. 50.

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. viii. 188. [2] Id. xxxiv. 509.

*Where it was assigned thus, "that the defendant had not used a farm in a husbandlike manner, but, on the contrary, had committed waste;" it was held that it was not sufficient to prove that the defendant had used the farm in an unhusbandlike manner, but that he was bound to prove that the defendant had been guilty of waste (i).

Where the covenant was to keep all trees standing in an orchard whole and undefaced, reasonable use and wear only excepted; the cutting down trees past bearing, the landlord being likely to get back his premises at the end of the term in an improved condition, was held to be no breach of the covenant (k).

In covenant, the mean tenant may recover against his under-lessee, for not repairing, the costs of an action for not repairing brought by the original lessor (l).

The proof of the breach not to assign must of course depend upon the terms of the covenant (m).

Not to assign, &c. without licence.

On a covenant not to set, let, or assign over (n), without leave, it was held that an under-lease amounted to a breach (o). But where the covenant was not to assign, transfer, or set over, it was held that an under-letting was not a breach of the covenant (p). Where the proviso was that the lease

*346 *should be void if the lessee assigned, or otherwise parted with the indenture of lease, or the premises thereby demised, or any part thereof, for the whole or any part of the term, without leave, in writing, it was held that the terms included an under-lease (q). A covenant that the lessee, the covenant was to be construed half a mile by the nearest mode of access between the places. Leigh v. Hind,[1] 9 B. & C. 774.

Defendant on a settlement made on his marriage, conveyed estates upon certain trusts, and covenanted with the trustees to pay off incumbrances on the estate to the amount of 19,000*l.* within a year. Held, that on his failing to do so, the trustees were entitled to recover the whole 19,000*l.* in an action of covenant, though no special damage was laid or proved, and an inquisition on which nominal damages had been given was set aside and a new writ of inquiry awarded. Lethbridge v. Mytton,[2] 2 B. & A. 772. Where the Crown lessee of duchy lands had underlet on a building lease, with a covenant that he would apply for and do his utmost to procure a renewal, but his offer was only of a fine to the amount of two years' rack-rent, paid by the occupiers, the Crown requiring as a fine a sum short of three years annual value of the premises; held, that the covenant was to be construed to impose on the covenantor no more than to pay a reasonable fine, but that the fine so claimed by the Crown being found by the jury as reasonable, and that the covenantor having declined to renew on those terms, could not be said to have done his utmost endeavour to obtain a renewal within the meaning of the covenant. Simpson v. Clayton,[3] 4 Bing. N. C. 758; and 6 Sc. 469. Upon a covenant for appearing at any insurance office within the bills of mortality, and answer questions, and do any act to enable the plaintiff to effect a policy on the defendant's life, and not to do any act to avoid such insurance, breach, that the defendant went beyond the limits of Europe; held, that the defendant, being bound to take notice of the conditions of the policy, the declaration was bad for want of averring that he had notice of the policy having been effected, the defendant having no means of knowing at what office, or the terms of their policies, at which the plaintiff might, at his own option, insure. Vyse v. Wakefield, 8 Dowl. 377; and 6 M. & W. 442.

(i) Harris v. Mantle, 3 T. R. 307.

(k) Good v. Hill, 2 Esp. 690.

(l) Neale v. Wyllie,[4] 3 B. & C. 533. Action by mean tenant against under lessee for overloading chamber with meal. Lord Abinger held, Liv. Sum. Ass. 1835, that the plaintiff was not entitled to recover damages recovered against him by the original lessor. Note, there was no distinct evidence of application by plaintiff to defendant to defend an action brought against plaintiff.

(m) In an action of covenant, the breaches are specified in the declaration; but in an action on a bond for the performance of covenants, or to indemnify, the defendant may require a particular of the breaches on which the action is brought. Tidd's Pract. 526.

(n) An assignment by a deed which is void, is no breach of the covenant. Doe v. Powell,[5] 5 B. & C. 308.

(o) Ree v. Harrison, 2 T. R. 426. Such a covenant is a fair and usual covenant. Morgan v. Slaughter, 1 Esp. C. 8. But the taking a lodger is not a breach of a covenant not to underlet. Doe v. Laming, 4 Camp. 77.

(p) Crusoe v. Blencowe, 2 Bl. R. 766; 3 Wils. 224.

(q) Doe v. Worseley, 1 Camp. 20, cor. Lord Ellenborough. A lease by the lessee for the whole term amounts to an assignment. Halford v. Hatch, Doug. 178. Where a lease contained a proviso for re-entry in case the lessee "should demise, lease, grant, or let the premises, or any part thereof, or convey, alien, assign, or set over the indenture, or his estate therein, or any part thereof, for all or any part of the term," it his executors or administrators, will not assign, does not bind his assignees (r).

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. xvii. 495. [2] Id. xxii. 181. [3] Id. xxxiii. 522. [4] Id. x. 172. [5] Id. xi. 241.

Under a covenant not to assign, it is not sufficient to show an assignment by operation of law (s). As under a sale by the sheriff who has seized the lease under a fieri facias (t); or where the assignees under a commission assign the bankrupt's lease (u); or where, as it seems, executors dispose of the testator's term (x); otherwise where an assignmnnt is effected in fraud of the covenant, as by means of a warrant of attorney to confess a judgment, in order that the judgment-creditor may take the lease in execution (y). Where the covenant is not to assign, set over, or otherwise let the demised premises, it is not sufficient to show that a stranger is in possession of the premises, for he may have been a tortious intruder (z). But where the covenant was not to aliene, assign, or part with the possession, it was held to be sufficient to prove a stranger to be (a) in possession (b).

Where the plaintiff declares on a covenant for quiet enjoyment (c), if the covenant be general, he must show in his declaration that the eviction was

Breach.—Quiet enjoyment.*

was held that proof that the lessee had entered into partnership with A. and agreed that he should have the use of a back room, and other parts of the premises exclusively, was evidence of a forfeiture. Roe d. Dingley v. Sales, 1 M. & S. 297.

(r) Doe d. Cheere v. Smith,[1] 5 Taunt. 795.

(s) Assigns are construed to mean voluntary assigns, as contradistinguished from assigns by operation of law; per Lord Ellenborough, 3 M. & S. 358. But the alienation by executors, as in case of bankruptcy, may be restrained by express words. See below, note (u).

(t) Doe d. Mitchinson v. Carter, 8 T. R. 57.

(u) Doe v. Bevan, 3 M. & S. 353; 3 Wils. 237. Fox v. Swan, Sty. 483. Weatherill v. Gearing, 12 Ves. 513. The Courts have construed assigns to mean voluntary assigns, as contradistinguished from assigns by operation of law; and further, that the immediate vendee from the assignee in law is not within the proviso. The reason is, that the assignee in law cannot be encumbered with the engagement belonging to the property which he takes, such as in the case of carrying on the bankrupt's trade in a public house. Secus under a covenant for re-entry in case lessee should become bankrupt, or the lease be assignable under a commission of bankrupt. Doe v. Smith,[1] 5 Taunt. 795. So where the party expressly covenants for his executors. Roe v. Harrison, 2 T. R. 425. As to the case of a devise by will, see Berry v. Taunton, Cro. Eliz. 331; Shepp. Touchstone, 144; Crusoe v. Bugby, 3 Wils. 237; Swan v. Fox, Styles, 482.

(x) Seers v. Hind, 1 Ves. jun. 295.

(y) Doe v. Carter, 8 T. R. 300. Doe v. Skeggs, cited 2 T. R. 134.

(z) Doe v. Payne,[2] 1 Starkie's C. 86.

(a) 4 Taunt. 766; but see Ld. Ellenborough's observation in Doe v. Payne,[2] 1 Starkie's C. 87.

(b) For other decisions on this subject, see tit. EJECTMENT.—FORFEITURE.

(c) This covenant runs with the land, and binds the assignees; and there is no difference between an assignment of an inheritance and a term for years. A. devised for a term to B., who assigned his interest to C., and covenanted with him and his assigns for quiet enjoyment; C. demised to D., who was evicted for a forfeiture by B. before the assignment to C.; and it was held that D. might maintain an action of covenant against B. Lewis v. Campbell,[3] 3 Moore, 35. And see Thursby v. Plant, 1 Will. Saund. 241, b. [Binney v. Hann, 3 Marsh. 324.]

* The words "concessi & demisi," import a covenant in law. Bac. Ab. tit. Covenant, [B] Shepp. Touch. 160; Com. Dig. Cov. [A.] 4. The covenant in such case eases with the estate out of which it is granted. Adams v. Gibney,[4] 6 Bing. 656. In an action for not accepting shares in a railroad, which by the contract were to be transferred and paid for by the 1st of March or any intermediate period, paying for them at par, with all calls, the plaintiff binding himself to execute a legal transfer to the defendant on that day, it appeared that the plaintiff had procured the transfers from a third party, executed, as to the name of the transferee, in blank, which he tendered on the 1st of March to the defendant, and that calls due before that day had not been paid as required by the local Act previous to any transfer; held, upon objection, that the plaintiff having contracted for a conveyance from him, it must be intended to be a conveyance in the statutory form, and upon the implied covenant of the plaintiff for title, and that the implied covenant from the third party was not the same thing; secondly, that the objection upon the local Act had been waived by an agreement by the defendant that the plaintiff should not pay such instalments; and lastly and chiefly, that the conveyance required by the Act being clearly one by deed, an instrument with the name of the vendor in blank at the time of the sealing and delivery was void. Hibblewhite v. M'Morine, 6 M. & W. 200. A covenant in law is restrained by a particular covenant. Nokes v. James, 4 Co. 80; 1 Will. Saund. 60; and supra, note (c). Line v. Stephenson,[5] 4 Bing. N. C. 678;[6] 5 Bing. N. C. 183; where express covenants for warranty are introduced, none can be implied from the general terms. See Stannard v. Forbes,[7] 6 Ad. & Ell. 572; and see Line v.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. i. 270. [2]Id. ii. 307. [3]Id. iv. 258. [4]Id. xix. 194. [5]Id. xxxiii. 492. [6]Id. xxxv. 77. [7]Id. xxxiii. 149.

*made by a person claiming by a legal title inconsistent with his own (d) (1); and his proof must correspond with such averment (e). If the eviction has been obtained by means of legal process, the plaintiff should prove the execution and judgment, and show how it was obtained. Where the covenant is particular against interruption or eviction by the lessor or grantor, or some other specified person, the plaintiff need not allege, and of course need not prove the title of the party interrupting or evicting him (f) (2).

The plaintiff must show some act done, or disturbance of his possession, which amounts to a breach of the covenant. A mere verbal disturbance, by prohibiting the tenant of the covenantee from paying rent, will not amount to a disturbance (g).

Plea of entry and eviction.

In support of this plea in excuse for the non-performance of a covenant the defendant must prove such an entry or eviction as was sufficient to prevent the performance of the covenant.

On a covenant to repair the dwelling-house, proof, under this plea, of an entry into the back-yard would not be sufficient, unless it appeared that his entry wholly prevented the defendant from repairing the house (h).

In an action of covenant for quiet enjoyment against A., and any person by his means, title or procurement, it is sufficient to prove by way of breach, a claim of dower by the wife of A. (i); or an entry by the wife of A., the latter having purchased jointly with his wife (k); or by the appointee of *348 A., under a power to which A. was party (l); or by the eldest son of A., claiming under a settlement made by A. (m).

Where the defendant covenanted that he had not permitted, nor suffered to be done, any act whereby an estate was encumbered, it was held that the assenting to an act which he could not prevent was not a breach of the covenant (n).

(d) Tisdale v. Sir W. Essex, Hob. 34. Foster v. Pierson, 4 T. R. 617. Buckley v. Williams, 3 Lev. 325; Lofft, 460. Hurd v. Fletcher, 1 Doug. 43. Evans v. Vaughan,[1] 4 B. & C. 261. Spencer v. Marriott,[2] 1 B. & C. 457. Brooks v. Humphries,[3] 5 Bing. N. C. 55; 6 Sc. 756. Where the lease contains a covenant for quiet enjoyment against the lessor and those who claim under him, the lessee cannot, upon an eviction by a paramount title, recover under the implied covenant for general title, implied in the word "demise." Merrill v. Frame, 4 Taunt. 329.

(e) Hobson v. Middleton,[4] 6 B. & C. 295.

(f) Perry v. Edwards, 1 Str. 400. Lloyd v. Tomkins, 1 T. R. 671. Such a covenant extends to tortious acts by the specified person. 1 Str. 400. Nash v. Palmer, 5 M. & S. 374. Forte v. Vine, 2 Roll. R. 21; 2 Saund. 181, a.

(g) 1 Brownl. 81.

(h) B. N. P. 165.

(i) Godbolt, 333; Pal. 340.

(k) Butler v. Swinnerton, Pal. 339.

(l) Hurd v. Fletcher, 1 Doug. 43.

(m) Evans v. Vaughan,[1] 4 B. & C. 261.

(n) Hobson v. Middleton,[4] 6 B. & C. 295. A tortious disturbance by a stranger is insufficient. 2 Saund. 178 (n). Dudley v. Folliott, 3 T. R. 587.

Stephenson,[5] 4 Bing. N. C. 678. Where a superior landlord distrains on an under-tenant by deed, the latter cannot sue in assumpsit, but must resort to an action of covenant against his lessor. Schlenker v. Moxey,[6] 3 B. & C. 789. The covenant for quiet enjoyment relates to the assignor's own acts subsequent to the terms vesting in him against any subleases or assignment before granted by the assignor. Per Lord Ellenborough. Barton v. Fitzgerald, 15 East, 542. A covenant by the lessor, that the lessee paying rent shall quietly enjoy, is not a conditional covenant. Dawson v. Dyer, 5 B. & Ad. 584.

(1) [See Yelv. 30, note (1), and the cases there collected. Dalison, 58, pl. 8—110, pl. 2. Nash v. Palmer, 4 M. & S. 374. Greenby v. Wilcocks, 2 Johns. 1. Folliard v. Wallace, 2 Johns. 395. Kent v. Welsh, 7 Johns. 258. Patton v. Kennedy, 1 Marsh, 389, acc. A covenant for quiet enjoyment extends only to disturbances, &c. made by virtue of rights existing at the time the covenant is made, and not to those afterwards acquired. Ellis & al. v. Welch, 6 Mass. Rep. 246.]

(2) [The covenant for quiet enjoyment goes to the possession and not to the title, and is broken only by an entry and expulsion from the possession, or some actual disturbance of it. Waldron v. M'Carty, 3 Johns. 471. Kortz v. Carpenter, 5 Johns. 120. See also Van Slyck v. Kimball, 8 Johns. 198. In North Carolina, a recovery in trespass quare clausum fregit against the grantee, is sufficient evidence of a breach of the covenant for quiet enjoyment. Williams v. Shaw, 2 Taylor, 197.]

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. x. 327. [2]Id. viii. 129. [3]Id. xxxv. 28. [4]Id. xiii. 175. [5]Id. xxxiii. 492. [6]Id. x. 227.

Under a covenant to keep a house in repair, it is sufficient to keep it in substantial repair, according to the nature and circumstances of the building (o); therefore evidence is admissible as to the state and circumstances of the house at the time of the demise (p). Covenant to repair.

On a covenant to keep in repair during the term, an action may be brought during the term (q). It is not sufficient evidence of a breach of covenant to show that the house was destroyed by a tempest, unless the covenantor has delayed to repair it beyond a reasonable time (r).

Upon the execution of a bond, the obligee by deed-poll (releasing a former bond payable by the party's executors, &c., for which the latter had been substituted) covenanted not to sue on the latter bond in the lifetime of the obligor; and that if any other should sue in his name, and recover, that the obligee would pay the obligor, during his life, the interest on the sum recovered; held, that it was no bar to an action by an assignee of the bond suing in the name of the obligee; and that, if the action had been brought for the benefit of the obligee, the defendant should have pleaded the fraud (s). Covenant not to sue.

Covenant by lessor against the assignee of lessee, for non-payment of rent; plea, that before the rent became due the defendants assigned, the replication asserting forth a covenant by lessee, his executors and administrators, not to assign without license: held, that the action being founded on privity of estate, the obligation ceased when the privity was destroyed; the plaintiff's *remedy against the defendant, if within the covenant, was on the covenant not to assign (t). Covenant not to assign. *349

Where the plaintiff declares as assignee (u), and his title is put in issue (o) It is not meant that the house should be delivered up in an improved state, or that the effect of the elements should be averted, but only that it should be kept in the state in which it was before the demise, by the timely expenditure of money and care. Gutteridge v. Munyard, 1 Mo. & R. 334. Burdett v. Withers,[1] 7 Ad. & Ell. 136. And see below, tit. WASTE; and Auworth v. Johnson,[2] 5 C. & P. 239. Harris v. Jones, 1 Mo. & R. 334. Gutteridge v. Munyard, 1 Mo. & R. 334. A covenant to repair is not broken by alterations and improvements, where improvements are contemplatod in the lease, as where the covenant is to keep in repair; (inter alia) Improvements. Doe v. Jones,[3] 4 B. & Ad. 126. But under a covenant to repair and uphold (inter alia) brick walls, the pulling down a brick wall, separating the court-yard from another yard, is a breach. Doe v. Bird,[4] 6 C. & P. 196. So if a doorway be broken into the adjoining house, it is a breach of the covenant to repair. Doe v. Jackson,[5] 2 Starkie's C. 93. A covenant to put the premises, within a reasonable time, in a state of habitable repair, and deliver them up in such state, means such a state, as well with respect to safety as the comfort of the class of persons, and the purpose for which they were to be occupied. Belcher v. M'Intosh, 2 M. & R. 186. A tenant under a covenant to repair is liable for repairs only; he is not liable for any extra expense, e. g. for expense which would be incurred by laying a floor on an improved plan. Soward v. Leggatt,[6] 7 C. & P. 613. A tenant from year to year is bound merely to keep the premises wind and water tight. Leach v. Thomas,[7] 7 C. & P. 327. Under a covenant to keep and leave the house in as good repair as it was in at the time of making the lease, the tenant is bound only to do his best to keep it in the same plight; ordinary and natural decay, is no breach of the covenant. Fitz. Ab. Cov. 4; Shepp. Touch. 169.

(p) Burdett v. Withers,[8] 7 Ad. & Ell. 636. Stanly v. Towgood,[9] 3 Bing. N. C. 4. Mantz v. Goring,[10] 4 Bing. N. C. 451.

(q) Luxmore v. Robson, 1 B. & A. 584. (r) Shepp. Touch. 173.

(s) Morley v. Frere,[11] 6 Bing. 547.

(t) Paul v. Nurse,[12] 8 B. & C. 486.

(u) Before the stat. 32 Hen. 8, c. 34, the action of debt for rent lay for the assignee of the reversion at common law; and the action being founded on privity of estate, was local. Walker's Case, 3 Rep. 22, b.; 4 Mod. 81. Glover v. Cope, 4 Mod. 80; 1 Will. Saund. 241, c. in note. The effect of the above statute was to transfer a privity of contract, and to enable the assignee of the lessor to maintain covenant against the lessee. Thursby v. Plant, 1 Will. Saund. 237. The lessor might, at common law, maintain debt or covenant for rent, or not repairing, or other covenant running with the land, against the assignee of the lessee; but the action was local, as founded in privity of estate. Walker's Case, 3 Rep. 22; 5 Hen. 7, 19, a.; 1 Will. Saund. 241, c. in note; and consequently such an action by the assignee of the reversion against the assignee of the lessee is also local, and must be brought in the county where the land lies. Ibid. Where J. B. seised in fee conveyed to the defendant in fee, to the use that J. B., his heirs and assigns, might take to his use a rent issuing out of the premises, and the defendant covenanted with J. B., his heirs and assigns, to

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxxiv. 57. [2]Id. xxiv. 298. [3]Id. xxiv. 37. [4]Id. xxv. 352. [5]Id. iii. 352. [6]Id. xxxii. 654. [7]Id. xxxii. 527. [8]Id. xxxiv. 187. [9]Id. xxxii. 12. [10]Id. xxxiii. 409. [11]Id. xix. 161. [12]Id. xv. 273.

Plea denying title of plaintiff.

by one or more of the defendant's pleas, he must prove his title as alleged (x) (A); whether as assignee of the reversion, by proof of the due execution of the assignment (y); as assignee of the estate of a bankrupt, by proof of the several steps of bankruptcy, and of the assignment (z), if an assignment be essential to title; as heir (a) of the covenantee; or as his devisee or his executor, according to the circumstances of the case.

The production of an original lease for a long term, with proof of possession for seventy years, affords presumptive evidence of all mesne assignments (b).

Where the action is by an assignee of the reversion on a covenant to pay rent, and the assignment is traversed, the plaintiff may either prove a conveyance duly and regularly made, or a payment of rent to him by the defendant (c).

Plea denying derivative liability of defendant.

So if the defendant, by one or more pleas, deny that he is bound by the covenant, the plaintiff must prove the liability as assignee (d). Upon a *covenant which runs with the land, proof that the defendant is heir will support a declaration which charges him generally as assignee (e).

*350

So the assignee, under a plea to that effect, may show an assignment of the term to another before breach (f). Notice of such assignment to the plaintiff is unnecessary (g); the assent of the assignee will be presumed (h).

The defendant may object that he is assignee of part only, where he is charged as assignee of the whole (i).

pay the rent, and to build on the premises; it was held that the lessee of J. B. could not maintain an action on either covenant against the defendant, for there was no privity either of contract or of estate. Milnes v. Branch, 5 M. & S. 411. [Lienon v. Ellis, 6 Mass. Rep. 331.]

(x) After a lease for twenty-one years, the lessee sublet the premises of M. for the term wanting twenty-one days, and afterwards assigned all his interest in the underlease and reversion to the original lessor, which the latter assigned, with all his interest in fee, to the plaintiff by way of mortgage; M. also afterwards assigned all his interest in the term granted to him, to the defendants by way of mortgage, but the latter never entered. Held, first, that the intermediate interest in the underlease, carved out of the original lease, still remained as a barrier between the original term and the inheritance, and that the immediate reversion did not merge in the larger estate; secondly, that it was not necessary that the original lessor should have been the grantee of the whole of his immediate lessee's reversion, in order to enable him to sue upon the covenants incident to that reversion; and lastly, that the defendants having received the lease in pursuance of the assignment to them, they became legally possessed, and their legal liability as assignees could not be affected by any trusts created in the deed of assignment; the plaintiffs were therefore entitled to sue on the covenants in such underlease for rent. Burton v. Barclay,[1] 7 Bing. 745.

(y) See tit. DEED.

(z) See tit. BANKRUPTCY.

(a) See the several titles DEVISEE, EXECUTOR, HEIR, &c.

(b) Earl v. Baxter, 2 Bl. 1228.

(c) Peake's Ev. 283, Doe v. Parker,[2] there cited; and see Carrick v. Blagrave,[3] 1 B. & B. 531.

(d) If he be charged as assignee of the whole, when in fact he is assignee of part only, the non-joinder of the other tenants in common ought, it seems, to be pleaded in abatement. Merceron v. Dawson,[4] 5 B. & C. 479. In covenant by the lessor against the executor of the assignee of the lessee, become insolvent, for rent accruing subsequently to the death of such assignee; held, that if the latter assented to the assignment made under the 7th Geo. 4, c. 57, and acted as tenant of the premises, his executor was liable as representing the assignee. Abercrombie v. Hickman, 3 N. & P. 676.

(e) Derisley v. Custance, 4 T. R. 75.

(f) Where the defendant proved that he had executed the assignment, but it had not been delivered to the assignee, but remained in the hands of the defendant's solicitor, who had a lien upon it, it was held to be sufficient. Odell v. Wake, 3 Camp. 394.

(g) Pitcher v. Tovey, 1 Salk. 81. Taylor v. Shaw, 1 B. & P. 21.

(h) Ibid.

(i) Hare v. Cator, Cowp. 766.

(A) (The execution of a lease and the possession of the defendant is evidence sufficient, prima facie, to charge a defendant as assignee for the non-payment of rent, but it is not conclusive on him. Williams v. Woodward, 2 Wend. 487. Lansing v. Van Alstyne, 2 Wend. 563. And if the issue is made upon the question whether the defendant holds as assignee, the plaintiff must prove the assignment to the defendant. Lansing v. Van Alstyne.)

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xx. 315. [2]Id. ii. 307. [3]Id. v. 178. [4]Id. xi. 277.

Where the plaintiff declared against the assignees under a commission of bankrupt against the lessee, and averred in the usual form that the estate, right, title, &c. of the lessee came to the defendants by assignment thereof duly made, by virtue of which said assignment they entered into the demised premises, and were possessed thereof for the residue, &c.; it was held, that the averment was not satisfied by proof that the assignees had advertised the lease for sale, (without stating themselves to be the owners), and without taking any possession of the premises (k). But it was said by Lord Ellenborough, that if a bidder had been found, and the defendants had accepted the bidding, that would have been evidence of their assent to take to the premises. And where the assignees of a bankrupt paid rent, not as tenants, but for the purpose of preventing a distress upon the premises where the bankrupt's goods remained, under a protest that they did not mean to adopt the term, unless upon a trial made it should be found to be valuable, and the premises were put up to sale with the plaintiff's concurrence, it was held that they were not liable to covenant for rent, although they had kept the keys of the premises for four months, no application having been made to them to deliver them up (l).

*If the plaintiff state the particulars of the defendant's title, they must, if traversed, be proved as laid (m). But under a general allegation, it is sufficient primâ facie evidence to prove payment of rent or possession by the defendant (n). *351

Proof of possession by the defendant, or of payment of rent, is primâ facie proof that he is assignee. But still the defendant may show that the title is in another, and prove that he is under-tenant only, even though the reversion of but one day be left in the original lessee (o). So the devisee of the equity of redemption, the legal estate being in a mortgagee, is not liable to a covenant running with the land (p). So he may show that he is but appointee, and as being in by the appointor, not liable on a covenant binding on assigns (q). But an actual entry or possession is not essential

(k) Turner v. Richardson and another, 7 East, 335. See also 1 Esp. C. 234; and see Page v. Godden,[1] 2 Starkie's C. 209. Where a party assigned all his property in trust for his creditors, and the assignees, shortly after, advertised the property assigned for sale, including a lease, for which there being no bidder, they tendered the key of the premises; held, that the words of the assignment being large enough to include leasehold interests, it was a question for the jury whether, after the defendants were aware of the existence of the lease, they had so dealt with the property as to make themselves assignees of it, and liable to the covenants; but not, if they had done no more than fairly try, by putting up the lease for sale, whether any benefit could be made of it. Carter v. Warne,[2] 1 M. & M. 479. And see Wheeler v. Bramah, 3 Camp. 340. Hanson v. Stevenson, 1 B. & Ad. 303; and Clarke v. Hume,[3] 1 Ry. & M. 207. In order to charge the assignees of a bankrupt, some evidence must be given of their acceptance of the lease; see 6 G. 4, c. 16, s. 75 Copeland v. Stephens, 1 B. & A. 593. The allowing the bankrupt to carry on the trade upon the premises for the benefit of creditors, under the occasional superintendance of the assignee, is an acceptance, although the assignee by letter to the landlord, disclaim the acceptance. Clarke v. Hume,[3] 1 Ry. & M. 207. So where assignees, chosen on the 8th, suffered the bankrupt's cows to remain on the premises till the 10th, during which time they were, however, milked by order of the assignees, who had received the key of the premises from the messenger. Welsh v. Myers, 4 Camp. 368. See further Hastings v. Wilson,[4] Holt's C. 290. Hanson v. Stevenson, 1 B. & A. 303. It has been held, that the provisional assignee of an insolvent must be taken to have consented to accept the property. Crofts v. Pick,[5] 1 Bing. 354. Doe v. Andrews,[6] 4 Bing. 348. Under the Insolvent Acts, 53 G. 3, c. 102, and 1 G 4, c. 119, the permanent assignees are not bound to accept it. See the stat. 7 G. 4, c. 57, s. 93, and 1 & 2 Vict. c. 110, ss. 37 & 50. A trustee under an assignment for the benefit of creditors has a reasonable time for consideration whether he will take the lease. Carter v. Warne,[2] M. & M. 479.

(l) Wheeler v. Bramah, 3 Camp. 340; and now see the statute 6 Geo. 4, c. 16, s. 75. [See Hanson v. Stevenson, 1 B. & A. 303.]

(m) Turner v. Eyles, 3 B. & P. 461. (n) Doe v. Williams,[7] 6 B. & C. 41.

(o) Holford v. Hatch, Doug. 178. Hare v. Cator, Cowp. 766.

(p) Mayor, &c. of Carlisle v. Blamire, 8 East, 487.

(q) Roach v. Wadham, 6 East, 289. Where the contract for the purchase of leasehold premises amounted to render the assignee of the whole term of a lease liable to the covenant for payment of rent (r).

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. iii. 358. [2]Id. xix. 336. [3]Id. xxi. 417. [4]Id. iii. 107. [5]Id. viii. 345. [6]Id. xiii. 460. [7]Id. xiii. 105.

If the plaintiff charge the defendant through a variety of deeds, instead of charging him generally by virtue of divers mesne assignments, and these be put in issue by the plea, the plaintiff must prove the deeds as stated (s). In respect of a defence on the ground of illegality of contract, there is no difference between a contract by parol and one under seal (t).

Under the plea of release (which must be by deed), it must be proved that the release was executed subsequently to the breach of covenant

In covenant for non-repair, the defendant, it is said, may examine the plaintiff's witnesses generally as to the state of the premises at the time of the demise, but not as to particular defects, and when they arose (u).

A plea of expulsion to a declaration on covenant for non-payment of rent, is not supported by evidence of a mere trespass (x). But an expulsion from part suspends the whole rent (y).

The evidence peculiar to the pleas of Accord and Satisfaction, Infancy, is treated of elsewhere, under the proper titles.

*352 *COVERTURE. See HUSBAND AND WIFE.

CRIMINAL CONVERSATION.

The plaintiff, in an action for criminal conversation with his wife, must prove, 1st. The marriage; 2dly. The fact of adultery; 3dly. It is usual to adduce evidence in aggravation of damages.

Marriage. 1st. His Marriage.—The plaintiff must prove a marriage in fact; proof of cohabitation and reputation are insufficient (z) (1). But this is the only instance in civil cases in which such evidence is insufficient, and the exception in this case is founded partly on the consideration that the proceeding is of a penal nature, and partly as a rule of policy and convenience, to pre-only to an equitable agreement, and there was no legal assignment, it was held that, being equitable assignee of the whole interest, the obligation was co-extensive with that interest, and that the purchaser was liable to indemnify the plaintiff, the equitable assignor, against all damages incurred by reason of breaches of covenant on the lease subsequent to the date of the agreement. Close v. Wilberforce, 1 Beav. 112.

(r) Williams v. Bosanquet,[1] 1 B. & B. 238, overruling Eaton v. Jaques, Doug. 438. See 7 T. R. 312; Stone v. Evans, Woodfall's L. & T. c. 3, s. 15; Co. Litt. 46. b.; 1 Ld. Raym. 367. Grattan v. Diggles, 4 Taunt. 766. But it seems that in order to charge an executor as assignee, it must be proved that he entered on the premises. Tilney v. Norris, 1 Ld. Raym. 553.

(s) 3 B. & P. 461.

(t) In covenant for rent, it is a good plea that the premises were let for the express purpose of being used for drawing oil of tar or pitch, contrary to the provisions of the Building Act. Gas-light and Coke Company v. Turner,[2] 5 Bing. N. C. 666; 7 Sc. 778; 6 Bing. N. C. 324. On an agreement for relinquishment of a trade for a consideration, and covenant against exercising at any time thereafter the trade of a common carrier to and from certain places, held that the Court could not enter into the reasonableness of the restraint in respect of the consideration, nor declare the covenant void by reason of the restriction being unlimited. Archer v. Marsh,[3] 6 Ad. & Ell. (Q. B.) 959; and 2 Nev. & P. 562. Also Hitchcock v. Coker,[4] 6 Ad. & Ell. 438; overruling Horner v. Graves,[5] 7 Bing. 735. A covenant in a lease of a brewery, that the lessor would not carry on the trade during the demise, is void, as being an instrument of trade. Hinde v. Gray, 1 Sc. N. S. 123. But see Archer v. Marsh, and Hitchcock v. Coker, supra.

(u) Young v. Mantz, 6 Sc. 277. See Stanley v. Towgood, 3 Sc. 313; and 3 Bing. N. S. 4.

(x) Hodgkin v. Queenborough, Willes, 131. B. N. P. 177.

(y) Co. Litt. 148. b. Walker's Case, 3 Rep. 22. b.

(z) Morris v. Miller, 4 Burr. 2057. The reason assigned by Lord Mansfield is, that otherwise parties might be liable to such actions on evidence made by the plaintiff who brings the action. In an action for criminal conversation, the plaintiff and his wife being Quakers, the register of their marriage and proof of its having been celebrated according to the forms of that society, held sufficient. Deane v. Thomas, 1 M. & M. 361. In an action for criminal conversation, the letters of the wife to her husband and others are admissible in evidence to show the state of the wife's feelings, although they may also state that which would not strictly be evidence. Willis v. Bernard,[6] 8 Bing. 376.

(1) {Kibby v. Rucker, 1 Marsh, 391, acc.}

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps, v. 72. [2]Id. xxxv. 264. [3]Id. xxxiii. 254. [4]Id. xxxiii. 98. [5]Id. xx. 310. [6]Id. xxi. 325.

vent the setting up of pretended marriages for bad purposes (a). Even the defendant's admission of the fact has been said to be insufficient (b).

The defendant was surprised at a lodging with the plaintiff's wife, and on being asked where Major Morris's wife was, he answered, "in the next room;" this was holden to be insufficient, for it was nothing more than a confession of the reputation that she went by the name of the plaintiff's wife, and not a confession of the fact of marriage (c).

Where, however, the defendant has seriously and solemnly recognized the marriage, it seems, upon principle, that his acknowledgment is admissible evidence of the fact (d) (1).

Since the action is against a wrong-doer, it seems to be sufficient to prove *a marriage according to any religion, as in the case of Anabaptists, Quakers and Jews (e). The evidence to prove a marriage, in fact, which will be more fully considered hereafter (f), usually consists in proving an examined copy of the register, and in the testimony of some one who was present at the ceremony, or who can identify the parties, by evidence of their signatures in the register (g). So the identity may be proved by other circumstances sufficient to satisfy the jury; such as that a wedding dinner was given upon the occasion of the marriage; that the lady left her house for the purpose of being married, and afterwards was known and addressed by her husband's name (h) (A). *353

2dly. The fact of Adultery.—The evidence of this fact, which, from

(a) 4 Burr. 2057. Birt v. Barlow, Doug. 102.

(b) Peake's L. Ev. 358. Birt v. Barlow, Doug. 162. But see tit. Admission.—Polygamy.

(c) Morris v. Miller, Burr. 2057; B. N. P. 27. In strictness, however, and upon general principles, it is difficult to exclude such evidence from the consideration of the jury. To rely upon such evidence to prove a fact, the circumstances of which are peculiarly within the plaintiff's own knowledge, and consequently where better proof might be had, and to substitute for it the mere declaration of the defendant, which may be founded on nothing more than the mere assertion of the parties themselves, would fully warrant the highest degree of suspicion and jealousy, so as to induce the jury, on the recommendation of the Court, to require better evidence. Still cases may occur where evidence resting on the same foundation, but merely stronger in degree, would be not only evidence, but almost conclusive of the fact. Suppose, for instance, that in some other proceeding where it was necessary to prove the same marriage, the present defendant had made an affidavit setting forth all the circumstances of the marriage, and that he was himself present at the ceremony, could it be said that such evidence would not be most cogent to prove the fact of marriage? And yet it would be evidence of the same class with the former, and its admissibility would rest on no other basis than any other assertion made by the defendant would do. (Vide supra, tit. Admissions; Rigg v. Curgenven, 2 Wils. 399; and Lord Ellenborough's observations in Dickenson v. Coward, 1 B. & A. 679; where he says, "I take it to be quite clear, that any recognition of a person standing in a given relation to others is prima facie evidence, against the person making such recognition, that such relation exists.") These observations, which are made for the purpose of preserving the entirety of a general principle, regard the theory rather than the practice in such cases; for it is quite clear that a jury would be fully warranted in refusing to find the fact of marriage upon evidence so slight, when evidence so much better might be adduced.

(d) See the last note, and supra, 20.

(e) B. N. P. 28, cites Woolston v. Scott, per Dennison, J. at Thetford, where the plaintiff was an Anabaptist, and recovered 500*l*. See Ganer v. Lady Lanesborough, Peake's C. 17. But it was formerly doubted whether it was not necessary to prove that the marriage was celebrated according to the rites of the church.

(f) Tit. Marriage.—Polygamy.

(g) In consequence of an expression by Mr. J. Buller, in the case of Birt v. Barlow, a doubt has been raised whether, if the original register be produced, the subscribing witnesses ought not to be called. This doubt seems to be wholly destitute of foundation; the object of such proof is not to bind a party by the contents of an instrument, but merely to prove the identity of the parties; and therefore the objection does not arise, that evidence is adduced to authenticate the instrument different from that which the parties have themselves constituted.

(h) See Birt v. Barlow, Doug. 162.

(1) {Therefore the declaration of the defendant, that he knew A. B. was married to the plaintiff, and that with full knowledge of that fact he had seduced and debauched her, may be given in evidence in proof of the marriage. Forney v. Hallacher, 8 Serg. & Rawle, 159.}

(A) (Marriage is a civil contract, and may be completed in any words of the present tense, without regard to form. Hantz v. Sealy, 6 Binn. 405. But general reputation is no evidence of marriage in an action for criminal conversation. Weaver v. Cryer, 1 Dev. 337.)

Fact of adultery.

its very nature, is usually circumstantial (i), must be sufficient to satisfy the jury (j) that an adulterous intercourse has actually taken place (1) (a). Proof of familiarities, however indecent, is insufficient, if there be reason to apprehend, from the fact of the parties being interrupted, or on any other circumstance, that a criminal conversation has not actually taken place.

The nature of the proofs upon this head are too obvious to require specification. They usually consist in evidence of indecent familiarities between the parties (k); their elopement; their passing as man and wife at the inn; of the season, frequency and privacy of their meetings, and of all other circumstances attending their intercourse, and indicating the nature of it (2).

Where a discovery has been made by a servant, it is of importance to show that it was promptly communicated to the party injured; if it was not made till after a quarrel or dismissal from the service, or after a long interval, the evidence labours under great suspicion.

Letters written by the defendant to the wife frequently afford strong evidence of the nature of their intercourse (l).

Where the statute of limitation has been pleaded so as to exclude the recovery of damages for adulterous intercourse, which took place at a greater distance of time than six years previous to the commencement of the action, it has been held that anterior acts of adultery are still evidence for the purpose of showing the nature of the connection which subsisted within the six years (m).

*354 *The confession of the wife will be no evidence against the defendant (n); but a discourse between the wife and the defendant is evidence (o), as also are letters written by the defendant to the wife.

Damages.

3dly. Evidence of Damage.—There is no case in which the damages depend more upon the particular circumstances of the case than in the action for adultery. The injury to the husband in the dishonour of his bed—the alienation of his wife's affections—the destruction of his domestic comforts, and the suspicion cast upon the legitimacy of her offspring, is usually visited with considerable damages where there has been no fault on the part of the plaintiff. It is a trite observation, that such a loss does not admit of any pecuniary estimate or compensation; this is true: but on the other hand, such damages, if not an adequate retribution, constitute the only

(i) In the Causes Celèbres, tom. 18, p. 451, the law of England on this subject is thus caricatured: "Les preuves de l'adultere des femmes sont très difficiles: il faut que le mari puisse prouver qu'il a, comme dit. Madame Pernelle du Tartuffe, vû de ses propres yeux: autrement il n'est pas ecouté."

(j) Presumptive evidence of the fact is sufficient in the Ecclesiastical Courts. See Loveden v. Loveden, 2 Hag. Con. 2. The only general rule that can be laid down upon the subject is, that the circumstances must be such as would lead the guarded discretion of a reasonable and just man to the conclusion; per Sir W. Scott, Ib. And see Chambers v. Chambers, 1 Hagg. Con. 444. Williams v. Williams, Ib. 299. Elwes v. Elwes, Ib. 277. Cadogan v. Cadogan, 2 Hagg. Con. 4. Wood v. Wood, 4 Hagg. Eccl. Rep. 138 (n).

(k) Duke of Norfolk v. Germaine, 8 St. Tr. 27. (l) B. N. P. 28.

(m) Duke of Norfolk v. Germaine, 8 St. Tr. 27.

(n) B. N. P. 28. Baker v. Morley, Guildhall, 1739.

(o) Ibid. So letters written by the wife to the defendant and received by him, would, coupled with his conduct after the receipt, be evidence against him. See the observations of Sir W. Scott, Loveden v. Loveden, 2 Hagg. 52.

(1) [The same evidence that would warrant a divorce for adultery would probably be sufficient to support an action for criminal conversation. With respect to the former, Sir William Scott says, direct evidence of the facts is not required, but the rule is, that there must be such proximate circumstances proved, as on their own nature and tendency satisfy the legal conviction of the court, that the criminal act has been committed. Williams v. Williams, 1 Haggard's Rep. 299. Elwes v. Elwes, ibid. 278. See Torre v. Summers, 2 Nott. & M'Cord, 267.]

(2) [When the injury is stated to have been committed within certain days, proof of improper freedom must first be given within the limited period, before evidence of the act at a different time can be received. Gardner v. Madeira, 2 Yeates, 466.]

(a) (What is sufficient proof of adultery, on a petition for divorce. Gould v. Gould, 2 Aikens, 180. Randall v. Randall, 4 Greenleaf, 326. Anderson v. Anderson, Id. 100.)

one which the law can award; and the impossibility of giving full redress is a bad reason for giving none, and for depriving morality of one of its safeguards.

Evidence in aggravation usually consists in showing the rank and quality of the plaintiff; the condition of the defendant; that he was received by the plaintiff as a friend or relation; that he was dependent on the plaintiff; that he was a man of fortune and condition; that the plaintiff and his wife, previous to the seduction, lived upon terms of affection and domestic comfort. For this purpose general evidence (p) is admissible by any witness acquainted with the family, who can testify to their demeanour and conduct, and to the terms on which they lived. Letters written by the wife to the plaintiff previous to any suspicion of a criminal intercourse are also admissible with the same view; but, in order to obviate all suspicion of collusion in such case, it is essential to give reasonable evidence to show that the letters had existence at the time (q); as by proof that the wife, at the time of writing, showed or read them to a witness (r); and it is desirable, under such circumstances, to explain the reason of the wife's living apart from the husband at the time when she wrote such letters (s). But it does not appear to be essential to give such explanatory evidence where there is no ground to suspect collusion (t) (1). Evidence in aggravation.

The wife's letters to a third person, written before suspicion of the criminal intercourse, are also admissible, although they contain facts which are not in themselves admissible evidence (u).

The opinion which a witness has formed of the wife's affection for her husband, from the anxiety which she has expressed for him, and her mode of speaking of him during his absence, is also evidence to the same end (v).

Proof of a settlement, and provision for the children, is also evidence in aggravation (x).

*The representation made by the wife to her husband on the eve of her elopement is admissible, as part of the res gestæ, in order to remove all suspicion of connivance on the part of the husband (y). *355

The plaintiff cannot go into general evidence of the wife's good conduct until an attempt has been made to impeach it (z).

The defendant, under the general issue, will be entitled to enter into any evidence to disprove the marriage, or the fact of adultery, or to show that the plaintiff has sustained no injury in law or fact. It has, in one instance, been held that the defendant might prove the plaintiff's connection with other women after his marriage, in bar of the action (a); but in a subse- Evidence for defendant in bar.

(p) Ld. Ellenborough, in Trelawney v. Coleman, 1 B. & A. 90, is reported to have said, "What the husband and wife say to each other is evidence to show their demeanour and conduct." But qu. whether the evidence in such case ought not to be general.

(q) Trelawney v. Coleman,[1] 2 Starkie's C. 191; 1 B. & A. 90. Edwards v. Crock, 4 Esp. C. 39. Willis v. Bernard,[2] 8 Bing. 376.

(r) Ibid. Edwards v. Crock, 4 Esp. C. 39.

(s) Trelawney v. Coleman,[1] 2 Starkie's C. 191.

(t) Ibid.

(u) Willis v. Bernard,[2] 8 Bing. 376.

(v) Ibid.

(x) B. N. P. 27. Evidence of the amount of the defendant's property is not admissible with a view to damages; per Alderson, B. James v. Beddington,[3] 6 C. & P. 589. Contra, 1 Selw. N. P. 25. See tit. MARRIAGE.

(y) Hoare v. Allen, 3 Esp. C. 276.

(z) See tit. CHARACTER.

(a) By Ld. Kenyon, in Wyndham v. Ld. Wycomb, 4 Esp. C. 16. Sturt v. Marquis of Blandford, there cited.

(1) {In Pennsylvania, the husband cannot support this action, after an agreement of separation made with his wife—if such agreement be voluntary on his part, and not constrained. Fay v. Derstler, 2 Yeates, 278.}

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. iii. 308. [2]Id. xxi. 325. [3]Id. xxv. 553.

quent case (b), it was decided that the fact went in mitigation of damages only.

The defendant may show in mitigation the misconduct of the plaintiff, in respect of illicit connection with other women (c), or ill treatment of the wife; that he turned her out of doors, and refused to maintain her (d).

It was laid down by Lord Mansfield as clear law, that if a woman be suffered to live as a prostitute with the privity of her husband, and a man be thereby drawn into criminal conversation, no action will lie: it is a damage without an injury. But if it be not with the husband's privity, it will only go to the damages, let her be ever so profligate. And Pratt, C. J., declared himself to be of the same opinion, in a similar case, about the same time (e).

So if the criminal connection can be shown to have taken place with the husband's privity and consent, the action will not be maintainable (f); for a plaintiff cannot be allowed to recover damages in a court of justice grounded on his own turpitude; and besides, the maxim applies volenti non fit injuria.

In one case it was held (g), that proof that the husband and his wife
*356 were *parted upon articles of separation, was a bar to the action; but in a latter case, the propriety of that decision has been doubted. And at all events, where the husband does not, by the articles of separation, renounce all future intercourse and society with his wife, and all assistance to be derived from her in respect of the education of his children, the separation will not be a bar to the action (h).

(b) Bromley v. Wallace, 4 Esp. C. 237. (c) Bromley v. Wallace, 4 Esp. C. 237.

(d) B. N. P. 27. A witness called to prove the previous harmony of the husband and wife, may be cross-examined as to declarations made by her previous to the adultery, of ill usage by him. Winter v. Wroot, 1 Mo. & R. 404.

(e) Smith v. Allison, Sittings at West. cor. Ld. Mansfield, after Trin. 5 Geo. 3, B. N P. 27. But in a previous case of Cibber v. Sloper, (per Lee, C. J., cited B. N. P. 27,) it was holden that the action lay, although the privity and consent of the husband to the defendant's connection with the wife were fully proved.

(f) B. N. P. 27. Hodges v. Windham, Peake's C. 39. Duberley v. Gunning, 4 T. R. 655. The plaintiff is entitled to recover, unless he is shown to have been in some degree a party to his own dishonour, by giving a general license to the wife to conduct herself generally as she pleased towards men, or to have assented to the particular instance, or to have renounced totally and permanently all advantage from her society; all which, as well as the amount of damages for the loss of the society of such a person, are questions for the jury. Winter v. Henn,[1] 4 C. & P. 494. And even where the husband had never published his marriage, and only occasionally visited her, whilst living with her mother as an unmarried daughter, and permitted her to receive the visits of other men, and to follow a profession particularly exposed to danger; held, that such circumstances were only in mitigation of damages, and not in bar of the action. Calcraft v. Lord Harborough,[2] 4 C. & P. 499. In Trevanion v. Daubuz, Bodmin Sum. Assizes, 1834. Roscoe on Evidence, 482. Patteson, J. told the jury that the neglect or misconduct of the husband was only matter of mitigation, but that if his conduct was occasioned by a desire to get rid of his wife, if he had thereby encouraged the advances of the defendant, and testified a desire to throw her away, they would properly find for the defendant; and see Winter v. Henn,[1] 4 C. & P. 498. Howard v. Burtonwood, 1 Sel. N. P. 10. Hoare v. Allen, Sel. N. P. 11. 3 Esp. C. 276.

(g) Weedon v. Timbrel, 5 T. R. 357. Bartelot v. Hawke, Peake's C. 7. In the latter case the husband and wife had been separated by articles, and Lord Kenyon said, that if the parties were separated by mutual consent at the time, he was of opinion that the husband could not maintain the action, for it was impossible to receive any injury by losing the society of a wife whom he had already abandoned; but proof being given of adultery previous to the separation, the plaintiff had a verdict. In Hodges v. Windham, Peake's C. 39, the parties living apart under articles of separation at the time of the adultery, Lord Kenyon himself said, that he doubted on the question, but allowed the case to proceed, taking a note of the objection. Lord Ellenborough, in Chambers v. Caulfield, 6 East, 248, infra, note (h), said, that he did not consider the question as concluded by the case of Weedon v. Timbrel; and Abbott, C. J., in Graham v. Wigley, 2 Roper's Husband and Wife, 323, 2d ed., held that a voluntary separation without deed, so that a suit was still maintainable for restitution of conjugal rights, was no bar.

(h) Chambers v. Caulfield, 6 East, 244.

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. xix. 491. [2] Id. xix. 494.

Mere separation for the sake of convenience, as where the parties are servants in different families (i), is no bar; neither is any voluntary separation without deed (k).

The defendant may show, in mitigation of damages, that the wife had before eloped, or had been connected with others; that she had borne a bastard before marriage (l); that she had been a prostitute previous to her connection with the defendant (m); that she was a woman of loose conduct, and notoriously bad character; that she made the first overtures and advances to the defendant (n) (A); that his means and expectations are inconsiderable. Evidence for defendant in mitigation.

Where, on cross-examination of the plaintiff's witnesses, it was insinuated that the plaintiff had left his wife abroad against her will; a letter written by her on that occasion, and before the criminal acquaintance with the defendant commenced, was held to be admissible evidence (o).

Evidence aimed against the previous character and conduct of the wife is obviously of a dangerous nature, and not to be resorted to, unless it be of a strong and decisive cast; a failure in the attempt to affect the character of the wife at a time previous to the criminal intercourse, would probably increase the amount of the damages very considerably.

A declaration made by the wife at the time of eloping from the husband, that she fled through fear of personal violence, is evidence in an action against the adulterer (p).

The letters of the wife to the defendant are not in general evidence for *the latter (q). Where, however, they were written previously to any illicit intercourse, they may be admissible for the purpose of showing solicitation by the wife (r). *357

The recovery against another defendant, in respect of a similar cause of action, which accrued during the same period, is no bar to the action (s).

CRUELTY TO ANIMALS, 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 59.

CUSTOM (t).

Customs, with a view to the present object, may be classed, 1. As the general and ancient customs of the realm; 2. Particular local customs; 3. Different kinds of.

(i) Edwards v. Crock, 4 Esp. C. 39.

(k) Per Abbott, C. J., in Graham v. Wigley, 2 Roper's Husb. and Wife, 323, 2d ed. supra, note (f).

(l) Roberts v. Malston, per Willes, C. J., Hereford, 1745; B. N. P. 296.

(m) B. N. P. 27. But it is there also laid down, that the defendant cannot give evidence of the general reputation of her being or having been a prostitute, for that may have been occasioned by her familiarity with the defendant; though, perhaps, having laid a foundation, by proving her being acquainted with other men, such general evidence may be admitted. But acts of misconduct by the wife with others after the adultery are not admissible. Per Ld. Kenyon, Elsam v. Fawcett, 2 Esp. C. 562.

(n) Elsam v. Fawcett, 2 Esp. C. 562; 1 Sel. N. P. 25. Gardiner v. Jadis, 1 Sel. N. P. 25. [See Torre v. Summers, 2 Nott & M'Cord, 267.]

(o) Willis v. Bernard,[1] 8 Bing. 376.

(p) Per Ld. Ellenborough, 6 East, 188. Here the evidence is admissible, because it explains the nature of the act; the general rule is, that her unconnected declarations are not evidence on either side. Winsmore v. Greenbank, Willes, 577.

(q) Baker v. Morley, B. N. P. 28.

(r) Elsam v. Fawcett, 2 Esp. C. 562.

(s) Gregson v. M'Tuggart, 1 Camp. 415.

(t) Prescription is always personal, and made in the name of a certain person and his ancestors, and those whose estate he hath; custom is local, and alleged in no person, but that within a manor, &c. is such a custom, and that serves for those who cannot prescribe in their own name, because not in the name of any person certain as inhabitant of a town, &c. Foiston v. Crachroode, 4 Co. 31.

(A) (Norton v. Warner, 9 Day, 172. The rank and condition of the plaintiff in life, cannot be given in evidence in an action for criminal conversation, to increase or diminish the damages, but evidence of unkind treatment by him of his wife, produced by drunkenness or otherwise, is admissible. Ibid.)

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxi. 325.

Mercantile customs, which are not part of the ancient law, but have been ingrafted into it; 4. Customs, or rather usages, which are so common and prevalent as to afford a presumption of their adoption as matter of contract in particular instances.

General customs. It would be foreign to the present purpose to observe upon the first of these classes. Such customs constitute a large portion of the lex non scripta, or common law of the land. These are not matter of evidence; where a doubt arises concerning them, it is to be resolved by the Judges in the several courts of justice. They are, to use the language of Sir W. Blackstone, the depositaries of the laws, the living oracles who must decide in all cases of doubt, and who are bound by oath to decide according to the law of the land (u).

Local customs. 2dly. Particular customs which affect the inhabitants of particular districts.

The customs of Gavelkind and Borough English are noticed by the law without proof (v), but other private customs must be pleaded and proved. The customs of London differ from others in point of trial. If the existence of the custom be brought in question, it is not tried by a jury, but by certificate from the lord mayor and aldermen by means of the recorder (x), unless the corporation be interested in the custom, as where they claim a right of taking toll, and then they are not allowed to certify in their own behalf (y).

In order to establish a particular local custom before a jury, it must be shown that it has existed so long that the memory of man runneth not to the contrary; for if it appear to have originated within time of legal memory, that is, since the beginning of the reign of Richard I., it is not a good custom (z).

Next it must appear, that the usage has been continued; for if there be any chasm or interruption of the right within the time of legal memory, there must have been a revival or beginning within the time of legal memory, which will avoid the custom. But an interruption in the possession or enjoyment only, though for 10 or 20 years, will not destroy the custom; as, if *358 *the inhabitants of a parish have a customary right of watering their cattle at a certain pool, the custom is not destroyed, although they do not use it for 10 years, it only becomes more difficult to be proved; but if the right be discontinued, though but for a day, the custom is at an end (a). It must also have been peaceable, and acquiesced in, and not subject to contention and dispute; for since customs originate in common consent, their being immemorially disputed at law, or otherwise, is a proof that such consent was wanting.

Customs must also be reasonable, or rather, taken negatively, must not be unreasonable (1), which, according to Sir Edward Coke (b), is not to be always understood of every unlearned man's reason, but of artificial or legal reason, warranted by authority of law; upon which account a custom may be good, though the particular reason of it cannot be assigned, for it sufficeth, if no good legal reason can be assigned against it (c) (A).

(u) 1 Comm. 69. A custom which runs through the whole land is the common law. Per Littleton, J.; Y. B. 8 Ed. 4, 18, 19.
(v) Co. Litt. 175.
(x) Cro. Car. 516.
(y) Hob. 85.
(z) 1 Bl. Comm. Introd. s. 3; 2 Roll. 269, l. 10, 45. See tit. PRESCRIPTION.
(a) 1 Com. Int. s. 3.
(b) 1 Inst. 62.
(c) 1 Com. Int. s. 3; 1 Inst. 62. A custom that none but a freeman, or the widow or partner of a free-

(1) [See Freary & al. v. Cook, 14 Mass. Rep. 488. Gallatin v. Bradford, 1 Bibb, 209.
(A) (A usage of plaisterers to charge one-half part of the size of the windows, where the price agreed

To constitute a legal custom, it is not only necessary that its existence should be established by evidence, and also that it should be reasonable, but that it should be certain, compulsory, and consistent (d). Requisites of.

The usual evidence of custom consists in acts of usage within the knowledge and experience of living witnesses; upon which alone, and without the aid of more remote evidence of a documentary or traditionary nature, the presumption of a custom may be built (e).

It consists also in the proof of court-rolls, customaries, and other ancient writings, the nature and force of which, in the proof of customary descents and tenures, have already been considered (f); and also in reputation and traditionary declarations, and in such decrees, judgments, and other documents *as fall within the general principle on which reputation is admissible (g). *359

With respect to reputation and traditionary declarations, as applied to the proof customs, some rules are to be observed which have already been noticed. Proof by reputation.

1st. They must be supported by evidence of the exercise of such right or custom (h); 2dly, must be of a public nature (i); 3dly, derived from man, shall sell by retail in a city or the suburbs, is valid. Mayor of York v. Welbank,[1] 4 B. & A. 438. Where there is a custom to exclude foreigners from exercising a trade within a corporation, a bye-law to support the custom, which gives a penalty to any but the corporation, is bad. Totterdell v. Glazby, 2 Wils. 266. A custom is good for a tenant to have a way-going crop. Wigglesworth v. Dallison, 1 Doug. 201; that he may leave the way-going crop in the barn, Beavan v. Delahay, 1 H. B. 5; that beech shall be deemed to be timber, Aubrey v. Fisher, 10 East, 446. A custom for the churchwardens to set up monuments in a church without the consent of the rector or ordinary is illegal. Beckwith v. Harding, 1 B. & A. 508. See also Fryer v. Johnson, 2 Wils. 28. So is a custom to appoint separate churchwardens and overseers, and make separate rates for a borough within a parish, and the rest of the parish. R. v. Gordon, 1 B. & A. 524. So, though a custom for all the inhabitants of a parish to play at all kinds of lawful games, at all seasonable times, within a particular close, is good, such a custom for all persons for the time being, being in the same parish, is bad. Fitch v. Rawling, 2 H. B. 393. So a custom for poor and indigent householders, living within a particular district, to cut and carry away rotten boughs and branches, cannot be supported, the description of persons being too vague. Selby v. Robinson, 2 T. R. 758; and see Steel v. Houghton, 1 H. B. 51. Worlledge v. Maning, 1 H. B 53, n.; R. v. Price, 4 Burr. 1925. See tit. Manor. A custom contrary to the principles of resulting trust is bad. Lewis v. Lewis, 2 M. & R. 449. To seize and burn unwholesome meat is good. Vaughan v. Howard, 1 Mod. 202; 2 Mod. 56. So for a leet jury to destroy measures found by them to be false, is lawful. Wilcock v. Windsor,[2] 3 B. & Ad. 43. A custom for the lord of a manor to inclose without limit, is bad. Arlett v. Ellis,[3] 7 B. & C. 346. And a custom depriving the rector of his common-law right when not immemorial, cannot be established by mere long usage; nor will an allegation of a custom "in parishioners" to elect be supported by evidence of the exercise by "parishioners paying church rates." Arnold v. Bishop of Bath and Wells,[4] 5 Bing. 316; 1 B. & Ad. 605.

(d) See 1 Bl. Comm. 78, 9.

(e) Usage, though it be not ancient, which is admissible and unopposed by opposite evidence, is usually conclusive. R. v. Hoyte, 6 T. R. 430.

(f) See Copyhold; and Vol. I. Ind. tit. Custom.

(g) B. N. P. 295. R. v. Eriswell, 3 T. R. 709. Morewood v. Wood, 14 East, 327, n.

(h) Vol. I. Ind. tit. Custom.

(i) Ibid.; and Weeks v. Sparke, there cited, 1 M. & S. 679; B. N. P. 295. Because, according to Lord Kenyon, all mankind being interested in the subject, it is to be presumed that they will be conversant with and discourse together about it, which cannot apply to private prescription. 14 East, 327, n.

---

on includes the cost of materials, is unreasonable and bad. Jordan et al. v. Meredith, 3 Yeates, 318. A usage in a particular place, for masters of vessels stranded there, to sell the cargo when there is no necessity for the sale, can have no validity. Bryant v. Commonwealth Ins. Co., 6 Pick. 131. So also a custom to take anything from another's land, is not a lawful custom. Waters v. Lilly, 4 Pick. 145. But a custom of masters of ships engaged in the whaling business, to enter into a species of partnership which is termed mateship, is a reasonable custom, and a contract made conformably to it is binding upon the owners, unless prohibited by them. Baxter v. Rodman, 3 Pick. 435. So also that freight money in a particular voyage, is the perquisite of the master. Halsey v. Brown, 3 Day, 346; or that gin may be stowed on deck at the shipper's risk. Barber v. Brace, 3 Conn. Rep. 9. But evidence of a custom of persons travelling in the same direction, for the leading carriage to incline to the right, the other making the transit at the same time to the left, cannot control the general law that a traveller may use the middle, or either side of a public road at his pleasure, and is not bound to turn aside for another travelling in the same direction, provided there be convenient room to pass on the one hand or the other, although it is the duty of the leading traveller to yield reasonable accommodation. Bolton v. Colder, 1 Watts, 360.)

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. vi. 479. [2]Id. xxiii. 29. [3]Id. xiv. 53. [4]Id. xv. 459.

persons likely to know the facts (k); 4thly, must be general (l); 5thly, must be free from suspicion (m).

By court-rolls. The entry by homage on the court-roll is evidence to prove a custom within the manor, although there be no evidence of the exercise of that custom in any particular instance; for it is the solemn opinion of the homage, delivered upon oath upon being convened to inquire into the point, and founded on all the information which tradition and personal observation can give them (n). So an ancient writing found amongst the court-rolls of a manor, and delivered down from steward to steward, and purporting to be ex essensu omnium tenentium, is evidence to prove a customary mode of descent, as that the lands shall descend to the eldest sister where there is no son or daughter (o).

It has been held that a single instance of a surrender in fee by a tenant in special tail of a copyhold estate, was (being unresisted by other evidence) evidence to prove a custom within the manor to bar entails by surrender, although the surrenderor had not been dead twenty years (p).

Custom of different districts. In general, the custom of one manor or other district (q) is not admissible to prove the existence of the same custom in another manor, for without some general connecting link the existence of the custom in one place affords no presumption of the existence of a similar custom in another. But if the custom in question be a particular incident to some general tenure which is common to two manors or districts, then the existence of the incident custom in one is evidence of its existence in the other also (r); otherwise a custom in one parish is no evidence of the existence of the same custom in an adjoining parish (s); and the custom in one archdeaconry is not admissible to show that the same usage prevails in another archdeaconry (t). Where the issue was upon a custom in the borough of Hastings, which was stated to be one of the Cinque-ports, it was held that a customal was evidence which represented the custom to exist in each of the Cinque-ports, *360 although it was *urged that it was not admissible to prove a custom alleged to be the custom of Hastings and not co-extensive with the Cinque-ports (u).

So, in some instances, where an analogy arises from the nature of the subject-matter, one custom may be evidence to prove another; as with respect to the right of soil in fen lands, or the profits of mines (x). Where the question was as to the right of a copyholder in fenny and marshy lands to dig up the lord's soil for turf, evidence was admitted of the custom in an adjacent manor.

Mercantile customs. 3dly, The Customs of Merchants, or Lex Mercatoria.—These are, in strictness, a branch of the general law of England. For although the learned writer of the Commentaries has classed the Customs of Merchants under the same head with Local Customs (y), they are very different in many essential respects, particularly in the following: they are general and binding on all without proof, and it is not necessary that they should have prevailed for time beyond legal memory, and they may be valid, although inconsistent (k) Vol. I. Ind. tit. Custom.

(l) Ibid. B. N. P. 295.
(m) Ibid.
(n) 5 T. R. 26.
(o) Denn v. Spray, 1 T. R. 466.
(p) Roe v. Jeffrey, 2 M. & S. 92, supra.
(q) Where there was no evidence of the existence by custom, for the Crown to have the feudal right of primer seisin, or l'année de succession, upon a fief, being one of the five great fiefs in Jersey; held, that it could not be supported, the existence of such a right in one country affording no inference in favour of it in another; and parties claiming such a feudal burden are bound to establish by custom in the country where it is sought to be established. Attorney-General v. Symonds, 1 Knapp, 390.
(r) Duke of Somerset v. France, Str. 652; 3 Keb. 90; Fost. 41, 44; Doug. 495; Cowp. 808.
(s) Furneaux v. Hutchins, Cowp. 808.
(t) Ruding v. Newell, Str. 933; Fost. 41; Doug. 495.
(u) Moore v. The Mayor, &c. of Hastings, 10 St. Tr. Append. 137.
(x) Per Lord Hardwicke, 2 Atk. 189.
(y) 1 Comm. 75; Winch. 24.

with the old common law. This system of customs is of mercantile invention and practice, and has been ingrafted into the common law for the benefit of trade and commerce. It is curious to observe the process by which those rules, which were in the first instance adopted by merchants for their own convenience, have become embodied with the common law; and it is useful to do so in order to distinguish between those mercantile customs which have been thus introduced, and others which are not already recognized by the law, but which may nevertheless be established by proof, and others again which may be used in evidence for the sake of the presumptions which they afford as to the intention of the parties in particular instances.

General mercantile customs, which have frequently become the subject of legal investigation in the course of evidence, when ascertained by long experience to be of public use and utility, are at last recognized and adopted by the law without further proof. It would be evidently fruitless and nugatory to go on requiring the same proof of usage in every particular instance (1). Hence that custom or usage which was at first but evidence of the intention of the parties becomes at last a general rule of law; and this has happened in some instances even where the mercantile custom has been inconsistent with the rules of common law, as in the instance of bills of exchange (z) (2).

When such general customs have been adopted and recognized by the law, they are no longer subject to variation according to new practices and devices introduced by merchants (A).

Not subject to variation.

It is a mistake to suppose that the law, in recognizing the lex mercatoria, adopts it subject to all the new fashions of merchants, or liable to be explained toties quoties by their practice and understanding on the subject. Such evidence may indeed be applicable where no general rule has been established, and is frequently received for such purposes; but it may be laid down as a general position, that where a mercantile rule has become part of *the general law, no evidence of usage can be received to contradict or alter it, any more than such evidence would be admissible to impugn any other rule of common law. *361

Thus in the case of Edie v. East India Company (a), where the question was whether a bill of exchange indorsed to C. without the addition of the words "or order," was negotiable, it was held that evidence was inadmissible to show that by the custom of merchants such an instrument was not negotiable, the Courts having already decided in two instances in the affirmative (b). In that case Mr. J. Foster said, "Much has been said about the custom of merchants, but the custom of merchants, or law of merchants, is the law of the kingdom, and is part of the common law. People do not sufficiently distinguish between customs of different sorts; the true distinction is between general customs (which are part of the common (z) The history of these instruments affords a singular instance of the tendency of such customs to ingraft themselves into the common law. Formerly the Courts would not recognize the custom of merchants with respect to any but foreign bills of exchange; they then relaxed in favour of inland bills drawn by merchants; and finally held that the custom was binding upon all. It is usual even at this day to describe a bill of exchange to have been drawn according to the custom of merchants, although the necessity of proof, or even of the allegation, has long been exploded.

(a) Burr. 1216.

(b) Moore v. Manning, Comyns, 311. Acheson v. Fountain, 1 Str. 557. [Homer v. Dorr, 10 Mass. Rep. 26. Henry v. Risk & al. 1 Dallas, 265. Stoever v. Whitman, 6 Binney, 417. Bowen v. Jackson, Circuit Court, April, 1807. Wharton's Digest, 262.]

(1) [Consequa v. Willing & al. 1 Peters' Rep. 230.]
(2) [Barber v. Brace, 3 Conn. Rep. 9.]
(A) (Branch v. Brumley, 1 Call. 127.)

law), and local customs, which are not so. This custom of merchants is the general law of the kingdom; part of the common law; and therefore ought not to have been left to the jury after it had been settled by judicial determinations." And in the case of Pillans v. Van Mierop (c), Lord Mansfield said a witness cannot be admitted to prove the law of merchants.

A custom, however prevalent it may be amongst merchants, must be sanctioned by the Courts as reasonable, before it can be considered as a general and legal custom (d) (A). In the case of Hawkins v. Cardy (e), the plaintiff alleged a special custom amongst merchants in the declaration, to which the defendant demurred, and thereby admitted the existence of the custom, when the Court held that the custom was void, and gave judgment for the defendant.

If a mercantile custom be insisted upon which the law has not recognized, or if there be a doubt as to the existence of the custom, it is proper to prove it as a fact by evidence (f) (B). Such a custom must be proved by evidence of facts, and not by mere speculative opinions (g) (C); by means of witnesses who have had frequent and actual experience of the custom (h). The testimony of those who speak from report only and not from particular instances within their own knowledge, if receivable at all, is of no weight (i).

Common usage; 4thly, Customs or usages which are not recognized by the law of the land, but which may be used as presumptive evidence (k) (1) as to the intention of the parties in particular instances.

Presumptions from. Where parties have not entered into any express and specific contract, a *362 *presumption nevertheless arises that they meant to contract and to deal

(c) Burr. 1669. [Thomas v. O'Hara, 1 Rep. Conn. Ct. 306.]

(d) Todd. v. Reid,[1] 4 B. & A. 210. (e) Carth. 466; 1 Ld. Raym. 130.

(f) By Wilmot, J., 2 Burr. 1228. Where a plaintiff, a ship-broker, claimed half commission as reasonable compensation for having done all in his power to procure the hire of the ship, a memorandum for the charter-party having been signed, but the contract went off, and the ship got employed; held, that the alleged custom not being proved, he could not maintain the action. Read v. Rann,[2] 10 B. & C. 438.

By the custom of London, a ship-broker is not entitled to charge for trouble in procuring a charter for a ship, where the treaty goes off and the contract is incomplete, although it goes off through the act of the owner. Broad v. Thomas,[3] 7 Bing. 99; and 4 C. & P. 338.

(g) Per Foster, J., Edie v. The East India Company, Doug. 519.

(h) Skinn. 54, pl. 7; Burr. 1228; Doug. 519.

(i) Per Lord Kenyon, C. J., Savill v. Barchard, 4 Esp. C. 53. [Thomas v. O'Hara, 1 Rep. Conn. Ct. 306.]

(k) If there be a general usage to deal with common carriers in their way (i. e. for a general lien), all persons dealing in the trade are supposed to contract with them on the footing of the general practice, adopting the general lien into their particular contract. Per Lord Ellenborough, C. J. in Rushforth v. Hadfield, 6 East, 519. A custom which runs through the whole land is the common law. Per Littleton, J., Y. B. 8 Ed. 4, 18.

(A) (To make a custom or usage of trade obligatory as a law of that trade, it must be certain, uniform, reasonable, and sufficiently ancient to be generally known. United States v. Duval, 1 Gilpin, 356. Harris v. Carson, 7 Leigh, 632. Buck v. Grimshaw, 1 Edw. 140. But usages among merchants should be sparingly adopted as rules of law by courts of justice, as they are often founded upon mere mistake, and in want of comprehensive views of the full bearing of principles. Donnell et al. v. Columbian Insurance Co., 2 Sumner's C. C. R. 366.)

(B) (Usage is generally admissible to show that a transaction was not usurious. Dunham v. Day, 13 Johns. R. 40. Crump v. Trytitle, 5 Leigh, 251. So also to prove that by the custom of trade in Philadelphia, on the purchase and sale of cotton, the vendor must answer the vendee for any latent defect, though there be neither warranty nor fraud on the part of the vendor. Snowden v. Warder, 3 Rawle, 101, Gibson, C. J. dissenting. See also Sewell v. Gibbs, 1 Hall, 602. So also to prove a usage of commission merchants, in the city of New York, to effect insurance on goods consigned to them for sale on commission, without express orders from their consignors. De Forest v. Fulton Ins. Co., 1 Hall, 84.)

(C) (Austin v. Williams, 2 Ohio Rep. 64.)

(1) [Evidence of the usage of sportsmen is admissible. Morgan v. Richards, 1 Brown's Rep. 171. Loring v. Gurney, 5 Pick. Rep. 15.]

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. vi. 404. [2] Id. xxi. 106. [3] Id. xx. 62.

according to the general usage, practice and understanding, if any such exist, in relation to the subject matter (l) (A). Thus in an action on a policy of insurance, evidence is admissible to show the custom of a particular branch of trade, for every insurer is presumed to be acquainted with the practice of the trade in which he insures, although it has been but recently established (m), and the usage has existed but for a year.

Although the custom of one manor be not evidence to prove the existence of a similar custom in a different one, yet the case is different where the question concerns a particular branch of trade (n), for then it seems that the manner of carrying on trade at one place may be evidence of the mode of carrying it on at another. Thus in an action on a policy on a ship on a fishing voyage to Labrador, evidence of the custom in the Newfoundland trade was admitted to prove that there had been no unnecessary delay in unloading the cargo (o).

Where an agreement between parties is general or doubtful, the custom and usage of the country in which it was made are frequently evidence of the terms upon which the parties meant to contract; for in the one case, their silence raises a presumption that they intended to be governed by the usual course of dealing, in such cases, prevalent in the neighbourhood; and in the latter, it is reasonable to suppose that they intended to use the dubious term in that sense in which it was generally understood, either in the neighbourhood, or in the particular course and habit of dealing to which the agreement relates. Thus a tenant from year to year generally is bound to manage the land in a husbandlike manner, according to the custom of the country (p). So, although in general six months notice is necessary to determine a tenancy from year to year of lands, a longer may be necessary, or a shorter sufficient, according to the custom of the country, without any express contract to that effect (q). So where the terms of the hiring of a servant are doubtful, they may, it seems, be explained by the custom as to hiring servants in that country (r).

So, where the tenant's time of entry is doubtful, the usage and custom of the country as to the time of entry is evidence (s). And even where the contract is special, and by deed, evidence of custom is admissible to establish rights consistent with and consequent upon the stipulations in the contract: as to show that a tenant under a lease is entitled to an away-going crop, according to the custom of the country (t) (B); or that a heriot is due by custom on the death of a tenant for life, although not mentioned in the (l) Doug. 519. Savill v. Barchard, 4 Esp. C. 53.

(m) Per Ld. Mansfield, Doug. 495.
(n) Per Buller, J. Noble v. Kennoway, Doug. 495.
(o) Noble v. Kennoway, Doug. 493.
(p) Powley v. Walker, 5 T. R. 373; sup. 58.
(q) Roe v. Wilkinson, Butler's Co. Litt.; and Roe v. Charnock, Peake's C. 5; infra, tit. EJECTMENT.
(r) Navestock v. Standon Massey, B. S. C. 719; Bott, 238. But in that case it seems to have been unnecessary to resort to such evidence in order to establish the settlement; and Ashton, J., did not put the case on that footing. And see R. v. Skiplam, 1 T. R. 490.
(s) Evans's Pothier, vol. ii. p. 335; and see tit. PRESUMPTION.
(t) Wigglesworth v. Dallison, 1 Doug. 101, affirmed in the Exchequer Chamber.

(A) (Usage of trade cannot be set up, either to contravene an established rule of law, or to vary the terms of an express contract. But all contracts made in the ordinary course of business, without particular stipulation expressed or implied, are presumed to be made in reference to any existing usage or custom relating to such trade; and it is always competent for a party to resort to such usage to ascertain and fix the terms of the contract. Sewell v. Gibbs and Jenny, 1 Hall, 602. Lawrence v. The Stonington Bank, 6 Conn. Rep. 521. See also Dunham v. Dey, 16 Johns. Rep. 367. Rankin v. The American Ins. Co. 1 Hall, 619. Homer v. Don, 10 Mass. Rep. 26. Murray v. Hatch, 6 Mass. Rep. 477. Lewis v. Thatcher, 15 Mass. Rep. 431. Harris v. Carson, 7 Leigh, 632. Watkins v. Crouch, 5 Leigh, 522.)

(B) (Where a right of way is granted without any designation of the place in the deed, it becomes located by usage for a length of time. Winthrop v. Berger, 12 Johns. R. 222. And when the custom of a country or a particular place is established, it may enter into the body of a contract without being inserted. Stulz v. Dickey, 5 Binn. 285; Van Ness v. Pacard, 2 Pet. 148.)

lease (u); for such customs are not repugnant to the contracts, but consistent with them, and the rights are consequent upon the taking of the land. But no customary right can be established which is inconsistent with the terms of a contract.

*363 *A custom for a lord of a manor to have common of pasture in all the lands of his tenants for life or years, is void, because the custom is contrary to the lease (x); nor would the custom of the country be evidence to show a different time of quitting from that expressed in the lease (y).

Where, indeed, the terms used in a contract are of dubious meaning, the custom and usage of the country, or of any particular class of persons, as merchants conversant with the term, to use it in a particular sense, is evidence that the parties themselves so intended to use it. But where the meaning of the terms is plain and unequivocal, and à fortiori, where the law has annexed a particular meaning to the use of the term, it seems to be an universal rule that no evidence can be admitted of a custom or usage to receive such terms in a different sense (z) (A).

Where a lease was from Michaelmas generally, it was held that it must be taken primâ facie to import new Michaelmas, and that evidence could not be admitted to show the understanding of the parties that the holding was to be from old Michaelmas (a); and the same rule seems equally to exclude the evidence of custom and usage for the purpose of showing that old Michaelmas was meant, since such evidence is merely the means of showing in what sense the contracting parties meant to use the particular term in question (b).

So a reddendum, in an old renewed lease, of so many quarters of corn, means the Winchester, and not the customary bushel (c).

An agreement to sell a number of acres of land generally, must be understood of statute, and not of customary, acres (d).

(u) P. C. White v. Sayer, Palm. 211.
(x) P. C. White v. Sayer, Palm. 211.
(y) Per Le Blanc, J., 6 East, 122.
(z) See PAROL EVIDENCE.

(a) Doe d. Spicer v. Lea, 11 East, 312. This case seems to overrule that of Forley v. Wood, there cited; in which Lord Kenyon held at Nisi Prius, that evidence was admissible, that, by the custom of the county of Kent, all demises to hold from Michaelmas commenced at old Michaelmas. Qu. however, whether, when the lease mentions a particular time for the commencement of the tenancy (as, Lady-day), and by the custom of the country it is usual to enter on the tillage lands at Candlemas, and the rest of the premises at Lady-day, the lease may not be considered as specifying the substantial time of holding, and as silent with respect to the subordinate terms of entry, so as to admit evidence of the custom. See the dictum of the Court in Doe v. Snowden, 2 Bl. R. 1225. Doe v. Watkins, 7 East, 551. Doe v. Spence, 6 East, 120. Doe v. Howard, 11 East, 498.

(b) In Doe v. Benson,[1] 4 B. & A. 588, the distinction was taken between a letting by parol, in which case such evidence is admissible, and a letting by deed or other writing; but it seems that in the case of Forley v. Wood, there was a written lease. See Runnington's Eject. 112.

(c) Muster, &c. of St. Cross v. Lord Howard de Walden, 6 T. R. 338. R. v. Major, 4 T. R. 750. By the stat. 22 & 23 Car. 2, c. 12, the buyer of corn by any other than the Winchester measure, forfeits 40*s.* besides the value of the corn. See R. v. Arnold, 5 T. R. 353; and see Hockin v. Cooke, 4 T. R. 314; 1 Roll. R. 420.

(d) Morgan v. Tedcastle, Poph. 55. Wing v. Earle, Cro. Eliz. 267. Waddy v. Newton, 8 Mod. 276. But see 2 Roll. R. 67; Cro. Eliz. 665. Sir J. Bruin's Case, cited 6 Rep. 67.

(A) (A usage or custom will be admitted to ascertain the nature and extent of contracts, not arising from express stipulations, but from implications, presumptions, and acts of an equivocal character; or to ascertain the true meaning of particular words in a given instrument, where these words have various senses. But it will not be admitted to control, vary, or contradict a written and express contract. The Schooner Reeside, 2 Sumner's C. C. R. 567. See also Schieffelin v. Harvey, An. N. P. 59. [A commercial usage will be considered as established a sufficient length of time to have become generally known, and to warrant a presumption that contracts are made in reference to it. Smith v. Wright, 1 Caines R. 43.] And where the usage of an individual is known to a person with whom he transacts business, this usage may be given in evidence for the purpose of proving the contract or understanding between the parties in relation to the business transacted. Loring v. Gurney, 5 Pick. 15.)

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. vi. 527.

On the question, whether a liberty to cruize for six weeks authorize the party to cruize for the space of six weeks in the whole, taken at different intervals, Lord Mansfield held that the conduct of the captain in other instances under similar circumstances was admissible in evidence (e).

On a question whether unnecessary delay had been practised, the witness was admitted to state in evidence that the delay had not been greater than they had practised upon similar occasions (f) (1).

*Upon the same principle, the law of a foreign country where a contract has been made, is evidence to show the intention of the parties, and the nature and effect of the contract (g). *364

A custom, as well as a prescription, being entire, must be proved as laid. A plea of justification under a custom for the tenants of a particular copyhold estate to cut turf, is not supported by proof of a custom for all the copyholders generally to cut turf (h). Variance.

Where the defendant justified under an easement claimed by the inhabitants of a parish, it was held that he brought himself within the description of an inhabitant by proof that he rented a stall in the parish, which he used occasionally (i).

One who would be benefited by the custom is not a competent witness to establish it, even in an action between the other parties, since the verdict would afterwards be evidence for him (k). Competency.

DAMAGES (l).

Damages in a legal sense include costs (m). Damage is either in law or in fact. In law, where one deprives another of a defined legal right: as in case of slander charging a crime, or affecting a man in his trade or means of livelihood, &c. (n); or where a sheriff suffers an escape on mesne process (o). In such cases an action is maintainable, though no special damage be proved; for the privation of that to which the plaintiff was legally entitled, is a damage in law (p). In covenant by the mesne tenant against his under-lessee for not repairing, he may recover the costs of an action brought by the original lessor (q) (A).

(e) Syers v. Bridge, Doug. 509. It was held that the mere opinion of witnesses, that the six weeks might be made up of disjointed intervals, was inadmissible, none of them having known a case so circumstanced.

(f) Noble v. Kennoway, Doug. 492.

(g) See tit. Foreign Laws.

(h) Wilson v. Page, 4 Esp. 71.

(i) Fitch v. Fitch, 2 Esp. 543.

(k) See Common.—Copyhold.—Interest.

(l) The subject of damages is considered under the specific heads of Trespass.—Nuisance.—Disturbance, &c.

(m) Phillips v. Bacon, 1 East, 298; and therefore a writ alleging that 80*s*. were awarded for costs, is satisfied by the proof of a writ reciting that 80*s*. were awarded as well for damages, by reason of detaining the debt, as for costs. Ibid. See Tidd. tit. Costs. The 48 Geo. 3, c. 123, extends to damages for an assault.[1] 1 A. & E. 24.

(n) See Libel.

(o) See Sheriff.

(p) A possibility of damage is sufficient, per Powell, J., 6 Madd. 49; 11 East, 571. Barker v. Green,[2] 2 Bingh. 317. Pindar v. Wadsworth, 2 East, 154. Hobson v. Todd, 4 T. R. 71. See tit. Watercourse.

(q) Neale v. Wyllies,[3] 3 B. & C. 533. But in an action by a mesne tenant against an under-lessee, for overloading the chamber with meal, Lord Abinger held that the plaintiff was not entitled to recover the damages recovered against him by the original lessor. Liv. Sum. Ass. 1835. There was no distinct evidence of an application by the plaintiff to the under-lessee to defend the action brought by the original lessor.

(1) [See Dean v. Swoop, 2 Binney, 72, where the former conduct of a common carrier was not permitted to be given in evidence by him to prove that by the custom of the country he was answerable only for losses happening from his own negligence.]

(A) Where the law gives a right and a remedy for the violation of it, such violation imports damages and in the absence of all special damage the law presumes a nominal damage to the party. Whittemore v. Colter, 1 Gallis. C. C. R. 478. The general policy of the law forbids that a debtor should be subjected to all

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxviii. 21. [2] Id. ix. 149. [3] Id. x. 172.

DEATH.

The proofs and presumptions relating to the death of any individual person will be considered more at large under the title Pedigree.

The proof of the death of any person known to be once living, is incumbent on the party who asserts the death (r); for it is presumed that he still lives till the contrary be proved (1). But in analogy to the statute of *365 bigamy (s), *and the statute concerning leases for life (t), where a person has not been heard of for many years, the presumption of the duration of life ceases at the end of seven years (A). Thus, upon a plea of coverture, where the husband had gone abroad twelve years before, the defendant was called upon to prove that he was alive within the last seven years (u) (2). But the presumption is merely as to the fact, not as to the time of the death within the seven years (x).

Proof that a person sailed in a ship bound to the West Indies some years ago, which has not since been heard of, is evidence upon which a jury may presume that the individual is dead; but the time of the death, if it become material, must depend upon the particular circumstances of the case (y).

In establishing a title upon a pedigree, where it may be necessary to lay a branch of a family out of the case, it is sufficient primâ facie to show, that the person has not been heard of for many years (z).

Proof by one of the family that a particular person had many years before gone abroad, and was supposed to have died there, and that the witness had not heard in the family of his having married was held presumptive proof of his death without lawful issue (a)

The fact of a tenant for life not having been seen or heard of for 14 years, by a person residing near the estate, although not a member of his family, is primâ facie evidence of the death of the tenant for life (b).

Letters of administration are not evidence of the death of a party (c).

(r) Wilson v. Hodges, 2 East, 312. Throgmorton v. Walton, 1 Rol. R. 416. Whether proof is to be given of the death at any particular time within seven years, or after the expiration of seven years. Doe v. Nepean,[1] 5 B. & Ad. 86. See R. v. Harborne, 2 A. & E. 540.

(s) 1 Jac. 1, c. 11, s. 2. The presumption is merely as to the fact, not as to the time of the death within the seven years. Doe d. Knight v. Nepean, 2 M. & W. 894.

(t) 19 Car. 2, c. 6. Where a tenant for life had not been heard of for fourteen years by a person residing on the estate, it was held to be presumptive evidence of his death. Doe v. Deakin,[2] 4 B. & A. 433; see R. v. Twyning, 2 B. & A. 386.

(u) Hopewell v. De Pinna, 2 Camp. 113. [Miller v. Beates, 3 Serg. & R. 490.] See also Doe v. Jesson, 6 East, 80. See also The Bishop of Salisbury's Case, 10 Rep. 59, a. Thorne v. Rolfe, 1 Anders. 20. Smartle v. Penhallow, 2 Lord Raym. 994. Benson v. Olive, 2 Stra. 920.

(x) Doe v. Nepean, 2 M. & W. 894.

(y) Watson v. King,[3] 1 Starkie's C. 121. Paterson v. Black, Park's Ins. 433; 1 Bl. R. 404. Doe v. Griffin, 15 East, 293. Doe v. Wolley,[4] 8 B. & C. 22.

(z) Rowe v. Hasland, 1 Bl. 405.

(a) Doe d. Banning v. Griffin, 15 East, 293.

(b) Lloyd v. Hunt,[2] 4 B. & Ad. 433.

(c) Thompson v. Donaldson, 3 Esp. C. 63.

---

the loss occasioned by his not fulfilling his promise. Interest is generally the compensation which must content the creditor. 1 Brocken. Short v. Skepwith, C. C. R. 103. Counsel fees in the court below cannot be allowed as damages. Arcambel v. Wiseman, 3 Dall. 306.)

(1) {Lessee of Batton v. Bigelow, Peters' C. C. Rep. 452.}

(A) (The rule is adopted in Pennsylvania, that in case of an absent person, of whom no tidings are received, the presumption of continuance of life ceases at the end of seven years, but the presumption of death must be taken from the termination of that period, and that the party lived throughout it, unless it be shown that at some particular date within it, he was in contact with some specific peril. Burr v. Sim, 4 Whart. 150. See also Newman v. Jenkins, 10 Pick. 517. (Innis et al. v. Campbell et al. 1 Rawle, 375.) And where a married man sailed from New York to South America, and neither he nor the vessel were heard of afterwards; in twelve years a plea of coverture was disallowed to his wife. King v. Paddock, 18 Johns. Rep. 161; see also, Miller v. Beates, 3 Serg. & R. 490. Wilkes v. Lion, 2 Cow. 333.)

(2) [King & al. v. Paddock, 18 Johns. 141. Crouch & ux. v. Eveleth, 15 Mass. Rep. 305. Peake's Ev. ch. xiv. sect. 1.]

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxvii. 42. [2] Id. vi. 476. [3] Id. ii. 322. [4] Id. xv. 150.

A remarkable case is mentioned in the Reports, where the question was, whether the son survived the father, so as to entitle the widow of the son to her dower, the father and the son having been hanged at the same instant; and it was found by the jury, that the son, who had been observed to struggle the longest, survived the father (d).

DE JURE AND DE FACTO.

As to the distinction between acts done by an officer de jure and such as are done by an officer de facto; see R. v. Lisle, Andr. 163; Str. 1090; 2 Barnard, 193, 264. R. v. Hebden, 2 Str. 1109. R. v. Grimes, 5 Burr. 2601 (A).

DEATH-BED DECLARATIONS.

These are, as has been seen, evidence in particular cases, on account of the solemn obligation which the situation of the party imposes upon him to declare the truth (e); and such a declaration is not the less admissible *because it was made under the additional obligation of an oath extra-judicially administered. *366

Admissibility.

In Woodcock's Case (g), the wife of the prisoner having been mortally wounded by him, was taken to the poor-house, where she was attended by a magistrate, who, in the absence of the prisoner, administered an oath to her, and took down her statement in writing; and the declaration was afterwards admitted in evidence (h).

The presumption in favour of this species of testimony ceases where the party himself would not have been admitted to give evidence upon oath; and therefore the declaration of an attainted felon at the place of execution is inadmissible (i); but that of an accomplice is admissible, since the accomplice, if living, might have been examined upon oath (k).

Three several declarations had been made by the wounded person in the course of the same day, at the successive intervals of an hour each; the second had been made before a magistrate, and reduced into writing, but the others had not; the original written statement taken before the magistrate was not produced, and a copy of it was rejected. A question then arose whether the first and third declarations could be received; and Pratt, C. J.

(d) Cro. Eliz. 503; 2 Comm. 132. A similar question arose from the circumstance of General Stanwix and his daughter being lost in the same vessel. Cited R. v. Dr. Kay, 1 Bl. R. 640. Fearne's Essays; 2 Salkeld by Evans, 593; Evans's Pothier, vol. ii. p. 346. See tit. Presumption.

(e) Supra, Vol. I. Ind. tit. Dying Declarations. In general evidence of the declarations of a man since dead, of facts done by others, or even by himself, are not admissible. Garnons v. Barnard, 1 Anst. 298. The declarations of persons in articulo mortis being only admissible when it clearly appears that they are under the impression of a future state and impending death, held that a child under the age of four years, not being supposed capable of such impressions, the declarations were inadmissible. Rex v. Pike,[1] 3 C. & P. 598.

(g) Leach's C. C. L. 563.

(h) Woodcock's Case, Leach's C. C. L. 3d edit. 563. On an indictment for the murder of A. by poison, the dying declarations of B., who died also of the same cause, admissible. R. v. Baker, 2 M. & R. 53. The dying declarations of a child of ten years of age, were received where the party was shown to be of quick intelligence, and before examination strongly impressed with the nature of an oath, and the danger of immediate death. Reg. v. Perkins, 2 Moody, 135.

(i) R. v. Drummond, Leach's C. C. L. 378, 3d edit.; 1 East's P. C. 353, S. C.

(k) By all the Judges, Tinkler's Case, East's P. C. 354, 356. [Pennsylvania v. Stoops, Addison's Rep. 332, S. P.]

(A) (The acts of an officer de facto who comes into office by colour of title, are valid, as it concerns the public or third persons, who have an interest in his acts. The People v. Collins, 7 Johns. Rep. 549. M'Instry v. Fanner, 9 Johns. Rep. 349; but not where the proceeding is directed to the vacating of an election conducted by officers not duly appointed. Ex parte Wilcocks, 7 Cow. 402. A mere ministerial officer has no right to decide on the acts of such officer de facto or adjudge them null. People v. Collins, supra.)

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. xiv. 473.

was of opinion that they could not, since he considered all three statements as parts of the same narrative, of which the written examination was the best proof; but the other Judges held that the three declarations were three distinct facts, and that the inability to prove the second did not exclude the first and third; and evidence of those declarations was accordingly admitted (l).

How given in evidence.

In order to warrant the admission, it must be shown, in the first place, that the declaration was made under an apprehension of impending death (A); and this may be collected from the nature and circumstances of the case, although the declarant did not express such an apprehension (m). And it is not essential that the party should apprehend immediate dissolution; it is sufficient if he apprehend it to be impending (1). Whether such evidence *367 be *admissible is a question for the Court, and not for the jury, to determine, under all the circumstances of the case (n).

Force and effect.

In Tinkler's Case (o), a majority of the Judges were of opinion that the death-bed declaration of a deceased accomplice was alone sufficient to convict the prisoner, because the declarant in that situation could have no interest in excusing herself, or unjustly charging others; but other Judges were of opinion that confirmatory evidence was necessary.

In general, although it is for the Court to decide upon the admissibility of the evidence, it is for the jury, under the circumstances, to judge of the effect of it.

Sir D. Evans has just observed (p), that "Much consideration should be given to the state of the mind of the party whose declarations are received. Strongly as his situation is calculated to induce the sense of obligation, it must also be recollected that it has often a tendency to obliterate the distinctness of his memory and perceptions; and therefore, whenever the (l) R. v. Reason and Tranter, Str. 530; 6 St. Tr. 502. According to the latter report of this case, the C. J. and Powis, J. deemed the evidence inadmissible; Eyre and Forteseue, Js., were for admitting it; but it appears that it was admitted.

(m) R. v. Woodcock, Leach's C. C. L. 563, 3d edit. The Court will hear all that a party has said, in order to decide from what he has said whether he had that impression on his mind which would make his declarations admissible. R. v. Van Butchell,[1] 3 C. & P. 631. Where the deceased, at the time of making a statement as to the cause of her death to a medical person, stated that she hoped he would do what he could for her for the sake of her family, held that the expression of such a hope excluded the declaration; to render it admissible, it must be made under the impression of an almost immediate dissolution. R. v. Crockett,[2] 4 C. & P. 544.

(n) John's Case, East's P. C. 357. By all the Judges. Welborne's Case, East's P. C. 359. Per Lord Ellenborough, R. v. Hucks,[3] 1 Starkie's C. 522. In the previous case of R. v. Woodcock, Leach's C. C. L. 563, Eyre, C. B. left it as a question to the jury, whether the deceased was under the apprehension of death when she made the declaration. In Mosley's Case, 1 Ry. & M. C. C. L. 97, upon an indictment for murder, the wounds which occasioned the death were inflicted on the party on the evening of Thursday, the 30th September, and a surgeon attended him the same evening, and until his death, on the 10th October. The surgeon did not consider the case hopeless till the latter day, and always till then held out hopes of recovery, and then told him the case was hopeless. Another witness who attended him daily, stated that the deceased on the evening of the 30th, said that he had been robbed and killed, that he should not get the better of it, and that all along he said he should never get better; and it was held that upon this evidence the declarations of the deceased on the Thursday evening, after he had said that he was robbed and killed, and also on subsequent days, were properly admitted.

(o) East's P. C. 354, 356. See also Westbeer's Case, Leach, 14. Declarations in articulo mortis of the circumstances of robbery, have been held inadmissible. R. v. Lloyd and others,[4] 4 C. & P. 233.

(p) Pothier, by Evans, vol. ii. p. 293.

(A) (Gibson v. Commonwealth, 2 Virg. Cases, 111. Voss v. Commonwealth, 3 Leigh, 786.)

(1) {Declarations of a deceased person, made the next day after he had received a wound, but six or seven weeks before his death, were held to be inadmissible. State v. Moody, 2 Hayw. 31. But the declaration of a deceased person, that he was poisoned by certain individuals, not made immediately previous to his death, but at a time when he despaired of his recovery, was admitted as a dying declaration. State v. Poll, 1 Hawks, 442. See also M'Nally, 174, 381, & seq. Swift's Ev. 124.}

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xiv. 493. [2]Id. xix. 518. [3]Id. ii. 494. [4]Id. xix. 360.

accounts received from him are introduced, the degree of his observation and recollection is a circumstance which it is of the highest importance to ascertain. Sometimes the declaration is of a matter of judgment, of inference, and conclusion, which, however sincere, may be fatally erroneous. The circumstances of confusion and surprise, connected with the object of the declaration, are to be considered with the most minute and scrupulous attention; the accordance and consistency of the fact related with the other facts established in evidence, is to be examined with peculiar circumspection; and the awful consequences of mistake must add their weight to all the other motives for declining to allow an implicit credit to the narrative, on the sole consideration of its being free from the suspicion of wilful misrepresentation."

It is further to be remarked, that this seems to be the only instance in which evidence is admissible against a prisoner who has not had the power to cross-examine—an anomaly, which in itself calls for great caution and circumspection in the use and application of such evidence. Finally, it has never been received except in cases of murder, where, if the dying person was certain as to the author of the violence, yet in the case of a quarrel and conflict, he might be under a strong temptation to give a partial account of the transaction, although all motives of personal hostility had ceased. In other cases it is far from improbable that he would attribute the fact to some person whom he suspected to be his enemy, when, if his grounds for *supposing so could have been investigated, they might have turned out to be very unsatisfactory. *368

Declarations of this nature have also been admitted in civil cases, where they have been made by attesting witnesses to an instrument. In civil proceedings.

In the case of Wright v. Littler (q), the plaintiff claimed under a will dated 1743; the defendant claimed under a will dated in 1745, and proved the hand-writing of the witnesses by whom it purported to have been attested. To disprove this will, the plaintiff called Mary Victor, the sister of William Medlicott, one of the attesting witnesses, and upon cross-examination by the defendant's counsel, she stated that William Medlicott, in his last illness, acknowledged and declared that the will of 1745 was forged by himself. Lord Mansfield, in delivering the judgment of the Court, upon a motion for a new trial, said, "As the account was a confession of great iniquity, and as he could be under no temptation to say it, but to do justice and ease his conscience, I am of opinion that the evidence was proper to be left to a jury (r) (1)."

In a subsequent case (s), Mr. J. Heath, on the authority of the above case, (q) 3 Burr. 1244; 1 Black. 346.

(r) Lord Mansfield also observed upon the fact, that the evidence came out upon cross-examination by the defendant, and had not been objected to at the trial; and said, that even if it had been upon examination by the plaintiff, it would have been equally admissible, especially since the will was all written and witnessed by him (William Medlicott), and gave the premises in question to his wife.

(s) 6 East, 195, cited by Lord Ellenborough, C. J.

(1) [In Wilson v. Boerem, 15 Johns. 286, it was held that declarations in extremis, are inadmissible evidence, either in a civil action or a criminal prosecution, with the single exception of cases of homicide, in which the declaration of the deceased, after the mortal blow, as to the fact of the murder, is admitted. Thompson, C. J., says, "No case, either in the English courts or in our own, has fallen under my observation, where such evidence has been admitted in a civil suit. Wright v. Littler (3 Burr. 1244, 1 Bl. Rep. 345) has been urged. But a recurrence to the facts will show that the circumstances of that case were special and peculiar; and the admission of the declaration of Medlicott was not supported under this rule. Lord Mansfield, in pronouncing the opinion of the court, says, the testimony comes out on the cross-examination of the defendant's counsel, and no objection made to it: and after mentioning the special circumstances of the case, he says, no general rule can be drawn from it; thereby expressly excluding the idea that the evidence was admitted merely as the dying declaration of Medlicott. See also Wilson v. Boerem, Anth. N. P. 176, & note, (a).] admitted the declaration of a person who had set his name to a forged bond, and who, upon his death-bed, begged pardon of Heaven for having been concerned in the forgery.

The ground, however, upon which such evidence has been admitted, is this:—If the attesting witness had been living, he must have been called, and might have been cross-examined as to the validity of the instrument, the authenticity of which depends upon the credit given to it by his attestation (t).

In a late case (u), the Court of King's Bench said that as it did not appear that such evidence had ever been received, except in cases of homicide, where the declarations had been made by the deceased, and in civil cases, where the declarations had been made by attesting witnesses, they would not further extend the rule; and therefore the Court held the declaration of a dying person as to the relationship of the lessor of the plaintiff in ejectment to the person last seised (x), to be inadmissible (1).

*369 *DEBT.

This action is founded either upon a specialty, or upon a parol contract, or duty (y) (A). The proofs in the former class of actions are considered under the titles Bond—Covenant—Deed. Those which belong to the latter are distributed under the titles of Bills of Exchange, Goods Sold and Delivered, &c.: and where the action is for a penalty, under the title Penal Action.

The proofs now requisite in an action of debt, depend on the issues taken, according to the mode of pleading prescribed by the new rules. As the same defence may still be made by means of proper pleas which could formerly have been taken under the plea of nil debet, which put the whole of (t)[1] 4 B. & A. 55. Upon the same principle, evidence has been admitted to impeach the character of attesting witnesses who are dead, and whose hand-writing is proved in order to substantiate the instrument. See tit. Witness.

(u) Doe v. Ridgway, Mich. 1 Geo. 4, MS., and 4 B. & A. 53.[2]

(x) Ibid. A., having been convicted of perjury, pending a rule for a new trial, shot the prosecutor, and it was held that an affidavit of his dying declarations on the subject of the perjury was not admissible; and it was held that such declarations were admissible in those cases only where the death was the subject of the charge, and where the declarations related to the circumstances of the death. R. v. Meade,[3] 2 B. & C. 605. In R v. Hutchinson, cor. Bayley, J., Durham Spring Ass. 1822, the prisoner being charged with administering savin to a pregnant woman, it was held that her dying declarations, although they related to the cause of her death, were inadmissible, the death not being the subject of inquiry. 2 B. & C. 608,[4] in the note. Formerly it seems to have been the practice to receive in evidence the declarations of deceased paupers as to their settlements; and in the case of R. v. Bury St. Edmonds, Cald. 482, where a pauper had on his death-bed told his wife that she and her children would belong to and prove their settlement in the parish of R., the declaration was held to be admissible, and Mr. J. Buller held that it was admissible, on the general principle on which such declarations are receivable on trials for homicide. Such a declaration was also received in the case of Appotun v. Dunswell, 2 Bott, 80. It is, however, observable, that in addition to the general principles on which mere declarations of deceased persons, though made in articulo mortis, are excluded, another objection is applicable to declarations as to settlements, viz. that they involve law as well as fact. The rule seems to be now established that such declarations are inadmissible. See R. v. Ferry Frystone, 2 East, 54. R. v. Chadderton, Ibid. 27. R. v. Abergwilly, Ibid. 63.

(y) A. is indebted to B., B. to C.; an agreement that B.'s debt and claim shall be extinguished, and that A. shall pay the amount to C., is binding. Fairlie v. Denton,[5] 8 B. & C. 795. Debt lies upon the decree of a colonial court of equity, if duly perfected. Henley v. Soper,[6] 8 B. & C. 16; and 2 M. & Ry. 153.

(1) [Evidence of the declarations of a grantor with warranty cannot be received to support a title deduced from him, though the declarations be made in articulo mortis. Jackson v. Vredenberg, 1 Johns. 159. Declarations of a testator, though made in extremis, are not admissible to show duress at the time he executed his will. Jackson v. Kniffer, 2 Johns. 31. See also Gray v. Goodrich, 7 Johns. 95.

In action by a father for the seduction of his daughter, her dying declarations charging the defendant as her seducer, are held to be admissible evidence, in North Carolina. McFarland v. Shaw, 2 Car. Law Repos. 102.]

(A) (An action of debt will lie for a penalty upon a decree in chancery. Drakesly v. Roots, 2 Root. 138.)

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. vi. 347. [2]Id. vi. 348. [3]Id. ix. 196. [4]Id. ix. 198. [5]Id. xv. 246. [6]Id. xv. 147.

the plaintiff's material allegations in issue, the proofs will be stated as they stood before the rules, subject, however, to the operation of the new rules, which take away the general issue, and require the defendant to traverse some matter of fact alleged by the plaintiff, or to plead specially in confession and avoidance.

Previously to the new rules, the plaintiff, under the plea of nil debet, was bound to prove all the material allegations in his declaration, although the plea were an improper one, to which he might have demurred (z). The defendant might, in general, give in evidence such matter as showed that he was not indebted to the plaintiff.

Evidence under Nil debet, before the new rules.

Where, previously to the new rules, the action was immediately founded upon a record or specialty, nil debet was an improper plea; for the defendant could not by his plea admit the existence of the record or specialty, and yet deny the debt (a) (A) (1). But whenever a specialty or record was but inducement to the action, which was founded upon extrinsic matter of fact, nil debet was a good plea; as in debt for rent by indenture (b), or for an escape (c), or on a devastavit (d).

In an action of debt for rent, nil debet was a good plea, although the demise was by deed, for the deed did not acknowledge the debt, as an obligation to pay money does; the debt accrued by the subsequent enjoyment (e), and non est factum here would not have been an answer commensurate with the declaration. It might be very true that the deed was the deed of the lessee, and yet that no debt had arisen; for something ultra the deed, that is, the enjoyment of the land, was essential to the creation of the debt, which was, *technically speaking, a matter in pais to be proved before a jury (f). Consequently, the defendant, in an action of debt for rent, might prove under this issue that the lessor had kept possession of the premises, or (as it seems) of any part (g); for as the action arises not on the contract merely, but is also founded on the pernancy of the profits according to the contract, this was evidence to show that no debt ever existed (h). *370

So the lessee might show an entry, or expulsion from the premises by the lessor, or any suspension of rent by him, under this issue (i), or that the (z) See tit. Bail-bond, supra, 119, note (a).

(a) Gilb. L. E. 79, 2d edit.; 1 Will. Saund. 39, n. (3.); Cowp. 589; Hard. 332. Tyndal v. Hutchinson, 3 Lev. 170. Warren v. Consett, 2 Lord Raym. 1500; 2 Str. 778; 8 Mod. 107. Although facts be mixed with it, as in an action by the assignee of the sheriff upon a bail-bond. Fort. 363; 2 Lord Raym. 1503; 2 Str. 780; 5 Burr. 2586.

(b) Cowp. (c) Salk. 565.

(d) Ibid. and 1 Saund. 219.

(e) B. N. P. 170; Hard. 332; 1 Will. Saund. 39; Gilb. L. E. 239, 2d edit.; Cowp.

(f) Gilb. L. E. 280, 2d edit.; B. N. P. 170.

(g) See Gilb. L. E. 283, 2d edit.; 1 Inst. 148, a.; Vent. 277; Roll. Ab. 398.

(h) 2 Roll. Ab. 667, pl. 21; Gilb. L. E. 283, 2d edit.

(i) It is frequently pleaded, but it seems that this is optional on the part of the defendant. 1 Will. Saund. 205, n. (2); B. N. P. 177; 1 Mod. 35; 1 Vent. 258; Ld. Raym. 566; 1 Sid. 151; 2 Keb. 762. Contra, 2 Leon. 10; Goulds. 80; Ow. 85.

(A) (Nil debet is not a good plea to an action of debt on a recognizance, nor to any action founded on a record or specialty. Bullis v. Giddens, 8 Johns. R. 82. White v. Converse, 20 Wend. 266. Niblo v. Clark, 3 Wend. 24. But where the record or specialty is merely inducement to the action, which is grounded on matter of fact, as in debt for rent, for an escape, or on a devastavit, there nil debet may be pleaded. Minton v. Woodworth, 11 Johns. R. 474.)

(1) {It has been decided in Pennsylvania, upon solemn argument, that in an action of debt on a foreign judgment, in which the declaration stated the foundation of the judgment to be a specialty, the Statute of Limitations is not a good plea. Richards, Adm. v. Bickley, Adm. 13 Serg. & Rawle, 395. The causes of action upon which the original judgments, sued upon in the cases of Hubbel v. Cowdrey, 5 Johns. Rep. 131, and Bissell v. Hall, 11 Johns. Rep. 168, were obtained, do not appear by the reports of those cases, in which the plea of the Statute of Limitations was held, without argument, to be a good plea.}

lessor had entered into part of the premises; for since the lessor by his own wrongful act deprives the party of the benefit of the entire contract, no apportionment can be made in his favour (k). So he might show an eviction by a third person. In order to prove this, he must have shown that the evictor had a title to enter, and did enter before the rent was due, and show also by what process he was evicted (l) (1). This must have been done by the production of the judgment in ejectment, &c. or by proof of an examined copy of it, and by proof of the execution of the writ of possession under the warrant, and an examined copy of the return.

But the defendant could not, where the demise was by deed, give evidence to show that the plaintiff had no interest in the demised tenements; for if he had pleaded it, the plaintiff might have replied the indenture, or might have demurred, for the declaration being on the indenture, the estoppel appeared on record (2). But if the defendant had pleaded nil habuit in tenementis, and the plaintiff had joined issue on the plea, instead of relying on the estoppel, the defendant would not have been concluded by the deed, and the jury would have been bound, as has already been seen, to find according to the truth of the fact (m). Neither could the defendant, under this issue, give in evidence disbursements for necessary repairs, although the plaintiff was bound to repair; for the proper remedy was by an action of covenant (n), unless by the terms of the covenant the repairs were to be paid out of the rent (o). It was no defence that the lessee did not actually enter and enjoy, where he might without the hindrance of the lessor, have entered and enjoyed, for he could not defend himself by his own laches (p).

The general rule was, that the plaintiff might give in evidence, under this plea, any matter which showed that nothing was due at the time when the action was brought (q); as payment (r), or a release (s) (A). But the Statute of Limitations must have been and must still be pleaded; and on a qui tam action to recover penalties, it has been held that the defendant could not give in evidence the record of a recovery against him by another person for the same forfeiture (t).

*371 *By the rules of Hilary Term, 4 W. 4, 1, in debt on specialty or covenant,
New rules. the plea of non est factum shall operate as a denial of the execution of the (k) 1 Inst. 148, a.; Vent. 277; Roll. Ab. 398; Gilb. L. E. 283. [Vaughan et al. v. Blanchard et al. 1 Yeates, 176.]

(l) Fort. 360; Cooper v. Young, 8 Geo. 2. Jordan v. Twells, B. R. H. 171.

(m) Salk. 277; B. N. P. 170; supra, Vol. I. p. 343. But where the demise is by parol agreement, see 1 Raym. 746; B. N. P. 177.

(n) B. N. P. 177; 1 Ray. 370.

(o) 1 Lord Ray. 420.

(p) Rol. Ab. 605; Gilb. L. E. 284.

(q) Com. Dig. Pleader, 2 W. 17.

(r) Gilb. L. E. 285. See tit. Bond.—Payment.

(s) Per Holt, J., Hatton v. Morse, 1 Salk. 394, S. C.; 2 Lord Ray. 787. See Co. Litt. 182, b. contra; Gilb. L. E. 285.

(t) Bredon v. Harman, Str. 701. Jackson v. Gisling, B. N. P. 197. Vide supra, Vol. I. Ind. tit. Judgments.—Record; and infra, tit. Record.

(1) [Where a tenant is dispossessed by a public enemy, he ought to pay rent only for the time he enjoyed peaceably, and not for the time he was prevented by the casualties of war. Bayley v. Lawrence, 1 Bay, 499. Sed Vide Pollard v. Shaaffer, 1 Dallas, 210. American Museum, Vol. II. p. 470, where it was held that a lessee, who had been dispossessed by the British army in 1777, was bound to pay rent for the whole term, but that he was excused from keeping and giving up the premises in good repair, according to his covenant, on account of the destruction and waste committed by the army.]

(2) [Where a lessor threatened to turn the tenant off by force if he did not take a lease, it was held that the lessee might contest the lessor's title. Hamilton v. Marsden, 6 Binney, 45. And the acceptance of a lease of a part of a tract of land does not estop the lessee from contesting the lessor's title to the remainder of the tract. Pederick v. Searle, 5 Serg. & Rawle, 236.]

(A) (A bond or covenant by the creditor to save harmless and indemnify the debtor against the debt, operates as a release of the debt. Clark v. Bush, 3 Cow. 151.)

deed in point of fact only, and all other defences shall be specially pleaded, including matters which make the deed absolutely void, as well as those which make it voidable.

2. The plea of "nil debet" shall not be allowed in any action.

3. In actions of debt on simple contract, other than on bills of exchange and promissory notes, the defendant may plead that "he never was indebted in manner and form as in the declaration alleged," and such plea shall have the same operation as the plea of non assumpsit in indebitatus assumpsit, and all matters in confession and avoidance shall be specially pleaded as above directed in actions of assumpsit.

4. In other actions of debt in which the plea of nil debet has been hitherto allowed, including those on bills of exchange and promissory notes, the defendant shall deny specifically some particular matter of fact alleged in the declaration, or plead specially in confession or avoidance.

DECEIT.

General requisites.

To support an action on the case for deceit, the plaintiff must allege, and prove, a fraud to have been committed by the defendant, and that a damage has resulted from the fraud to the plaintiff (u). The fraud must consist in depriving the plaintiff, by deceitful means, of some benefit which the law entitled him to demand or expect (x) (A).

Deceitful means.

It is a matter of evidence to prove that the deceitful and fraudulent means have been used as alleged, and that the plaintiff has in fact been deceived by them to his detriment; but it is usually a question of law, arising upon the facts, whether an action lies in respect of damage resulting from such means; for it is not a general rule, that wherever fraud and damage concur an action is maintainable. Such means must have been used as were likely to impose on a person of ordinary prudence and circumspection, to throw him off his guard on a point where he might reasonably place confidence in the representation of the defendant, and also such as deprived the party of a benefit which in point of law he had a right to expect (y).

(u) 12 East, 636.

(x) The making a representation which the party knows to be false, and which is intended to induce another to act on it to his damage, is a fraud in law, and sufficient to support an action. Polhill v. Walker,[1] 3 B. & A. 114. The defendant accepted a bill as per procuration of the drawee, believing that the acceptance would be sanctioned; the holder of the bill was in consequence nonsuited; held that the defendant was liable. Ibid. Where the plaintiff had been induced, through the false representations of the defendant, to employ a servant, and the judge had drawn the attention of the jury to two classes of motive, viz. a false statement knowingly made, with intention to benefit himself; and, secondly, a desire to benefit another person; and directed them, that although he might have no intention to obtain any advantage for himself, yet that it would still be a fraud if he made false representations, productive of injury to another, knowing such representations to be false; and the jury found a verdict and damages for the plaintiff, adding that they considered there was no actual fraud on the part of the defendant, and that he had no fraudulent intention, although what he had done constituted a fraud in the legal acceptation of the term; the Court refused to enter the verdict for the defendant. Foster v. Charles,[2] 7 Bing. 105.

(y) Per Lord Ellenborough, in Vernon v. Keys, 12 East, 631; B. N. P. 30. In Bayley v. Merrill, Cro. Jac. 386, on an agreement to carry goods at so much per cwt., it was held that no action lay for falsely affirming that a load of madder contained a less quantity of cwts. than it contained in fact. In 1 Roll. Ab. 801, pl. 16, it was held that one who was induced to buy a term by a false assertion on the part of a seller that a stranger had offered 20*l.* for it, could not recover. Where the plaintiff sold to the defendant certain buildings, trade, and stock, under a false representation by the latter that he was about to enter into partnership with certain

(A) (The deceit may not be on either party to the contract, but on third persons; and if the deceit on third persons will operate as a public mischief, neither law nor equity will support the contract. Boynton v. Hubbard, 7 Mass. R. 112. Thus a contract by an heir to convey, on the death of his ancestor, if he should survive the ancestor, a certain undivided part of what shall come to the heir by descent, distribution or devise, is a fraud on the ancestor, and productive of public mischief.

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. xxiii. 38. [2] Id. xx. 64.

Thus no action *is maintainable in respect of a false representation, by a vendor, of the intention or will of another in respect of the goods (z).

Proof of fraud.

The plaintiff must, in the first place, prove fraud, in fact; he must show that the representation was not only falsely, but that it was fraudulently made, with intent to deceive the plaintiff, for the fraud or deceit is the foundation of the action (a) (A) (1). Thus in all cases of deceit in the sale of personal chattels, in respect of the quality, soundness or goodness of the subject-matter, the plaintiff must prove not only the falsity of the representation, but also the scienter, the knowledge of the defect, on the part of the defendant (b).

If the defendant sell goods as his own, the plaintiff should show that he knew that they were not his own (c) (B). For if the defendant had reasonable ground to suppose that they were his own property, as if, for instance, he had bought them bonâ fide, this action will not lie against him (d). But if the defendant represent them to be the goods of A. B., and that he had authority from A. B. the owner, to sell them, it will be sufficient for the plaintiff to show that he had no authority from A. B.; and proof that they were the goods of some other person would be primâ facie evidence of the want of authority in the defendant, and sufficient to put him upon proving that he had authority (e).

So, if a man sell a horse, stating him to be of a certain age, according to persons in the same trade (whose names he would not disclose), and that they would not consent to his giving the plaintiff more than a certain sum, but in fact they had authorized him to make the best terms he could, and would have given a larger sum, and in fact the defendant charged them with a large sum, it was held that no action was maintainable; for it was either a false representation of the intention of another, or a mere gratis dictum of the defendants, on which it was the indiscretion of the plaintiff to rely. Vernon v. Keys, 12 East, 632, affirmed on error, in the Exchequer Chamber, 4 Taunt. 488.

(z) Vernon v. Keys, 12 East, 632. See the last note.

(a) [Otis v. Raymond, 3 Conn. Rep. 413. Munroe v. Gardner, 1 Rep. Con. Ct. 328, 475. Emerson v. Brigham, 10 Mass. Rep. 197. Yelv. 21, a. note (1).] Where there has been an express warranty, although the action be framed in tort, and a scienter averred, it need not be proved, Williamson v. Allison, 2 East, 446; for then the express warranty is the gist of the action, and not the deceit. See tit. Assumpsit—Warranty. And where there is a warranty the action is usually laid in assumpsit, in order that the declaration may embrace the money counts. The propriety of this practice was established in the case of Stuart v. Wilkins, Doug. 18. Where the action is framed in tort, the plaintiff, if he prove the scienter, will be entitled to recover, although the representation made may fall short of a warranty. Where a vendor knew of defects in a ship at the time of sale, which it was impossible that the buyer should discover, and did not disclose them at the time of sale, Lord Kenyon held that he was liable to an action for the deceit, as on a warranty that the ship was free from all defects, although by the express terms of the contract the buyer was to take her with all faults. Mellish v. Motteux, Peake's C. 115. But in the subsequent case of Baglehole v. Walters, 3 Camp. 154, Lord Ellenborough stated that he could not subscribe to the doctrine of the former case; he said, "Where an article is sold with all faults, I think it quite immaterial how many belonged to it within the knowledge of the seller, unless he used some artifice to disguise them, and to prevent their being discovered by the purchaser." There, however, the plaintiff failed in proving any fraud. See Parkinson v. Lee, 2 East, 314.

(b) Supra, note (a).

(c) B. N. P. 30; Salk. 210. B. sells good to A. as his own, but knowing them to be the goods of P., who retakes them, A. shall have an action on the case. 42 Ass. 8; 4 Co. 14. On the sale of a personal chattel the law will imply a warranty as to the right to sell, 3 T. R. 57; 2 Bl. Com. 451; 3 Com. 166; Peake's C. 94. But a warranty as to the right to real property will not be implied, 2 B. & P. 13; 3 B. and P. 166; Dougl. 654; 6 T. R. 606. A warranty as to the soundness, goodness, or value of a horse, or other personal chattel, is never implied. 2 East, 314; 2 Com. 451; 3 Com. 165; 2 Roll. R. 5.

(d) Ibid.

(e) B. N. P. 31; 1 Danv. 176.

(A) (An action on the case will lie for the assertion of a falsehood with a fraudulent intent, as to an existing fact, where a direct, positive, and material injury results from such assertion. Benton v. Pratt, 2 Wen. 385. Hart v. Tallmadge, 2 Day, 381.)

(B) (Where the donor of a chattel affirms it to be his, at the time of a gift, and the donee is afterwards evicted by the true owner, he may have an action on the case against the donor. Barney v. Dewey, 13 John. Rep. 224.)

(1) {An action of deceit will not lie against a purchaser of a chattel who makes false affirmations of his means and property in order to postpone the day of payment. Fisher v. Brown, 1 Tyler, 387.}

*a pedigree delivered to him when he bought the horse, and shown to the purchaser (f) (A); or sell a picture as the production of an ancient master (g), or as having formed part of a particular cabinet of paintings, and such representations be made according to the honest belief of the owner at the time, no action is maintainable, although the representation be incorrect; but it is otherwise if the vendor knew at the time that he was representing a falsehood (B).

In an action for giving a false representation of the credit and circumstances of a third person, to the detriment of the plaintiff, it is not necessary to show that the defendant expected to derive any benefit from the deceit, or that he colluded with the other (h). The ground of the action is the intention to deceive and injure the plaintiff (i), and of this, as on all other questions of mala fides, the jury are to judge (k) (C). Though the defendant inform the plaintiff that a party may safely be credited, and that he spoke from his own knowledge, and not from hearsay, he will not be liable to damages although the representation be false, and the plaintiff in consequence receive an injury, if the representation was in fact made by the defendant bonâ fide, and under the belief that it was true (l). It is not sufficient to show that the defendant intended to deceive when he made the representation, without proof that he intended to defraud the plaintiff (m). The mere suppression of the fact that the party concerning whom the representation is made, had recently been discharged under the Insolvent Act, is not conclusive evidence of fraud (n). Character.

It is enacted by the statute 9 G. 4, c. 14, s. 6, that no action shall be brought whereby to charge any person upon or by reason of any represen-(f) Dunlop v. Waugh, Peake's C. 123. (g) Jendwine v. Slade, 3 Esp. C. 572.

(h) Pasley v. Freeman, 3 T. R. 51: Falsehood and fraud are essential; falsehood without fraud is not sufficient. Ashlin v. White,[1] Holt's C. 387.

(i) Tapp v. Lee, 3 B. & P. 367; 3 T. R. 51.

(k) Eyre v. Dunsford, 1 East, 318. The defendants having credit lodged with them in favour of T. to a certain amount, but upon an express stipulation that goods should previously be lodged with them to treble the amount, informed the plaintiff, who applied to them for information as to T.'s responsibility, that they might safely execute T.'s order for goods upon credit, and stated the fact that such credit had been lodged with them, but wholly omitted the previous condition; and it was held that this was a suppressio veri, which warranted the jury in finding fraud. [Ward v. Center, 3 Johns. 271. Upton v. Vail, 6 Johns. 181.]

(l) Haycraft v. Creasy, 2 East, 92.

(m) Scott v. Lara, Peake's C. 226; and infra, 375. [Young v. Covell, 8 Johns. 23.]

(n) Gainsford v. Blackford, 6 Price, 36. The representation was, that L. H. then owed him, the defendant, 50*l.*; that he the defendant was ready to give L. H. credit for anything he wanted. See Wood v. Wain, 1 Esp. C. 442.

(A) (If one person exchanges horses with another and gives money to boot, he may not only maintain that action for his money, but also trover for the horse he parts with in exchange. Kimball v. Cunningham, 4 Mass. R. 502. But, if he commence an action of deceit to recover damages for the fraud, it will be a waver of his right to consider the contract as void, he having thereby made his election to consider it as subsisting. Ibid.)

(B) (An action lies for fraudulently selling land which has no real existence, notwithstanding the covenants contained in the deed of the vendor, which the vendee may treat as a nullity. Wardell v. Fosdick, 13 John. R. 325. One falsely supposing his estate in danger, conveys it to his sons, who know that it is not in danger, but neglect to set the grantor right: this concealment is a sufficient ground for avoiding the conveyance. Whelan v. Whelan, 3 Cow. 537.)

(C) (An action on the case for a false affirmation lies, when a certificate is given to an individual that he is honest, industrious, respectable, and otherwise a good citizen of good morals and habits, and that in the opinion of the person giving the certificate, the individual recommended would honourably endeavour faithfully to perform every engagement he should make in any matter of business or credit, and when the person recommended, on the strength of such certificate, obtains goods on credit, on its being shown that the certificate was false, and the falsity known to the person giving it. Williams v. Wood, 14 Wend. 126. In cases of this kind it is not necessary to show an intent to defraud any particular individual; any one defrauded may maintain an action for the false representation. Ib. See also Gallager v. Brunel, 6 Cow. 346. Allen v. Addington, 7 Wend. 1. Bulkley v. Storer, 2 Day, 531. Gardner v. Preston, 2 Day, 205.)

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. iii. 136.

tation or assurance made or given concerning or relating to the character, conduct, credit, ability, trade or dealings of any other person (o), to the intent or purpose that such other person may obtain credit, money or goods upon such representation or assurance (p), unless such representation or assurance be made in writing, signed by the party to be charged therewith.

The party whose solvency is misrepresented is a competent witness (q). Similar misrepresentations made by the defendant to other persons are, it has been held, admissible in evidence to prove a fraudulent connection between the defendant and the customer (r).

*374 Proof of deception.

*The gist of the action is, that the plaintiff was imposed upon by the fraud of the defendant (A). If, therefore, it appear that the plaintiff was aware of the falsity of the representation, or made the contract, to use a common phrase, with his eyes open to the defect, he is remediless, for he was not deceived. Nay, further, if he had the full means of detecting the fraud and ascertaining the truth, and neglected to inform himself of it when he might easily have done so, or even if he placed a blind and wilful confidence in a representation which was not calculated to impose upon a man of ordinary prudence and circumspection, it seems that an action of deceit cannot be supported (B). For although the plaintiff in these cases may, in point of fact, have been deceived, yet it was a conseqence of his own folly that he was so defrauded, and vigilantibus non dormientibus jura subveniunt.

Where a false representation was made on the sale of goods, but the plaintiff had full opportunity to inspect them, and a a written contract was entered into, the terms of which had no reference to the representation, it was held that the plaintiff was not entitled to recover (s).

If the vendor of a horse affirm that he is sound wind and limb, when it is apparent that he has but one eye (t), or warrant a house to be in perfect repair, which wants a roof (u), the buyer must abide by the consequence of his own laches.

In the sale of goods.

The possession of goods by a vendor, induces a reasonable presumption of ownership and title (x). But it is laid down, that if the seller was out of possession at the time of the sale, no action will lie against him, though they be not his own, without an express warranty, for there was not room to question his title (y).

If the vendor of a house affirm that the rent of the house was more than it really was, whereby the vendee was induced to give more for it than it was worth, an action, it is said, will lie; for the value of the rent is within (o) In Lyde v. Barnard, 1 M. & W. 101, the Judges of the Court of Exchequer were divided in opinion whether the clause applied to a case where the defendant had falsely represented the interest of A. B. in certain funds charged only with three incumbrances, whereby the plaintiff was induced to give him credit.

(p) The words in italics are omitted in the printed copy of the statute.

(q) Smith v. Harris,[1] 2 Starkie's C. 47. Richardson v. Smith, 1 Camp. 277, for the witness in an action for the goods cannot avail himself of the verdict.

(r) Beal v. Thatcher, 3 Esp. C. 194.

(s) Pickering v. Dowson, 4 Taunt. 779.

(t) Unless, as is quaintly remarked in the year-books, the purchaser be also blind.

(u) Bayley v. Merrel, Cro. Jac. 387; and per Grose, J., 3 T. R. 55. Dyer v. Hargrave, 10 Ves. 507. Where the defect is so obvious and visible, it is presumed that the parties did not intend the warranty to apply to it.

(x) B. N. P. 30. Medina v. Stoughton, Salk. 210; 1 Ray. 593. Dobell v. Stevens, 3 Roll. 623.

(y) Salk. 210; B. N. P. 31.

(A) (No action lies for representing the plaintiff's ferry not to be so good as a rival's ferry, and persuading travellers to cross in the latter and not in the plaintiff's ferry. Johnson v. Hitchcock, 15 John. R. 185.)

(B) (Brittain v. Israel, 3 Hawk, 222. Farrar v. Alston, 1 Dev. 89.)

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. iii. 238.

the private knowledge of the landlord (z); but if the seller merely affirm that the thing sold is worth so much, or that one would have given so much for it, although the affirmation be false, yet if the buyer might inform himself as to value, no action lies. And this principle, it is said, applies to all cases where the purchaser may easily ascertain the true value (a). But where the value of the article is not perfectly obvious upon mere inspection, but requires a particular degree of skill for the ascertainment, or depends upon collateral circumstances, the action may be maintained.

Although the goods have been sold by a written contract, yet the plaintiff is at liberty to give parol evidence of antecedent misrepresentations, for the purpose of proving fraud: as that the seller, by fraud, prevented him from *375 discovering a defect, which he, the seller knew to exist (b). It has been held that in an action for fraudulently misrepresenting the profits of a business as amounting to a specific sum, a variance from that amount in the representation proved will be fatal (c).

If a merchant sell one kind of silk for another, whereby the purchaser is imposed upon in the value, the action lies (A), although it turn out that the deceit was not in the merchant, but in his factor; for he is responsible, civiliter, although not criminaliter, for the deceit of his factor (d), and it is more reasonable that he who trusted the factor should suffer than that a stranger should.

It must be proved that the damage in fact resulted from the fraudulent act of the defendant (B). Where the plaintiff's agent applied to A. for the character of an intended vendee, and A. made a fraudulent representation on the subject, and afterwards the defendant, who was the brother of A., to whom the agent also applied, but did not say at whose request, confirmed his account, and the agent communicated A.'s representation to the plaintiff, but did not communicate the defendant's representation; it was held Proof of damage.

(z) Risney v. Selby, Salk. 211; Ray. 1118; Sid. 146; B. N. P. 31. So where the vendor of a public-house, pending his treaty, made false representations concerning the amount of the business done, and the rent received for a part of the premises. Dobell v. Stevens,[1] 3 B. & C. 625.

(a) B. N. P. 31; 1 Sid. 146. Where the plaintiff brought an action against the defendant, alleging that the defendant, having skill in jewels, sold him a stone which he affirmed to be a Bezoar-stone, and sold it as such, judgment was arrested, because the declaration did not allege that the defendant knew that it was not Bezoar-stone, or warranted it. See also Pickering v. Dowson, 4 Taunt. 779.

(b) Pickering v. Dowson, 4 Taunt. 779; and P. G. in Kain v. Old,[2] 2 B. & C. 634. And see Dobell v. Stevens,[1] 3 B. & C. 625.

(c) Gilbert v. Stanislaus, 3 Price, 54. Even although the sum was laid under a videlicet. The declaration stated that the defendant, a publican, represented that in his public-house the returns averaged 300*l.* a month; held to be proved by evidence that he said that he was doing 300*l.* a month in his house. Bowring v. Stevens,[3] 2 C. & P. 337.

(d) Hern v. Nicholls, Salk. 289; B. N. P. 31. [See Connor v. Henderson, 15 Mass. Rep. 319. Henderson v. Sevey, 2 Greenleaf, 139.]

(A) (See Vanvalkenburgh v. Evertson, 13 Wend. 76. Irvin v. Sherril, 1 Tay. 1. Inge v. Bond, 3 Hawks. 101. Thompson v. Tate, 1 Mur. 97. McFarlane v. Moore, 1 Penn. R. 174. McGarvock v. Ward, Cooke's R. 404. So an action of deceit lies when a victualler sells meat as fresh, to his customers, at a sound price, which, at the time, was stale and defective, or unwholesome from the state in which the animal died; for, in the nature of the bargain, the very offer to sell is a representation or affirmation of the soundness of the article, when nothing to the contrary is expressed; and his knowledge of the falsehood in this representation is also to be presumed from the nature and duties of his calling and trade. Emerson et al. v. Brigham et al. 10 Mass. R. 197. Kendall v. Cunningham, 4 Mass. R. 502. Hemenway et al. v. Woods, 18 Mass. R. 524. Where a person has accepted articles manufactured for him, he may maintain an action on the case against the manufacturer, for any deceit and fraud in the workmanship. Everett v. Gray et al. 1 Mass. R. 101.)

(B) (Where fraud occasions an injury to another, an action will lie. But fraud without damage, or damage without fraud constitutes no ground of action. Sherwood v. Salmon, 5 Day. 445. In a declaration in an action on the case, for a fraudulent representation, it must be averred that the representation was made with intent to deceive and defraud, or the declaration will be held bad, even after verdict. Addington v. Allen, 11 Wend. 374.)

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. x. 201. [2]Id. ix. 205. [3]Id. xii. 157.

that the action was not maintainable, for the damage did not result from the defendant's representation, but from A.'s (e). So no action will lie for any misrepresentation where the plaintiff or his agent knew that the party whose circumstances were misrepresented was insolvent (f) (C).

If A. falsely represent to B. the circumstances of C., in consequence of which B. sells to C. goods upon credit from time to time, A. is liable to B. although C. pays for the goods first supplied, on the purchasing of which the representation is made (g). He continues, it is said, to be liable within a reasonable time, and to a reasonable amount (h); in other words the liability depends so much on the peculiar circumstances of each case, that the law cannot define generally the limits either as to time or as to amount. Where B. had sold goods to C. on the representation of A., and then told C. that he would sell him no more without further references, it was held that A.'s liability did not extend beyond the time of such declaration (i). For this is strong, if not conclusive, evidence to show that the plaintiff was longer deceived by A.'s misrepresentation (D).

Evidence in defence.

It is no defence to an action of this nature, that the plaintiff agreed to take the article with all faults.

Where the vendor of a ship represented her to have been built in 1816, and in fact she had been built a year earlier, it was held that the plaintiff *was entitled to recover, although he was to take her on those conditions (k).

*376

So if a watch be warranted which turns out to be worthless, the plaintiff is entitled to recover, notwithstanding a stipulation that if he disliked the watch the vendee would exchange it (l). So where A. fraudulently misrepresented the circumstances of B. to C. it was held that he was liable, although he had promised to pay C. if B. did not (m).

Evidence of the actual value of the premises or chattel sold is admissible in reduction of damages, though not in bar of the action (n). Where the action was for a misrepresentation of a publican's profits, and in fact he named his brewer, and stated that a pass-book was kept of the beer and spirits, but the plaintiff made no inquiry of the brewer nor asked for the pass-book; it was held that the omissions did not bar the action, but were proper for the consideration of the jury, on the question whether any fraud

(e) Scott v. Lara, Peake's C. 226. Neither did the defendant intend to impose upon the plaintiff.

(f) Cowen v. Simpson, 1 Esp. C. 290.

(g) Hutchinson v. Bell, 1 Taunt. 558. But there B. stated to A. that he proposed to open an account with C. as a general customer. In the case of De Graves v. Smith, 2 Camp. 533, cor. Ellenborough, C. J., where the interrogation was general, and the false information given without reference to any proposed mode of dealing, it was held that the defendant was responsible for the first parcel of goods only, although the party became insolvent within a few months, and after the delivery of a second parcel on credit.

(h) Ibid. [See Rogers et al. v. Warner et al. 8 Johns. 119.]

(i) See above, note (g).

(k) Fletcher v. Bowsher,[1] 2 Starkie's C. 561, cor. Abbott, L. C. J.

(l) Wallace v. Jarman,[2] 2 Starkie's C. 162, cor. Ellenborough, L. C. J.

(m) Hamer v. Alexander, 2 N. R. 241.

(n) Pearson v. Wheeler,[3] 1 R. & M. 303.

(C) (Case lies in the name of the principal for a false representation made to the agent. Raymond v. Howland, 12 Wend. 176.)

(D) (In action on the case for deceit, in selling a vessel as a British vessel, she not being in fact such, it was held that the plaintiff was entitled to damages to the extent of the difference of value of the vessel as sold, and her value if her real character had been known; and also to such damages as the value of repairs made on her on the faith of the representation of her British character, which had not been remunerated by her earnings, or in any other way. Sherwood v. Sutton, 5 Mason's C. C. R. 1. If the vendor of goods affirm, or warrant them to be of a certain kind or quality, when they are of a different kind or inferior quality, he will be liable to pay the difference to the purchaser, or receive the goods back and rescind the bargain, if it be offered him. Bradford v. Manly, 13 Mass. R. 139.)

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. iii. 475. [2] Id. iii. 295. [3] Id. xxi. 446.

had been practised (o). It is no defence that the plaintiff on a bill filed paid the price of the goods deceitfully sold (p) (A).

DEED.

1. As to the Production of the deed, and proof under the plea of non est factum.
2. — Evidence by the defendant under the same plea.
3. — Evidence under special pleas.
4. — Admissibility and effect of a deed in evidence.

Non est factum.

THE plea of non est factam (q) puts in issue the execution of the deed, and its continuance as a deed at the time of the plea. Where the plaintiff has not the possession of the deed, he may aver that it has been lost or destroyed, or that it is in the possession of the adversary (r); but the deed if pleaded with a profert must be produced, or the plaintiff will be non-suited (s). Where the deed has been improperly pleaded with a profert on non est factum, he should move to amend the record; but an application at Nisi Prius for that purpose comes too late (t). If a deed be alleged to be lost through time and accident, but be found before the trial, it may be given in evidence (u) (B).

Proof of execution.

Proof of the execution consists in evidence of the sealing and delivery of the deed by the testimony of the attesting witness (x), in the manner already stated (y) (1). The deed may be admissible in evidence although when produced at the trial it appear that the seal has been torn off. As, where it *was sealed when pleaded, and the seal was afterwards torn off; *377

(o) Bowring v. Stevens,[1] 2 C. & P. 337.

(p) Jendwine v. Slade, 2 Esp. C. 573.

(q) It seems that if issue be taken on the improper plea of nil debet to a declaration on a bond, the execution of the deed stands admitted. On such an issue taken in an action by executors on a bond to the testator, evidence was admitted of an admission of the amount of the debt by the defendant, and the plaintiffs recovered without proof of the bond. York Summer Assizes, 1827, cor. Bayley, J. Where the defendant, W. F. B., executed the bond in the name of W. B., and appeared at the time to be known by the latter name, and the declaration was against W. F. B., sued by the name of W. B.; upon the plea non est factum, held, that the bond was not void, and that the objection, if valid, could not be available under that plea. Williams v. Bryant, 7 Dowl. 502.

(r) Reed v. Brookman, 3 T. R. 151; Totty v. Nesbitt, Ibid. in note. Bolton v. Bishop of Carlisle, 2 H. B. 259.

(s) Smith v. Woodward, 4 East, 585.

(t) Paine v. Bustin,[2] 1 Starkie's C. 74.

(u) Hawley v. Peacock, 2 Camp. 557.

(x) Bac. Ab. Ev. 647.

(y) Vide Vol. I. Ind. tit. DEED.

(A) (Where a certificate was given that a party is honest and of good character, and the party certifying believes he would honourably endeavour to perform faithfully every engagement; in an action of deceit—evidence that the person recommended was insolvent and worthless when the certificate was given, is admissible. Williams v. Wood, 14 Wend. 126. And a defendant in such case is not at liberty to show that the certificate was given for a specific purpose, e. g. to enable the person recommended to buy a garden spot at a particular place, and thus rebut the intent to enable him to obtain goods at another place. But the defendant might have shown that he believed the representation made, and was himself the dupe of the artifices of the person obtaining the certificate. Ib. No action will lie for obtaining a decree by false and forged evidence, while such decree remains in force. Monroe v. Maples, 1 Root, 553. Beck v. Woodridge, 3 Day, 30.)

(B) (Non est factum puts in issue the execution of the deed only. Every material averment, beside that of execution, is admitted. Dale v. Roosevelt, 9 Cow. 307. And this though the plaintiff stipulate that, under the plea the defendant may give any special matter in evidence, as if pleaded. Ib.)

(1) [On the plea of non est factum, proof that the defendant acknowledged in court that he had subscribed his name to the instrument and delivered it as a form by which to draw such an instrument, without proof that he ever acknowledged the same or delivered it as obligatory upon him, is not sufficient to charge him. Asberry, &c. v. Colloway, 1 Wash. 73. On the same plea to an action against executors, evidence that the obligor (the testator) was an illiterate German—that the subscribing witnesses, at the time of its alleged execution, lived sixty miles off, in another state,—that they and the obligee were persons of general bad character—and that many respectable persons, who spoke both German and English, lived in the obligor's neighbourhood, at the time when the instrument was alleged to be executed—was admitted as circumstances from which the jury might infer that the testator did not execute it. Sides v. Schnebly, 3 Har. & M'Hen. 243.]

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. xii. 157. [2] Id. ii. 302.

for, as has been already observed, the issue is upon its continuance as a deed at the time of pleading (z). And after the plea with a profert, it is in the custody of the law, and if the seal be broken off in court the law will not allow the innocent party to be prejudiced (a). So it may be shown that the seal has been torn off by accident after the execution of the deed (b); and before the time of pleading (c); or that it has been cancelled through the practice of the obligor (d) (A) (1).

If the deed be altered by the party (the obligee) himself, although but in an immaterial point, he thereby avoids the deed (e); for the law takes every man's act most strongly against himself. An alteration by a stranger, in an immaterial point, will not avoid the deed; but it is said to be otherwise if a stranger alter it in a material point, for the witnesses cannot prove it to be the deed of the party where there is any material difference (f) (2). And an alteration in any covenant will avoid the whole deed, for the deed cannot be the same unless every covenant be the same (g).

If an interlineation appear in a deed, and there be no evidence to show how it was done, it will be presumed to have been done before the execution (h).

Where a deed operated differently as to different parties, and after execution by some, and before the execution by others, was altered in parts, which did not affect the former, but only the latter, it was held to be binding on all (i).

(z) Besides this, the deed, after it has been pleaded with a profert, is in the custody of the law. Cro. Eliz. 120; 5 Co. 119, b.; 2 Bulst. 247; Dy. 59, pl. 12, 13; Doc. Pl. 262; Roll. R. 39, 40; 2 Roll. Ab. 29; [2 Pick. Rep. 458.]

(a) Smith v. Woodward, 4 East, 585. If the seal be broken off in court, the deed shall be enrolled for the benefit of the parties; for where anything is impaired whilst in the custody of the law, it is restored by the benignity of the law as far as possible. 1 Inst. 676.

(b) And this is a question for the jury. In Palm. 403, it was holden that a deed leading the uses of a recovery was good evidence of such uses, although the seals were torn off, it being proved to have been done so by a young boy. B. N. P. 268. It is there suggested that such evidence would not be sufficient under the plea of non est factum, although it might where the deed was used as evidence collaterally.

(c) Pal. 403; 1 Mod. 211. (d) 1 Vent. 297.

(e) B. N. P. 267; 10 Co. 92; 11 Co. 27, a.

(f) B. N. P. 267; 11 Co. 27. Qu. therefore, whether the deed is avoided by the act of a stranger, where the contents of the original deed can be satisfactorily proved. As the act of a stranger in tearing off the seals does not vitiate the deed, it is difficult to say why his alteration of it should avoid it; the reason above assigned for considering it to be wholly void assumes that which may or may not be true, according to circumstances. See Com. Dig. tit. Fait, (1); Roll. 41 Cro. Eliz. 626; Mo. 10 (3).

(g) 11 Co. 28, b.; B. N. P. 267.

(h) Vin. Ab. vol. 12, p. 58. But see below, 377 (a).

(i) Doe d. Lewis v. Bingham,[1] 4 B. & A. 672.

(A) (Whether an instrument of writing be under seal or not, is a question of law to be determined by the Court, from the inspection of the instrument; and ought not to be submitted to the jury. Duncan v. Duncan, 1 Watts, 322. Several persons may bind themselves by one seal. Ludlow v. Simonds, 2 Caine's C. Mackay v. Bloodgood, 9 John. R. 285.)

(1) [See Cutts v. United States, 1 Gallison, 69, where it was decided that a deed is not avoided by the seal's being torn off fradulently or innocently by the obligor, but may be declared on as a subsisting deed.] {But an instrument so mutilated should not be declared on as a deed, without a profert, but the fact should be stated as an excuse for not making a profert. Powers v. Ware, 2 Pick. Rep. 451.}

(2) [As to the effect of the alteration of deeds, see Chesley v. Frost, 1 N. Hamp. Rep. 145. Penny v. Carwithe, 18 Johns. 499. Hatch v. Hatch, 9 Mass. Rep. 307. Barrett v. Thorndike, 1 Greenleaf, 73. The effect of an alteration in a deed conveying land is different from an alteration of a bond, &c. A grantee's title is not impaired by a voluntary destruction of his title deed, or by an immaterial alteration thereof fraudulently made by himself. Hatch v. Hatch, and Barrett v. Thorndike, ubi sup. See also Doe d. Beanland v. Hirst, note (p) on this page.]

(3) [In Prevost v. Gratz & al. 1 Peters' Rep. 369, and Morris's Lessee v. Vanderen, 1 Dallas, 67, it was held that a material erasure, or interlineation, shall be presumed to have been made before the execution of the deed unless the contrary be shown.] {Attesting witnesses are not necessary to a deed, and where their names are erased, it is incumbent on the party wishing on that account to avoid the deed, to prove that the erasure was made after its execution and delivery, and by the grantee, or those claiming under him, for if done by a stranger, it would not avoid the deed. Wickes's Lessee v. Caulk, 5 Har. & Johns. Rep. 36.}

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. vi. 560.

Where the lessor of the plaintiff in ejectment claimed under a deed proved to have been mutilated after execution, it was held that the deed was void, but that the avoidance did not devest the estate, which had passed under the deed (k).

The proof of the execution of a deed has already been considered (l). No particular form of delivery is essential. Mere delivery without words is sufficient (m); as if the obligor throw it down on a table, with intent that *the party shall take it, and he takes it accordingly (n); or deliver it as his deed into the hands of a stranger (o). But it is otherwise if he deliver it to a stranger as an escrow, to be his deed upon performance of conditions (p) (A); and it cannot be delivered to the obligee as an escrow (q). A delivery by a stranger with the assent of the maker is sufficient (r). Proof of delivery. *378

A delivery may also be by words, without an actual delivery; as where the deed lies on the table, and the obligor says to the obligee, "take it up as my deed" (s) (1).

If the obligor once deliver it as his deed, with intent that it shall be so, (k) Doe v. Hirst,[1] 3 Starkie's C. 60.

(l) Supra, Vol. I. Ind. tit. DEED. A party may be bound by a covenant in an indenture of lease, although he does not seal it, if he agree to the lease (Co. Litt. 231, a.; Com. Dig. tit. Fait, A. 2). As where A. demises to B. and C., who covenant with A., and B. seals the counterpart, and C. agrees to the lease, but does not seal it.

(m) Co. Litt. 36, a.; 2 Roll. 24, l. 28, 45.

(n) Ow. 95. But it is no delivery, unless the intent be found. Ibid. and 1 Lev. 140.

(o) 2 Roll. 24, l. 42. Although it was not to be delivered till after the performance of a condition. 2 Roll. 25, l. 30; 1 Lev. 152.

(p) Co. Litt. 36, a.; 2 Roll. 25, l. 25. (q) 2 Cro. 85, 6.

(r) Perkins's Fait. 137; and Com. Dig. Fait. A. 3.

(s) Co. Litt. 36, a.

(A) (It is not necessary that the term escrow should be used, when an instrument is delivered to a third person to prevent its taking immediate effect. Clark v. Giffard, 10 Wend. 310. But an agreement to deliver a deed as an escrow, to the person, in whose favour it is made, and who is likewise a party to it, will not make the delivery conditional; the delivery will be deemed absolute, and a consummation of the execution of the deed. Simonton's Estate, 4 Watts, 180.)

(1) [The delivery of every deed must be proved, as well as the execution of it, being an essential requisite to its validity (Jackson v. Dunlap, 1 Johns. Cas. 114); but the possession of a bond being with the obligee is sufficient evidence of a delivery. Clark v. Ray, 1 Har. & J. 323. S. P. Mallory v. Aspinwall, 2 Day, 280, in case of an ancient deed. A formal delivery is not essential, if there be acts evincing an intention to deliver. Goodrich v. Walker, 1 Johns. Cas. 250. A deed may be delivered by words, or by acts without words—and may be good even if delivered to a stranger without special authority, if intended for the use of the grantee. Verplank v. Sterry & ux. 12 Johns. 536. If a deed has once been delivered, so as to take effect, a second delivery can be of no avail. Ibid. Where one, after executing a deed, left it on the table where it remained all night, and in the morning took it up and put it away; it was held there was no evidence of a delivery. Ward's Ex'rs v. Ward, 2 Hayw. 226. Where A. living in New York, agreed with B. of Massachusetts, to give him a deed of his farm, as security for a debt, and accordingly executed a deed to C. in 1808, and left it at the clerk's office to be recorded—neither the grantee nor any person on his behalf being present to receive it—and the grantee died in 1809, and in 1810, A. sent the deed to his heir; it was held that there was no delivery. Jackson v. Phipps, 12 Johns. 418. See also Maynard v. Maynard & al. 10 Mass. Rep. 456. But a delivery of a deed to a third person, for the use of the grantee, and without his knowledge, becomes a valid delivery on the subsequent assent of the grantee, which relates back to the original time of delivery. Ruggles v. Lawson & al. 13 Johns. 285. Belden v. Carter, 4 Day, 66. Hatch v. Hatch, 9 Mass. Rep. 307. Commonwealth v. Seldon & al. 5 Munf. 160. Harrison & al. v. Trustees of Phillips Academy, 12 Mass. Rep. 456. See also Beckman v. Frost, 18 Johns. 544. 1 Johns. Ch. Rep. 288. Souverbye v. Arden, 1 Johns. Ch. Rep. 240. The Trustees of the Methodist Church v. Jaques, ibid. 450. Bickford v. Daniels, 2 N. Hamp. Rep. 71.] {Where it was proved by the subscribing witness to a deed, that the grantors signed and sealed it, but that the grantee was not present at the execution thereof, nor any one on his behalf, to the witnesses' knowledge, and that the deed when executed was delivered to one of the grantors, and by the direction of another, who had a power of attorney appointing him the grantee's general agent, of a date anterior to the execution of the deed, was put upon record, and remained in the Register's Office until called for by the counsel of the grantee, it was held,—the question as to its due execution and delivery being raised, not by any party to the deed, but by a stranger—that the jury might, from the facts above stated, presume a delivery. Gardner v. Collins, 3 Mason's Rep. 398.}

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. xiv. 162.

he cannot by any subsequent words explain his intent to be otherwise (t) (A).

One who executes a deed for another, under a power of attorney, must execute it in the name of the principal; but no particular form of words is essential (u) (1).

The due execution of a deed may be presumed from circumstances (v).

Variance. In general, where an action is brought against one of several covenantors or obligors, the defendant cannot take advantage of it, except by plea in abatement (x).

If the plaintiff declare on a bond made by two, it is no variance under the plea of non est factum that the bond was made by three (y). But if one of several covenantees or obligees bring an action without averring that the rest are dead, the defendant may take advantage of it at the trial, as a variance under the plea of non est factum (z).

If the deed appear to be razed or interlined, it is a question for the jury, whether it was the individual contract delivered by the party (a).

A variance between the real name of the defendant from that which is given him in the deed, and by which he is sued, is immaterial (b).

*379 *If the deed read vary from that described in the declaration, in legal effect, the variance will be fatal (c). As, if it describe the consideration for (t) Com. Dig. Fait. A. 3. [See Johnson et al. v. Baker,[1] 1 B. & A. 440.] But qu. whether the delivery is absolute where the deed is delivered to the obligee as an escrow to be his deed on performance of a condition. Ibid.; and see Vol. I. Ind. tit. DEED.

(u) Wilks v. Back, 2 East, 142.

(v) Where, on the execution of a composition-deed with creditors, a dispute arising as to the exact amount of the debt of one, the deed was executed with a blank as to that sum, and the amount was inserted the following day, upon the vouchers being produced, but the attesting witness was not present, and the deed was not proved to have been re-executed or re-delivered, but there was evidence of its being subsequently recognized and acted upon by the defendant; held that the Judge properly referred it to the jury to say whether they would not presume an execution after such insertion, or that it was not to be considered as delivered as a perfect deed until the sum was so inserted: held also (per Holroyd, J., on the trial), that the attorney who prepared the deed on the retainer, and on behalf of the trustees, was a competent witness in an issue directed by the Court to try its validity, notwithstanding one of the trusts was for the payment, in the first instance, of the costs attending the preparing it, and he was also a defendant in another action, the result of which depended on that validity of the deed; the Court not questioning the decision of that learned Judge, and being satisfied that the justice of the case had been obtained by the verdict. Hudson v. Revett,[2] 5 Bing. 368.

(x) See the case, 1 Will. Saund. 154, n. 1. Whelpdale's Case, Rep. 199; Gilbert v. Bath, 1 Str. 503.

(y) South v. Tanner, 2 Taunt. 254.

(z) 1 Will. Saund. 154, and the cases there cited.

(a) B. N. P. 267; 10 Co. 92. Formerly the Judges decided upon the profert, or view of the deed, whether it was void by reason of erasure or interlineation; but when deeds grew to be voluminous, they found it inconvenient to decide upon demurrer, and referred it to a jury. B. N. P. 267.

(b) A party ought to be sued by the name given him in the bond, &c. A declaration against him by his right name, stating that in another name he executed the bond, has been held to be bad. Gould v. Barnes, 3 Taunt. 504. See above, 376, note (q).

(c) See Swallow v. Beagmont, supra, 343; Sands v. Ledger, 2 Ld. Raym. 792; Howell v. Richards, 11 East, 633; Browning v. Wright, 2 B. & P. 19.

(A) (If a grantor place a deed on record, it is not an absolute delivery, but only evidence of it, of which the jury may judge. Chess v. Chess, 1 Penn. R. 32. Where a deed of lands was delivered as an escrow, and an absolute delivery subsequently made, but previously to the second delivery a judgment was obtained against the grantor, under which the lands were sold; it was held, that the purchaser under the judgment was entitled to the land. Jackson v. Rowland, 6 Wend. 666. A deed requiring the approbation of a third person to render it valid, although executed before, becomes operative from the time that such approbation is in fact given. Jackson v. Hill, 5 Wend. 532.)

(1) [It is indifferent whether an attorney sign a deed "B. W. attorney for R. C." or "R. C. by B. W. his attorney." Jones's Devisees v. Carter, 4 Hen. & Mun. 184. But where an attorney signed his own name, without adding any reference to his constituent, it was held that the deed was inoperative, although it recited a proper letter of attorney, and although the concluding words of the deed were—"In testimony whereof, I have hereunto set the name and seal of the said J."—who had executed the letter of attorney. Elwell v. Shaw, 16 Mass. Rep. 42. 1 Greenleaf, 339, S. C.]

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. vi. 479. [2]Id. xv. 467.

the defendant's covenant improperly (d); or allege that as absolute which is merely qualified and conditional (e).

Where the declaration, in setting out one of the several covenants in a lease, on which breaches were assigned, described it to be the Cellar Beer Field, by mistake for the Aller Beer Field, the variance was held to be fatal, as amounting to a misdescription of the deed declared on (f).

The defendant prayed oyer of the condition of a bond, which was for the payment of 100*l.* by instalments, till the said sum be paid; the defendant then pleaded non est factum; and it appeared that the word hundred, where it should have occurred the second time in the condition of the bond, had been omitted, but had afterwards been inserted without the defendant's knowledge; it was held, that although the alteration did not avoid the instrument, yet, that it caused such a variance between the condition set out on the record on oyer and the condition on the bond produced, that the plaintiff could not recover (g) (1).

Evidence for the defendant.

2. The defendant may give in evidence any matter which shows either 1st, that the deed was originally void, or, 2dly, that it was avoided by matter subsequent before the plea; for the plea is in the present tense, and if it has been avoided, it was not the defendant's deed at the time of pleading (h).

Proof by defendant.

1st. That it was originally void. As where a bail-bond is taken after the return of the writ (i). That it is a forgery; that he was made to sign it when he was so drunk that he did not know what he did (k); that he was a lunatic (l) (A); that it was obtained by fraud, and without any real assent of the mind, having been falsely read over to him, being a blind man, or unable to read (m) (2); that she was a feme covert (n); that the deed was delivered as an escrow, upon a condition not yet performed (o) (a); that it was delivered to a stranger for the use of the plaintiff, who refused it, for the refusal deraigns the bond (p); that it was made to a feme covert, and that the husband disagreed, and refused to accept it (q); that the deed was cancelled before the plea; that a material erasure was made in the deed, or that the seal was torn off before the plea (r) (B); but this, it seems, is but

(d) Swallow v. Beaumont, supra, 247.

(e) See Brown v. Knill,[1] 2 B. & B. 395. Tempany v. Burnand, 4 Camp. 20. See also 1 Camp. 195; 14 East, 568; 7 Taunt. 305;[2] 1 B. & A. 57; and Vol. I. tit. VARIANCE.

(f) Pitt v. Green, 9 East, 188. (g) Waugh v. Bussell,[3] 1 March. 214.

(h) Gilb. L. Ev. 173, 2d edit. [In Manwood v. Harris, Savile, 71, it was held that matter subsequent to the execution of the deed, which avoids it, must be pleaded, and cannot be given in evidence under the issue of non est factum. That case, however, is not law.]

(i) Supra, tit. BAIL-BOND.

(k) Cole v. Robins, B. N. P. 172. See tit. DRUNKENNESS.

(l) B. N. P. 172. Yates v. Boen, Str. 1104. [Wigglesworth v. Steers & al. 1 Hen. & Munf. 69. King's Ex'rs v. Bayant's Ex'rs, 2 Hayw. 394. Curtis v. Hall, 1 Southard's Rep. 361.]

(m) B. N. P. 172. {Armstrong et al. v. Hall, 1 Coxe's Rep. 178; Jackson v. Haynes, 12 Johns. 469.}

(n) Ibid.; 2 Wils. 352; Burr. 1805; Lord Ray. 363.

(o) B. N. P. 172; 2 Roll. Ab. 683; 5 Co. 19.

(p) 5 Co. 119, b. (q) Ibid.

(r) Formerly the Court decided on view of the deed, upon profert made, whether it was void or not from

(1) {A variance in date, between the bond declared upon and that produced on oyer, is matter of substance, and fatal upon the plaintiff's special demurrer to the defendant's bad rejoinder. Cooke v. Graham's Adm'r, 3 Cranch, 229.}

(A) (Imbecility of mind not amounting to lunacy or idiocy in the grantor of land, is not sufficient to avoid his deed, where in the obtaining it, there is no fraud. Odell v. Buck, 21 Wend. 142.)

(2) {Or that a different instrument was substituted for that which the defendant supposed he was executing, Moore v. Carpenter, Cam. and Nor. 553. Van Valkenburg v. Rouk, 12 Johns. 337.}

(a) Or that it was not delivered. Roberts v. Jackson, 1 Wendall, 478. Jackson v. Perkins, 2 Wendall, 308.

(B) (Where the seals of an agreement were torn off by one with whom it had been left for safe keeping presumptive evidence of such an act on the part of the obligee as will cancel the deed, for the latter may show that the seal was torn off by accident (s); or that the alteration was made by a stranger in a point not ma-

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. vi. 167. [2]Id. ii. 114. [3]Id. i. 241.

*380 terial, and without his *privity (t) (A). But an alteration by the obligee himself, even in an immaterial point, will, it is said, avoid the deed (u). An alteration in any one covenant will avoid the whole deed, for the deed is not the same, unless all the covenants be the same (x) (B).

Where the deed is a joint one (y), or both joint and several (z), the defendant who is sued may show that the seal of one of the obligors has been torn off, for the manner of the obligation becomes different, and a presumption arises that the obligee has been satisfied. But it is otherwise where the obligation is entirely several (a).

Where A., with a blank left after his name, is bound to B., and afterwards the name of C. is added as a joint obligor, the bond is not avoided, for the addition does not alter the contract of A., who was bound to pay the money independently of any addition (b) (1).

Where a bond was made to C., with blanks left for the christian name and addition, which were filled up afterward with the assent of the parties, it was held that the bond was void (c). And in general, if blanks be left at the time of execution, and be afterwards filled up, the deed will be avoided, for it is no longer the same contract that was sealed and delivered (d); but an immaterial addition will not avoid the deed (e) (C). The rasure (10 Co. 92); and they held that a raised or interlined deed was void, because they could not sufficiently collect the intention of the obligor. 10 Co. 92; Bac. Ab. Ev. F. 649. See above, 378, note (a), and 377, note (h).

(s) B. N. P. 172.

(t) B. N. P. 171. But see 11 Co. 27, and Str. 1160; where it is laid down, that an alteration by a stranger in a material point will avoid the deed, because the witnesses cannot then say that it is the deed of the party. Vide supra, 377.

(u) Pigott's Case, 11 Co. 27, B. N. P. 267; vide supra, 377.

(x) 11 Co. 27, 28, b.; B. N. P. 267.

(y) Noy, 172; B. N. P. 268: 11 Co. 28; 2 Show. 28, 29; 2 Roll. Rep. 39, 40; 5 Co. 23, a.; Cro. Eliz. 546; Doc. Pl. 260, 262, 263; Poph. 161; 2 Roll. R. 30.

(z) March. 125; 2 Show. 29; Bac. Ab. Ev. 652; B. N. P. 268.

(a) Ibid.

(b) 2 Lev. 35; 2 Keb. 872, 881; Moor. 547, 619; Cro. Eliz. 627; B. N. P. 281. [2 Ch. Rep. 187.]

(c) Roll. R. 39, 40.

(d) Ibid.; 2 Roll. Ab. 29; B. N. P. 281.

(e) Vent. 185.

---

by both parties; held, that this did not destroy the deed. Rees v. Overbaugh, 6 Cow. 746. Cutts v. U. S., 1 Gallis, C. C. R. 69.)

(A) (An alteration in a bond made by one of the clerks of the custom house, after its execution, for the purpose of rectifying it; but which did not affect its construction; was held to be the act of a stranger, and immaterial, and not to avoid the bond. The U. S. v. Hatch, 1 Paine's C. C. R. 336.)

(B) (A. being in custody under an execution, applied to a Judge of the Common Pleas, to give bond and receive a discharge, and for that purpose, he and B., his surety, wrote their names on a blank paper, and affixed their seals, and left it with the judge, desiring him to fill it up; the judge gave the discharge and took away the bond, and afterwards filled it up accordingly; held, that the bond was valid and binding. Wiley v. Moor, 17 Serg. & Rawle, 438. A bond executed in blank as to a material part, with parol authority to an agent to fill up the blank, and deliver it is valid. Ex parte Kerwin, 8 Cow. 118.)

(1) [Texira v. Evans, cited by Wilson, J. 1 Anst. 228. Matson v. Booth, 5 M. & S. 223. Hunt v. Adams, 6 Mass. Rep. 519. Smith v. Crooker & al. 5 Mass. Rep. 538. Speaks & al. v. U. States, 9 Cranch, 28. Whiting v. Daniel, 1 Hen. & Mun. 391. Wooley & al. v. Constant, 4 Johns. 55—where it is held that by consent of parties, alterations may be made in a deed by adding, or by erasing and substituting obligors' names, &c., and that parol evidence of such consent is admissible, and that it is immaterial whether the consent be given before or after the execution of the deed—and that consent may in some cases be implied from the nature of the alteration, as well as expressed. {Barrington v. The Bank of Washington, 14 Serg. & Rawle, 405.} Sed vide Moore & al. v. Lessee of Bickham & al. 4 Binney, 1. See also Oneale v. Long, 4 Cranch, 60.]

(C) (If a deed be altered after delivery, the alteration destroys the deed as to the party who altered it, but does not destroy the estate. Withers v. Atkinson, 1 Watts, R. 236. Jackson v. Gould, 7 Wend. 364. Whether interlineations and erasures have been made in a deed before or after its execution, is a question for the jury to decide. Heffelfinger v. Shutz, 16 Serg. & Rawle, 44.)

defendant may also show that the deed after execution was altered, and without any new stamp (f).

The defendant cannot, under this plea, give any matter in evidence which avoids the deed either at common law or by statute, unless it impeach the execution or continuance of the deed (g); and therefore cannot give in evidence that the deed is void for usury (h); or that the bond was delivered to the plaintiff himself upon a condition not performed (i); or to a stranger but not an escrow (k). So, in all cases where the deed is merely voidable, but not void, the matter must be specially pleaded, and is not evidence under this plea (l); as for infancy (m), duress, or where it was obtained by threats (n); nor can he read the condition of the bond to show that it is void, as being in restraint of marriage, or for any other illegality (o).

Where the plea is non est factum generally, the proof lies upon the plaintiff; but where the plea shows that the deed is void for special matter, the issue is on the defendant (p).

3. The usual pleas in avoidance of a deed are, that it was obtained by duress, *which will be supported by proof that he was forced to give the bond by a wrongful imprisonment (q); by threats, and then proof of a menace of life, member, mayhem, or imprisonment, is sufficient, it is said, to avoid a deed (r); but a threat of battery, or of injury to the party's house or goods, is, it is said, insufficient, because the party may recover damages for the injury (s); this, however, is clearly a very inadequate reason for the distinction, and may be frequently false in fact. Under the plea of duress, it is a question for the jury whether the act of the party was voluntary, or was the result of terror and apprehension (A). Special plea in avoidance. *381

So the defendant, in avoidance of the deed, may plead coverture (t), infancy (u), or that the deed was void under the statute of usury, or against gaming (B), or for other illegal matter (x), fraud or covin, and in some instances mistake (y) (C).

Other pleas in answer are, of a tender; solvit ad, or post diem (z); or a release (a), which must be produced and proved as a deed; performance

(f) 1 Ford. 84. See tit. Stamp.
(g) Cotton v. Goodright, Bl. 1008; 5 Co. 119, a.; Com. Dig. Pleader, 2 W. 18;[1] 2 Starkie's C. 35.
(h) 5 Co. 119, a.; Com. Dig. Pleader, 2 W. 18. (i) 9 Co. 37, a.
(k) Dyer, 167, b. (l) Com. Dig. Pleader, 2 W. 18.
(m) B. N. P. 172; Ca. K. B. 609. Per Lord Mansfield, Burr. 1805; Lord Raym. 315. But where infancy actually avoids the deed, it is evidence on the plea of non est factum. Per Eyre, J., 2 H. B. 515.
(n) 5 Co. 119, a.; Com. Dig. Pleader, 2 W. 18. (o) Bl. 1008.
(p) Mod. Ca. 218; Com. Dig. Pleader, 2 W. 18.
(q) 2 Ins. 482; Com. Dig. Pleader, 2 W. 19. But this is no plea, if the deed be acknowledged by the defendant to be enrolled of record. 2 Roll. 862.
(r) 2 Ins. 483; Cl. Ass. 72; Com. Dig. Pleader, 2 W. 20.
(s) 2 Ins. 483. (t) See tit. Husband & Wife.
(u) See tit. Infant. (x) See tit. Tender.
(y) See tit. Parol Evidence. In some instances the mere suppressio veri will avoid a deed. Gordon v. Gordon, 3 Swanst. 400.
(z) See tit. Payment. (a) See tit. Release.

(A) (But one obligor cannot plead that the bond was obtained from a co-obligor by duress. Thompson v. Lockwood, 15 John. R. 256. Simms v. Barfoot's Ex'rs, 2 Hay. 402. And a deed obtained by sureties for their indemnity, under a threat of legal process in case of refusal, cannot be set aside by the bargainor for duress in its execution. Hart v. Bass, 2 Dev. Eq. 292.)

(B) (Lessee of Burd v. Swearingen, 1 Ohio R. 403.)

(C) (Gibson v. Porter, 2 Dev. & Bat. 530. But the want or failure of consideration cannot be set up at law to impeach a specialty. Vrooman v. Phelps, 2 Johns. R. 177. Dorlan v. Sammis, Ib. 179, n. Parker v. Parmele, 20 John. R. 130. And no person but the party to a deed, who alleges fraud to have been practised upon him, or those claiming title under him, will be allowed to impeach or avoid the deed on the ground of such fraud. Jackson ex dem. Hungerford v. Edson, 20 John. R. 478.)

[1] Eng. Com. Law Reps. iii. 232.

of the condition; a defeazance, which must be proved as a deed, if denied by the replication (b); eviction (c); expulsion (d).

Proof by, when necessary.

4. It is a general rule, that parties to a deed and those who are privy in estate can found no claim upon the deed without showing it to the Court (e). and where the contract creates the obligation, it can neither be pleaded nor given in evidence unless it be under seal, but it is otherwise where the interest vests, although the deed has no continuance (f).

Where an estate is claimed by act of law, the party may make his claim without showing the deeds; as where the party is tenant in dower, or by elegit, or guardian in chivalry; for where the law creates an estate, but does not give custody of the deeds, it must allow the estate to be defended without them (g). But a tenant by the curtesy cannot claim an estate lying in grant, without deed, because he has the custody of the deeds in right of his wife (h).

Where the plea is, that J. S. was enfeoffed by deed, it seems that a parol feoffment cannot be proved; for if the jury were to find the issue for the defendant, the plaintiff would be for ever after estopped, although there was no such deed (i). So a demise may be proved by parol, for it may be by livery; but if it be alleged to have been by deed, it must be proved by deed (k). The delivery will be estopped by the livery, unless he produce the indenture to show that it was merely conditional.

A deed of feoffment is evidence to prove livery, where the party has had possession (l), but if possession has not gone along with the deed, livery must be proved under a plea of feoffment (m). Upon a plea that J. S.

*382 *enfeoffed the defendant without saying per indenturam, the indenture is evidence of the feoffment (n). A deed of feoffment may be given in evidence as a release; for where the party is already in possession, the deed alone will be a sufficient contract to transfer a right (o). Where a thing lies in livery, a deed is evidence, although the seal be torn off, for the deed is only the evidence of transferring the possession, which being once transferred by livery does not return (p); but it is otherwise where the thing to which the title is claimed (as a watercourse) lies in grant, for a man cannot claim a thing lying in solemn agreement but by solemn agreement (q).

The production of an original lease for a long term of years, coupled with a possession for seventy years, was held to be presumptive evidence of the execution of all mesne assignments (r). A deed takes effect from the delivery. A condition to pay for goods, then and afterwards to be delivered does not bind as to goods delivered between the date and execution (s).

(b) Com. Dig. Pleader, 2 W. 35; Mo. 573.
(c) Vide supra, tit. COVENANT.
(d) Ibid.
(e) Co. Litt. 267; 10 Co. 92.
(f) Roll. R. 39, 40; 2 Buls. 246.
(g) 10 Co. 93, 94.
(h) 10 Co. 94; Co. Litt. 226, a.
(i) 2 Roll. Ab. 682.
(k) Ibid.
(l) Roll. R. 192, 227; Tri. per Pais, 290; Cro. Jac. 423; Bac. Ab. F. 648.
(m) Bl. Comm. 67.
(n) 2 Roll. Ab. 682.
(o) Tri. per Pais, 209; Bac. Ab. Ev. F. 649.
(p) Pal. 403; Mod. 11; Vent. 14; 2 Keb. 556; 2 Lev. 220; 2 Show. 28. The livery being indorsed. Roll. Ab. 29. The cancelling of a deed does not revest the property conveyed. Bolton v. Bishop of Carlisle, 2 H. B. 263. Roe d. Lord Berkely v. Archbishop of York, 6 East, 86, per Holroyd, J., in Doe d. Lewis v. Bingham,[1] 4 B. & A. 677; and per Bayley and Holroyd, Judges, in Doe v. Hirst,[2] 3 Starkie's C. 60. A lease on a dispute between a lessor and lessee, was ordered by a Court of Equity to be deposited with the attorney of the lessor, and in an action by the lessee against the tenant in possession, was produced, having the names of the parties torn off; it was held that it was still evidence of the lessee's title, and that the facts did not show a surrender in law, or by deed or note in writing. Doe v. Thomas,[3] 9 B. & C. 288.
(q) 3 Bull. 79; Roll. R. 188.
(r) 2 Bl. R. 1228.
(s) Com. Dig. Fait, G.; 2 Cro. 264.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. vi. 560. [2]Id. xiv. 162. [3]Id. xvii. 380.

DEPOSITIONS.

THE admissibility and effect of depositions in civil cases have already been considered (t); it remains to notice those which are made according to the statutes in criminal proceedings.

Depositions under the statute 7 Geo. 4, c. 65.

The stat. 7 Geo. 4, c. 65, s. 2, enacts that "two justices, before they admit to bail, and the justice or justices, before he or they shall commit to prison any person arrested for felony or on suspicion of felony, shall take the examination of such person, and the information upon oath of those who shall know the facts and circumstances of the case, and shall put the same, or so much thereof as shall be material, into writing; and the two justices shall certify such bailment in writing; and every such justice shall have authority to bind by recognizance all such persons as know and declare anything material touching any such felony or suspicion of felony, to appear at the next court, &c. at which the trial thereof is intended to be, then and there to prosecute or give evidence against the party accused; and such justices and justice respectively shall subscribe all such examinations, informations, bailments and recogizances, and deliver or cause the same to be delivered to the proper officer of the court in which the trial is to be, before or at the opening of the court (u).

Sect. 3. provides for such examination and depositions in cases of misdemeanor.

*The object of the Legislature in framing the statutes, for which the above provisions have been substituted (x), was to enable the Court to see whether a prisoner had been properly admitted to bail, and whether the witnesses were consistent or contradictory in the evidence which they gave, without manifesting any intention to alter the law of evidence (y). But such depositions, in being warranted by the former and present statutes, became evidence in particular cases, upon general principles of evidence; that objection having been removed by the statutes which would otherwise have operated to their exclusion, namely, that they were extra-judicial. *383

Previous proof.

To warrant such evidence, it is essential to prove by the justice, coroner, or his clerk, &c., that the depositions contain the substance of the information on oath (z). It is not necessary to prove that the depositions were signed by the witnesses (a).

Death of the witness.

It must also be previously proved that the witness is dead (b); or that he has been kept away by the practices of the prisoner (c); or, as has been said (d), that he is unable to travel. It seems, however, to be very doubtful whether the mere casual and temporary inability of the witness to attend in a criminal case, be a sufficient ground for admitting his deposition, which affords evidence of a nature much less satisfactory than the testimony of a (t) Supra, Vol. I. Ind. same title.

(u) If the prisoner be taken before a magistrate of a different county from that in which the offence was committed, the informations, &c. should be transmitted to the latter county, and will, it is said, be evidence, although the magistrate had no original cognizance of the offence. Cro. Car. 213; 2 Hale, 285; Dalton's Just. c. 111, p. 299.

(x) 1 & 2 Phil. & M. c. 113; 2 & 3 Phil. & M. c. 10.

(y) Per Grose, J., Lambe's Case, Leach's C. C. L. 3d edit. 625; 3 T. R. 710, 722.

(z) 2 Hale's P. C. 284. It seems that they may be proved by any one who was present, and able to swear to the due taking. Where, on a capital charge, the magistrate himself, not having any clerk, took down the depositions, it was held that, although not absolutely necessary, it was desirable that he should be present to prove the correctness; but having returned that the prisoner was sworn, the Judge rejected evidence to prove that he was not so in fact. Reg. v. Pikesley, 9 C. & P. 124.

(a) R. v. Fleming and Windham, 2 Leach, 96.

(b) Westbeer's Case, Leach, 14. And see Bromwich's Case, 1 Lev. 180; 1 Salk. 281; B. N. P. 42.

(c) Harrison's Case, 4 St. Tr. 492; Fost. 337; Keb. 55.

(d) 2 Hale, 52; Phil. on Ev. 371. But this has been held, even in a civil case, to be insufficient.

witness examined vivâ voce in court, and which might be procured at another time if the trial were to be postponed. It is true that the prisoner has had the power to cross-examine the witness, but this was at a time and under circumstances very disadvantageous to the prisoner. There are indeed many old cases in which great abuse has been practised in the reading of depositions against prisoners, although the deponents might have been produced; but these instances occurred in bad times, when little regard was paid to the rules of evidence, or indeed to any other laws (e). In Lord Morley's Case (f) it was held that it was not sufficient to show that endeavours had been used to find the witness, and that he could not be found. It must also be proved that the depositions were taken conformably with the statute, since any other would be extra-judicial; that they were taken on oath (g); that they were taken in the presence of the prisoner; for where the informations are taken before a magistrate, the words of the statutes strongly imply that the prisoner is supposed to be present, for the justice is to take the examination of the prisoner, and the informations of those who bring the *prisoner; and if they were to be taken in the prisoner's absence he would lose the benefit of cross-examination, and consequently the evidence, in principle, would not be admissible: the effect of the statute seems to be not to alter any rule of evidence, but only to make a particular proceeding regular which otherwise would have been irregular, and so to leave it subject to the ordinary rules of evidence (h). The same inference is to be drawn from the terms of the late statute.

In the presence of the prisoner.

*384

In Woodcock's Case (i), the magistrate visited Silvia Woodcock (who had received a mortal blow) at the poor-house, and took her deposition there in the absence of the prisoner, and C. B. Eyre was of opinion that the deposition was not admissible, since it had not been taken, as the statute directs, in a case where the prisoner was brought before the magistrate in custody; the prisoner therefore had no opportunity of contradicting the facts it contained.

In Dingler's Case (k), the deposition had been taken by the magistrate at the infirmary where the wounded person lay, and the Court acceded to the objection that the prisoner was not present, or on his defence. Where part of the examination in a case of murder was taken in the absence of the prisoner, but that which had been so taken was read over to him, and the rest of the deposition taken in the ordinary way, and the deponent was resworn in the presence of the prisoner, who was asked whether he chose to put any questions, it was held that the depositon was admissible, the witness being dead at the time of the trial; and a great majority of the Judges were of opinion that the evidence had been properly received (l).

It has been said, that depositions taken by the coroner are evidence, (e) See Mr. J. Foster's observations, Fost. Dis. p. 234; and see the cases of Sir W. Raleigh, Udal, the Earl of Essex, the Duke of Norfolk, Lord Strafford, &c., in the State Trials. (f) Kel. 55.

(g) 2 Hale, 284. Note, the former statutes did not in terms require that the informations should be taken on oath, but this is necessarily incident to the duty of the magistrate or coroner. Dalton, Just. c. 111; B. N. P. 242.

(h) According to the case of The King v. Eriswell, 3 T. R. 707. Buller, J., was of opinion that depositions taken in the absence of the prisoner might, after the death of the witness, be read; and refers to Radbourne's Case, where it had been so held by all the Judges; but in that case (Leach, C. C. L. 3d edit. 512), the deposition was taken in the presence of the prisoner, and of course the question did not arise. It seems to have been the opinion of Lord Kenyon, in the case of The King v. Eriswell, that depositions so taken were not admissible; and he refers to Paine's Case, (as reported 5 Mod. 163), and terms the objection there taken to admitting the deposition in evidence, namely, the loss of cross-examination, a weighty objection.

(i) Leach's C. C. L. 3d edit. 563. (k) Ibid. 638, cor. Rose, Recorder, and Gould, J.

(l) R. v. Smith, cor. Richards, C. B, and afterwards by the Judges,[1] 2 Starkie's C. 208; Russ. & Ry. C. C. L. 339. In the previous case of R. v. Forbes,[2] Holt's C. 599, Chambre, J., held that the prisoner ought to be present whilst the witness actually delivers the whole of his testimony.

[1]Eng. Com. Law Reps. iii. 316. [2]Id. iii. 193.

although the prisoner was not present, because the coroner is a public officer appointed to inquire of such matters (m), and therefore it is to be presumed that such depositions were fairly and impartially taken. Yet, it seems that the admissibility of these depositions stands altogether upon the statutes (n), and therefore it is difficult to conceive why a greater degree of credit should be given to depositions before the coroner than to those before justices, both being invested with equal authority.

The objection is not a want of authority in the case of the magistrate, for the statutes invest him with authority, but upon the principle that the accused has lost the benefit of a cross-examination, a defect which cannot be remedied by any care or attention on the part of the coroner, for he is not *privy to the facts to which the cross-examination might be directed, and *385 which may be known to the prisoner alone.

In Bromwich's Case (o), (one of the authorities referred to in Buller's Nisi Prius, in support of this distinction), it does not appear whether the prisoner was or was not before the coroner at the time when the evidence was given, and it does not appear that either in that case, or in Lord Morley's Case (p), the question was raised.

In the case of Thatcher v. Waller (q), the other authority cited in support of the position in Buller, the only question was, whether the deposition of a witness taken before the coroner could be read, the witness being abroad, and it was held that it might; and it is stated, that the Court (with the exception of the Chief Justice) were of opinion that if the deposition had been taken before a magistrate it could not have been read; and the only reason assigned for the distinction is, that the coroner was an officer of greater authority. In neither, therefore, of these cases was the question considered upon plain and broad principles.

In the case of The King v. Eriswell (r), Mr. J. Buller states it to have been long settled, that a deposition taken before a coroner in the absence of the accused is good evidence (s); but that learned Judge did not, it seems, intend to make a distinction between depositions taken before coroners and those taken before justices, for he stated that the latter would be admissible in evidence, although taken in the absence of the party charged; and also stated that it had been so determined in Radbourn's Case by all the Judges. It is however remarkable, that in Radbourn's Case (t) the information was taken in the presence of the prisoner. It is also to be observed, that in the same case of The King v. Eriswell, Lord Kenyon, although he assumed that depositions before coroners and informations before magistrates were excepted cases, placed their admissibility upon the same footing, viz. the statutes of Philip & Mary, and made no distinction whatsoever between the two cases. He added, indeed, that the examination before a coroner is an inquest of office, a transaction of notoriety to which every one has a right of access (u); but he immediately afterwards laid great stress upon the case of The King v. Paine (x) as one which had been decided by the Courts of King's Bench and Common Pleas on great consideration; and cited, what he termed a weighty reason, given by the Chief Justice according to the report in 5 Mod. 163, for rejecting such evidence; viz. "the defendant not being present when they were taken before the (m) B. N. P. 242, cites 1 Lev. 180; 2 Jon. 53.

(n) Per Lord Kenyon, 3 T. R. 727. Lambe's Case, Leach's C. C. L. 3d edit. 625.
(o) 1 Lev. 180.
(p) 7 St. Tr. 422.
(q) 2 Jon. 53.
(r) 3 T. R. 707.
(s) And he cited 1 Lev. 180; Kel. 55; also Salk. 555.
(t) Leach, 3d edit. 512.
(u) See 4 Comm. 274; 1 Hale, 60. R. v. Scorey, Leach, 50.
(x) 1 Salk. 281; 5 Mod. 163.

mayor, and so had lost the benefit of a cross examination." His Lordship also observed, that the case as reported in 5th Modern, had been adopted in 2 Hawk. c. 46, s. 24, which he approved of. It cannot therefore be inferred that Lord Kenyon fully acceded to the admissibility of such evidence, although in the course of his argument, assuming them to be exceptions, he denied the consequences attempted to be deduced from them. The only plausible ground upon which such a distinction can be supported, seems to be this, that a proceeding before the coroner is a matter so notorious, that every one may be presumed to have notice of it, and consequently to have *386 had an opportunity of *cross-examining the witness. This however is a reason far from satisfactory. Upon the whole, the distinction is not warranted by the Legislature; and as it is unfounded in principle, it may, when the question arises, be a matter of very grave and serious consideration whether it ought to be supported.

When admissible to impeach the testimony of a witness.

A deposition judicially and regularly taken may be read to contradict the testimony of a witness at the trial; for it is to be recollected, that one reason for requiring such informations to be taken, is in order to try the consistency of the witnesses (y).

In Oldroyd's Case (z), it was held that where a witness for the prosecution gave evidence in favour of the prisoner, in contradiction of the deposition taken before the coroner, it was competent to the Judge to direct the deposition to be read, in order to impeach the witness's testimony. Here the deposition was read by direction of the Judge, but Lord Ellenborough, C. J., and Mansfield, C. J., were of opinion that it would be competent to the prosecutor to do the same.

When admissible to impeach the credit of a witness.

It was admitted in Lord Stafford's Case (a), that the depositions of a witness taken before a justice of the peace, might by the prisoner's desire be read at the trial, in order to discredit the witness, by showing a variance between his evidence at the trial and his deposition (b).

In cases of misdemeanor.

Such depositions formerly were not admissible, except in case of felony; and therefore, upon an information for a libel, a deposition taken by a magistrate in the defendant's absence could not be read (c): but now depositions are taken in cases of misdemeanor, as well as of felony (d). They cannot be read on an indictment for petit treason, where the party is still living, although the witness has been kept out of the way by the defendant's procurement (e), since the 5th & 6th Edw. 6, c. 11, requires that two lawful accusers shall be brought in person before the accused, and prove him guilty, &c. But upon an indictment for petit treason and murder, it seems that such depositions are evidence to prove the charge of murder (f).

(y) Vide supra, 383. It seems to be a general rule, that where a witness at one trial varies from his evidence at another in relation to the same matter, such variance may be given in evidence to discredit his testimony. Haw. b. 2, c. 46, s. 23.

(z) Russ. & Ry. C. C. L. 88. Note, that the counsel for the prosecution did not mean to call the witness, who was mother to the prisoner, but the learned Judge, in compliance with the ordinary rule, her name being on the back of the indictment, directed that she should be called. The learned Judge, in summing up to the jury, stated that the evidence of the witness was not to be relied on, and left the case to them entirely on the other evidence. All the Judges afterwards held that there was sufficient evidence to go to the jury, and no sufficient circumstances to raise a doubt as to the propriety of the conviction. They agreed, that where some of the evidence is inadmissible, yet, that if the case appear to be clear without that evidence, execution ought not to be stayed. Tinckler's Case, East's P. C. 354; but that this rule would not have been applicable in the principal case, had the deposition been inadmissible. As to the competency of a party to impeach his own witness, see tit. WITNESS.

